

22982|2007-08-13 14:49:43|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Fwd: MILK OF HUMAN KINDNESS|

This would be especially great for black babies who I strongly suspect are even more allergic to cow's milk. I hope they can move it forward quickly.

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "ulagankmy" wrote:

>

> --- In evolutionary-psychology@yahoogroups.com, Julienne

> wrote:

>

> Bangkok Post

>

> Guru Magazine

> The Magazine

>

> General news >> Saturday August 11, 2007

>

> MILK OF HUMAN KINDNESS

>

> Formula made from chicken meat gives hope to babies with allergies

>

> Story by APIRADEE TREERUTKUARKUL

>

> Siriraj Hospital has developed the world's first milk formula from chicken > meat for infants allergic to protein in breast milk and cow's milk.

The

> milk, made from chicken breast strips, could provide high energy and > nutritional levels similar to milk from cows and soybean.

>

> It also poses a lower risk of allergies compared to milk protein from these > main sources, said Pipop Jirapinyo, a paediatrician spearheading the > research.

>

> "The newly-invented milk formula will be the most valuable food source for > thousands of babies allergic to the protein in cow's milk and from other > sources, giving them opportunities to have the same growth level as other > infants," he said.

- >
- > Around 800,000 babies are born in Thailand each year, and around 20,000
- > children below two years old are allergic to cow's milk.
- >
- > Their symptoms vary from skin rashes to nausea and diarrhoea. Those with
- > serious allergies could experience respiratory problems.
- >
- > Although the allergies can disappear when they grow up, the increase in the
- > number of children allergic to the protein in cow's milk during the past - > few years has been a cause of concern.
- >
- > A young girl is bottle-fed with milk made from chicken meat.
- Siriraj
- > Hospital has developed the world's first milk formula from chicken meat for
- > infants with cow milk allergies. ? APICHART JINAKUL
- >
- > Only 20% of mothers breastfeed their babies during the six months after
- > birth. A lack of awareness about the benefits of breastfeeding among
- > parents has become a public health concern.
- >
- > Dr Pipop, also head of the hospital's paediatrics department, conducted the
- > research for five years with 38 babies allergic to the protein in cow's
- > milk.
- >
- > His research was based on the international scientific recommendation that
- > chicken broth could be an alternative for children allergic to breast milk
- > and other protein sources.
- >
- > He compared the allergic symptoms of 20 babies given milk produced from
- > chicken breast meat and the other 18 babies who were given soybean milk.
- > The results showed that infants were eight times less likely to be allergic
- > to milk produced from chicken meat than to soybean milk.

>
> A total of 80 babies aged under two have already been given the milk at the > hospital to treat protein allergies.
>
> Although two babies still have allergies, no complicated symptoms have > developed so far.
>
> The children will be monitored to study the long-term advantages
and > disadvantages of the milk product, he said.
>
> Dr Pipop's findings will also be published in the Asia Pacific Journal of > Clinical Nutrition. The milk formula has been patented since last September.
>
> The chicken breast strips are boiled and blended under the sterilised > manufacturing process.
>
> One kilogramme of chicken breast strips can produce up to 24 litres
of > concentrated milk.
>
> Each infant needs about 250cc of milk per day in order to obtain sufficient > energy and nutrition for growth.
>
> Milk produced from chicken meat costs 300 baht per 0.45kg, compared
to > imported amino-acid based formulas which are priced at 1,500 baht per > 0.45kg.
>
> Dr Pipop plans to further develop the powdered version of the milk
for > production on an industrial scale and improve an adult formula for
the > elderly in the near future
>
> Copyright The Post Publishing Public Co., Ltd. 2007
>
> http://www.bangkokpost.com/News/11Aug2007\_news02.php
>

> Let me never fall into the vulgar mistake of dreaming that I am being > persecuted whenever I am contradicted. Ralph Waldo Emerson > Julienne's Blog: www.myspace.com/youandthecosmos. Radio: "You and
the > Cosmos" WHRWFm.org
>
> --- End forwarded message ---
>
| 22983|2007-08-13 14:51:50|willie bennett|Re: Passing of Dr. Asa Hilliard|
Harambee

Of all the people in this movement, Dr Hilliard was to me the number one. I feel a wake up call has gone out and everybody must accept a bit more of the leadership.

With Maat,

Willie Bennett

>From: "Paul Kekai Manansala" <pmanansala@sbcglobal.net>
>Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
>To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
>Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Passing of Dr. Asa Hilliard >Date: Mon, 13 Aug 2007 17:05:03 -0000
>
>Safari njema, Dr. Hilliard! (bon voyage)
>
>Regards,
>Paul Kekai Manansala
>
>
>--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Manu Ampim" wrote:
>>
>> Greetings All,
>>
>> I was informed that early this morning (8/13) the great teacher Asa >Hilliard passed away in Cairo from complications related to Malaria, >which he recently contracted in Ghana. I was passing through Cairo >Intl Airport about 9 am this morning on my way from fieldwork in the >Sudan and before I left the airport I was given a phone call by one >who cared for him in his last hours. My colleague who was with our >elder brother and scholar in his last minutes told me that Dr.
>Hilliard died peacefully.
>>
>> My latest personal memories of Dr. Hilliard were in February 2006, >when he and I sat next to each other during a panel discussion on the >fraudulent King Tut image in an exhibit which was showing in Ft.

>Lauderdale, FL. (This same exhibit is currently at the Franklin >Institute in Philadelphia, where there are continued protests). The >four panelists were Hilliard, Theophile Obenga, Martin Bernal and >myself. Obenga and Bernal gave their presentations first, so this >gave Hilliard and I the chance to make observations, comments, and >exchange a few jokes here and there. After each of our formal >remarks, and during the open discussion, Hilliard was very interested >in a linguistic exchange between Obenga and Bernal and it has clear to >him that Obenga would have won this debate if the panel moderator had >not prematurely ended this particularly exchange regarding the two >opposing linguistic viewpoints. As soon as Hilliard made his >prediction to me of who will win this debate, the moderator >surprisingly ended the discussion. Hilliard and I immediately looked >at each other and just shook our heads in disappointment, mainly >because this was the kind of information and interaction the large >crowd came to witness.

>>

>> Dr. Hilliard was always encouraging of other scholars to continuing >with our work of reclaiming our legacy. May his legacy be honored >among the honorable ancestors.

>> <http://www.ascac.org/bios/asahilliardbio.html>

>> http://www.africawithin.com/hilliard/asa\_hilliard.htm

>>

>>

>> Advancing the work,

>>

>> Manu Ampim

>>

>

>

---

A new home for Mom, no cleanup required. All starts here.

http://www.reallivemoms.com?ocid=TEXT\_TAGHM&loc=us

| 22984|2007-08-13 14:53:22|Ferg|Re: Passing of Dr. Asa Hilliard|

Lala unono, Dr. Hilliard! (may you sleep in comfort)

Ferg Somo

----- Original Message -----

From: Paul Kekai Manansala

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Sent: Monday, August 13, 2007 6:05 PM

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Passing of Dr. Asa Hilliard

Safari njema, Dr. Hilliard! (bon voyage)

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Manu Ampim" wrote:

>

> Greetings All,

>

> I was informed that early this morning (8/13) the great teacher Asa Hilliard passed away in Cairo from complications related to Malaria, which he recently contracted in Ghana. I was passing through Cairo Intl Airport about 9 am this morning on my way from fieldwork in the Sudan and before I left the airport I was given a phone call by one who cared for him in his last hours. My colleague who was with our elder brother and scholar in his last minutes told me that Dr. Hilliard died peacefully.

>

> My latest personal memories of Dr. Hilliard were in February 2006, when he and I sat next to each other during a panel discussion on the fraudulent King Tut image in an exhibit which was showing in Ft. Lauderdale, FL. (This same exhibit is currently at the Franklin Institute in Philadelphia, where there are continued protests). The four panelists were Hilliard, Theophile Obenga, Martin Bernal and myself. Obenga and Bernal gave their presentations first, so this gave Hilliard and I the chance to make observations, comments, and exchange a few jokes here and there. After each of our formal remarks, and during the open discussion, Hilliard was very interested in a linguistic exchange between Obenga and Bernal and it has clear to him that Obenga would have won this debate if the panel moderator had not prematurely ended this particularly exchange regarding the two opposing linguistic viewpoints. As soon as Hilliard made his prediction to me of who will win this debate, the moderator surprisingly ended the discussion. Hilliard and I immediately looked at each other and just shook our heads in disappointment, mainly because this was the kind of information and interaction the large crowd came to witness.

>

> Dr. Hilliard was always encouraging of other scholars to continuing with our work of reclaiming our legacy. May his legacy be honored among the honorable ancestors.

> <http://www.ascac.org/bios/asahilliardbio.html>

> [http://www.africawi thin.com/hilliard/asa\_hilliard.htm](http://www.africawi thin.com/hilliard/asa_hilliard.htm)

>

>

> Advancing the work,

|>
|> Manu Ampim
|>

| 22985|2007-08-13 18:54:28|ulagankmy|Fwd: Article: Is the Out of Africa Theory Out?|
--- In evolutionary-psychology@yahoogroups.com, Artemis wrote:

An examination of over 5,000 teeth from early human ancestors shows that many of the first Europeans probably came from Asia

All the ancestors of contemporary Europeans apparently did not migrate out of Africa as previously believed. According to a new analysis of more than 5,000 teeth from long-perished members of the genus Homo and the closely related Australopithecus, many early settlers hailed from Asia. Erik Trinkaus, a physical anthropologist at Washington University in St. Louis (who was not involved in the study), says most evolutionary biologists and anthropologists believe there were three major waves of migration from Africa to Europe: the first occurring about two million to 1.5 million years ago during the late Pliocene and early Pleistocene epochs; a second during the mid Pleistocene, roughly one million to 500,000 years ago; and ending with the spread of modern humans, 50,000 to 30,000 years in the past.

The new findings, published this week in Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences USA, casts doubt on the second migration out of Africa. "[The researchers] are not denying that it happened," Trinkaus says, "just that it was less important than movement across Eurasia."

The study was led by Maria Martin□orres, a paleobiologist at the National Research Center on Human Evolution in Burgos, Spain. The research team analyzed the choppers of human ancestors from the Pleistocene and late Pliocene epochs.

"Teeth are the best genetic marker that we have in the fossil record itself," Trinkaus says, because "they are as close as we can get to a reflection of the individual's genetic makeup." The reason: Tooth crowns are genetically determined-and thus reflect an individual's genotype-and are not affected by environmental stress during development.

Scientists found that teeth from African specimens were a different shape or morphology than those from Eurasian samples. The researchers wrote that teeth toward the front of the mouth from Eurasians had more "morphological robusticity," such as a triangular, shovel shape. Their back teeth were smaller and had smoother chewing surfaces; the rear teeth from African samples were larger and the chewing surfaces on them more pointy and jagged.

"The continuity of the 'Eurasian dental pattern' from the early Pleistocene until the appearance of upper Pleistocene Neandertals suggests that the evolutionary courses of the Eurasian and the African continents were relatively independent for a long period and that the impact of Asia in the colonization of Europe was stronger than that of Africa," the researchers wrote in the new report. "This finding does not necessarily imply that there was no genetic flow between continents, but emphasizes that this interchange could have been both ways."

<http://www.sciam.com/article.cfm?articleID=46740547-E7F2-99DF>
<<http://www.sciam.com/article.cfm?articleID=46740547-E7F2-99DF>> - 3BA7E60C2267E6FC&modsrc=related_links

--- End forwarded message ---

| 22986|2007-08-13 19:30:14|Paul Kekai Manansala|OT: Vast ancient settlement found at Angkor Wat|

- 22:00 13 August 2007
- NewScientist.com news service
- Emma Young, Sydney

Enlarge image

Aerial photos of remnants of Angkor settlement. Occupation mounds and ponds (upper left). Canals and embankments (upper right). Roadway and canal (lower left). Village temple area (lower right) (Image: Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences)

Enlarge image

The new map of Angkor Wat combines data from ground-sensing radar with aerial photographs and extensive fieldwork (Image: Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences)

Vast ancient settlement found at Angkor Wat

A huge urban sprawl once surrounded Cambodia's famous Angkor Wat temple, according to a newly created map. The scale of the settlement makes it more plausible that the inhabitants of Angkor brought on their own society's collapse through environmental degradation.

The new map uses data from high-resolution, ground-sensing radar and aerial photographs to augment extensive fieldwork. By detecting slight variations in vegetation and ground moisture due to underlying ruins, the radar reveals in unprecedented detail the location of temples - including 94 newly identified temple sites plus another 74 that have yet to be checked on the ground - ponds, roads and canals.

Researchers in the Greater Angkor Project at the University of Sydney in Australia, together with colleagues in Australia, Cambodia and France, used the techniques to survey the entire watershed of the Angkor region.

The area covers nearly 3000 square kilometres, most of which is now blanketed with dense vegetation. Earlier maps suffered from problems with the resolution of aerial photographs and radar data, and from difficulties with accessing remote regions.

Urban sprawl

The researchers found that about two thirds of this region was once occupied, making it by far the biggest pre-industrial settlement yet documented. The main urban district of about 1000 square kilometres was surrounded by suburbs that seem to spread far beyond the north-western and south-eastern borders of the study site.

In fact, says Damian Evans of the University of Sydney, "there is just no obvious boundary" for the settlement. The population of the area was probably around half a million, he adds, though earlier estimates of a million inhabitants - suggested in the 1970s - could still be correct.

Such extensive settlement may help explain why Angkor, which thrived between the 9th and 16th centuries, had been overwhelmed by vegetation by the time European explorers first encountered the site in the 1860s.

The main theory for Angkor's abandonment is that the creation of an extensive water management system caused environmental damage that ultimately led to the failure of the system, leading to food shortages. That scenario now seems even more likely.

Canal system

"This new map lays out definitively what the system would have looked like - and shows that it was capable of significantly impacting on the local environment," says Evans.

Local people cleared land, creating a complex system to move water from a region of high ground spanning about 500 square kilometres to storage reservoirs in the centre, and on, via canals, to irrigate about another 500 square kilometres of land to the south. This system would have allowed the society to produce surplus rice to feed workers engaged in building monuments such as Angkor Wat.

The new map also reveals apparent failures of the canal system, with multiple dykes at certain sites. "There is massive redundancy in the canal network - and that gives us an indication that things were going wrong," says Evans.

Researchers have not yet dated these sites to confirm that they coincide with Angkor's collapse, however. Nor is it clear what exactly might have gone wrong. "We have evidence of a huge water-management system that had the capacity to impact significantly on the environment," says Evans. "But at the moment, the actual evidence that it did so is pretty thin on the ground."

Journal reference: Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences (DOI: 10.1073/pnas.0702525104)

| 22987|2007-08-14 04:57:27|m_ampim|Re: Discovery of Queen Hatshepsut's Mummy: Fact or Fiction|

Greetings Dexter and Paul,

Thanks for the feedback. I have been out in the field the past 2 weeks. I will further address this issue when I return to Calif.

Advancing the work,

Manu Ampim

=====

-

-- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Dexter Harper" wrote:

>

>

> Agreed....outstanding work Prof. Ampim.

>

> Respectfully,

>

> Sharma Men Ra

>

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala"

> wrote:

>>

>> Fascinating stuff, Prof. Ampim.

>>

>> The breast size-royalty relationship was hilarious.

>>

>> Regards,

>> Paul Kekai Manansala

>>

> >

> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Manu Ampim" wrote:

> > >

> > > THE DISCOVERY OF QUEEN HATSHEPSUT'S MUMMY:

> > > FACT OR FICTION?

> > >

> > >

> > >

> > > by Prof. Manu Ampim

> > >

> > >

> > >

> > >

> > >

> > > *This article focuses on the mindset, imagination, and methodology

> > of Dr. Zahi Hawass in his quest for the discovery of "Queen > > Hatshepsut," and other related mummies and tombs.

> > >

> > >

> > -----

--

> -----

> > >

> > >

> > >

> > > The search for knowledge about Queen Hatshepsut continues to grow

> in > > the 21st century, despite the fact that she lived 3,500 years ago.

> > Hatshepsut is without question one of the most important and > powerful > > women in the history of Africa. She represents a significant example > > of the prominent role of women in ancient African social and > political > > organization, and thus the focus on her life and physical remains > > continue. In this essay, I will give some brief background on

the > > Hatshepsut mania from the past two years, and then discuss the > recent > > claims by Dr. Zahi Hawass, head of Egypt's Supreme Council of > > Antiquities (SCA), concerning the discovery of tomb KV-63, and the > > identification of the "Hatshepsut mummy."

> > >
> > >
> > >
> > > HATSHEPSUT EXHIBIT
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > > From October 15, 2005 to February 5, 2006, the de Young Museum

in > > San Francisco organized a major exhibit, "Hatshepsut: From Queen

to > > Pharaoh." This important exhibit contained over 300 artifacts > related > > to the rulership and times of Queen Hatshepsut, who was the fourth

> and > > most powerful of Egypt's five female pharaohs. I had two responses

> to > > this 3 month exhibit.

> > >

> > >

> > >

> > > In my first response, I led seven museum tours totaling about > > people. One additional student group tour was cancelled because of

250

> a > > museum power outage on the day of the tour. My initial goal was

to > > simply lead one or two small private groups, but the local > community's > > interest in attending an in-depth guided tour of this Hatshepsut > > exhibit was so overwhelming that we had to organize public tours. I > > received numerous phone calls, emails, and personal contact from > > people who wanted me to lead tours of the exhibit, so I asked

> Brother

> > Robert Huffman to help organize these guided tours. The response

> was > > so huge that we had to literally close the registration for these > > tours and turn people away, because of a lack of museum space. A > few > > people were angry at Robert for not allowing them to register and > join

> > our already crowded tour!

> > >

> > >

> > >

> > > As our groups of 45-50 African Americans packed the museum > gallery,

> > we were often joined by dozens of museum visitors, from all racial > > backgrounds, who would follow our group through the exhibit and > listen > > to my explanation of the artifacts, rather than continue listening

> to > > their audio headset guided tour. Among these visitors and followers

> > were exhibit guards and even museum docents. Many of these people > > were so interested in learning about Hatshepsut that they would > boldly > > stand directly in front of the artifact that I was discussing

with > my > > group and even ask questions. I did not mind their participation

as > > long as they were sincere and respectful of the fact they had > joined a > > guided-tour program. Nevertheless, I am convinced that had the > > exhibit remained at the de Young there would have continued to be > > unprecedented enthusiasm and interest.

> > >

> > >

> > >
> > > My second response to this exhibit was to write a review in the > San > > Francisco Bay View newspaper regarding the misinformation presented

> in > > the exhibit, including Queen Hatshepsut falsely being presented as > > taking an "unprecedented" step of ascending to the throne as a > female > > ruler [Ampim, 2006]. Both the exhibit descriptions and the San > > Francisco Chronicle, which ran a series of news articles before

and

> > during the exhibit, misinformed the public about Hatshepsut's rule

> and > > the relationship between ancient Egypt and Nubia.

> > >

> > >

> > >

> > > DNA TESTING & CT SCANS

> > >

> > >

> > >

> > > In 2007, there is now a renewed focus on Hatshepsut. In the > recent

> > June/July issue of Horus Magazine Dr. Zahi Hawass states that 2007 > > will be an important year for archaeology. He wrote about > > "magnificent mummies and the thrill of discoveries to come."

Hawass

> > indicates that in 2006 the Discovery Channel invited him to > > participate in a documentary to search for Hatshepsut's mummy.
> > According to Nevine El-Aref of Al-Ahram Weekly, Hawass made a deal > > with the Discovery Channel to establish a DNA lab in the Cairo > Museum.
> > Egypt now has a $5 million budget to do its own DNA testing in

the > > museum. Hawass wants to perform DNA tests on all of the royal > mummies > > to determine their identity. I learned back in 2005 from another > > member of the Supreme Council of Antiquities (SCA) that Hawass has > > contracts and financial arrangements with the Discovery Channel

and

> > National Geographic, which certainly explains why he works so > closely > > with these organizations.

> > >

> > >

> > >

> > > In late June 2007, Dr. Hawass claimed to have found the mummy of > > Queen Hatshepsut based mainly on CT scan results of a missing > tooth.

> > He has stated that he is "100% certain" the mummy in question > > is Hatshepsut. However, in the past year he has been consistently > > wrong on his identification of royal mummies and tombs.

> (KV60A)

> > Unfortunately, Hawass' approach has been to make sweeping claims

and

> > announcements before having any concrete evidence to support his > > statements. His process of identifying mummies and tombs has been

> to > > make announcements before examining the evidence, and then change

> his > > position as new evidence is found, or until he is made aware that

> his > > position is contradicted by existing facts.

> > >

> > >

> > >

> > > HAWASS AND TOMB KV-63

> > >

> > >

> > >

> > > For example, since the February 10, 2006 official announcement

of

> > the discovery of King's Valley tomb 63 by the University of Memphis

> > team led by Dr. Otto Schaden, Hawass has already changed his > > conclusions three times. The structure was first announced by

> Hawass

> > as a tomb containing important burials, then a month later he > claimed > > that the structure was not a "tomb," but was simply a storage > chamber > > containing burial and embalming equipment. Here is how the > > BBCnews.co.uk (3 March 2006) reported on the Hawass contradictions:

> > >
> > > "Last month, Egypt's head of antiquities, Zahi Hawass, speculated > > that the coffins belonged 'to royals or nobles' moved from 'original > > graves to protect them from grave robbers'. But further examination > > has revealed that the area was in fact an embalmers workshop."

> > >

> > > In his own words Hawass admits his error, "This... is not a tomb

> for

> > nobles or relatives of a king, as had been thought upon its > discovery,

> > but rather a room for mummification."

> > >

> > > Hawass' third position is now that KV-63 was a royal tomb for

King

> > Tut's mother Kiya, because he wanted to be buried near his mother.

> > However, there are obvious problems with Hawass' ideas. First, it

is > > not known who was Tutankhamen's mother, and second there are no > > inscriptions, mummies, or tomb artifacts which give any names or > > specific evidence regarding for whom the chamber was made. In a

> > USAToday.com article (9 July 2006), the dig director Otto Schaden > > addresses the confusion created by Hawass and the fact that there

is > > no evidence to assign the "tomb" to anyone. In reference to one

of

> > the seven coffins discovered in the structure Schaden states,
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > > "The coffin has absolutely no royal insignia, so it's very > unlikely > > it belongs to a queen. .As head of the antiquities, (Hawass is) in a > > position to draw whatever conclusions he wishes. I can't say he's > > wrong because I can't say whose tomb it was meant to be."

> > >
> > > Schaden has made it clear that there are too many uncertainties > > about KV-63 to draw any conclusions. He stated in a May 26, 2006 > > MSNBC interview, "Until we examine each coffin to some extent, we > > can't draw a conclusion. We can draw one, but it might be > wrong."

> > >

> > >

> > >

> > > HAWASS: A MEDIA STAR

> > >

> > >

> > >

> > > Dr. Zahi Hawass' endless speculation and public misinformation > about

> > KV-63 has nothing to do with science and careful scholarship, but

is > > more focused on publicity and income derived from exclusive film > > rights given to the Discovery Channel, which aired "King Tut's > Mystery > > Tomb Opened" in 2006 and again in July 2007. Many have questioned

> the > > relationship between Hawass and the Discovery Channel, particularly

> > this networks conflict of interest in both financing and have > > exclusive film rights to broadcast the KV-63 excavation. The ratings

> > and viewing numbers for these Discovery Channel specials have > become a > > major source of exposure and income for the network in recent years,

> > ironically coinciding with Hawass' tenure as the head of the SCA

in > > 2002.

> > >

> > >

> > >

> > > For example, in October 2006 the Discovery Channel Canada reported > > that the KV-63 program attracted more viewers than any program in

> the > > history of the channel, as there were a total of 407,000 viewers

in > > one record-breaking time slot, followed by 314,00 viewers in another > > slot. The previous Discovery Channel Canada record was the > > viewers who watched "Nefertiti Revealed" in August 2003. The more > > viewers equals more revenue. Hawass on the other hand has stated

371,000

> that > > he used the Discovery Channel and other companies such as National > > Geographic and Siemens to bring in revenue for Egypt and help carry > > out local projects.

> > >

> > >

> > >

> > > While these TV docu-dramas are being presented to the public in

a > > high-stakes financial and marketing game, where is the concern for > > truth and historical accuracy? The search for the glitter of gold > > and famous kings has now turned to an unprecedented focus on TV > > ratings and revenue. Therefore, we should not be too surprised

that > > in September 2006 Dr. Hawass became the first archaeologist in > history

> > to receive an Emmy Award. This is the first time that this > prominent > > award was given to someone who was not working in the media.

> > >

> > >

> > >

> > > MIS-IDENTIFICATION OF HATSHEPSUT'S FATHER

> > >

> > >

> > >

> > > Zahi Hawass was also wrong in claiming that a mummy in the Cairo > > Museum was Pharaoh Thutmose I, the father of Queen Hatshepsut. In > > June 2007, Hawass directed DNA tests which show that the mummy is > not

> > Thutmose I, and that he was wrong in his earlier identification.

He > > stated in a CNN article (July 13, 2007), "I am now questioning

all

> the > > mummies. We have to check them all again." True, but what Hawass > > ignores is that credible anthropologists decades ago had already > > indicated that the mummy thought to be "Thutmose I" was highly > > unlikely to be him, because the mummy in question was a young man > who > > died before the age of 20. Whereas, it is known from the historical > > record that Thutmose lived to about 50 years. Harris & Weeks

wrote

> in > > 1973 that their x-rays of the 18th dynasty mummies "have cast > > considerable doubt on the generally accepted reconstruction of New > > Kingdom history." (Harris/Weeks, p. 132.)

> > >

> > >

> > >

> > > If these words of caution by Harris & Weeks and the much earlier > > doubts expressed by Elliott Smith (1912) concerning the > > identification of the "Thutmose I mummy" were considered by

Hawass,

> > then he would have been more tentative in his naming of this mummy, > > rather than have to later admit his error. In this instance and > > elsewhere, Hawass seems to conveniently ignore evidence that does > not > > fit his ideas. It will be shown below that he changes the relevant > > categories of evidence when it fits his theories, which allows him

> to

> > often leap to unfounded conclusions.

> > >

> > >

> > >

> > > THE "HATSHEPSUT MUMMY"

> > >

> > > The search for Queen Hatshepsut's mummy began in 1903 when tomb > > KV-60 (which is near Hatshepsut's tomb) was found by British > > archaeologist Howard Carter. In KV-60, Carter found the bodies

of > two > > elderly women, one mummy was lying on the floor uncoffined (mummy > > KV-60A), and the other in a coffin labeled with the name and title

> of > > the Great Royal Nurse, In. (In is thought by some to be the same > > Sit-Re, thus Sit-Re In.)

> > >

> > >

> > >

> > > In 1966, American Egyptologist Elizabeth Thomas (1907-1986) > > speculated that the anonymous, uncoffined mummy in KV-60 was > > Hatshepsut because of the right arm positioned across her chest > > suggesting royalty. Last year in an undated article on his website,

> > however, Hawass commented, "I do not believe that this mummy is > > Hatshepsut. She has a very large, fat body with huge pendulous > > breasts; and the position of her arm is not convincing evidence of > > royalty." Hawass has elsewhere repeated the assertion that the > mummy

> > was not Hatshepsut because of the "large breasts" and that therefore > > this mummy had to be the wet-nurse, Sit-Re In. This is a case

where

> > Dr. Hawass has invented a new category for royalty, the size of

the > > breasts!

> > >

> > >

> > >

> > > Contrary to his remarks, there is absolutely no evidence that a > > woman's breast size had anything to do with her political position.

> > This is an example of what was stated above of how Dr. Hawass

> invents

> > new categories of analysis to fit his ideas and theories. Also,

on > > the one hand he stated in interviews that the arm position of a

> mummy

> > does not by itself determine royalty, yet in the spectacular > > made-for-tv Discovery Channel program ("Secrets of Egypt's Lost > > Queen," aired July 15, 2007) Hawass and his team ruled out the > > coffined mummy in KV-60 being Hatshepsut because of the position

of

> > the arm down to her side. [Note: It is obvious, however, that in > > viewing the so-called "Sit-Re In mummy" in the Cairo Museum that

the > > left arm is indeed across the chest]. However, there is a problem > > with this arm-position assertion because it is in direct contraction

> > to Hawass' statements in recent interviews. For example, Hawass

on > > the "Charlie Rose" television show, which aired a week before the > > Discovery Channel special, stated that the arm position of royal > > mummies could be in various arrangements and that this was not > really > > a factor in the identification process.

> > >
> > >
> > >
> > > Hawass argued against the uncoffined, anonymous mummy (KV-60A)

in > > the tomb being Hatshepsut because of the arm position and breasts,

> yet

> > he now admits, "I was wrong." [Telegraph.co.uk, 27 June 2007].

> Hawass

> > now claims that he is "100% certain" this mummy is Hatshepsut.

> > Although the important DNA test results are still not completed, > > Hawass and his team have used a CT scan on a wooden box (found in > 1881

> > in a cache of royal mummies) which contained mummified remains

and a > > broken tooth, inscribed with Hatshepsut's royal seal. The team > claims > > that the recent CT scan revealed a tooth that almost perfectly > matches

> > a missing upper molar in the mummy that was suspected to be

> Hatshepsut

> > by Elizabeth Thomas. The team's main evidence in the identification > > of "Hatshepsut" is the missing tooth. When asked why he did not > wait > > for the completed DNA results, Dr. Hawass has stated that it is not > > necessary because the tooth solves the case of the "Hatshepsut

> mummy."

> > With this case lacking DNA evidence, then the public should view

> the > > Hatshepsut identification as tentative.

> > >

> > >

> > >

> > > The new DNA testing facility at the Cairo Museum has been set up

> to >> extract and compare DNA of the mummies, and Hawass has stated that >> preliminary DNA results show "similarities" between the KV-60A

mummy

>> (prematurely labeled as the "Mummy of Hatshepsut" in the Cairo > Museum
>> royal mummy room) and Ahmose Nefertari, the grandmother of > Hatshepsut.
>> The museum has a group of mummies from Hatshepsut's family (both > her >> immediate ancestors and descendants) that have undergone DNA > testing, >> so there is no reason for Hawass to rush to conclusions about the >> so-called Hatshepsut mummy until the test results are completed.
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>> It is strange that a trained scholar such as Dr. Hawass would >> dismiss DNA tests before the results are finalized. This is the > same >> unscholarly and haphazard approach that has caused him to be known

> as >> someone who puts his personal opinion above evidence, and who > changes >> his position when the situation calls for it. There are different >> possibilities for the identities of the two female mummies found

in

> KV
>> 60, and thus the grand pronouncements from Hawass that these cases

> are >> solved is not convincing, particularly given his recent history of >> errors. Certainly, not all scholars are convinced that these cases

>> are closed.
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>> Several lingering questions remain:
>>>

>>>
>>>
>>> -- Why is the DNA from the Ahmose Nefertari mummy the only such > data
>> mentioned thus far in connection to the KV-60A mummy > ("Hatshepsut")?
>> What about the DNA from other Hatshepsut family members, such as >> Sequenre Tao, Amenhotep I, and the other Thutmose kings?
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>> -- Why is the so-called Thutmose I mummy now said not to be him,

> is >> it because of the young age of this mummified person, or is it > simply >> because his DNA does not match "Hatshepsut's" and thus the Hawass >> theory would fall apart?
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>> -- Will the tooth analysis details and DNA results be made public >> and available to interested scholars, or will we have to rely on

the

>> information presented in the edited Discovery Channel program?
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>> Finally, the public should be aware that Dr. Zahi Hawass will soon >> make another great tomb announcement concerning the discovery of an >> important tomb that may belong to "Alexander the Great," but he > states >> that he hopes "it is for Cleopatra and Mark Anthony." Whoever this >> tomb may belong to, it is certain that Hawass, National Geographic,

>> and Discovery Channel will continue to focus on finding famous >> historical figures while it is still a hot topic, even if this > effort >> has little to do with historical accuracy and scholarship.

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>> July 31, 2007

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>> NOTES:

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>> [1] In February 2005, Hawass directed CT scans on the mummy of > King

>> Tutankhamen and had three forensic teams produce images of how

King

>> Tut "really looked." The June 2005 issue of National Geographic >> Magazine (NG) published on its front cover the forensic image of

the >> French team, and this produced an international outcry because of

> the

>> bogus modern Caucasoid-looking King Tut. Hawass granted NG exclusive >> access to record and document the CT scan process.

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>> SOURCES:

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>> Manu Ampim, "The de Young Museum's Hatshepsut exhibit is >> misleading," San Francisco BayView.com March 8, 2006.

>>>

>>> http://manuampim.com/hatshepsut\_exhibit06.html

>>>

>>>
>>>
>>> Alan Boyle, "Mysteries still surround Egyptian chamber," > MSNBC.com,
>> May 26, 2006.
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>> CNN.com, "Mystery mummy is female pharaoh," June 27, 2007.
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>> CNN.com, "Archaeologist: All royal mummies are suspect," July 13, > 2007.

>>>
>>>
>>>
>>> Nevine El-Aref, "Back in the limelight," Al-Ahram Weekly, July > 2007.
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>> James Harris and Kent Weeks, X-Raying the Pharaohs. New York:
> Charles Scribner's Sons, 1973.
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>> Zahi Hawass website: <http://guardians.net/hawass/>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>> Zahi Hawass, Secrets from the Sand: New tombs magnificent

mummies
>> and the thrill of discoveries to come," Horus Magazine, vol. 25, > no. 4
>> (June/July 2007), pp. 18-22.
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>> Roger Highfield, "How I found Queen Hatshepsut," > www.Telegraph.co.uk >> (June 27, 2007).
>>>

>>>
>>>
>>> Official website of KV-63: www.kv-63.com
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>> Ian Pannell, "Egypt Pharaoh find 'not a tomb'" BBCnews.co.uk > (March
> 3, 2006).
>>>
>>> http://news.bbc.co.uk/2/hi/middle\_east/4810282.stm
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>> Jessica Sidman, "First tomb uncovered in Valley of Kings may be > Tutankhamen's mother," USA Today.com (July 9, 2006).
>>>
>>>
>> http://www.usatoday.com/tech/science/discoveries/2006-07-07-queen-
> kiya\_x.htm
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>> Elliot Smith, "The Royal Mummies," Catalogue General des > Antiquities
> du Egyptiennes du Musee du Cairo, nos. 61051-61100 (Cairo:

Service

> des >> Antiquities de l'Egypte, 1912, pp. iii-iv.
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>> Elizabeth Thomas, Royal Necropoleis of Thebes (Princeton, 1966).
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>> Jonathan Wright, "Egyptologists think they have Hatshepsut's
> mummy,"
> YahooNews.com, June 25, 2007.
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>> Jonathan Wright, "Tooth clinches identification of Egyptian > queen,"

> > YahooNews.com, June 27, 2007.

> > >

> >

>

| 22988|2007-08-14 05:01:40|m_ampim|Sudan Field Research Update|

Greetings Everyone,

I spent the past couple weeks in Sudan to conduct research near the Merowe Dam, which when completed will flood one of the most important archaeological regions in antiquity.

My trip was very productive and I will give a report of my findings shortly.

Advancing the work,

Manu Ampim

"Primary research is the greatest weapon against the distortion of African culture & history." - MA

| 22989|2007-08-14 05:21:21|m_ampim|Kemet Tour - May/June 2008|

Greetings,

I will be leading my next "Classical Africa Educational Tour" to Kemet from May 31 - June 14, 2008. We visit more than 40 sites and monuments and many of which are totally off of the regular tourist path.

Many Ta_seti members have not yet visited Kemet, but the time is now because in certain locations the images and inscriptions are almost *totally* gone. Also, the great Heru-em-akhet (Great Sphinx) is a much weathered monument that is now experiencing a new significant problem. I will give details in my forthcoming 2007 field report.

May/June 2008

http://manuampim.com/kmt\_08.doc

Advancing the work,

Manu Ampim

| 22990|2007-08-14 08:52:41|Peter Kaiza|Re: Microsoft Word - The Etymology and meaning of HOTEK.pdf|

Nice work ferg, as a first language speaker of kiswahili I'm impressed by the similarities.

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: egyptology@theunit.fsnet.co.uk
Date: Mon, 13 Aug 2007 15:39:12 +0100
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Microsoft Word - The Etymology and meaning of HOTEK.pdf

Greetings all.
I've linguistically analysed the word HOTEK and would like your thoughts.
Ferg Somo

---

The next generation of MSN Hotmail has arrived - Windows Live Hotmail
| 22991|2007-08-14 13:17:23|Paul Kekai Manansala|Etruscan chariot may be a fake|
You have to wonder how much different things would look of if we could get rid of all the fraudulent artifacts and archaeology.

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

---

Etruscan chariot may be a fake

MONTELEONE DI SPOLETO, Italy, Aug. 13 (UPI) -- An Italian community may rethink its quest to get an Etruscan chariot from a New York museum after a top archaeologist called the cart a "beautiful" fake.

Jerome M. Eisenberg, an authority on ancient art forgeries, said technical features of the chariot prove it's a sham, the Italian news agency ANSA reported Monday. His findings are in the latest edition of the Minerva, The International Review of Ancient Art and Archeology.

Monteleone di Spoleto, the town where the chariot was found in 1902, has been trying to get the Metropolitan Museum of Art to return the antiquity for three years. The vehicle recently went back on display at the museum after a seven-year restoration.

While most of the chariot's peripheral components are authentic, Eisenberg said he found more than 70 artistic and technical features that prove the vehicle was embellished by a master forger the decade before it was discovered by a farmer.

The chariot, believed to be 2,600 years old, is made of bronze inlaid with ivory and features three reliefs. Eisenberg said many of the decorations were copied from ancient objects on display in museums before the chariot was found.

Copyright 2007 United Press International. All Rights Reserved.
| 22992|2007-08-14 16:58:45|momolucooke|Re: Sudan Field Research Update|
--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "m_ampim" wrote:
>Hi my name is Momolu from mpls, I am from west Africa, I studied

African history past nad present, I belvied African need to be represnt more better than help feed the children, I feel we misrepresented > Greetings Everyone,
>
> I spent the past couple weeks in Sudan to conduct research near the > Merowe Dam, which when completed will flood one of the most important > archaeological regions in antiquity.
>
> My trip was very productive and I will give a report of my findings > shortly.
>
> Advancing the work,
>
> Manu Ampim
>
>
> "Primary research is the greatest weapon against the distortion of > African culture & history." - MA
>
| 22993|2007-08-14 20:04:07|encyclopediaegypt|Hyksos = white Europeans|

If any one saw "the naked archeologist" last night where the white europeans claim to be descendants of the Hyksos, you have to laugh

I wish I would have caught it early enough to have recorded it. If any did

#1 Look at 10 hours of ww2 films of "Jews" in prison camps and see what color their skin
is.

#2 Look at all the paintings of the Hyksos and see what color their skin was.

I caught at least 20 direct lies. i.e. the red sea was not the red sea but a lake... but in the bible it tells of areas they past before crossing the water and it was 200 miles from that lake

They said a particular mummy was that of the king that persecuted moses

Exodus 14

8. And the Lord hardened the heart of Pharaoh king of Egypt, and he pursued after the children of Israel.. all killed when covered with water.. but they have the mummy of Pharaoh.

They said that the first born males were killed because there was come kind of gas coming out of the water.. but if there were poisoness gas, then every male and female who breathed it would have died.

I need the vido so I can get the direct quotes.. did any one tape it?

| 22994|2007-08-15 04:51:13|Ferg|Re: Microsoft Word - The Etymology and meaning of HOTEK.pdf|

Thank you Peter, (asante sana)!

I am glad to hear that as a first language speaker of Kiswahili the word HOTEK, 'HUTUAPO' is meaningful to you as it is to me. I hope others studying the languages will come to the same conclusion. The similarity in meaning with the Ancient Egyptian language cannot be denied. 'HUTUAPO' must be an archaic way of saying HU-JAMBO, are you well or how are you?

Somo

----- Original Message -----

From: Peter Kaiza

To: ta\_seti@yahoogroups.com

Sent: Tuesday, August 14, 2007 8:35 AM

Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Microsoft Word - The Etymology and meaning of HOTEK.pdf

Nice work ferg, as a first language speaker of kiswahili I'm impressed by the similarities.

---

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

From: egyptology@theunit.fsnet.co.uk

Date: Mon, 13 Aug 2007 15:39:12 +0100

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Microsoft Word - The Etymology and meaning of HOTEK.pdf

Greetings all.

I've linguistically analysed the word HOTEK and would like your thoughts.

Ferg Somo

---

The next generation of MSN Hotmail has arrived - Windows Live Hotmail

| 22995|2007-08-15 07:56:11|Dexter Harper|Re: Microsoft Word - The Etymology and meaning of HOTEK.pdf|

I am trying to view this but I don't see the file or attachment. Is it in the "files" section?

Thanks,

Sharma Men Ra

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Ferg" wrote:

>
> Greetings all.
>
> I've linguistically analysed the word HOTEPI and would like your thoughts.
>
> Ferg Somo
>
| 22996|2007-08-15 10:31:56|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Hyksos = white Europeans|
    >>1 Look at 10 hours of ww2 films of "Jews" in prison camps and see what color their skin is.<<

I don't, of course, know if it is true but I read some account which stated that as the War was ending a racist white American soldier went into the jewish ghetto, looked at them and called the jews "niggers".

Is it reasonable to assume that the wealthiest, best connected, most anglo-europeans jews made it to freedom and escaped the gas chambers?

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "encyclopediaegypt" wrote:

>
>
> If any one saw "the naked archeologist" last night where the white > europeans claim to be descendants of the Hyksos, you have to laugh
>
> I wish I would have caught it early enough to have recorded it. If any > did

>

> #1 Look at 10 hours of ww2 films of "Jews" in prison camps and see

what > color their skin is.

>
> #2 Look at all the paintings of the Hyksos and see what color their > skin was.
>
> I caught at least 20 direct lies. i.e. the red sea was not the red sea

> but a lake... but in the bible it tells of areas they past before > crossing the water and it was 200 miles from that lake
>
> They said a particular mummy was that of the king that persecuted

moses

>
> Exodus 14
>
> 8. And the Lord hardened the heart of Pharaoh king of Egypt, and he > pursued after the children of Israel.. all killed when covered with > water.. but they have the mummy of Pharaoh.
>
> They said that the first born males were killed because there was come > kind of gas coming out of the water.. but if there were poisoness gas,

> then every male and female who breathed it would have died.
>
> I need the vido so I can get the direct quotes.. did any one tape it?

>

| 22997|2007-08-16 01:56:45|Manu Ampim|Homegoing for Dr. Asa Hilliard (Aug. 22-23)|
HOMEGOING FOR DR. ASA HILLIARD

Georgia State Professor Asa Hilliard Dies in Egypt

http://www.diverseeducation.com/artman/publish/printer\_9110.shtml

Wednesday, August 22, 2007

Noon - 6pm -- Lay In State @ MLK, Jr. International Chapel

6-8pm -- Acclamation of Legacy and Community @ MLK, Jr International Chapel

Immediately following will be Fellowship @ Morehouse
College Executive Conference Center - Leadership Facility

Thursday, August 23, 2007

11:00 am - Celebration of Life @ MLK, Jr. International Chapel

The MLK, Jr. International Chapel is located at 830 Westview Drive, SW, Atlanta, GA 30314 (on Morehouse College Campus).

In lieu of flowers, the family requests donations be sent to:

PER MAAT FOUNDATION, INC.
PO Box 357171
Gainesville, Florida 32635

Per Maat Foundation, Inc. was formed to educate the public about African and African Diaspora history and culture. It is a not-for-profit, tax deductible, Georgia corporation.

| 22998|2007-08-16 07:28:32|Ferg|Re: Microsoft Word - The Etymology and meaning of HOTEK.pdf]

It could be in the 'files' section. I sent it as a pdf attachment, if not come back to me or ask the moderator. Somo

----- Original Message -----

From: Dexter Harper

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Sent: Wednesday, August 15, 2007 3:55 PM

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Microsoft Word - The Etymology and meaning of HOTEK.pdf

I am trying to view this but I don't see the file or attachment. Is it in the "files" section?

Thanks,

Sharma Men Ra

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Ferg" wrote:

>

> Greetings all.

>

> I've linguistically analysed the word HOTEK and would like your thoughts.

>

> Ferg Somo

>

| 22999|2007-08-16 11:07:35|Dexter Harper|Re: Microsoft Word - The Etymology and meaning of HOTEK.pdf]

Peace Somo,

It's not located in the 'files' section as the latest file included there is July 23, 2007. It didn't come to my personal inbox because I have my email notifications turned "off" (I forgot).

If you don't mind, could you please send it to 'dharp3r@yahoo.com'?
Thanks.

HTP,

Sharma Men Ra

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Ferg" wrote:

>

> It could be in the 'files' section. I sent it as a pdf attachment, if not come back to me or ask the moderator.

>

> Somo

>

> ----- Original Message -----

> From: Dexter Harper

> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> Sent: Wednesday, August 15, 2007 3:55 PM

> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Microsoft Word - The Etymology and meaning of HOTEK.pdf

>

>

> I am trying to view this but I don't see the file or attachment.

Is it

> in the "files" section?

>

> Thanks,

>

> Sharma Men Ra

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Ferg" wrote:

>>

>> Greetings all.

>>

>> I've linguistically analysed the word HOTEK and would like your > thoughts.

>>

>> Ferg Somo

>>

>

| 23000|2007-08-16 12:11:51|cristofori whitakara|Re: Homegoing for Dr. Asa Hilliard (Aug. 22-
23)|

http://www.africawithin.com/hilliard/asa\_hilliard.htm

Manu Ampim wrote:

HOMEGOING FOR DR. ASA HILLIARD

Georgia State Professor Asa Hilliard Dies in Egypt

http://www.diverseeducation.com/artman/publish/printer\_9110.shtml

Wednesday, August 22, 2007

Noon - 6pm -- Lay In State @ MLK, Jr. International Chapel

6-8pm -- Acclamation of Legacy and Community @ MLK, Jr International Chapel

Immediately following will be Fellowship @ Morehouse
College Executive Conference Center - Leadership Facility

Thursday, August 23, 2007

11:00 am - Celebration of Life @ MLK, Jr. International Chapel

The MLK, Jr. International Chapel is located at 830
Westview Drive, SW, Atlanta, GA 30314 (on Morehouse College Campus).

In lieu of flowers, the family requests donations be sent to:

PER MAAT FOUNDATION, INC.
PO Box 357171
Gainesville, Florida 32635

Per Maat Foundation, Inc. was formed to educate the public about African and

African Diaspora history and culture. It is a not-for-profit, tax deductible, Georgia corporation.

---

Fussy? Opinionated? Impossible to please? Perfect. Join Yahoo!'s user panel and lay it on us.
| 23001|2007-08-16 16:06:36|willie bennett|Re: Homegoing for Dr. Asa Hilliard (Aug. 22-23)|
Harambee!

Thank you for sharing this information. In my opinion Dr Hilliard was number one in our movement.

Willie Bennett

>From: cristofori whitakara <boogie\_down\_black@yahoo.com>
>Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
>To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
>Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Homegoing for Dr. Asa Hilliard (Aug. 22-23)
>Date: Thu, 16 Aug 2007 08:25:57 -0700 (PDT)
>

>http://www.africawithin.com/hilliard/asa\_hilliard.htm

>

>Manu Ampim <Profmanu@acninc.net> wrote: HOMEGOING FOR DR. ASA

>HILLIARD

>

> Georgia State Professor Asa Hilliard Dies in Egypt

>http://www.diverseeducation.com/artman/publish/printer\_9110.shtml

>

>

>

>Wednesday, August 22, 2007

>Noon - 6pm -- Lay In State @ MLK, Jr. International Chapel

> 6-8pm -- Acclamation of Legacy and Community @ MLK, Jr International >Chapel

>

>Immediately following will be Fellowship @ Morehouse

>College Executive Conference Center - Leadership Facility

>

>Thursday, August 23, 2007

>11:00 am - Celebration of Life @ MLK, Jr. International Chapel

>

>The MLK, Jr. International Chapel is located at 830

>Westview Drive, SW, Atlanta, GA 30314 (on Morehouse College Campus).

>

>In lieu of flowers, the family requests donations be >sent to:

>

>PER MAAT FOUNDATION, INC.

>PO Box 357171

>Gainesville, Florida 32635

>

>Per Maat Foundation, Inc. was formed to educate the >public about African and

>

>African Diaspora history and culture. It is a >not-for-profit, tax deductible, Georgia corporation.

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>-----

>Fussy? Opinionated? Impossible to please? Perfect. Join Yahoo!'s user >panel and lay it on us.

---

Now you can see trouble?before he arrives

http://newlivehotmail.com/?ocid=TXT\_TAGHM\_migration\_HM\_viral\_protection\_0507

| 23002|2007-08-16 17:40:02|S. J. Turner|Update: Rainforest sojourn|

Greetings,

Thank you for all of your inquiries and expressions.

For updated information regarding the upcoming event, "Rainforest Sojourn and Tropical Feast with the High Priest in Belize : A Raw and Living Spirit-Healing Affair" please visit: www.livefoodsunchild.com .

In the Most Supreme Spirit of Love, Royal Priestess Gail

Learning To Love

Sister Jasmine

"Life is For the Living.?"

"You are a sum total of all you consume.?"

"If you are ready to heal from the ordeal of murder; rape; steal; take and kill; or the hate and self-hate pains of this ice cold deep freeze game. If it is your most higher self you truly desire to claim than move into the fast lane. Its a family affair and we are goin' deal with this thang...."

by The High Priest Kwatamani Spiritual Leader of the Kwatamani Holistic Institute of Brain Body & Spiritual Research & Development, Inc.

www.livefoodsunchild.com

---

Shape Yahoo! in your own image. Join our Network Research Panel today!

| 23003|2007-08-16 20:38:39|Paul Kekai Manansala|Egyptian Tomb of Noblewoman Found|

Dan Morrison in Cairo, Egypt

for National Geographic News

August 16, 2007

An ancient Egyptian noblewoman's large stone coffin has been found in a tomb near the pyramid of Unas, experts announced yesterday

Archaeologists were digging near the crumbling pyramid in Saqqā, 15 miles (25 kilometers) south of Cairo, when they discovered the tomb, which had been built more than 600 years before the noblewoman's death. (Check out a map of ancient Saqqā.)

Enlarge Photo

RELATED

- Photo: Egypt's "Most Beautiful Mummy" \(May 5, 2005\)
- Egypt's Female Pharaoh Revealed by Chipped Tooth, Experts Say \(June 27, 2007\)
- Treasures of Egypt in *National Geographic* Magazine \(May 2005\)

The find is another example of the enduring gravity of ancient Egypt's sacred places, said expedition leader Ola el-Aguizy of Cairo University.

El-Aguizy said the coffin of the noblewoman, named Sekhmet Nefret, was the first from Egypt's 27th dynasty (525 to 402 B.C.) to be found in this part of Saqqā, an ancient royal burial ground.

The walls of the burial shaft were made in part with carved stone slabs, known as stelae. The stone dates from the even earlier reign of the pharaoh Djoser, who was buried in Saqqā's distinctive step pyramid.

Renovated Burial Grounds

El-Aguizy and his team were digging in a part of Saqqā built during the reign of Ramses II (1279 to 1213 B.C.) when they found Nefret's sarcophagus.

Like other burial grounds near Egypt's ancient capital Memphis, the site was abandoned for centuries and then came back into use after the Persian conquest of Egypt in 525 B.C.

At that time, nearby temples were renovated and religious cults flourished. (Related: "'Gentrified' Egyptian Burial Chamber Discovered" [August 2, 2007].)

Noblewoman Nefret's family had a direct role in that conquest.

She was related to Udja Hor Resenet, a physician and scribe. Resenet helped the Persian king Cambyses II conquer Egypt and later tutored the new ruler in Egyptian religion and rituals, said Zahi Hawass, director of Egypt's Supreme Council of Antiquities. (Hawass is also a National Geographic Society explorer-in-residence. National Geographic News is part of the National Geographic Society.)

Giza Roots

Continued on Next Page >>

| 23004|2007-08-18 08:59:55|Paul Kekai Manansala|Mummy Was Painted Red With Spanish Lead|

Lead-based paint?

I wonder if this is another case of fraudulent archaeology.

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

---

Mummy Was Painted Red With Spanish Lead

Jennifer Viegas, Discovery News

Submit to:

☐ ☐ ☐ ☐

Aug. 14, 2007 □ Egyptian mummies may be more international than previously thought, as analysis of one such mummy in the Brooklyn Museum's collection has revealed a surprising connection to Spain.

The mummy, named "Demetrios," turns out to have been wrapped in linen that was decorated with red pigment containing lead that originated in Spain, according to the museum.

"We now think the ancient Egyptians made very specific material choices for mummy preparation," Lisa Bruno, the museum's lead object conservator, told Discovery News.

"Red was thought to ward off danger," she added, explaining that the lead-based paint is toxic, so the Egyptians might have been fighting poison with poison.

Demetrios recently underwent X-ray fluorescence, a process whereby objects and materials are exposed to short wavelength X-rays that excite atoms and cause them to release radiation. This radiation has energy characteristics of the atoms within the object, so the technique helps researchers to determine what chemicals might be present.

Cool Jobs: Mummy-Hunter.

Get more Discovery News video here.

Bruno said the lead painted on Demetrios matches the chemical profile of lead from Spain's Rio Tinto region, which has been a site for silver and other mining operations for over 5,000 years.

More

[ 1 . 2 ] next »

| 23005|2007-08-21 09:22:46|asar_imhotep|Re: Mummy Was Painted Red With Spanish Lead|
So there is no information on how they traced the lead to Spain? Is Spain the only place with lead, or at least of that particular concentration?

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

s> [del.icio.us]

>

<<http://del.icio.us/post?url=http%3A//dsc.discovery.com/news/2007/08/14/>

>

mummy_arc.html%3Fcategory%3Darchaeology%26guid%3D20070814103030&title=Mummy%20Was%20Painted%20With%20Spanish%20Lead> [reddit.com]

>

<<http://reddit.com/submit?url=http%3A//dsc.discovery.com/news/2007/08/14/>

>

/mummy_arc.html%3Fcategory%3Darchaeology%26guid%3D20070814103030&title=Mummy%20Was%20Painted%20With%20Spanish%20Lead> [newsvine.com]

>

<http://www.newsvine.com/\_tools/seed&save?popoff=0&u=http%3A//dsc.discovery.com/news/2007/08/14/mummy\_arc.html%3Fcategory%3Darchaeology%26guid%3D20070814103030

>

> D20070814103030>

> Aug. 14, 2007 □ Egyptian mummies may be more international than > previously thought, as analysis of one such mummy in the Brooklyn > Museum's collection has revealed a surprising connection to Spain.

>

> The mummy, named "Demetrios," turns out to have been wrapped in linen > that was decorated with red pigment

> <<http://dsc.discovery.com/news/briefs/20041101/pompeiired.html>> > containing lead that originated in Spain, according to the museum.
>
> "We now think the ancient Egyptians made very specific material choices
>

<http://dsc.discovery.com/news/2007/07/27/faketoe\_arc.html?category=arch\aeology&guid=20070727134500> for mummy preparation," Lisa Bruno, the > museum's lead object conservator, told Discovery News.
>
> "Red was thought to ward off danger," she added, explaining that the > lead-based paint is toxic, so the Egyptians might have been fighting > poison with poison.
>
> Demetrios recently underwent X-ray fluorescence
>

<http://dsc.discovery.com/news/2007/02/28/forensicphoto\_arc.html?category=arch\aeology&guid=20070228103000> , a process whereby objects and > materials are exposed to short wavelength X-rays that excite atoms and > cause them to release radiation. This radiation has energy > characteristics of the atoms within the object, so the technique helps > researchers to determine what chemicals might be present.
>
> Cool Jobs: Mummy-Hunter.
> Get more Discovery News video here. <<http://www.discoveryvideonews.com/>> > Bruno said the lead painted on Demetrios matches the chemical profile of > lead from Spain's Rio Tinto region, which has been a site for silver and > other mining operations for over 5,000 years.
>
>
> More > [ 1 . 2
>

<http://dsc.discovery.com/news/2007/08/14/mummy\_arc\_02.html?category=arch\aeology&guid=20070814123000> ]
> next »
>

<http://dsc.discovery.com/news/2007/08/14/mummy\_arc\_02.html?category=arch\aeology&guid=20070814123000>
>
> | 23006|2007-08-21 10:01:58|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: Mummy Was Painted Red With Spanish
Lead|
--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:

- >
- > So there is no information on how they traced the lead to Spain? Is
- > Spain the only place with lead, or at least of that particular
- > concentration?
- >
- > Asar Imhotep
- > <http://www.mochasuite.com>
- >

Asar, ores have profiles of trace elements sort of like a fingerprint.

The same is true for stone tools, pottery, etc.

Methods used to check for geochemical composition include:

From: <http://www.physics.utoronto.ca/~isotrace/jpamater.htm>

In-situ (small artefacts): XRF (x-ray fluorescence), INAA (instrumental neutron activation analysis).

In-situ microanalysis: SEM (scanning electron microscope), EPM (electron probe microanalysis), PIXE (proton-induced x-ray emission, proton microprobe), SIMS (secondary ion mass spectrometry, ion microprobe)...

Bulk analysis: classical wet chemistry, AAS (atomic absorption spectroscopy), XRF, INAA, ICPOES / ICPMS (inductively-coupled plasma optical emission spectroscopy / mass spectrometry) and many other techniques, some multi-element, others specific to a particular element or compound.

Accelerator mass spectrometry, AMS (used for <sup>14</sup>C dating, also for trace element analysis).

X-ray diffraction, XRD (crystal structure determination).

Raman spectroscopy (data on polymorphs, fine-scale resolution of intergrowths).

Isotope geochemistry. Broadly divisible into a) stable isotopes (e.g., C isotopes, O isotopes), determined by mass spectrometry on small bulk samples, for diverse applications, and b) radiogenic isotopes (e.g., Pb isotopes), also measured by mass spectrometry, used for dating ores and constraining provenance.

---

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala
| 23007|2007-08-21 14:37:42|m_ampim|(revised) Hatshepsut's Mummy: Fact or Fiction?|
Greetings All,

I have posted the revised final version of my Hatshepsut essay on my website:

<http://manuampim.com/hatshepsut07.doc>

Advancing the work,

Manu Ampim
| 23008|2007-08-22 10:44:50|cristofori whitakara|Moorish Spain or Indo-Arab Spain?

Cities of Light: The Rise and Fall of Islamic Spain

Wednesday, August 22, 9:00pm
CHANNEL 13 (WNET)

An examination of a time during the Middle Ages when Christians, Jews and Muslims peacefully coexisted in southern Spain; and what led to the disintegration of the society. Included: reenactments; the region's Islamic architecture.

---

Be a better Heartthrob. Get better relationship answers from someone who knows.

Yahoo! Answers - Check it out.

| 23009|2007-08-22 13:47:41|Paul Kekai Manansala|German returns "cursed" stolen Pharaonic artifact|

Wed Aug 22, 8:43 AM ET

CAIRO (Reuters) - A German has handed in a package containing part of a Pharaonic carving to Egypt's embassy in Berlin, with a note saying his stepfather had suffered a "curse of the Pharaohs" for stealing it, Egypt said on Wednesday.

The carving to make amends for his late stepfather and enable his soul to rest in peace, Egypt's Supreme Council for Antiquities said.

The stepfather had stolen the piece while on a visit to Egypt in 2004 and on his return to Germany suffered paralysis, nausea, unexplained fevers and cancer before dying recently, the anonymous man said in the note.

The Egyptian embassy in Berlin had sent the fragment back to Egypt by diplomatic pouch and it had been handed over to the Supreme Council for Antiquities, where a committee of experts was trying to ascertain its authenticity, the statement said.

The belief in a curse that strikes down anyone who disturbs the tombs or mummies of ancient Egypt's Pharaohs has been around since the discovery of Tutankhamen.

---

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23010|2007-08-22 20:10:59|imageeffects|Re: "Out of Africa" Challenge|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "aitana23" wrote:

>

> http://news.yahoo.com/s/afp/20070807/ts\_alt\_afp/usscienceorigins

>

I don't understand how anybody could think that article challenges the "Out of Africa" Reality. Even if the article is true(which mains to be seen), the fact of the matter is that the Original Chinese were Black. So, the White Europeans are still descendants of Africans as ALL HOMO SAPIENS SAPIENS are even if there was some so-called Asian influx. They have not succeeded in altering the Out of Africa" reality. Only prolonging the eventuality of ending their research where it began-with the Black African.

Hotep,

Linco

| 23011|2007-08-22 21:26:47|imageeffects|Re: "Out of Africa" Challenge|

As a follow up to my earlier comments, we must remember that at the time Africans in Europe were loosing their color(20-15 thousand years ago), all the Chinese were Black. The Yellow skinned Chinese of today are only 2500 to 3000 years old so it is not likely they played a dominant role the African losing their color. These so-called researchers have forgotten this fact.

Hotep,

Linco

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "imageeffects" wrote:

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "aitana23" wrote:

>>

>> http://news.yahoo.com/s/afp/20070807/ts\_alt\_afp/usscienceorigins

>>

> I don't understand how anybody could think that article challenges > the "Out of Africa" Reality. Even if the article is true(which mains to

- > be seen), the fact of the matter is that the Original Chinese were
- > Black. So, the White Europeans are still descendants of Africans as
- ALL
- > HOMO SAPIENS SAPIENS are even if there was some so-called Asian
- influx.
- > They have not succeeded in altering the Out of Africa" reality.

Only

- > prolonging the eventuality of ending their research where it began-
- with
- > the Black African.

>

> Hotep,

>

> Linco

>

| 23012|2007-08-23 12:22:41|Dexter Harper|Re: (revised) Hatshepsut's Mummy: Fact or Fiction?|
Great stuff Dr, Ampim....

Question:

Besides being similiar to Ahmose Nefertari's DNA(Hatshepsut's grandmother), did any of the DNA of the mummy match that of Hatshepsut's other ancestors or siblings?

HTP,

Sharma Men Ra

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "m_ampim" wrote:

>

> Greetings All,

>

> I have posted the revised final version of my Hatshepsut essay on my > website:

>

> <http://manuampim.com/hatshepsut07.doc>

>

> Advancing the work,

>

> Manu Ampim

>

| 23013|2007-08-23 14:28:44|Paul Kekai Manansala|Egyptians' ancient tax burden revealed|

Steven Morris
Wednesday August 22, 2007
The Guardian

<http://arts.guardian.co.uk/art/news/story/0,,2153479,00.html>

A dusty crate of broken bits of pottery discovered at a stately home in Dorset has given a fresh insight into the life of the ancient Egyptians - and it turns out that concerns over mortgages, taxes and simply making ends meet were as important then as they are now.

More than 200 "ostraka" - potsherds inscribed with notes - were found in the cellar of the National Trust property Kingston Lacy, near Wimborne Minster.

Revealing the find yesterday, experts said some of the ostraka featured lists of temple priests who "stood before the god", but most were concerned with the minutiae of everyday life.

Among the messages translated are receipts for a poll tax bill paid by a farmer, tax paid on handicrafts, income tax from a crop of dates and tax for the maintenance of public utilities.

At least 16 of the tax receipts were issued to the same taxpayer, Patsibtis, son of Petorzmetis. He is also a taxpayer on more than 20 ostraka in the British Museum and other collections.

Brian Muhs, who oversaw the translations, said: "Because there are a lot of ostraka, and many relate to the same people, we are able to build up a picture of what life was like. It is possible to build up a picture of income, jobs, family makeup.

"Some show that the lives of farmers were very hard and they ended each year in debt and had to sell their harvest of dates to pay their taxes," added Mr Muhs. "It was a perpetual cycle of hardship."

Receipts and notes were written on broken pottery because they were less expensive than papyrus or parchment. Originally they were used as voting ballots to exile unpopular members of a community - thus "ostracised".

The Kingston Lacy ostraka were collected in the early 19th century by the Egyptologist William John Bankes, who stored them at his Dorset mansion.

Since the National Trust acquired the estate in 1982 it has been cataloguing the artefacts. Its researchers found the 212 ostraka, 175 of them with identifiable text in three languages. The oldest dates from around 1,200BC but the majority are in Greek and date from the Roman occupation of Egypt around AD200.

| 23014|2007-08-24 12:07:09|Peter Gray|Re: Sudan Field Research Update|

Thank you, profesor. As someone concerned about the inundation of African history yet to be revealed, I applaud your important work and look forward to seeing your future report,

Thanks again,

Peter Gray

---

From: "m_ampim"
Reply-To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Sudan Field Research Update Date: Tue, 14 Aug 2007 12:01:04 -0000

Greetings Everyone,

I spent the past couple weeks in Sudan to conduct research near the Merowe Dam, which when completed will flood one of the most important archaeological regions in antiquity.

My trip was very productive and I will give a report of my findings shortly.

Advancing the work,

Manu Ampim

"Primary research is the greatest weapon against the distortion of African culture & history." - MA

---

Messenger Caf? ? open for fun 24/7. Hot games, cool activities served daily. Visit now.

| 23015|2007-08-24 12:31:30|D. McIntyre|The Moors - offtopic|

I just posted my (amateur) objections to a PBS aired documentary called Cities of Light: The Rise and Fall of Islamic Spain.

Please take a look and post your comments (criticisms also welcome):

<http://www.yaminternet.com>

Regards,
Deidra

| 23016|2007-08-24 14:26:09|Franklin Jones|ALERT!!! TODAY'S COINTELPRO IS THE FACE OF MODERN WHITE RACISM|

Today, for the most part, the manner in which African Americans confront White racism is very outdated. The most detrimental system of white racism now adversely afflicting African Americans avoid the blatant now socially unacceptable means as those used in the past. Moreover today's system is far more sophisticated, elaborated and proficient than any system of racism previously faced by African Americans--yes even slavery.

Today's modern method of white racism in the United States is now secretly applied through the government's proven method of Covert Counterintelligence Program [COINTELPRO: A misnomer for Domestic Covert Actions.] Although the formal COINTELPRO covert operations employed by the FBI directed against African Americans during the period of 1956-1971 was discontinued [upon the surface]. However, in truth--because the nineteen sixties were a period of massive black rebellion and unrest that caused the U.S. Government to fear the uprising of a violent revolution-- the FBI did not actually cease its formal domestic counterintelligence programs against African Americans, but instead actually advanced it by targeting it more broadly and secretly. Today there is a far more sophisticated and massive counterintelligence program being implemented against the entire African American population.

Because the U.S. Government's socialist and psychologist were well aware of the fact that those who make peaceful revolution impossible will make violent revolution inevitable, it became necessary to create a more sophisticated system of white racism that deliberately wears only the appearance, if any, of being totally self-inflicted by African Americans themselves. A system of white governmental racism that is implemented through the American educational, judicial and prison systems-- that prevails and is concealed through the usage of Psychological Warfare implemented through the national media that fosters a consensual environment for its unethical undertaking. By doing so, the United States Government acquired a far more insidious and covert method of ensuring that its white dominance is maintained that exists behind a clever shroud of secrecy and deceit ? for it is in this way that the evils of racism thrive best -- when its victims do not recognize the evil.

While although this modern method of governmental white racism covertly uses the American educational system to mortifyingly mis-educate and disesteem black students and the judicial and prison systems to severely reduce black growth and upward mobility by reducing black America?s ability to procreate and to vote thus to maintain its white dominance. However the most significant and detrimental aspect of this modern system of white governmental racism used today in America is its aspect of using psychological warfare against African Americans. Governmental Psychological warfare is the art of directing masses and individual towards governmental objectives by means of cleverly manipulating theory and misinformation. Today the United States Government uses mis-education, false statistics and negative propaganda media reports that equates a psychological warfare that conspires to corrupt blacks of unity, reason, and common sense, thus deliberately soliciting the disparity that has now become modern Black America as a mean of meeting its objective of maintaining white dominance in the United States .

Here is a simplified analogy of the psychological aspect of this modern system of racism that is now being implemented against America ?s Black population. Let us say, for example, that a group of people was aboard their own massive ship and that their ship was being shadowed by another neighboring ship, a neighboring ship that was constantly broadcasting derogatory messages to the first group that their ship was lesser, smaller, not seaworthy or perhaps slowly sinking or that their crew was incompetent or was planning a mutiny. With time, the group receiving the negative messages, being unable to refute or to confirm these derogatory messages and deficiencies will grow weary and paranoid of the negative messages and will eventually come to accept these negative assessments of themselves. The perception created by the taunting now unconsciously influences how the taunted group perceives themselves, subsequently causing them to become distrustful of themselves, doubting themselves, hating themselves and, eventually, fighting among themselves. The taunted group may even become so besieged by deep feelings of inadequacy that they may even jump into the sea and attempt to swim towards the taunting ship now believing it to be superior to their own boat even if their own ship was in fact better.

This concept of warfare uses psychology as the decisive factor in the outcome. The basis of the concept is that the human being's most critical aspect is the mind. This science of psychology works by affecting the unconscious mind through deception. Its weapon is the message that it carries and the way this message affects the recipients in terms of their behavior. Within a real world setting, this is implemented against African Americans through U.S. governmental agencies that leak false derogatory press releases, documentaries, and media information concerning its Black population that are designed to perpetuate and frame the myth of Whites' racial, moral, and ethical superiority over its Black population. Its collaborators in the news media, which either knowingly or unknowingly carry the false information or create their own false information through news releases in magazine articles, radio, and television, work to demoralize, discourage, berate, subjugate, and or dismantle the Black population. The weapon is not the way it is sent, but the messages that it carries and how the messages affect the recipient and influence society.

This perversion of reality insinuates that America would be a better society as a whole if African Americans were gone, thus psychologically changing the root problem of racism in America to be due to Black's behavior rather than White's proclivity for racism. This shift of victimization that the problem of racism in America is due to the fault of African Americans, is perpetuated unrelentingly everywhere through the media. This campaign engenders distorted perceptions and increasingly prejudiced and acrimonious beliefs about its African American population that creates a consensual environment that facilitates the easier exploitation and suppression of Black America. [For when contempt of Blacks appears to be justifiable, it is the fiercest and most effective type of racism because its witnesses, bystanders, and jurors will sit by idly allowing African Americans to be brutally mistreated under the belief that it is justified.]

Although this may sound a bit like bad science fiction, Psychological Warfare is a real and well-proven technology that exceeds the territorial limits of conventional warfare to penetrate the proposed target. This type of psychological warfare has been used by the military since World War II. The British Special Operation Executives (SOE) was pioneering this form of propaganda during the Second World War. The British Government, between 1930-1940, conducted psychological warfare against Germany, by putting together a massive department staffed by many former journalists that conducted secret journalism and planted favorable stories in the world's press. Generally using friendly newspapers editors, but also using bribery to get pro-allied stories in print, British pilots also dropped propaganda leaflets and spread rumors concerning Germany 's relations with France and other aspects of the war.

The ability to influence the nation in mass using psychological operations through the national media is highly effective because the media itself is very powerful in terms of its influence. For the media helps shape our views of the world, what we consider to be good or bad, and also forges our deepest values, identities, and our sense of what it means, for example, to be male or female. These facts, combined with those studies showing that the average American watches 18 hundred hours of television each year, affirm that there is a great inclination for Americans to be affected by psychological operations conducted through the national media.

The reason psychological warfare is so unknown to most Americans is because its very nature is to be covert, and because it is not the stuff of adventure and the excitement of war that films or novels portray. However, psychological warfare is a real, sound, and proven governmental technology that has been used by the U.S. Government for many decades, and its usage is ongoing even now. For as recently as July 2004, a story was reported by the New York Times that the Defense Department had paid the Rendon Group, a Washington-based international consulting firm, $100,000 per month to help the Office of Strategic Information (OSI) with a broad campaign that would include negative propaganda or disinformation. The report stated that the OSI was established to spread positive messages about the war on terrorism, but it would also use disinformation and misinformation to mislead friends and foe alike. The report went on to say that the office of Strategic Influence had been set up to disseminate truthful information openly but also to spread what senior pentagon officials called "the Blackest of Black programs." The organization works on ways to influence and mislead the media abroad and also domestically in America, such as spreading positive messages about the war on terrorism or perpetuating disinformation through its frequent collusion with news media personnel to publish false and distorted material at the government's behest.

The U.S. Government's methods for implementing domestic psychological warfare also include the ability to suppress particular targeted groups. [ This is when governmental agencies leak false, derogatory press releases, documentaries, and media information to its collaborators in the news media which the media knowingly or unknowingly carry as its own and submit the false information through news releases and in magazine articles, radio, and television to demoralize, discourage, subjugate, and or dismantle the targeted groups.] This method of psychological operation is disseminated through face-to-face communication or television, audio media, newspaper, books, and magazine. The weapon is not in the media used, but the message that it carries and how the messages affect the recipient. Sound familiar doesn't it Black people? This method of psychological operation works by, first, simply learning everything about the targeted group, their beliefs, likes, dislikes, strengths, and vulnerabilities. Once you know what motivates your target, you are ready to begin psychological operations against them.

We have completed a review of the U.S. government's history and methods of applying psychological operations of influence, most particularly its method of utilizing the national media to disseminate domestic psychological operations to suppress targeted groups. The intention is to now show in a constructive manner rather than an accusatory manner that, since the means of economic and political control used in the past under the pretext of national interest are no longer morally and socially acceptable, the U.S. governmental and societal capitalist elites have modified their methods of exploiting and suppressing its Black population into a form more socially acceptable with contemporary times through the usage of psychological warfare operations.

The uses to which psychological warfare can be applied are virtually unlimited. For the U.S. Government also uses psychological operations to assist in the sales of arms and weaponry. The United States Government is the world's largest arms dealer, and to ensure that these sales continue, it often resorts to the unethical usage of psychological operations. Here is an example of how such an implementation may be done. Let us say, for example, that an African kingdom that has purchased arms in the past from the U.S. Government has now decided that there no longer exists any threat from its neighboring kingdoms and therefore elects to discontinue their spending of millions of dollars on unneeded weaponry. The U.S. Government may respond to this refusal to continue buying their arms by themselves creating a threat of imminent war between the targeted kingdom and its neighboring African kingdoms. This would be done by employing Special Forces and other types of espionage specialist to plant lies and rumors of war thus igniting conflict and distrust between the targeted African kingdom and its neighboring kingdoms which often results in both empires now buying arms from the U.S. Government.

Although the usage of psychological warfare began within a military setting, it was eventually realized by governmental and societal elites that this method of psychological warfare could be useful for totally controlling society. Therefore, psychological warfare technology evolved from its military usage against foreign enemies to being used to control society domestically. Today, the U.S. government, like many other developed nations, conducts planned campaigns of extensive strategic psychological operations through the national media to influence the perception and climate of the nation towards the attainment of its governmental objectives.

Participating federal agencies may include the National Security Council, The Office of Strategic Council, The Central Intelligence Agency, and The Federal Bureau of Investigations. However, when it is executed domestically it is more often commonly referred to by governmental and military officials as psychological operations [PSYOPs] rather than Psychological Warfare.

Psychological warfare can also be used to create a brazen deception in order to create a pretext for war with the true intent of achieving global geo-political objectives. This is where governmental agents secretly create or allow terrorism in the United States for the purpose of mobilizing public opinion in favor of the government's objectives. Many people have compared this example to those actions taken by the U.S. government after the September 11, 2001 attack on America wherein several terrorists high-jacked four American commercial air liners and crashed them into strategic targets in Washington , D.C. and New York , NY . For although all ties to the terrorist attack pointed towards Afghanistan and Saudi Arabia and given that all the historic evidence showed that Saddam Hussein was a vigorous arch enemy of Al Qaeda, President Bush, in his official speech to the nation responding to the atrocious attack, redirected the nation's attentions towards Iraq as a means of fighting the terrorism of Al Qaeda. This strategic operation of influence gained the U.S Government the support of the nation that it needed to send thousands of its service members to war under the pretext of being a war on terrorism, while in fact it successfully met the U.S. objective of what appears to have been more about securing its interest in the Iraq oil wells. The targets, then, were the minds of the entire American population, our military troops and the civilian population. [For those readers that find this premise too difficult to accept, I strongly suggest that you read a 1962 governmental document now unclassified and provided under the freedom of information act entitled "Operation North Woods" documenting a governmental plan to take a civilian aircraft, replace it with an automatic unmanned aircraft, then shoot it down and blame the incident on Cuba in order to go to war.]

The preceding example of U.S. government usage of psychological warfare to influence the nation is only a single act among a long list of many conducted by the U.S. Government. Every act of the government has a psychological impact, and it is ongoing from President Bush's media coverage stunt where he landed upon a U.S. Naval battle carrier dressed as a pilot, to the U.S. soldiers pulling down the statue of Saddam Hussein in Iraq , to the staged rescue of Jessica Lynch. These strategies are all part of the sophisticated system of psychological warfare, and they are on-going, all around us, all of the time. To learn more or to get a copy of this book "the Black Matrix please to www.divineblacktruth.org

---

Park yourself in front of a world of choices in alternative vehicles.

Visit the Yahoo! Auto Green Center.

| 23017|2007-08-24 14:27:44|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: The Moors - offtopic|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "D. McIntyre" wrote:

>

> I just posted my (amateur) objections to a PBS aired documentary

called Cities of Light: The > Rise and Fall of Islamic Spain.

>

> Please take a look and post your comments (criticisms also welcome):

> <http://www.yaminternet.com>

>

> Regards,

> Deidra

>

Nice article, Deidra. Here's a more direct link for those who might have trouble finding it:

<http://www.yaminternet.com/Blog/wordpress/?cat=5>

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23018|2007-08-24 18:10:59|Emeagwali, Gloria (History)|Ancient Egypt and Christianity|

Attachments :

Forwarded from Ethioforum

Author: Prophet Nebly Ezekiel

.....

The Truth that was hidden for 2000 years revealed.

=====

No matter how hard one tries to hide it from the public for a very long time, the truth will always be revealed sooner or later since it is unchangeable and eternal.

The Europeans celebrated their year-2000 about seven years ago while we the Ethiopians are going to celebrate the Ethiopian Year-2000 in about one month.

But what is this Year-2000 all about? This is the very starting point where you either get awakened to the hidden truth or remain ignorant for the rest of your life.

Those who are simple minded and ignorant of historical facts might think of the Year-2000 as "The number of years passed since the birth of Jesus Christ."

But there is no any historical evidence for the date of the birth of Jesus Christ. The celebration of Christmas on December 25th every year as the date of the birth of Jesus Christ was decided by the Catholic Church in the Fifth Century A.D.

There is no any historical evidence for the date of the death of Jesus Christ either. That is why there is no any fixed date to celebrate Easter(Fasika) every year since we celebrate it sometimes in March and sometimes in April.

If there is no any historical evidence for the date of the birth of Jesus Christ, then what is this Year-2000 all about?

The puzzle is unraveled when we examine the historical fact of the invasion of Ancient Egypt by Alexander the Greek in the 3rd Century B.C. since it was at this time that A Reverse Psychology took place.

Until it was invaded by Alexander the Greek in the 3rd Century B.C., Ancient Egypt was the Super Power of the world for ten thousand years, and it was the center and the source of all knowledge, both physical and spiritual knowledge.

The so called "The Ancient Greek philosophers", such as, Socrates, Plato, Aristotle, Pythagoras, etc. were all educated in the University of Ancient Egypt.

The Ancient Egyptians were black people or Ethiopians, and they were regarded by the whole world as the supreme human beings and the children of the Almighty God.

The Sacred Priestly Society of Ancient Egypt Knew the Law of the universe very well, and kept this secret spiritual knowledge in their Temples.

The Pharaohs who were ruling Ancient Egypt were well educated in this secret knowledge, and they were the members of the Sacred Society of the Priests.

When Alexander the Greek invaded Ancient Egypt in the 3rd Century B.C., A Reverse Psychology took place.

Alexander the Greek asked the High Priest of the Sacred Society of the priests of Ancient Egypt to reveal to him the mystery of the Egyptian Sphinx, and he threatened that he would kill all the priests and destroy all their temples with all their Sacred Books if he would not do so.

The High Priest of the Sacred Society of the Priests replied to Alexander the Greek by saying, "Well, we usually don't tell this secret knowledge to people, but since you are Alexander the great, I'll do so."

Alexander the Greek felt that he was recognized and honored by the High Priest, and he relaxed and continued to listen to the lecture of the High Priest.

The High Priest asked Alexander the Greek by saying, "Well, if you know the answer to the question that I am going to ask, then that would be the answer to the mystery of the Egyptian Sphinx," and the High Priest posed his question to Alexander by saying, "Tell me, what is it that walks on four legs in the morning, two legs at noon, and three legs in the evening?"

Alexander the Greek knew what the answer was, and he was very well satisfied.

After the death of Alexander the Greek, Ptolemy 1st who was the army general of Alexander became the ruler of Ancient Egypt. In order to be accepted as a legitimate pharaoh of Egypt, Ptolemy 1st had to be the member of the Sacred Society of the Priests of Ancient Egypt.

But when the priests rejected his demand to become the member of their Sacred Society, Ptolemy 1st came up with an evil plan, and divided the priests against one another by bribing one group while punishing the other.

It was at this time(3rd Century B.C.) that the Sacred Priestly Society of Ancient Egypt was divided into two: The Monophysitic group, and the Dyophysitic group.

The Dyophysitic group of priests of Ancient Egypt accepted Ptolemy 1st's demand, and made his image to be worshipped as god, while the Monophysitic group of priests rejected the icon of Ptolemy 1st to be worshiped as god.

It was at this particular time that A Reverse Psychology took place: The icon of a white European became god, while the icon of a Black African became satan; what was good became considered as evil, and what was evil became considered as good. A Reverse Psychology took place since the truth was hidden by the deception of the Greeks.

Ptolemy 1st took all the Sacred Books of the secret knowledge of Ancient Egypt from all the Temples in Egypt, and took them to Greece and deceived the whole world as if those Books were the product of the Greeks.

In the mean time, the feud and schism between the Monophysitic group and the Dyophysitic group of priests of Ancient Egypt continued for 700 years until 451 A.D. when the official religion of Christianity was created by the council of Chalcedon.

Ptolemy 1st ordered that his white European icon must be worshipped as god or the "Messiah", or as "Jesus the Christ."

Amazingly, that is why we see "the picture of Jesus Christ" as a blond and blue eyed white man in the Christian Churches today. Also that is why we see "the picture of Virgin Mary, the mother of Jesus" as a blond and blue eyed white girl.

Yet, the Greeks took this spiritual idea of the Virgin Mary, and the Messiah or the Christ from the Sacred Books of the Ancient Egyptians.

The Ancient Egyptians called Virgin Isis as the Queen of heaven, and her son, Horus, the Savior or the Christ. Of course, symbolically speaking, by virgin Isis or the Queen of heaven, the Ancient Egyptians meant any human soul that is connected to and united with the Almighty God. Her Son, Horus, symbolically represented the Christ, or the Active Presence of the Almighty God.

So the Greeks took this spiritual idea from the sacred Books of the Ancient Egyptians, and called it the Virgin Mary, and Jesus the Christ as her son.

The Bible was copied from the Sacred Books of the Ancient Egyptians. Everything in the Bible is allegorical and mystical since the Ancient Egyptians symbolically point to the eternal spiritual truth.

Any time you read about any story in the Bible, you need to understand the inner meaning of the story in order to see the eternal spiritual truth that the Bible is intended to convey.

For example, the story of the Garden of Eden, Adam and Eve, and the serpent is not an historical phenomenon, but a metaphorical presentation of the eternal spiritual truth as explained in the Sacred Books of the Ancient Egyptians.

In this story, Eve symbolically represents our soul or mind, while Adam represents our physical body. In other words, it is about internal reality(Mind), and external reality(Body or matter).

Before anything is demonstrated externally, the idea first takes place in the mind. Our mind is the battle ground for any thought, whether it is positive or negative thought.

To teach us about this eternal spiritual truth, the Bible symbolically says that the serpent went to Eve to tempt her.

After Eve gave in to the temptation of the serpent, she messed up herself and her husband Adam. In other words, if your mind is filled up with negative thoughts, your whole life will be miserable.

What is a negative thought except the negligence of being aware of the Active Presence of the Almighty God - The Christ?

This is the eternal spiritual truth symbolically presented in the Sacred Books of the Ancient Egyptians from which the Bible was copied, even though the Greeks and the Dyophysitic group of priests used A Reverse Psychology to hide the truth from the public for the last 2000 years.

The good news is that it does not matter how long it takes, the truth will be revealed sooner or later since it is unchangeable and eternal.

Glory be to God in the highest and peace to all men with good will.

Prophet Nebiy Ezekiel,

God-Sent-Ethiopian-Prophet-Of-The-21st-Century.

| 23019|2007-08-24 20:30:54|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Egyptians' ancient tax burden revealed|

>>the majority are in Greek and date from the

Roman occupation of Egypt around AD200.<<

Might we assume that this is some of the earliest examples of europeans' bleeding Afrika and her peoples?

It is certainly "interesting" that the most were from this era (Greek) of the european invaders/conquerors.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala" wrote:

- >
- > Steven Morris
- > Wednesday August 22, 2007
- > The Guardian
- >
- > <http://arts.guardian.co.uk/art/news/story/0,,2153479,00.html>
- >
- > A dusty crate of broken bits of pottery discovered at a stately home
- > in Dorset has given a fresh insight into the life of the ancient
- > Egyptians - and it turns out that concerns over mortgages, taxes and
- > simply making ends meet were as important then as they are now.
- >
- > More than 200 "ostraka" - potsherds inscribed with notes - were found

- > in the cellar of the National Trust property Kingston Lacy, near
- > Wimborne Minster.
- >
- > Revealing the find yesterday, experts said some of the ostraka
- > featured lists of temple priests who "stood before the god", but most

- > were concerned with the minutiae of everyday life.
- >
- > Among the messages translated are receipts for a poll tax bill paid

by

- > a farmer, tax paid on handicrafts, income tax from a crop of dates

and

- > tax for the maintenance of public utilities.
- >
- > At least 16 of the tax receipts were issued to the same taxpayer,
- > Patsibtis, son of Petorzmetis. He is also a taxpayer on more than 20

- > ostraka in the British Museum and other collections.
- >
- > Brian Muhs, who oversaw the translations, said: "Because there are a
- > lot of ostraka, and many relate to the same people, we are able to - > build up a picture of what life was like. It is possible to build up a > picture of income, jobs, family makeup.

>

> "Some show that the lives of farmers were very hard and they ended

> each year in debt and had to sell their harvest of dates to pay their > taxes," added Mr Muhs. "It was a perpetual cycle of hardship."

>

> Receipts and notes were written on broken pottery because they were > less expensive than papyrus or parchment. Originally they were used

as

> voting ballots to exile unpopular members of a community - thus

> "ostracised".

>

> The Kingston Lacy ostraka were collected in the early 19th century

by > the Egyptologist William John Bankes, who stored them at his Dorset > mansion.

>

> Since the National Trust acquired the estate in 1982 it has been > cataloguing the artefacts. Its researchers found the 212 ostraka, > of them with identifiable text in three languages. The oldest dates > from around 1,200BC but the majority are in Greek and date from the > Roman occupation of Egypt around AD200.

175

>

| 23020|2007-08-24 21:46:33|m_ampim|Re: (revised) Hatshepsut's Mummy: Fact or Fiction?|

Greetings Dexter,

There have been no details given at all, only the general statement that the mummy in question has DNA "similar" to that of Ahmose Nefertari. It is suspicious that Hawass did not mention the DNA of any other mummy, even though the Cairo Museum has a group of mummies from Hatshepsut's *immediate* family. When the DNA test results are finalized (which takes months) let's see what Hawass has to say about this "similar" DNA.

Advancing the work,

Manu A.

"Primary research is the greatest weapon against the distortion of African culture & history." MA

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Dexter Harper" wrote:

>
>
> Great stuff Dr, Ampim....
>
> Question:
>
> Besides being similiar to Ahmose Nefertari's DNA(Hatshepsut's > grandmother), did any of the DNA of the mummy match that of > Hatshepsut's other ancestors or siblings?

>
>
> HTP,
>
> Sharma Men Ra

>
>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "m_ampim" wrote:

>>
>> Greetings All,
>>
>> I have posted the revised final version of my Hatshepsut essay
on > my >> website:

>>
>> <http://manuampim.com/hatshepsut07.doc>

>>
>> Advancing the work,

>>
>> Manu Ampim

>>
>
| 23021|2007-08-25 06:55:30|m_ampim|Re: Sudan Field Research Update|
Greetings Peter,

Thanks for the feedback. I look forward to sharing my findings with the Ta-Seti community in the next several days. My Sudan tour was one of the most important research experiences that I have ever had.

Advancing the work,

Manu A.

-----
RE: [Ta_Seti] Sudan Field Research Update

Tha\nk you, profesor. As someone concerned about the inundation of African history yet to be revealed, I applaud your important work and look forward to seeing your future report,

Thanks again,

Peter Gray

-----

Greetings Everyone,

I spent the past couple weeks in Sudan to conduct research near the Merowe Dam, which when completed will flood one of the most important archaeological regions in antiquity.

My trip was very productive and I will give a report of my findings shortly.

Advancing the work,

Manu Ampim

"Primary research is the greatest weapon against the distortion of African culture & history." - MA
| 23022|2007-08-27 04:56:40|Dexter Harper|Re: (revised) Hatshepsut's Mummy: Fact or Fiction?|
Greetings Dr. Ampim,

Yes, it is suspicious that there were no mention of any other mummy, especially if they have access to mummies from Hatshepsut's immediate family, which is why I posed the question. Thanks for the follow-up.

HTP,

Sharma Men Ra

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "m_ampim" wrote:

>
> Greetings Dexter,
>
> There have been no details given at all, only the general statement > that the mummy in question has DNA "similar" to that of Ahmose > Nefertari. It is suspicious that Hawass did not mention the DNA of > any other mummy, eventhough the Cairo Museum has a group of mummies > from Hatshepsut's *immediate* family. When the DNA test results
are > finalized (which takes months) let's see what Hawass has to say > about this "similar" DNA.
>
> Advancing the work,
>
> Manu A.
>
> "Primary research is the greatest weapon against the distortion of > African culture & history." MA

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Dexter Harper" wrote:

>>
>>
>> Great stuff Dr, Ampim....
>>
>> Question:
>>
>> Besides being similiar to Ahmose Nefertari's DNA(Hatshepsut's >> grandmother), did any of the DNA of the mummy match that of >> Hatshepsut's other ancestors or siblings?

>>
>>
>> HTP,
>>
>> Sharma Men Ra

>>
>>
>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "m_ampim" wrote:

>>>
>>> Greetings All,
>>>

> > > I have posted the revised final version of my Hatshepsut essay
> on > > my > > > website:
> > >
> > > <http://manuampim.com/hatshepsut07.doc>
> > >
> > > Advancing the work,
> > >
> > > Manu Ampim
> > >
> >
>

| 23023|2007-08-27 11:18:29|Peter Kaiza|Re: The Moors - offtopic|

A very good rebuttal ! You wonder why the barbary raids are never mentioned in the west but these were slave raids by north africans which nearlycompletely depopulated parts of England! Africans were never the only victims of Slavery!

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: pmanansala@sbcglobal.net
Date: Fri, 24 Aug 2007 21:26:24 +0000
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: The Moors - offtopic

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, "D. McIntyre" wrote:
>
> I just posted my (amateur) objections to a PBS aired documentary
called Cities of Light: The > Rise and Fall of Islamic Spain.
>
> Please take a look and post your comments (criticisms also welcome):
> <http://www.yaminter.net.com>
>
> Regards,
> Deidra
>

Nice article, Deidra. Here's a more direct link for those who might have trouble finding it:

<http://www.yaminter.net.com/Blog/wordpress/?cat=5>

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

---

Play Movie Mash-up and win BIG prizes!

| 23024|2007-08-27 11:19:13|encyclopediaegypt|Nubia 2:00 eastern time today|

Science Channel

There is a whole bunch of Egypt programs on in just a little bit and will last for hours

2:00 begins with Nubia

| 23025|2007-08-27 11:35:05|cristofori whitakara|Re: The Moors - offtopic|

washington irving's alhambra was written in the 1700s and the department of education still refuses to put into the curriculum the influences of the african moors on european cultures.

Peter Kaiza wrote:

A very good rebuttal ! You wonder why the barbary raids are never mentioned in the west but these were slave raids by north africans which nearlycompletely depopulated parts of England! Africans were never the only victims of Slavery!

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com

From: pmanansala@sbcgloba l.net

Date: Fri, 24 Aug 2007 21:26:24 +0000

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: The Moors - offtopic

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, "D. McIntyre" wrote:

>

> I just posted my (amateur) objections to a PBS aired documentary called Cities of Light: The > Rise and Fall of Islamic Spain.

>

> Please take a look and post your comments (criticisms also welcome):

> <http://www.yaminter.net.com>

>

> Regards,

> Deidra

>

Nice article, Deidra. Here's a more direct link for those who might have trouble finding it:

<http://www.yaminter.net.com/Blog/wordpress/?cat=5>

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

---

Play Movie Mash-up and win BIG prizes!

---

Need a vacation? Get great deals to amazing places on Yahoo! Travel.

| 23026|2007-08-27 13:08:53|Franklin Jones|Sadly sometimes you can't pour new wine into old bottles|

SADLY SOMETIMES YOU CAN'T FILL OLD BOTTLES WITH NEW WINE.

A recipient of my e-mail posting entitled :
ALERT!!! TODAY'S COINTELPRO IS THE FACE OF MODERN WHITE RACISM had this to say in response:

*Hey Man,
I hate to beat a dead horse,..... You bring up some good points, but THIS IS OLD HAT! I've known this stuff probably since before you were born.
I lived through it when it was happening.If I want some information like that, I know where to go and it won't be 35 years old. Please, no more. Delete me from your address book.*

This Brother was -as requested-immediately removed from my emailing list.However with regards to his remarks about my posted information he is absolutely wrong.
He ,and many others like him, are the most difficult types to reach because they read the word "cointelpro" and then immediately assume that I'm talking about those methods implemented during the periods of 1956-1972. [They've merely glanced over the information saw the term COINTELPRO used and told themselves that this is that same old story.] Sadly their past experiences has created an arrogance that blinds them from the relevance of what I am now disclosing.

What I'm disclosing about the U.S. Government's Cointelpro against African Americans is not the same old stuff that many of us are already too familiar with- because what I'm disclosing remains still classified- and it's happening right now as a means of maintaining white dominance.

What makes this so frustrating is that I am constantly the victim of threats over my phone through out the night by white male voices because of my dedication towards spreading this [contemporary and relevant] anti Black cointelpro info and then to be subsequently faced with my own brothers like this recipient that just don't get it.

A person who thinks that he or she knows it all sadly stops learning. [Moreover, this response proves that the old saying is true that you can't pour new wine into old bottles. ] My posting of this e-mail is not the case of my not being able to accept criticism, but instead written because I know that some day they will stop me [ sadly they always do ] and when they do I would like to believe that my efforts were not in vain for having fell upon deaf ears. I love all Black people even those that are oblivious to the truth. I wish you all peace

-----Original Message-----

From: Franklin Jones

To: Sent: Sat, 25 Aug 2007 10:54 am

Subject: ALERT!!! TODAY'S COINTELPRO IS THE FACE OF MODERN WHITE RACISM

Today, for the most part, the manner in which African Americans confront White racism is very outdated. The most detrimental system of white racism now adversely afflicting African Americans avoid the blatant now socially unacceptable means as those used in the past. Moreover today's system is for more sophisticated, elaborated and proficient

then any system of racism previously faced by African Americans-yes even slavery.

Today's modern method of white racism in the United States is now secretly applied through the governments proven method of Covert Counterintelligence Program [COINTELPRO: A misnomer for Domestic Covert Actions.]Although the formal COINTELPRO covert operations employed by the FBI directed against African Americans during the period of 1956-1971 was discontinued [upon the surface]. However, in truth-- because the nineteen sixties were a period of massive black rebellion and unrest that caused the U.S. Government to feared the uprising of a violent revolution-- the FBI did not actually cease its formal domestic counterintelligence programs against African Americans, but instead actually advanced it by targeting it more broadly and secretively. Today there is a far more sophisticated and massive counterintelligence program being implemented against the entire African American population.

Because the U.S. Governments sociologist and psychologist were well aware of the fact that those who make peaceful revolution impossible will make violent revolution inevitable, it became necessary to create a more sophisticated system of white racism that deliberately wears only the appearance, if any, of being totally self afflicted by African Americans themselves. A system of white governmental racism that is implemented through the American educational, judicial and prison systems-- that prevails and is concealed through the usage of Psychological Warfare implemented through the national media that fosters a consensual environment for its unethical undertaking. By doing so, the United States Government acquired a far more insidious and covert method of ensuring that its white dominance is maintained that exists behind a clever shroud of secrecy and deceit □ for it is in this way that the evils of racism thrive best -- when its victims do not recognize the evil.

While although this modern method of governmental white racism covertly uses the American educational system to mortifyingly mis-educate and disesteem black students and the judicial and prison systems to severely reduce black growth and upward mobility by reducing black Americas ability to procreate and to vote thus to maintain its white dominance. However the most significant and detrimental aspect of this modern system of white governmental racism used today in America is its aspect of using psychological warfare against African Americans. Governmental Psychological warfare is the art of directing masses and individual towards governmental objectives by means of cleverly manipulating theory and misinformation. Today the United States Government uses mis-education, false statistics and negative propaganda media reports that equates a psychological warfare that conspires to corrupt blacks of unity, reason, and common sense, thus deliberately soliciting the disparity that has now become modern Black America as a mean of meeting its objective of maintaining white dominance in the United States.

Here is a simplified analogy of the psychological aspect of this modern system of racism that is now being implemented against America's Black population. Let us say, for example, that a group of people was aboard their own massive ship and that their ship was being shadowed by another neighboring ship, a neighboring ship that was constantly broadcasting derogatory messages to the first group that their ship was lesser, smaller, not seaworthy or perhaps slowly sinking or that their crew was incompetent or was planning a mutiny. With time, the group receiving the negative messages, being unable to refute or to confirm these derogatory messages and deficiencies will grow weary and paranoid of the negative messages and will eventually come to accept these negative assessments of themselves. The perception created by the taunting now unconsciously influences how the taunted group perceives themselves, subsequently causing them to become distrustful of themselves, doubting themselves, hating themselves and, eventually, fighting among themselves. The taunted group may even become so besieged by deep feelings of inadequacy that they may even jump into the sea and attempt to swim towards the taunting ship now believing it to be superior to their own boat even if their own ship was in fact better.

This concept of warfare uses psychology as the decisive factor in the outcome. The basis of the concept is that the human being's most critical aspect is the mind. This science of psychology works by affecting the unconscious mind through deception. Its weapon is the message that it carries and the way this message affects the recipients in terms of their behavior. Within a real world setting, this is implemented against African Americans through U.S. governmental agencies that leak false derogatory press releases, documentaries, and media information concerning its Black population that are designed to perpetuate and frame the myth of Whites racial, moral, and ethical superiority over its Black population. Its collaborators in the news media, which either knowingly or unknowingly carry the false information or create their own false information through news releases in magazine articles, radio, and television, work to demoralize, discourage, berate, subjugate, and or dismantle the Black population. The weapon is not the way it is sent, but the messages that it carries and how the messages affect the recipient and influence society.

This perversion of reality insinuates that America would be a better society as a whole if African Americans were gone, thus psychologically changing the root problem of racism in America to be due to Blacks behavior rather than Whites proclivity for racism. This shift of victimization that the problem of racism in America is due to the fault of African Americans, is perpetuated unrelentingly everywhere through the media. This campaign engenders distorted perceptions and increasingly prejudiced and acrimonious beliefs about its African American population that creates a consensual environment that facilitates the easier exploitation and suppression of Black America. [For when contempt of Blacks appears to be justifiable, it is the fiercest and most effective type of racism because its witnesses, bystanders, and jurors will sit by idly allowing African Americans to be brutally mistreated under the belief that it is justified.]

Although this may sound a bit like bad science fiction, Psychological Warfare is a real and well-proven technology that exceeds the territorial

limits of conventional warfare to penetrate the proposed target. This type of psychological warfare has been used by the military since World War II. The British Special Operation Executives (SOE) was pioneering this form of propaganda during the Second World War. The British Government, between 1930-1940, conducted psychological warfare against Germany, by putting together a massive department staffed by many former journalists that conducted secret journalism and planted favorable stories in the world's press. Generally using friendly newspapers editors, but also using bribery to get pro-allied stories in print, British pilots also dropped propaganda leaflets and spread rumors concerning Germany's relations with France and other aspects of the war.

The ability to influence the nation in mass using psychological operations through the national media is highly effective because the media itself is very powerful in terms of its influence. For the media helps shape our views of the world, what we consider to be good or bad, and also forges our deepest values, identities, and our sense of what it means, for example, to be male or female. These facts, combined with those studies showing that the average American watches 18 hundred hours of television each year, affirm that there is a great inclination for Americans to be affected by psychological operations conducted through the national media.

The reason psychological warfare is so unknown to most Americans is because its very nature is to be covert, and because it is not the stuff of adventure and the excitement of war that films or novels portray. However, psychological warfare is a real, sound, and proven governmental technology that has been used by the U.S. Government for many decades, and its usage is ongoing even now. For as recently as July 2004, a story was reported by the New York Times that the Defense Department had paid the Rendon Group, a Washington-based international consulting firm, $100,000 per month to help the Office of Strategic Information (OSI) with a broad campaign that would include negative propaganda or disinformation. The report stated that the OSI was established to spread positive messages about the war on terrorism, but it would also use disinformation and misinformation to mislead friends and foe alike. The report went on to say that the office of Strategic Influence had been set up to disseminate truthful information openly but also to spread what senior pentagon officials called "the Blackest of Black programs."□

The organization works on ways to influence and mislead the media abroad and also domestically in America, such as spreading positive messages about the war on terrorism or perpetuating disinformation through its frequent collusion with news media personnel to publish false and distorted material at the government's behest.

The U.S. Government□s methods for implementing domestic psychological warfare also include the ability to suppress particular targeted groups. [ This is when governmental agencies leak false, derogatory press releases, documentaries, and media information to its collaborators in the news media which the media knowingly or unknowingly carry as its own and submit the false information through news releases and in magazine articles, radio, and television to demoralize, discourage, subjugate, and or dismantle the targeted groups.] This method of psychological operation is disseminated through face-to-face communication or television, audio media, newspaper, books, and magazine. The weapon is not in the media used, but the message that it carries and how the messages affect the recipient. Sound familiar doesn't it Black people? This method of psychological operation works by, first, simply learning everything about the targeted group, their beliefs, likes, dislikes, strengths, and vulnerabilities. Once you know what motivates your target, you are ready to begin psychological operations against them.

We have completed a review of the U.S. government's history and methods of applying psychological operations of influence, most particularly its method of utilizing the national media to disseminate domestic psychological operations to suppress targeted groups. The intention is to now show in a constructive manner rather than an accusatory manner that, since the means of economic and political control used in the past under the pretext of national interest are no longer morally and socially acceptable, the U.S. governmental and societal capitalist elites have modified their methods of exploiting and suppressing its Black population into a form more socially acceptable with contemporary times through the usage of psychological warfare operations.

The uses to which psychological warfare can be applied are virtually unlimited. For the U.S. Government also uses psychological operations to assist in the sales of arms and weaponry. The United States Government is the world's largest arms dealer, and to ensure that these sales continue, it often resorts to the unethical usage of psychological operations. Here is an example of how such an implementation may be done. Let us say, for example, that an African kingdom that has purchased arms in the past from the U.S.

Government has now decided that there no longer exists any threat from its neighboring kingdoms and therefore elects to discontinue their spending of millions of dollars on unneeded weaponry. The U.S. Government may respond to this refusal to continue buying their arms by themselves creating a threat of imminent war between the targeted kingdom and its neighboring African kingdoms. This would be done by employing Special Forces and other types of espionage specialist to plant lies and rumors of war thus igniting conflict and distrust between the targeted African kingdom and its neighboring kingdoms which often results in both empires now buying arms from the U.S. Government.

Although the usage of psychological warfare began within a military setting, it was eventually realized by governmental and societal elites that this method of psychological warfare could be useful for totally controlling society. Therefore, psychological warfare technology evolved from its military usage against foreign enemies to being used to control society domestically. Today, the U.S. government, like many other developed nations, conducts planned campaigns of extensive strategic psychological operations through the national media to influence the perception and climate of the nation towards the attainment of its governmental objectives. Participating federal agencies may include the National Security Council, The Office of Strategic Council, The Central Intelligence Agency, and The Federal Bureau of Investigations. However, when it is executed domestically it is more often commonly referred to by governmental and military officials as psychological operations [PSYOPs] rather than Psychological Warfare.

Psychological warfare can also be used to create a brazen deception in order to create a pretext for war with the true intent of achieving global geo-political objectives. This is where governmental agents secretly create or allow terrorism in the United States for the purpose of mobilizing public opinion in favor of the government's objectives. Many people have compared this example to those actions taken by the U.S. government after the September 11, 2001 attack on America wherein several terrorists high-jacked four American commercial air liners and crashed them into strategic targets in Washington, D.C. and New York, NY. For although all ties to the terrorist attack pointed towards Afghanistan and Saudi Arabia and given that all the historic evidence showed that Saddam Hussein was a vigorous arch enemy of Al Qaeda, President Bush, in his official speech to the nation responding to the atrocious attack, redirected the nation's attentions towards Iraq as a means of fighting the terrorism of Al Qaeda. This strategic operation of influence gained the U.S Government the support of the nation that it needed to send thousands of its service members to war under the pretext of being a war on terrorism, while in fact it successfully met the U.S. objective of what appears to have been more about securing its interest in the Iraq oil wells. The targets, then, were the minds of the entire American population, our military troops and the civilian population. [For those readers that find this premise too difficult to accept, I strongly suggest that you read a 1962 governmental document now unclassified and provided under the freedom of information act entitled "Operation North Woods" documenting a governmental plan to take a civilian aircraft, replace it with an automatic unmanned aircraft, then shoot it down and blame the incident on Cuba in order to go to war.]

The preceding example of U.S. government usage of psychological warfare to influence the nation is only a single act among a long list of many conducted by the U.S. Government. Every act of the government has a psychological impact, and it is ongoing from President Bush's media coverage stunt where he landed upon a U.S. Naval battle carrier dressed as a pilot, to the U.S. soldiers pulling down the statue of Saddam Hussein in Iraq, to the staged rescue of Jessica Lynch. These strategies are all part of the sophisticated system of psychological warfare, and they are on-going, all around us, all of the time. To learn more or to get a copy of this book "the Black Matrix please to www.divineblack truth.org

---

Need a vacation? Get great deals to amazing places on Yahoo! Travel.

---

Email and AIM finally together. You've gotta check out free AOL Mail!

---

Yahoo! oneSearch: Finally, mobile search that gives answers, not web links.

---

Shape Yahoo! in your own image. Join our Network Research Panel today!

---

Be a better Heartthrob. Get better relationship answers from someone who knows. Yahoo! Answers - Check it out.

| 23027|2007-08-27 14:14:01|D. McIntyre|Re: The Moors - offtopic|

I had never heard of Irving's Alhambra until your post. Found a version online here:

<http://etext.library.adelaide.edu.au/i/irving/washington/i72a/>

I will take a good look at it and probably will incorporate it into my content rebuttal.

I am working on a rebuttal that focuses on the content, not just the ethnicity, next. The documentary is supposed to re-air, I think tomorrow. What I find interesting is that PBS barely advertised it yet they are promoting it in their newsletter aimed at teachers.

--> Deidra

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, cristofori whitakara wrote:

>

> washington irving's alhambra was written in the 1700s and the department of education still refuses to put into the curriculum the influences of the african moors on european cultures.

>

> Peter Kaiza wrote: A very good rebuttal ! You wonder why the barbary raids are never mentioned in the west but these were slave raids by north africans which nearly completely depopulated parts of England! Africans were never the only victims of Slavery!

>

>

> -----

> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> From: pmanansala@...

> Date: Fri, 24 Aug 2007 21:26:24 +0000

> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: The Moors - offtopic

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "D. McIntyre" wrote:

>>

>> I just posted my (amateur) objections to a PBS aired documentary

> called Cities of Light: The >> Rise and Fall of Islamic Spain.

>>

>> Please take a look and post your comments (criticisms also welcome):

>> <http://www.yaminternet.com>

>>

>> Regards,

>> Deidra

>>

>

> Nice article, Deidra. Here's a more direct link for those who might > have trouble finding it:

>

> <http://www.yaminternet.com/Blog/wordpress/?cat=5>

>

> Regards,

> Paul Kekai Manansala

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

> -----

> Play Movie Mash-up and win BIG prizes!

>

>

>

>

> -----

> Need a vacation? Get great deals to amazing places on Yahoo! Travel.

>

| 23028|2007-08-27 17:10:27|perfectblack_11216@yahoo.com|Re: The Moors - offtopic|

I love this group, I must say I have learned so much and look toward too learning so much more.

Love and Victory to all that participate.

Your Brother PerfectBlack
Sent via BlackBerry by AT&T

-----Original Message-----

From: "D. McIntyre"

Date: Mon, 27 Aug 2007 21:12:27

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: The Moors - offtopic

I had never heard of Irving's Alhambra until your post. Found a version online here:
<http://etext.library.adelaide.edu.au/i/irving/washington/i72a/>

I will take a good look at it and probably will incorporate it into my content rebuttal.

I am working on a rebuttal that focuses on the content, not just the ethnicity, next. The documentary is supposed to re-air, I think tomorrow. What I find interesting is that PBS barely advertised it yet they are promoting it in their newsletter aimed at teachers.

--> Deidra

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, cristofori whitakara wrote:

>

> washington irving's alhambra was written in the 1700s and the department of education still refuses to put into the curriculum the influences of the african moors on european cultures.

>

> Peter Kaiza wrote: A very good rebuttal ! You wonder why the barbary raids are never mentioned in the west but these were slave raids by north africans which nearly completely depopulated parts of England! Africans were never the only victims of Slavery!

>

>

> -----

> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com

> From: pmanansala@...

> Date: Fri, 24 Aug 2007 21:26:24 +0000

> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: The Moors - offtopic
>
> --- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, "D. McIntyre" wrote:
>>
>> I just posted my (amateur) objections to a PBS aired documentary
> called Cities of Light: The >> Rise and Fall of Islamic Spain.
>>
>> Please take a look and post your comments (criticisms also welcome):
>> <http://www.yaminter.net.com>
>>
>> Regards,
>> Deidra
>>
>
> Nice article, Deidra. Here's a more direct link for those who might > have trouble finding it:
>
> <http://www.yaminter.net.com/Blog/wordpress/?cat=5>
>
> Regards,
> Paul Kekai Manansala
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> -----
> Play Movie Mash-up and win BIG prizes!
>
>
>
>
> -----
> Need a vacation? Get great deals to amazing places on Yahoo! Travel.
>
> | 23029|2007-08-27 21:34:54|Herukhuti|Conjuring Black Funk - A MUST READ!!!
> Conjuring Black Funk: Notes on Sexuality, Spirituality, and Sexuality, > Volume I by Herukhuti (Vintage Entity Press)

With foreword by Samuel R. Delany

256 pages of Funk for only $15.95

ISBN: 0-9752987-3-9

ISBN 13: 978-0-9752987-3-2

NOW AVAILABLE with two different covers:

Afrofutur Black Mama and

Trans Buddha Lover

At

THE BLACK FUNK BOUTIQUE

<http://www.blackfunk.org/shop/books.html>

Cover Art by Charly Dominguez

Cover Design by Flat Foot Designs

Conjuring Black Funk is a fiery collection of essays, poetry, creative non-fiction, and experimental writing that challenges conventional thought, offers alternative perspectives, and suggests ways of practicing Afrocentric, queer liberation/transgression. This book is an important contribution to Black Queer Theory, Black Feminist Thought, and Afrocentric Thought.

"What a book! Hugely informative, often surprising, consistently thought-provoking and completely lacking in shame or pretense, it's the kind of book you wish you'd written yourself but are very, very happy to have read." - Robert Fullilove, EdD, Professor and Associate Dean, Mailman School of Public Health, Columbia University

"I am engaged by the compelling insights of this feminist/womanist pomo afro homo on the intentional practice of sex, culture, and spirit. Whether you be bisexual, versatile, gay, top, trans, man, woman, str8, bottom, on the DL or an old black dyke like me, you will want to get into Conjuring Black Funk." - Cheryl Clarke, PhD, Author of The Days of Good Looks: Prose and Poetry, 1980-2005

"Dr. Herukhuti uses ingredients to prepare a new recipe for the 21st century diet. If they hunger for something more than the typical fast food served as Black thought, it is a meal that Afrocentric beings will find very nourishing. His advocacy for the complete and total sexual freedom of consenting human beings has the taste of a new epistemology. He is a gatekeeper to a sacred banquet of sex, sin and Spirit that few are ready to acknowledge; let alone eat." ? Ron Simmons, PhD, President/CEO, Us Helping Us, Washington DC

The message is clear: It's time for a change. And a change has arrived.
| 23030|2007-08-28 11:15:48|Alex van Deelen|Re: The Moors - offtopic|

- > A very good rebuttal ! You wonder why the barbary
- > raids are never mentioned in the west but these were
- > slave raids by north africans which nearly completely
- > depopulated parts of England! Africans were never
- > the only victims of Slavery!

Are you using this opportunity to get the West
off the hook for the transatlantic slave trade?

If so, are you now declaring North Africans Black, instead of 'Arabic'?

Alex

| 23031|2007-08-29 10:13:57|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: The Moors - offtopic|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Alex van Deelen" wrote:

- >
- >> A very good rebuttal ! You wonder why the barbary
- >> raids are never mentioned in the west but these were
- >> slave raids by north africans which nearly completely
- >> depopulated parts of England! Africans were never
- >> the only victims of Slavery!
- >
- > Are you using this opportunity to get the West
- > off the hook for the transatlantic slave trade?
- >
- >

I don't think that would be possible. For example, are there any people still suffering from the effects of the Barbary pirate and Moorish slave raids on Europe? No, most people don't even know these ever occurred.

There are however still significant problems remaining that their roots in the transatlantic slave trade and its aftermath.

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23032|2007-08-29 10:14:13|Franklin Jones|BLACK FREEDOM IS NOT A CONTEST ! A Plea to put aside our Black indi|

BLACKFREEDOM IS NOT A CONTEST!

There exist now so many opinions, ideas and directions towards obtaining Black liberation. I personally respect them all because they are all so much better than us sitting around doing nothing to liberate ourselves. Sadly however for some of us it has become very much like a contest of who knows more than the next guy -where of in which many of us attack each other seeking the highest title of Black Elder. Today in many cases Black consciousness has become more now about what we eat, how we wear our hair styles, changing our names and burying our minds within the past of Egypt. I am not attacking any of these noted things for I too have engaged in them all.

However, Black consciousness and true liberation is about these things and so much more. Its foremost about about liberating the Black psyche thus transcending us as a people. For it is true that as a people thinketh so shall they be. Therefore shouldn't our focus be more on how and why is it that we thinketh -as a people- as we do?

If you like myself you probably receive more than 300 e-mails a day therefore its impossible to make sense of them all, therefore you may have mistaken my submitted information as that of being something of a lesser significance towards Black liberation.

What it is that I am transmitting to you is the truth and the core factor of our dismay and discord. If I was merely trying to sell some dumb book to get rich it would have been very foolish to have sent out so much information. I'm trying to counter the greatest threat of modern racism now faced by we Black people -and no its not ourselves that what they want us to believe! I'm not asking you for any money, but only that you look closely and study what I'm sending to you and please make a commitment yourselves to forwarding it to many other Black people- perhaps even hundreds.

I ask that you all would forward and share my submitted information of white covert psychological warfare with others because its persistent strength is depended upon its amenity therefore knowing is truly half of the battle in fighting this modern scheme fueled by white racism.

Unlike how Dr. Graves told us how to find the cure for AIDS, the cure for this problem is in the mind. Therefore this very information is the initial antidote for combatting this ongoing psychological warfare. Curing our people begins right now - the antidote begins within this information and upon accepting it it then becomes your bounded duty to share this "antidotal information".

The way to combat this psychological warfare is first by making this information well known to African Americans, because knowing is half the battle.

For upon truly accepting this information Black people will begin to disbelieve - therefore dismiss - all of those false negative assessments formerly given and accepted of themselves. This new realization will allow blacks to begin to overcome the psychologically ingrained white is right perception that has been unrelentingly indoctrinated upon the black mind that is rarely if ever moved.

The need then will then become apparent that we Blacks must develop a means to assess our very own strengths and weakness - For it is only by a proper assessment born in truth that we can develop methods to rise as a people. Also upon accepting this information and of how it also exists within the American educational system [As the book continues to discuss] Black parents will then rally together within their communities and insist that Black students be given an educational curriculum that includes their contributions as a race - one that gives information that aspires rather than discourages Black students. Also [as the book further discusses] of how psychological warfare against blacks creates a consensual environment that allows the judicial and prison systems to unfairly target and treat its Black population] This will engender a need within Blacks to protest nationally against the privatization of prison that now hold stocks on Wall Street that now lobbies for law that target the black communities to increase their profits. Lobbies that lead to federal of enhance sentencing directed at those crimes my prevalent within our communities. This information exposing what is being done to us and how it is being done must be forwarded. For as a result of us doing some more solutions and implementations will be born among ourselves.

If a village of people were all sick and you exposed to them that their well water was being poisoned then they would merely stop drinking from that well and seek out a new source for water merely by learning the information.

The lock of the prison for the black mind is a psychological one and the key to free us is also psychological one that relies upon the proper information. You may not fully understand this but nevertheless please convey the given information in time you will see how the information will restore and transcend millions of Black psyches.

"When the truth come and you know deep down within your bones that it is the truth and you do not defend it you truly began to die." Please Black family please forward and forward again this information

PEACE.

Today, for the most part, the manner in which African Americans confront White racism is very outdated. The most detrimental system of white racism now adversely afflicting African Americans avoid the blatant now socially unacceptable means as those used in the past. Moreover today's system is for more sophisticated, elaborated and proficient than any system of racism previously faced by African Americans--yes even slavery.

Today's modern method of white racism in the United States is now secretly applied through the government's proven method of Covert Counterintelligence Program [COINTELPRO: A misnomer for Domestic Covert Actions.] Although the formal COINTELPRO covert operations employed by the FBI directed against African Americans during the period of 1956-1971 was discontinued [upon the surface]. However, in truth--because the nineteen sixties were a period of massive black rebellion and unrest that caused the U.S. Government to fear the uprising of a violent revolution-- the FBI did not actually cease its formal domestic counterintelligence programs against African Americans, but instead actually advanced it by targeting it more broadly and secretly. Today there is a far more sophisticated and massive counterintelligence program being implemented against the entire African American population.

Because the U.S. Government's socialist and psychologists were well aware of the fact that those who make peaceful revolution impossible will make violent revolution inevitable, it became necessary to create a more sophisticated system of white racism that deliberately wears only the appearance, if any, of being totally self-inflicted by African Americans themselves. A system of white governmental racism that is implemented through the American educational, judicial and prison systems-- that prevails and is concealed through the usage of Psychological Warfare implemented through the national media that fosters a consensual environment for its unethical undertaking. By doing so, the United States Government acquired a far more insidious and covert method of ensuring that its white dominance is maintained that exists behind a clever shroud of secrecy and deceit ? for it is in this way that the evils of racism thrive best -- when its victims do not recognize the evil.

While although this modern method of governmental white racism covertly uses the American educational system to mortifyingly mis-educate and disesteem black students and the judicial and prison systems to severely reduce black growth and upward mobility by reducing black America's ability to procreate and to vote thus to maintain its white dominance. However the most significant and detrimental aspect of this modern system of white governmental racism used today in America is its aspect of using psychological warfare against African Americans. Governmental Psychological warfare is the art of directing masses and individual towards governmental objectives by means of cleverly manipulating theory and misinformation. Today the United States Government uses mis-education, false statistics and negative propaganda media reports that equates a psychological warfare that conspires to corrupt blacks of unity, reason, and common sense, thus deliberately soliciting the disparity that has now become modern Black America as a mean of meeting its objective of maintaining white dominance in the United States .

Here is a simplified analogy of the psychological aspect of this modern system of racism that is now being implemented against America 's Black population. Let us say, for example, that a group of people was aboard their own massive ship and that their ship was being shadowed by another neighboring ship, a neighboring ship that was constantly broadcasting derogatory messages to the first group that their ship was lesser, smaller, not seaworthy or perhaps slowly sinking or that their crew was incompetent or was planning a mutiny. With time, the group receiving the negative messages, being unable to refute or to confirm these derogatory messages and deficiencies will grow weary and paranoid of the negative messages and will eventually come to accept these negative assessments of themselves. The perception created by the taunting now unconsciously influences how the taunted group perceives themselves, subsequently causing them to become distrustful of themselves, doubting themselves, hating themselves and, eventually, fighting among themselves. The taunted group may even become so besieged by deep feelings of inadequacy that they may even jump into the sea and attempt to swim towards the taunting ship now believing it to be superior to their own boat even if their own ship was in fact better.

This concept of warfare uses psychology as the decisive factor in the outcome. The basis of the concept is that the human being's most critical aspect is the mind. This science of psychology works by affecting the unconscious mind through deception. Its weapon is the message that it carries and the way this message affects the recipients in terms of their behavior. Within a real world setting, this is implemented against African Americans through U.S. governmental agencies that leak false derogatory press releases, documentaries, and media information concerning its Black population that are designed to perpetuate and frame the myth of Whites' racial, moral, and ethical superiority over its Black population. Its collaborators in the news media, which either knowingly or unknowingly carry the false information or create their own false information through news releases in magazine articles, radio, and television, work to demoralize, discourage, berate, subjugate, and or dismantle the Black population. The weapon is not the way it is sent, but the messages that it carries and how the messages affect the recipient and influence society.

This perversion of reality insinuates that America would be a better society as a whole if African Americans were gone, thus psychologically changing the root problem of racism in America to be due to Black's behavior rather than White's proclivity for racism. This shift of victimization that the problem of racism in America is due to the fault of African Americans, is perpetuated unrelentingly everywhere through the media. This campaign engenders distorted perceptions and increasingly prejudiced and acrimonious beliefs about its African American population that creates a consensual environment that facilitates the easier exploitation and suppression of Black America. [For when contempt of Blacks appears to be justifiable, it is the fiercest and most effective type of racism because its witnesses, bystanders, and jurors will sit by idly allowing African Americans to be brutally mistreated under the belief that it is justified.]

Although this may sound a bit like bad science fiction, Psychological Warfare is a real and well-proven technology that exceeds the territorial limits of conventional warfare to penetrate the proposed target. This type of psychological warfare has been used by the military since World War II. The British Special Operation Executives (SOE) was pioneering this form of propaganda during the Second World War. The British Government, between 1930-1940, conducted psychological warfare against Germany, by putting together a massive department staffed by many former journalists that conducted secret journalism and planted favorable stories in the world's press. Generally using friendly newspapers editors, but also using bribery to get pro-allied stories in print, British pilots also dropped propaganda leaflets and spread rumors concerning Germany's relations with France and other aspects of the war.

The ability to influence the nation in mass using psychological operations through the national media is highly effective because the media itself is very powerful in terms of its influence. For the media helps shape our views of the world, what we consider to be good or bad, and also forges our deepest values, identities, and our sense of what it means, for example, to be male or female. These facts, combined with those studies showing that the average American watches 18 hundred hours of television each year, affirm that there is a great inclination for Americans to be affected by psychological operations conducted through the national media.

The reason psychological warfare is so unknown to most Americans is because its very nature is to be covert, and because it is not the stuff of adventure and the excitement of war that films or novels portray. However, psychological warfare is a real, sound, and proven governmental technology that has been used by the U.S. Government for many decades, and its usage is ongoing even now. For as recently as July 2004, a story was reported by the New York Times that the Defense Department had paid the Rendon Group, a Washington-based international consulting firm, $100,000 per month to help the Office of Strategic Information (OSI) with a broad campaign that would include negative propaganda or disinformation. The report stated that the OSI was established to spread positive messages about the war on terrorism, but it would also use disinformation and misinformation to mislead friends and foe alike. The report went on to say that the office of Strategic Influence had been set up to disseminate truthful information openly but also to spread what senior pentagon officials called "the Blackest of Black programs." The organization works on ways to influence and mislead the media abroad and also domestically in America, such as spreading positive messages about the war on terrorism or perpetuating disinformation through its frequent collusion with news media personnel to publish false and distorted material at the government's behest.

The U.S. Government's methods for implementing domestic psychological warfare also include the ability to suppress particular targeted groups. [ This is when governmental agencies leak false, derogatory press releases, documentaries, and media information to its collaborators in the news media which the media knowingly or unknowingly carry as its own and submit the false information through news releases and in magazine articles, radio, and television to demoralize, discourage, subjugate, and or dismantle the targeted groups.] This method of psychological operation is disseminated through face-to-face communication or television, audio media, newspaper, books, and magazine. The weapon is not in the media used, but the message that it carries and how the messages affect the recipient. Sound familiar doesn't it Black people? This method of psychological operation works by, first, simply learning everything about the targeted group, their beliefs, likes, dislikes, strengths, and vulnerabilities. Once you know what motivates your target, you are ready to begin psychological operations against them.

We have completed a review of the U.S. government's history and methods of applying psychological operations of influence, most particularly its method of utilizing the national media to disseminate domestic psychological operations to suppress targeted groups. The intention is to now show in a constructive manner rather than an accusatory manner that, since the means of economic and political control used in the past under the pretext of national interest are no longer morally and socially acceptable, the U.S. governmental and societal capitalist elites have modified their methods of exploiting and suppressing its Black population into a form more socially acceptable with contemporary times through the usage of psychological warfare operations.

The uses to which psychological warfare can be applied are virtually unlimited. For the U.S. Government also uses psychological operations to assist in the sales of arms and weaponry. The United States Government is the world's largest arms dealer, and to ensure that these sales continue, it often resorts to the unethical usage of psychological operations. Here is an example of how such an implementation may be done. Let us say, for example, that an African kingdom that has purchased arms in the past from the U.S. Government has now decided that there no longer exists any threat from its neighboring kingdoms and therefore elects to discontinue their spending of millions of dollars on unneeded weaponry. The U.S. Government may respond to this refusal to continue buying their arms by themselves creating a threat of imminent war between the targeted kingdom and its neighboring African kingdoms. This would be done by employing Special Forces and other types of espionage specialist to plant lies and rumors of war thus igniting conflict and distrust between the targeted African kingdom and its neighboring kingdoms which often results in both empires now buying arms from the U.S. Government.

Although the usage of psychological warfare began within a military setting, it was eventually realized by governmental and societal elites that this method of psychological warfare could be useful for totally controlling society. Therefore, psychological warfare technology evolved from its military usage against foreign enemies to being used to control society domestically. Today, the U.S. government, like many other developed nations, conducts planned campaigns of extensive strategic psychological operations through the national media to influence the perception and climate of the nation towards the attainment of its governmental objectives.

Participating federal agencies may include the National Security Council, The Office of Strategic Council, The Central Intelligence Agency, and The Federal Bureau of Investigations. However, when it is executed domestically it is more often commonly referred to by governmental and military officials as psychological operations [PSYOPs] rather than Psychological Warfare.

Psychological warfare can also be used to create a brazen deception in order to create a pretext for war with the true intent of achieving global geo-political objectives. This is where governmental agents secretly create or allow terrorism in the United States for the purpose of mobilizing public opinion in favor of the government's objectives. Many people have compared this example to those actions taken by the U.S. government after the September 11, 2001 attack on America wherein several terrorists high-jacked four American commercial air liners and crashed them into strategic targets in Washington , D.C. and New York , NY . For although all ties to the terrorist attack pointed towards Afghanistan and Saudi Arabia and given that all the historic evidence showed that Saddam Hussein was a vigorous arch enemy of Al Qaeda, President Bush, in his official speech to the nation responding to the atrocious attack, redirected the nation's attentions towards Iraq as a means of fighting the terrorism of Al Qaeda. This strategic operation of influence gained the U.S Government the support of the nation that it needed to send thousands of its service members to war under the pretext of being a war on terrorism, while in fact it successfully met the U.S. objective of what appears to have been more about securing its interest in the Iraq oil wells. The targets, then, were the minds of the entire American population, our military troops and the civilian population. [For those readers that find this premise too difficult to accept, I strongly suggest that you read a 1962 governmental document now unclassified and provided under the freedom of information act entitled "Operation North Woods" documenting a governmental plan to take a civilian aircraft, replace it with an automatic unmanned aircraft, then shoot it down and blame the incident on Cuba in order to go to war.]

The preceding example of U.S. government usage of psychological warfare to influence the nation is only a single act among a long list of many conducted by the U.S. Government. Every act of the government has a psychological impact, and it is ongoing from President Bush's media coverage stunt where he landed upon a U.S. Naval battle carrier dressed as a pilot, to the U.S. soldiers pulling down the statue of Saddam Hussein in Iraq, to the staged rescue of Jessica Lynch. These strategies are all part of the sophisticated system of psychological warfare, and they are on-going, all around us, all of the time. To learn more or to get a copy of this book "the Black Matrix please to www.divineblack truth.org

---

Pinpoint customers who are looking for what you sell.

| 23033|2007-08-29 15:26:15|Djehuti Sundaka|Re: BLACK FREEDOM IS NOT A CONTEST !
A Plea to put aside our Black |

The way to combat this psychological warfare is first by making this information well known to African Americans, because knowing is half

the battle.

For upon truly accepting this information Black people will began to disbelieve -therefore dismiss- all of those false negative assessments formerly given and accepted of themselves. This new realization will allow blacks to began to overcome the psychologically ingrained white is right perception that has been unrelentingly indoctrinated upon the black mind that is rarely if ever moved.

*****

Unless you have control of the media, you can't make the information well known. Such information has to be desired in order to be received and that desire simply doesn't exist with the majority it's intended for.

There's really nothing new under the sun. Not since Garvey, not since Shabazz, not since Masunda.

Change doesn't come from pleading. It comes about by either direct brute force or by intellegent imposition. Otherwise, the oppressed are quite content to complain about conditions they are nevertheless satisfied in living with.

If one is concerned with people being psychologically manipulated for the worse, one should engage in psychologically manipulating people for the better 'cause telling them of their psychological manipulation only results in majority resistance. A carrot stick has to be placed before them and that carrot stick can only be economic in nature. Forming an organization or community that actively achieves a better standard of living for its members is a carrot stick that can attract people to the information and consciousness they otherwise shun.

Djehuti Sundaka

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Franklin Jones wrote:

>

> BLACK FREEDOM IS NOT A CONTEST !

>

> There exist now so many opinions, ideas and directions towards obtaining Black liberation. I personally respect them all because they are all so much better than us sitting around doing nothing to liberate ourselves. Sadly however for some of us it has become very much like a contest of who knows more than the next guy -were of in which many of us attack each other seeking the highest title of Black Elder. Today in many cases Black consciousness has become more now about what we eat, how we wear our hair styles, changing our names and burying our minds within the past of Egypt. I am not attacking any of these noted things for I too have engaged in them all.

> However, Black consciousness and true liberation is about these things and so much more. Its foremost about about liberating the Black psyche thus transcending us as a people. For it is true that as a people thinketh thus shall they be. Therefore shouldn't our focus be more on how and why is it That we thinketh -as a people- as we do?

> If your like myself you probably receive more than 300 e-mails a day therefore its impossible to make sense of them all, therefore you may have mistaken my submitted information as that of being something of a lesser significance towards Black liberation.

> What it is that I am transmitting to you is the truth and the core factor of our dismay and discord. If I was merely trying to sell some dumb book to get rich it would have been very foolish to have sent out so much information. I'm trying to counter the greatest threat of modern racism now faced by we Black people -and no its not ourselves that what they want us to believe! I'm not asking you for any money, but only that you look closely and study what I'm sending to you and please make a commitment yourselves to forwarding it to many other Black people- perhaps even hundreds.

> I ask that you all would forward and share my submitted information of white covert psychological warfare with others because its persistent strength is depended upon its amenity therefore knowing is truly half of the battle in fighting this modern scheme fueled by white racism.

>

> Unlike how Dr. Graves told us how to find the cure for AIDS, the cure for this problem is in the mind. Therefore this very information is the initial antidote for combatting this ongoing psychological warfare. Curing our people begins right now -the antidote begins within this information and upon accepting it it then becomes your bounded duty to share this "antidocial-information".

>

> The way to combat this psychological warfare is first by making this information well known to African Americans, because knowing is half the battle.

> For upon truly accepting this information Black people will began to disbelieve -therefore dismiss- all of those false negative assessments formerly given and accepted of themselves. This new realization will allow blacks to began to overcome the psychologically ingrained white is right perception that has been unrelentingly indoctrinated upon the black mind that is rarely if ever moved.

> The need then will then becomes apparent that we Blacks must develop a means to assess our very own strengths and weakness- For its only by a proper assessment born in truth that we can develop methods to rise as a people. Also upon accepting this information and of how it also exist within the American educational system [ As the book continues to discuss] Black parents will then rally together within their communities and insist that Black students be given an educational curriculum that includes their contributions as a race- one that gives information that aspires rather than discourages Black students. Also[ as the book further discuss of how psychological warfare against blacks creates a consensual environment that allows the judicial and prison systems to unfairly target and treat its Black population] This will engender a need within Blacks to protest nationally against the privatization of prison that now hold stocks on Wall Street that now lobbies for law that > target the black communities to increases their profits. Lobbies that lead to federal of enhance sentencing directed at those crimes my prevalent within our communities. This information exposing what is being done to us and how it is being done must be forwarded. For as a result of us doing so more solutions and implementations will be born among ourselves.

> If a village of people were all sick and you exposed to them that their well water was being poisoned then they would merely stop drinking from that well and seek out a new source for water merely by learning the information.

> The lock of the prison for the black mind is a psychological one and the key to free us is also psychological one that relies upon the proper information. You may not fully understand this but nevertheless please convey the given information in time you will see how the information will restore and transcend millions of Black psyches.

>

> " When the truth come and you know deep down within your bones that it is the truth and you do not defend it you truly began to die." Please Black family please forward and forward again this information

> PEACE.

>

>

>

> Today, for the most part, the manner in which African Americans confront White racism is very outdated. The most detrimental system of white racism now adversely afflicting African Americans avoid the blatant now socially unacceptable means as those used in the past. Moreover today's system is for more sophisticated, elaborated and proficient than any system of racism previously faced by African Americans--yes even slavery.

> Today's modern method of white racism in the United States is now secretly applied through the government's proven method of Covert Counterintelligence Program [COINTELPRO: A misnomer for Domestic Covert Actions.] Although the formal COINTELPRO covert operations employed by the FBI directed against African Americans during the period of 1956-1971 was discontinued [upon the surface]. However, in truth--because the nineteen sixties were a period of massive black rebellion and unrest that caused the U.S. Government to feared the uprising of a violent revolution-- the FBI did not actually cease its formal domestic counterintelligence programs against African Americans, but instead actually advanced it by targeting it more broadly and secretively. Today there is a far more sophisticated and massive counterintelligence program being implemented against the entire African American population.

> Because the U.S. Government's socialist and psychologist were well aware of the fact that those who make peaceful revolution impossible will make violent revolution inevitable, it became necessary to create a more sophisticated system of white racism that deliberately wears only the appearance, if any, of being totally self afflicted by African Americans themselves. A system of white governmental racism that is implemented through the American educational, judicial and prison systems-- that prevails and is concealed through the usage of Psychological Warfare implemented through the national media that fosters a consensual environment for its unethical undertaking. By doing so, the United States Government acquired a far more insidious and covert method of ensuring that its white dominance is maintained that exists behind a clever shroud of secrecy and deceit ? for it is in this way that the evils of racism thrive best -- when its victims do not recognize the evil.

>

> While although this modern method of governmental white racism covertly uses the American educational system to mortifyingly mis-educate and disesteem black students and the judicial and prison systems to severely reduce black growth and upward mobility by reducing black America's ability to procreate and to vote thus to maintain its white dominance. However the most significant and detrimental aspect of this modern system of white governmental racism used today in America is its aspect of using psychological warfare against African Americans. Governmental Psychological warfare is the art of directing masses and individual towards governmental objectives by means of cleverly manipulating theory and misinformation. Today the United States Government uses mis-education, false statistics and negative propaganda media reports that equates a psychological warfare that conspires to corrupt blacks of unity, reason, and common sense, thus deliberately soliciting the disparity

> that has now become modern Black America as a mean of meeting its objective of maintaining white dominance in the United States.

> Here is a simplified analogy of the psychological aspect of this modern system of racism that is now being implemented against America's Black population. Let us say, for example, that a group of people was aboard their own massive ship and that their ship was being shadowed by another neighboring ship, a neighboring ship that was constantly broadcasting derogatory messages to the first group that their ship was lesser, smaller, not seaworthy or perhaps slowly sinking or that their crew was incompetent or was planning a mutiny. With time, the group receiving the negative messages, being unable to refute or to confirm these derogatory messages and deficiencies will grow weary and paranoid of the negative messages and will eventually come to accept these negative assessments of themselves. The perception created by the taunting now unconsciously influences how the taunted group perceives themselves, subsequently causing them to become distrustful of themselves, doubting > themselves, hating themselves and, eventually, fighting among themselves. The taunted group may even become so besieged by deep feelings of inadequacy that they may even jump into the sea and attempt to swim towards the taunting ship now believing it to be superior to their own boat even if their own ship was in fact better.

> This concept of warfare uses psychology as the decisive factor in the outcome. The basis of the concept is that the human being's most critical aspect is the mind. This science of psychology works by affecting the unconscious mind through deception. Its weapon is the message that it carries and the way this message affects the recipients in terms of their behavior. Within a real world setting, this is implemented against African Americans through U.S. governmental agencies that leak false derogatory press releases, documentaries, and media information concerning its Black population that are designed to perpetuate and frame the myth of Whites' racial, moral, and ethical superiority over its Black population. Its collaborators in the news media, which either knowingly or unknowingly carry the false information or create their own false information through news releases in magazine articles, radio, and television, work to demoralize, discourage, berate, subjugate, and > or dismantle the Black population. The weapon is not the way it is sent, but the messages that it carries and how the messages affect the recipient and influence society.

> This perversion of reality insinuates that America would be a better society as a whole if African Americans were gone, thus psychologically changing the root problem of racism in America to be due to Black's behavior rather than White's proclivity for racism. This shift of victimization that the problem of racism in America is due to the fault of African Americans, is perpetuated unrelentingly everywhere through the media. This campaign engenders distorted perceptions and increasingly prejudiced and acrimonious beliefs about its African American population that creates a consensual environment that facilitates the easier exploitation and suppression of Black America. [For when contempt of Blacks appears to be justifiable, it is the fiercest and most effective type of racism because its witnesses, bystanders, and jurors will sit by idly allowing African Americans to be brutally mistreated under the belief that it is justified.]

> Although this may sound a bit like bad science fiction, Psychological Warfare is a real and well-proven technology that exceeds the territorial limits of conventional warfare to penetrate the proposed target. This type of psychological warfare has been used by the military since World War II. The British Special Operation Executives (SOE) was pioneering this form of propaganda during the Second World War. The British Government, between 1930-1940, conducted psychological warfare against Germany, by putting together a massive department staffed by many former journalists that conducted secret journalism and planted favorable stories in the world's press. Generally using friendly newspapers editors, but also using bribery to get pro-allied stories in print, British pilots also dropped propaganda leaflets and spread rumors concerning Germany's relations with France and other aspects of the war.

> The ability to influence the nation in mass using psychological operations through the national media is highly effective because the media itself is very powerful in terms of its influence. For the media helps shape our views of the world, what we consider to be good or bad, and also forges our deepest values, identities, and our sense of what it means, for example, to be male or female. These facts, combined with those studies showing that the average American watches 18 hundred hours of television each year, affirm that there is a great inclination for Americans to be affected by psychological operations conducted through the national media.

>

> The reason psychological warfare is so unknown to most Americans is because its very nature is to be covert, and because it is not the stuff of adventure and the excitement of war that films or novels portray. However, psychological warfare is a real, sound, and proven governmental technology that has been used by the U.S.

Government for many decades, and its usage is ongoing even now. For as recently as July 2004, a story was reported by the New York Times that the Defense Department had paid the Rendon Group, a Washington-based international consulting firm, $100,000 per month to help the Office of Strategic Information (OSI) with a broad campaign that would include negative propaganda or disinformation. The report stated that the OSI was established to spread positive messages about the war on terrorism, but it would also use disinformation and misinformation to mislead friends and foe alike. The report went on to say that the office of Strategic Influence had been

- > set up to disseminate truthful information openly but also to spread what senior pentagon officials called "the Blackest of Black programs." The organization works on ways to influence and mislead the media abroad and also domestically in America, such as spreading positive messages about the war on terrorism or perpetuating disinformation through its frequent collusion with news media personnel to publish false and distorted material at the government's behest.

- > The U.S. Government's methods for implementing domestic psychological warfare also include the ability to suppress particular targeted groups. [ This is when governmental agencies leak false, derogatory press releases, documentaries, and media information to its collaborators in the news media which the media knowingly or unknowingly carry as its own and submit the false information through news releases and in magazine articles, radio, and television to demoralize, discourage, subjugate, and or dismantle the targeted groups.] This method of psychological operation is disseminated through face-to-face communication or television, audio media, newspaper, books, and magazine. The weapon is not in the media used, but the message that it carries and how the messages affect the recipient. Sound familiar doesn't it Black people? This method of psychological operation works by, first, simply learning everything about the targeted group, their beliefs, likes, dislikes,

- > strengths, and vulnerabilities. Once you know what motivates your target, you are ready to begin psychological operations against them.

- > We have completed a review of the U.S. government's history and methods of applying psychological operations of influence, most particularly its method of utilizing the national media to disseminate domestic psychological operations to suppress targeted groups. The intention is to now show in a constructive manner rather than an accusatory manner that, since the means of economic and political control used in the past under the pretext of national interest are no longer morally and socially acceptable, the U.S. governmental and societal capitalist elites have modified their methods of exploiting and suppressing its Black population into a form more socially acceptable with contemporary times through the usage of psychological warfare operations.

> The uses to which psychological warfare can be applied are virtually unlimited. For the U.S. Government also uses psychological operations to assist in the sales of arms and weaponry. The United States Government is the world's largest arms dealer, and to ensure that these sales continue, it often resorts to the unethical usage of psychological operations. Here is an example of how such an implementation may be done. Let us say, for example, that an African kingdom that has purchased arms in the past from the U.S. Government has now decided that there no longer exists any threat from its neighboring kingdoms and therefore elects to discontinue their spending of millions of dollars on unneeded weaponry. The U.S. Government may respond to this refusal to continue buying their arms by themselves creating a threat of imminent war between the targeted kingdom and its neighboring African kingdoms. This would be done by employing Special Forces and other types of espionage > specialist to plant lies and rumors of war thus igniting conflict and distrust between the targeted African kingdom and its neighboring kingdoms which often results in both empires now buying arms from the U.S. Government.

> Although the usage of psychological warfare began within a military setting, it was eventually realized by governmental and societal elites that this method of psychological warfare could be useful for totally controlling society. Therefore, psychological warfare technology evolved from its military usage against foreign enemies to being used to control society domestically. Today, the U.S. government, like many other developed nations, conducts planned campaigns of extensive strategic psychological operations through the national media to influence the perception and climate of the nation towards the attainment of its governmental objectives.

Participating federal agencies may include the National Security Council, The Office of Strategic Council, The Central Intelligence Agency, and The Federal Bureau of Investigations. However, when it is executed domestically it is more often commonly referred to by governmental and military officials as psychological operations

> [PSYOPs] rather than Psychological Warfare.

> Psychological warfare can also be used to create a brazen deception in order to create a pretext for war with the true intent of achieving global geo-political objectives. This is where governmental agents secretly create or allow terrorism in the United States for the purpose of mobilizing public opinion in favor of the government's objectives. Many people have compared this example to those actions taken by the U.S. government after the September 11,

2001 attack on America wherein several terrorists high-jacked four American commercial air liners and crashed them into strategic targets in Washington, D.C. and New York, NY. For although all ties to the terrorist attack pointed towards Afghanistan and Saudi Arabia and given that all the historic evidence showed that Saddam Hussein was a vigorous arch enemy of Al Qaeda, President Bush, in his official speech to the nation responding to the atrocious attack, redirected the nation's attentions towards Iraq as a means of > fighting the terrorism of Al Qaeda. This strategic operation of influence gained the U.S Government the support of the nation that it needed to send thousands of its service members to war under the pretext of being a war on terrorism, while in fact it successfully met the U.S. objective of what appears to have been more about securing its interest in the Iraq oil wells. The targets, then, were the minds of the entire American population, our military troops and the civilian population. [For those readers that find this premise too difficult to accept, I strongly suggest that you read a 1962 governmental document now unclassified and provided under the freedom of information act entitled "Operation North Woods" documenting a governmental plan to take a civilian aircraft, replace it with an automatic unmanned aircraft, then shoot it down and blame the incident on Cuba in order to go to war.]

> The preceding example of U.S. government usage of psychological warfare to influence the nation is only a single act among a long list of many conducted by the U.S. Government. Every act of the government has a psychological impact, and it is ongoing from President Bush's media coverage stunt where he landed upon a U.S. Naval battle carrier dressed as a pilot, to the U.S. soldiers pulling down the statue of Saddam Hussein in Iraq, to the staged rescue of Jessica Lynch. These strategies are all part of the sophisticated system of psychological warfare, and they are ongoing, all around us, all of the time. To learn more or to get a copy of this book "the Black Matrix please to www.divineblacktruth.org

>

>

> -----

> Pinpoint customers who are looking for what you sell.

>

| 23034|2007-08-29 15:28:24|Djehuti Sundaka|Re: BLACK FREEDOM IS NOT A CONTEST !
A Plea to put aside our Black |

The way to combat this psychological warfare is first by making this information well known to African Americans, because knowing is half the battle.

For upon truly accepting this information Black people will began to disbelieve -therefore dismiss- all of those false negative assessments formerly given and accepted of themselves. This new realization will allow blacks to begin to overcome the psychologically ingrained white is right perception that has been unrelentingly indoctrinated upon the black mind that is rarely if ever moved.

*****

Unless you have control of the media, you can't make the information well known. Such information has to be desired in order to be received and that desire simply doesn't exist with the majority it's intended for.

There's really nothing new under the sun. Not since Garvey, not since Shabazz, not since Masunda.

Change doesn't come from pleading. It comes about by either direct brute force or by intelligent imposition. Otherwise, the oppressed are quite content to complain about conditions they are nevertheless satisfied in living with.

If one is concerned with people being psychologically manipulated for the worse, one should engage in psychologically manipulating people for the better 'cause telling them of their psychological manipulation only results in majority resistance. A carrot stick has to be placed before them and that carrot stick can only be economic in nature. Forming an organization or community that actively achieves a better standard of living for its members is a carrot stick that can attract people to the information and consciousness they otherwise shun.

Djehuti Sundaka

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Franklin Jones wrote:

>

> BLACK FREEDOM IS NOT A CONTEST !

>

> There exist now so many opinions, ideas and directions towards obtaining Black liberation. I personally respect them all because they are all so much better than us sitting around doing nothing to liberate ourselves. Sadly however for some of us it has become very much like a contest of who knows more than the next guy -were of in which many of us attack each other seeking the highest title of Black Elder. Today in many cases Black consciousness has become more now about what we eat, how we wear our hair styles, changing our names and burying our minds within the past of Egypt. I am not attacking any of these noted things for I too have engaged in them

all.

> However, Black consciousness and true liberation is about these things and so much more. Its foremost about about liberating the Black psyche thus transcending us as a people. For it is true that as a people thinketh than so shall they be. Therefore shouldn't our focus be more on how and why is it That we thinketh -as a people- as we do?

> If your like myself you probably receive more than 300 e-mails a day therefore its impossible to make sense of them all, therefore you may have mistaken my submitted information as that of being something of a lesser significance towards Black liberation.

> What it is that I am transmitting to you is the truth and the core factor of our dismay and discord. If I was merely trying to sell some dumb book to get rich it would have been very foolish to have sent out so much information. I'm trying to counter the greatest threat of modern racism now faced by we Black people -and no its not ourselves that what they want us to believe! I'm not asking you for any money, but only that you look closely and study what I'm sending to you and please make a commitment yourselves to forwarding it to many other Black people- perhaps even hundreds.

> I ask that you all would forward and share my submitted information of white covert psychological warfare with others because its persistent strength is depended upon its amenity therefore knowing is truly half of the battle in fighting this modern scheme fueled by white racism.

>

> Unlike how Dr. Graves told us how to find the cure for AIDS, the cure for this problem is in the mind. Therefore this very information is the initial antidote for combatting this ongoing psychological warfare. Curing our people begins right now -the antidote begins within this information and upon accepting it it then becomes your bounded duty to share this "antidocial-information".

>

> The way to combat this psychological warfare is first by making this information well known to African Americans, because knowing is half the battle.

> For upon truly accepting this information Black people will began to disbelieve -therefore dismiss- all of those false negative assessments formerly given and accepted of themselves. This new realization will allow blacks to began to overcome the psychologically ingrained white is right perception that has been unrelentingly indoctrinated upon the black mind that is rarely if ever moved.

> The need then will then becomes apparent that we Blacks must develop a means to assess our very own strengths and weakness- For its only by a proper assessment born in truth that we can develop methods to rise as a people. Also upon accepting this information and of how it also exist within the American educational system [ As the book continues to discuss] Black parents will then rally together within their communities and insist that Black students be given an educational curriculum that includes their contributions as a race- one that gives information that aspires rather than discourages Black students. Also[ as the book further discuss of how psychological warfare against blacks creates a consensual environment that allows the judicial and prison systems to unfairly target and treat its Black population] This will engender a need within Blacks to protest nationally against the privatization of prison that now hold stocks on Wall Street that now lobbies for law that > target the black communities to increases their profits. Lobbies that lead to federal of enhance sentencing directed at those crimes my prevalent within our communities. This information exposing what is being done to us and how it is being done must be forwarded. For as a result of us doing so more solutions and implementations will be born among ourselves.

> If a village of people were all sick and you exposed to them that their well water was being poisoned then they would merely stop drinking from that well and seek out a new source for water merely by learning the information.

> The lock of the prison for the black mind is a psychological one and the key to free us is also psychological one that relies upon the proper information. You may not fully understand this but nevertheless please convey the given information in time you will see how the information will restore and transcend millions of Black psyches.

>

> " When the truth come and you know deep down within your bones that it is the truth and you do not defend it you truly began to die." Please Black family please forward and forward again this information

> PEACE.

>

>

>

> Today, for the most part, the manner in which African Americans confront White racism is very outdated. The most detrimental system of white racism now adversely afflicting African Americans avoid the blatant now socially unacceptable means as those used in the past. Moreover today's system is for more sophisticated, elaborated and proficient then any system of racism previously faced by African Americans-yes even slavery.

> Today's modern method of white racism in the United States is now secretly applied through the government's proven method of Covert Counterintelligence Program [COINTELPRO: A misnomer for Domestic Covert Actions.] Although the formal COINTELPRO covert operations employed by the FBI directed against African Americans during the period of 1956-1971 was discontinued [upon the surface]. However, in truth--because the nineteen sixties were a period of massive black rebellion and unrest that caused the U.S. Government to feared the uprising of a violent revolution-- the FBI did not actually cease its formal domestic counterintelligence programs against African Americans, but instead actually advanced it by targeting it more broadly and secretively. Today there is a far more sophisticated and massive counterintelligence program being implemented against the entire African American population.

> Because the U.S. Government's socialist and psychologist were well aware of the fact that those who make peaceful revolution impossible will make violent revolution inevitable, it became necessary to create a more sophisticated system of white racism that deliberately wears only the appearance, if any, of being totally self afflicted by African Americans themselves. A system of white governmental racism that is implemented through the American educational, judicial and prison systems-- that prevails and is concealed through the usage of Psychological Warfare implemented through the national media that fosters a consensual environment for its unethical undertaking. By doing so, the United States Government acquired a far more insidious and covert method of ensuring that its white dominance is maintained that exists behind a clever shroud of secrecy and deceit ? for it is in this way that the evils of racism thrive best -- when its victims do not recognize the evil.

>

> While although this modern method of governmental white racism covertly uses the American educational system to mortifyingly mis-educate and disesteem black students and the judicial and prison systems to severely reduce black growth and upward mobility by reducing black America's ability to procreate and to vote thus to maintain its white dominance. However the most significant and detrimental aspect of this modern system of white governmental racism used today in America is its aspect of using psychological warfare against African Americans. Governmental Psychological warfare is the art of directing masses and individual towards governmental objectives by means of cleverly manipulating theory and misinformation. Today the United States Government uses mis-education, false statistics and negative propaganda media reports that equates a psychological warfare that conspires to corrupt blacks of unity, reason, and common sense, thus deliberately soliciting the disparity

> that has now become modern Black America as a mean of meeting its objective of maintaining white dominance in the United States.

> Here is a simplified analogy of the psychological aspect of this modern system of racism that is now being implemented against America's Black population. Let us say, for example, that a group of people was aboard their own massive ship and that their ship was being shadowed by another neighboring ship, a neighboring ship that was constantly broadcasting derogatory messages to the first group that their ship was lesser, smaller, not seaworthy or perhaps slowly sinking or that their crew was incompetent or was planning a mutiny. With time, the group receiving the negative messages, being unable to refute or to confirm these derogatory messages and deficiencies will grow weary and paranoid of the negative messages and will eventually comes to accept these negative assessments of themselves. The perception created by the taunting now unconsciously influences how the taunted group perceives themselves, subsequently causing them to become distrustful of themselves, doubting > themselves, hating themselves and, eventually, fighting among themselves. The taunted group may even become so besieged by deep feelings of inadequacy that they may even jump into the sea and attempt to swim towards the taunting ship now believing it to be superior to their own boat even if their own ship was in fact better.

> This concept of warfare uses psychology as the decisive factor in the outcome. The basis of the concept is that the human being's most critical aspect is the mind. This science of psychology works by affecting the unconscious mind through deception. Its weapon is the message that it carries and the way this message affects the recipients in terms of their behavior. Within a real world setting, this is implemented against African Americans through U.S. governmental agencies that leak false derogatory press releases, documentaries, and media information concerning its Black population that are designed to perpetuate and frame the myth of 'Whites' racial, moral, and ethical superiority over its Black population. Its collaborators in the news media, which either knowingly or unknowingly carry the false information or create their own false information through news releases in magazine articles, radio, and television, work to demoralize, discourage, berate, subjugate, and > or dismantle the Black population. The weapon is not the way it is sent, but the messages that it carries and how the messages affect the recipient and influence society.

> This perversion of reality insinuates that America would be a better society as a whole if African Americans were gone, thus psychologically changing the root problem of racism in America to be due to Black's behavior rather than White's proclivity for racism. This shift of victimization that the problem of racism in America is due to the fault of African Americans, is perpetuated unrelentingly everywhere through the media. This campaign engenders distorted perceptions and increasingly prejudiced and acrimonious beliefs about its African American population that creates a consensual environment that facilitates the easier exploitation and suppression of Black America. [For when contempt of Blacks appears to be justifiable, it is the fiercest and most effective type of racism because its witnesses, bystanders, and jurors will sit by idly allowing African Americans to be brutally mistreated under the belief that it is justified.]

> Although this may sound a bit like bad science fiction, Psychological Warfare is a real and well-proven technology that exceeds the territorial limits of conventional warfare to penetrate the proposed target. This type of psychological warfare has been used by the military since World War II. The British Special Operation Executives (SOE) was pioneering this form of propaganda during the Second World War. The British Government, between 1930-1940, conducted psychological warfare against Germany, by putting together a massive department staffed by many former journalists that conducted secret journalism and planted favorable stories in the world's press. Generally using friendly newspapers editors, but also using bribery to get pro-allied stories in print, British pilots also dropped propaganda leaflets and spread rumors concerning Germany's relations with France and other aspects of the war.

> The ability to influence the nation in mass using psychological operations through the national media is highly effective because the media itself is very powerful in terms of its influence. For the media helps shape our views of the world, what we consider to be good or bad, and also forges our deepest values, identities, and our sense of what it means, for example, to be male or female. These facts, combined with those studies showing that the average American watches 18 hundred hours of television each year, affirm that there is a great inclination for Americans to be affected by psychological operations conducted through the national media.

>

> The reason psychological warfare is so unknown to most Americans is because its very nature is to be covert, and because it is not the stuff of adventure and the excitement of war that films or novels portray. However, psychological warfare is a real, sound, and proven governmental technology that has been used by the U.S. Government for many decades, and its usage is ongoing even now. For as recently as July 2004, a story was reported by the New York Times that the Defense Department had paid the Rendon Group, a Washington-

based international consulting firm, $100,000 per month to help the Office of Strategic Information (OSI) with a broad campaign that would include negative propaganda or disinformation. The report stated that the OSI was established to spread positive messages about the war on terrorism, but it would also use disinformation and misinformation to mislead friends and foe alike. The report went on to say that the office of Strategic Influence had been

- > set up to disseminate truthful information openly but also to spread what senior pentagon officials called "the Blackest of Black programs." The organization works on ways to influence and mislead the media abroad and also domestically in America, such as spreading positive messages about the war on terrorism or perpetuating disinformation through its frequent collusion with news media personnel to publish false and distorted material at the government's behest.

- > The U.S. Government's methods for implementing domestic psychological warfare also include the ability to suppress particular targeted groups. [ This is when governmental agencies leak false, derogatory press releases, documentaries, and media information to its collaborators in the news media which the media knowingly or unknowingly carry as its own and submit the false information through news releases and in magazine articles, radio, and television to demoralize, discourage, subjugate, and or dismantle the targeted groups.] This method of psychological operation is disseminated through face-to-face communication or television, audio media, newspaper, books, and magazine. The weapon is not in the media used, but the message that it carries and how the messages affect the recipient. Sound familiar doesn't it Black people? This method of psychological operation works by, first, simply learning everything about the targeted group, their beliefs, likes, dislikes,

- > strengths, and vulnerabilities. Once you know what motivates your target, you are ready to begin psychological operations against them.

- > We have completed a review of the U.S. government's history and methods of applying psychological operations of influence, most particularly its method of utilizing the national media to disseminate domestic psychological operations to suppress targeted groups. The intention is to now show in a constructive manner rather than an accusatory manner that, since the means of economic and political control used in the past under the pretext of national interest are no longer morally and socially acceptable, the U.S. governmental and societal capitalist elites have modified their methods of exploiting and suppressing its Black population into a form more socially acceptable with contemporary times through the usage of psychological warfare operations.

> The uses to which psychological warfare can be applied are virtually unlimited. For the U.S. Government also uses psychological operations to assist in the sales of arms and weaponry. The United States Government is the world's largest arms dealer, and to ensure that these sales continue, it often resorts to the unethical usage of psychological operations. Here is an example of how such an implementation may be done. Let us say, for example, that an African kingdom that has purchased arms in the past from the U.S. Government has now decided that there no longer exists any threat from its neighboring kingdoms and therefore elects to discontinue their spending of millions of dollars on unneeded weaponry. The U.S. Government may respond to this refusal to continue buying their arms by themselves creating a threat of imminent war between the targeted kingdom and its neighboring African kingdoms. This would be done by employing Special Forces and other types of espionage > specialist to plant lies and rumors of war thus igniting conflict and distrust between the targeted African kingdom and its neighboring kingdoms which often results in both empires now buying arms from the U.S. Government.

> Although the usage of psychological warfare began within a military setting, it was eventually realized by governmental and societal elites that this method of psychological warfare could be useful for totally controlling society. Therefore, psychological warfare technology evolved from its military usage against foreign enemies to being used to control society domestically. Today, the U.S. government, like many other developed nations, conducts planned campaigns of extensive strategic psychological operations through the national media to influence the perception and climate of the nation towards the attainment of its governmental objectives. Participating federal agencies may include the National Security Council, The Office of Strategic Council, The Central Intelligence Agency, and The Federal Bureau of Investigations. However, when it is executed domestically it is more often commonly referred to by governmental and military officials as psychological operations > [PSYOPs] rather than Psychological Warfare.

> Psychological warfare can also be used to create a brazen deception in order to create a pretext for war with the true intent of achieving global geo-political objectives. This is where governmental agents secretly create or allow terrorism in the United States for the purpose of mobilizing public opinion in favor of the government's objectives. Many people have compared this example to those actions taken by the U.S. government after the September 11, 2001 attack on America wherein several terrorists high-jacked four American commercial air liners and crashed them into strategic targets in Washington, D.C. and New York, NY. For although all ties to the terrorist attack pointed towards Afghanistan and Saudi Arabia and given that all the historic evidence showed that Saddam Hussein was a vigorous arch enemy of Al Qaeda, President Bush, in his official speech to the nation responding to the atrocious attack, redirected the nation's attentions towards Iraq as a means of > fighting the terrorism of Al Qaeda. This strategic operation of influence gained the U.S Government the support of the nation that it needed to send thousands of its service members to war under the pretext of being a war on terrorism, while in fact it successfully met the U.S. objective of what appears to have been more about securing its interest in the Iraq oil wells. The targets, then, were the minds of the entire American population, our military troops and the civilian population. [For those readers that find this premise too difficult to accept, I strongly suggest that you read a 1962 governmental document now unclassified and provided under the freedom of information act entitled "Operation North Woods" documenting a governmental plan to take a civilian aircraft, replace it with an automatic unmanned aircraft, then shoot it down and blame the incident on Cuba in order to go to war.]

> The preceding example of U.S. government usage of psychological warfare to influence the nation is only a single act among a long list of many conducted by the U.S. Government. Every act of the government has a psychological impact, and it is ongoing from President Bush's media coverage stunt where he landed upon a U.S. Naval battle carrier dressed as a pilot, to the U.S. soldiers pulling down the statue of Saddam Hussein in Iraq, to the staged rescue of Jessica Lynch. These strategies are all part of the sophisticated system of psychological warfare, and they are ongoing, all around us, all of the time. To learn more or to get a copy of this book "the Black Matrix please to www.divineblacktruth.org

>

>

> -----

> Pinpoint customers who are looking for what you sell.

>

| 23035|2007-08-29 20:17:07|Franklin Jones|Re: BLACK FREEDOM IS NOT A CONTEST ! A
Plea to put aside our Black |

Thank you my Brother

You made many excellent point. I respect your position you are indeed very wise.

However let us not under estimate the power of truth. And while we do not controll the main media we do have the internet- with it we can reach millions. For remember Harriet Tubman didn't have a bus.

We can began to counter the problem by deseminating critical information

Djehuti Sundaka wrote:

The way to combat this psychological warfare is first by making this information well known to African Americans, because knowing is half the battle.

For upon truly accepting this information Black people will begin to disbelieve -therefore dismiss- all of those false negative assessments formerly given and accepted of themselves. This new realization will allow blacks to begin to overcome the psychologically ingrained white is right perception that has been unrelentingly indoctrinated upon the black mind that is rarely if ever moved.

*****

Unless you have control of the media, you can't make the information well known. Such information has to be desired in order to be received and that desire simply doesn't exist with the majority it's intended for.

There's really nothing new under the sun. Not since Garvey, not since Shabazz, not since Masunda.

Change doesn't come from pleading. It comes about by either direct brute force or by intelligent imposition. Otherwise, the oppressed are quite content to complain about conditions they are nevertheless satisfied in living with.

If one is concerned with people being psychologically manipulated for the worse, one should engage in psychologically manipulating people for the better 'cause telling them of their psychological manipulation only results in majority resistance. A carrot stick has to be placed before them and that carrot stick can only be economic in nature. Forming an organization or community that actively achieves a better standard of living for its members is a carrot stick that can attract people to the information and consciousness they otherwise shun.

Djehuti Sundaka

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, Franklin Jones wrote:

>

> BLACK FREEDOM IS NOT A CONTEST !

>

> There exist now so many opinions, ideas and directions towards obtaining Black liberation. I personally respect them all because they are all so much better than us sitting around doing nothing to liberate ourselves. Sadly however for some of us it has become very much like a contest of who knows more than the next guy -were of in which many of us attack each other seeking the highest title of Black Elder. Today in many cases Black consciousness has become more now about what we eat, how we wear our hair styles, changing our names and burying our minds within the past of Egypt. I am not attacking any of these noted things for I too have engaged in them all.

> However, Black consciousness and true liberation is about these things and so much more. Its foremost about about liberating the Black psyche thus transcending us as a people. For it is true that as a people thinketh than so shall they be. Therefore shouldn't our focus be more on how and why is it That we thinketh -as a people- as we do?

> If your like myself you probably receive more than 300 e-mails a day therefore its impossible to make sense of them all, therefore you may have mistaken my submitted information as that of being something of a lesser significance towards Black liberation.

> What it is that I am transmitting to you is the truth and the core factor of our dismay and discord. If I was merely trying to sell some dumb book to get rich it would have been very foolish to have sent out so much information. I'm trying to counter the greatest threat of modern racism now faced by we Black people -and no its not ourselves that what they want us to believe! I'm not asking you for any money, but only that you look closely and study what I'm sending to you and please make a commitment yourselves to forwarding it to many other Black people- perhaps even hundreds.

> I ask that you all would forward and share my submitted information of white covert psychological warfare with others because its persistent strength is depended upon its amenity therefore knowing is truly half of the battle in fighting this modern scheme fueled by white racism.

>

> Unlike how Dr. Graves told us how to find the cure for AIDS, the cure for this problem is in the mind. Therefore this very information is the initial antidote for combatting this ongoing psychological warfare. Curing our people begins right now -the antidote begins within this information and upon accepting it it then becomes your bounded duty to share this "antidocial- information" .

>

> The way to combat this psychological warfare is first by making this information well known to African Americans, because knowing is half the battle.

> For upon truly accepting this information Black people will began to disbelieve -therefore dismiss- all of those false negative assessments formerly given and accepted of themselves. This new realization will allow blacks to began to overcome the psychologically ingrained white is right perception that has been unrelentingly indoctrinated upon the black mind that is rarely if ever moved.

> The need then will then becomes apparent that we Blacks must develop a means to assess our very own strengths and weakness- For its only by a proper assessment born in truth that we can develop methods to rise as a people. Also upon accepting this information and of how it also exist within the American educational system [ As the book continues to discuss] Black parents will then rally together within their communities and insist that Black students be given an educational curriculum that includes their contributions as a race- one that gives information that aspires rather than discourages Black students. Also[ as the book further discuss of how psychological warfare against blacks creates a consensual environment that allows the judicial and prison systems to unfairly target and treat its Black population] This will engender a need within Blacks to protest nationally against the privatization of prison that now hold stocks on Wall Street that now lobbies for law that > target the black communities to increases their profits. Lobbies that lead to federal of enhance sentencing directed at those crimes my prevalent within our communities. This information exposing what is being done to us and how it is being done must be forwarded. For as a result of us doing so more solutions and implementations will be born among ourselves.

> If a village of people were all sick and you exposed to them that their well water was being poisoned then they would merely stop drinking from that well and seek out a new source for water merely by learning the information.

> The lock of the prison for the black mind is a psychological one and the key to free us is also psychological one that relies upon the proper information. You may not fully understand this but nevertheless please convey the given information in time you will see how the information will restore and transcend millions of Black psyches.

>

> " When the truth come and you know deep down within your bones that it is the truth and you do not defend it you truly began to die." Please Black family please forward and forward again this information

> PEACE.

>

>

>

> Today, for the most part, the manner in which African Americans confront White racism is very outdated. The most detrimental system of white racism now adversely afflicting African Americans avoid the blatant now socially unacceptable means as those used in the past. Moreover today's system is far more sophisticated, elaborated and proficient than any system of racism previously faced by African Americans--yes even slavery.

> Today's modern method of white racism in the United States is now secretly applied through the government's proven method of Covert Counterintelligence Program [COINTELPRO: A misnomer for Domestic Covert Actions.] Although the formal COINTELPRO covert operations employed by the FBI directed against African Americans during the period of 1956-1971 was discontinued [upon the surface]. However, in truth--because the nineteen sixties were a period of massive black rebellion and unrest that caused the U.S. Government to fear the uprising of a violent revolution-- the FBI did not actually cease its formal domestic counterintelligence programs against African Americans, but instead actually advanced it by targeting it more broadly and secretly. Today there is a far more sophisticated and massive counterintelligence program being implemented against the entire African American population.

> Because the U.S. Government's socialist and psychologist were well aware of the fact that those who make peaceful revolution impossible will make violent revolution inevitable, it became necessary to create a more sophisticated system of white racism that deliberately wears only the appearance, if any, of being totally self-inflicted by African Americans themselves. A system of white governmental racism that is implemented through the American educational, judicial and prison systems-- that prevails and is concealed through the usage of Psychological Warfare implemented through the national media that fosters a consensual environment for its unethical undertaking. By doing so, the United States Government acquired a far more insidious and covert method of ensuring that its white dominance is maintained that exists behind a clever shroud of secrecy and deceit ? for it is in this way that the evils of racism thrive best -- when its victims do not recognize the evil.

>

> While although this modern method of governmental white racism covertly uses the American educational system to mortifyingly mis-educate and disesteem black students and the judicial and prison systems to severely reduce black growth and upward mobility by reducing black America's ability to procreate and to vote thus to maintain its white dominance. However the most significant and detrimental aspect of this modern system of white governmental racism used today in America is its aspect of using psychological warfare against African Americans. Governmental Psychological warfare is the art of directing masses and individual towards governmental objectives by means of cleverly manipulating theory and misinformation. Today the United States Government uses mis-education, false statistics and negative propaganda media reports that equates a psychological warfare that conspires to corrupt blacks of unity, reason, and common sense, thus deliberately soliciting the disparity

> that has now become modern Black America as a mean of meeting its objective of maintaining white dominance in the United States.

> Here is a simplified analogy of the psychological aspect of this modern system of racism that is now being implemented against America's Black population. Let us say, for example, that a group of people was aboard their own massive ship and that their ship was being shadowed by another neighboring ship, a neighboring ship that was constantly broadcasting derogatory messages to the first group that their ship was lesser, smaller, not seaworthy or perhaps slowly sinking or that their crew was incompetent or was planning a mutiny. With time, the group receiving the negative messages, being unable to refute or to confirm these derogatory messages and deficiencies will grow weary and paranoid of the negative messages and will eventually comes to accept these negative assessments of themselves. The perception created by the taunting now unconsciously influences how the taunted group perceives themselves, subsequently causing them to become distrustful of themselves, doubting > themselves, hating themselves and, eventually, fighting among themselves. The taunted group may even become so besieged by deep feelings of inadequacy that they may even jump into the sea and attempt to swim towards the taunting ship now believing it to be superior to their own boat even if their own ship was in fact better.

> This concept of warfare uses psychology as the decisive factor in the outcome. The basis of the concept is that the human being's most critical aspect is the mind. This science of psychology works by affecting the unconscious mind through deception. Its weapon is the message that it carries and the way this message affects the recipients in terms of their behavior. Within a real world setting, this is implemented against African Americans through U.S. governmental agencies that leak false derogatory press releases, documentaries, and media information concerning its Black population that are designed to perpetuate and frame the myth of Whites' racial, moral, and ethical superiority over its Black population. Its collaborators in the news media, which either knowingly or unknowingly carry the false information or create their own false information through news releases in magazine articles, radio, and television, work to demoralize, discourage, berate, subjugate, and > or dismantle the Black population. The weapon is not the way it is sent, but the messages that it carries and how the messages affect the recipient and influence society.

> This perversion of reality insinuates that America would be a better society as a whole if African Americans were gone, thus psychologically changing the root problem of racism in America to be due to Black's behavior rather than White's proclivity for racism. This shift of victimization that the problem of racism in America is due to the fault of African Americans, is perpetuated unrelentingly everywhere through the media. This campaign engenders distorted perceptions and increasingly prejudiced and acrimonious beliefs about its African American population that creates a consensual environment that facilitates the easier exploitation and suppression of Black America. [For when contempt of Blacks appears to be justifiable, it is the fiercest and most effective type of racism because its witnesses, bystanders, and jurors will sit by idly allowing African Americans to be brutally mistreated under the belief that it is justified.]

> Although this may sound a bit like bad science fiction, Psychological Warfare is a real and well-proven technology that exceeds the territorial limits of conventional warfare to penetrate the proposed target. This type of psychological warfare has been used by the military since World War II. The British Special Operation Executives (SOE) was pioneering this form of propaganda during the Second World War. The British Government, between 1930-1940, conducted psychological warfare against Germany, by putting together a massive department staffed by many former journalists that conducted secret journalism and planted favorable stories in the world's press. Generally using friendly newspapers editors, but also using bribery to get pro-allied stories in print, British pilots also dropped propaganda leaflets and spread rumors concerning Germany's relations with France and other aspects of the war.

> The ability to influence the nation in mass using psychological operations through the national media is highly effective because the media itself is very powerful in terms of its influence. For the media helps shape our views of the world, what we consider to be good or bad, and also forges our deepest values, identities, and our sense of what it means, for example, to be male or female. These facts, combined with those studies showing that the average American watches 18 hundred hours of television each year, affirm that there is a great inclination for Americans to be affected by psychological operations conducted through the national media.

>

> The reason psychological warfare is so unknown to most Americans is because its very nature is to be covert, and because it is not the stuff of adventure and the excitement of war that films or novels portray. However, psychological warfare is a real, sound, and proven governmental technology that has been used by the U.S. Government for many decades, and its usage is ongoing even now. For as recently as July 2004, a story was reported by the New York Times that the Defense Department had paid the Rendon Group, a Washington-based international consulting firm, $100,000 per month to help the Office of Strategic Information (OSI) with a broad campaign that would include negative propaganda or disinformation. The report stated that the OSI was established to spread positive messages about the war on terrorism, but it would also use disinformation and misinformation to mislead friends and foe alike. The report went on to say that the office of Strategic Influence had been > set up to disseminate truthful information openly but also to spread what senior pentagon officials called "the Blackest of Black programs." The organization works on ways to influence and mislead the media abroad and also domestically in America, such as spreading positive messages about the war on terrorism or perpetuating disinformation through its frequent collusion with news media personnel to publish false and distorted material at the government's behest.

> The U.S. Government's methods for implementing domestic psychological warfare also include the ability to suppress particular targeted groups. [ This is when governmental agencies leak false, derogatory press releases, documentaries, and media information to its collaborators in the news media which the media knowingly or unknowingly carry as its own and submit the false information through news releases and in magazine articles, radio, and television to demoralize, discourage, subjugate, and or dismantle the targeted groups.] This method of psychological operation is disseminated through face-to-face communication or television, audio media, newspaper, books, and magazine. The weapon is not in the media used, but the message that it carries and how the messages affect the recipient. Sound familiar doesn't it Black people? This method of psychological operation works by, first, simply learning everything about the targeted group, their beliefs, likes, dislikes, > strengths, and vulnerabilities. Once you know what motivates your target, you are ready to begin psychological operations against them.

> We have completed a review of the U.S. government's history and methods of applying psychological operations of influence, most particularly its method of utilizing the national media to disseminate domestic psychological operations to suppress targeted groups. The intention is to now show in a constructive manner rather than an accusatory manner that, since the means of economic and political control used in the past under the pretext of national interest are no longer morally and socially acceptable, the U.S. governmental and societal capitalist elites have modified their methods of exploiting and suppressing its Black population into a form more socially acceptable with contemporary times through the usage of psychological warfare operations.

> The uses to which psychological warfare can be applied are virtually unlimited. For the U.S. Government also uses psychological operations to assist in the sales of arms and weaponry. The United States Government is the world's largest arms dealer, and to ensure that these sales continue, it often resorts to the unethical usage of psychological operations. Here is an example of how such an implementation may be done. Let us say, for example, that an African kingdom that has purchased arms in the past from the U.S. Government has now decided that there no longer exists any threat from its neighboring kingdoms and therefore elects to discontinue their spending of millions of dollars on unneeded weaponry. The U.S. Government may respond to this refusal to continue buying their arms by themselves creating a threat of imminent war between the targeted kingdom and its neighboring African kingdoms. This would be done by employing Special Forces and other types of espionage > specialist to plant lies and rumors of war thus igniting conflict and distrust between the targeted African kingdom and its neighboring kingdoms which often results in both empires now buying arms from the U.S. Government.

> Although the usage of psychological warfare began within a military setting, it was eventually realized by governmental and societal elites that this method of psychological warfare could be useful for totally controlling society. Therefore, psychological warfare technology evolved from its military usage against foreign enemies to being used to control society domestically. Today, the U.S. government, like many other developed nations, conducts planned campaigns of extensive strategic psychological operations through the national media to influence the perception and climate of the nation towards the attainment of its governmental objectives.

Participating federal agencies may include the National Security Council, The Office of Strategic Council, The Central Intelligence Agency, and The Federal Bureau of Investigations. However, when it is executed domestically it is more often commonly referred to by governmental and military officials as psychological operations

> [PSYOPs] rather than Psychological Warfare.

> Psychological warfare can also be used to create a brazen deception in order to create a pretext for war with the true intent of achieving global geo-political objectives. This is where governmental agents secretly create or allow terrorism in the United States for the purpose of mobilizing public opinion in favor of the government's objectives. Many people have compared this example to those actions taken by the U.S. government after the September 11, 2001 attack on America wherein several terrorists high-jacked four American commercial air liners and crashed them into strategic targets in Washington, D.C. and New York, NY. For although all ties to the terrorist attack pointed towards Afghanistan and Saudi Arabia and given that all the historic evidence showed that Saddam Hussein was a vigorous arch enemy of Al Qaeda, President Bush, in his official speech to the nation responding to the atrocious attack, redirected the nation's attentions towards Iraq as a means of > fighting the terrorism of Al Qaeda. This strategic operation of influence gained the U.S Government the support of the nation that it needed to send thousands of its service members to war under the pretext of being a war on terrorism, while in fact it successfully met the U.S. objective of what appears to have been more about securing its interest in the Iraq oil wells. The targets, then, were the minds of the entire American population, our military troops and the civilian population. [For those readers that find this premise too difficult to accept, I strongly suggest that you read a 1962 governmental document now unclassified and provided under the freedom of information act entitled "Operation North Woods" documenting a governmental plan to take a civilian aircraft, replace it with an automatic unmanned aircraft, then shoot it down and blame the incident on Cuba in order to go to war.]

> The preceding example of U.S. government usage of psychological warfare to influence the nation is only a single act among a long list of many conducted by the U.S. Government. Every act of the government has a psychological impact, and it is ongoing from President Bush's media coverage stunt where he landed upon a U.S. Naval battle carrier dressed as a pilot, to the U.S. soldiers pulling down the statue of Saddam Hussein in Iraq, to the staged rescue of Jessica Lynch. These strategies are all part of the sophisticated system of psychological warfare, and they are ongoing, all around us, all of the time. To learn more or to get a copy of this book "the Black Matrix please to www.divineblacktruth.org

>

>

> -----

> Pinpoint customers who are looking for what you sell.

>

| 23036|2007-08-29 21:11:10|Paul Kekai Manansala|There could have been two sphinxes, argues one researcher|

ByAhmed Maged

First Published:August28,2007

The Dream Stela, where two sphinxes are sitting in a back-to-back

Egyptologist Bassam El Shammaa who claims that there were two sphinxes

CAIRO: A thorough analysis of Ancient Egyptian history and examination of archaeological evidence indicate that there were two sphinxes on the Pyramids Plateau, an Egyptian researcher argues.

Egyptologist Bassam El Shammaa believes that the famed half-lion, half-man statue was an Egyptian deity that was erected next to another sphinx, which has since vanished without a trace. This contradicts what many have believed for centuries ? that a single colossal statue functioned as a guard to the Pyramids.

The idea of two sphinxes is more in line with ancient Egyptian beliefs, which were mainly based on duality, the researcher said. He cited Ancient Egyptian records and mythology saying that lightening had destroyed part of the Sphinx. This may have been a reference to the second sphinx which was eliminated after a curse by the chief Egyptian deity.

El Shammaa explained: "The pyramid texts recovered at Saqqara, especially from the Wanis Pyramid, contain descriptions of the ancient Egyptian conception of how the universe was created. Basically, this concept underlined the belief in duality."

He added: "Utterance No. 600 says that Atum ? the `complete one' and creator god in ancient Egyptian mythology ? created his son Shu and daughter Tefnut, shaping them as a lion and a lioness and placing each one on an extreme tip of the universe.

"Shu was to take the solar disc between his jaws and hand it to his sister Tefnut who in turn would capture it between her jaws and by so doing they would achieve the full cycle of the sun."

While that cycle represented sunrise and sunset and the journey from life to death, it also accounted for the presence of two sphinxes.

"Whenever we have to deal with the solar cult, we should speak of one lion and one lioness facing each other, posing parallel to each other or sitting in a back-to-back position.

"The double avenue of the ram-headed sphinxes fronting the first Karnak pylon and its counterpart of human-headed sphinxes at the Temple of Luxor emphasize this duality, alongside other indications like the double crowns of Upper and Lower Egypt, Isis, Osiris, Habtoor and Horus," elaborated El Shammaa.

But where has the female sphinx gone? Why did she disappear, leaving behind the male sphinx?

El Shammaa pointed out that the Dream Stela carved by Thutmosis IV clearly depicted two sphinxes. The inventory Stela exhibited at the Egyptian Museum in Cairo did the same. The display showed that King Cheops ? builder of the Great Pyramid ? had undertaken the task of restoring the damage to the Sphinx's neck caused by lightening.

"Examination of the Sphinx revealed that damage in its neck, matching the measurements mentioned in the inventory Stela, had been restored. But we also discover that, besides the Sphinx's neck, the lightening destroyed a sycamore tree as well as an object between the tree and the Sphinx whose remains have settled behind the Valley Temple.

"The Endeavor Satellite released by Nasa over the Pyramids Plateau confirmed the finding. But it makes a lot of sense that lightening could have damaged the Sphinx because the statue was often depicted wearing a double metal crown that must have conducted the shock to the neck," stated El Shammaa.

The Pyramids of Giza predate the magical utterances recovered at Saqqara but the lion deities are predynastic and the building of the pyramids must have been inspired by those mythological figures which had always appeared in duo.

El Shammaa remarked: "My own interpretation is that the miracle structures were dedicated to the lion deities that also ensured their protection. The demolished temple in front of the Sphinx's paws and the Valley Temple that stands next to the site of what we assume to be the second sphinx are proof that those two statues were deities.

"For some reason Tefnut has been cursed, as it is not uncommon in world mythology that the chief deity would curse one of the minor gods. The incident of the lightening that wiped out Tefnut must have been exploited by priests to justify her curse and the silence on her disappearance.

"Because they hunt from night to dawn, lionesses have been associated with moisture perceived by priests as destructive for temples and tombs and this is one reason they must have been banished.

"But I would also like to note that the monuments at the Pyramids Plateau are devoid of any hieroglyphic texts and they must have been a riddle for the Ancient Egyptians who lived after the era of the Old Kingdom."

El Shammaa believes that the temples raised near the sphinxes came after the Giza Pyramids were built, which is further proof of the sacred status of these statues.

"At the end of the day our interpretation of mythology could be right or wrong. But we can't ignore the archaeological evidence existing at the site and the stelae.

"John Wilkinson (1797-1875), who depicted the Dream Stela in one famous painting, placed two hieroglyphic words under the second sphinx, which meant 'shun,' or 'avoid'. This issue will always be shrouded in mystery," he said.

<http://dailystaregypt.com/>

| 23037|2007-08-29 23:08:53|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: BLACK FREEDOM IS NOT A CONTEST ! A Plea to put aside our Black |
One area to look at is genetics, a field we often discuss on this group.

Right now, they've developed genetically-modified foods, or Franken-foods as they're called by some.

Knowing though some of the types that have stocked the genetic research field since Day One, it's only a matter of time before we will see research on genetically-modified humans. And of course some will look at this research from the standpoint of race, and how it can give a "racial advantage." It's pretty scary stuff, but the genie's been let out of the bottle.

It's hard to fight this kind of stuff when you're po folks.

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23038|2007-08-29 23:25:09|Paul Kekai Manansala|The Original Egyptians|
It's strange but there are quite a few outspoken conservative Republicans who believe that Ancient Egyptians were black.

Many of you are probably aware of Richard Poe who has wrote extensively on this subject and covers it on his website.

There's also Babu Ranganathan, a former Hindu converted to conservative Christian. I'm posting one of his recent articles below.

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

---

The Original Egyptians
by Babu Ranganathan

<http://www.theconservativevoice.com/article/27375.html>

August 18, 2007 01:00 PM EST

I am not African-American. I am Indian-American. I was born in India but I lived most of my life here in the United States and I am a proud citizen of this great country.

I am also a Christian. I converted from Hinduism when I was fourteen. As a Christian, therefore, I am deeply troubled that there are still quite a number of people who believe that there was a biblical justification for enslaving the black people of Africa. Those who hold to this view say that Noah, in the Book of Genesis, cursed Ham and that the black people of Africa being descendants of Ham were justifiably enslaved and treated with contempt. This belief is far from being extinct in our society so it is important that this belief is examined in the light of what the Bible actually teaches.

The particular passage in Genesis 9:25 has been grossly misinterpreted. First of all, Noah never cursed his son Ham. The actual curse was on Canaan the oldest son of Ham. Ham also had other sons but they were not cursed by Noah. The servitude (or subjugation) of the Canaanites occurred at various times in history under various rulers. Their ultimate subjugation came under the Romans (who were descendants from the line of Japheth) when the Romans destroyed their final stronghold which was the ancient city of Carthage (a Phoenician or Canaanite colony) in North Africa, thus fulfilling Noah's prophecy in Genesis 9:27 that Canaan would serve Japheth. The Canaanites were also once slaves of the Hebrew people (descendants from the line of Shem) who themselves were once slaves of the Egyptians and, thus, fulfilling the Biblical prophecy that Canaan's descendants would be a "servant of servants." The Canaanites were also at one time ruled by their brothers the Egyptians. Thus, the Biblical prophecy concerning the curse of the Canaanites had been completely fulfilled long ago.

The Bible teaches that the Black (or Negro) people are descendants of Ham (who was one of the three sons of Noah). Obviously, Noah and his three sons Ham, Shem, and Japeth each carried the genes for producing several races since ultimately all the races of mankind had descended from them. Genetically, it was possible for Noah and his three sons to carry the genes for producing different races just as it is genetically possible today, for example, for a person of European origin to carry genes for producing children with different color hair. The principle is the same. Although you and I today may not possess genes for producing different races of people, Noah and his three sons Ham, Shem, and Japeth did possess such genes.

According to the Bible the ancient Egyptians were descended from Ham through the line of Mizraim. Ham had four sons: Cush, Mizraim, Phut, and Canaan (Genesis 10:6). The name "Mizraim" is the original name given for Egypt in the Hebrew Old Testament. Many Bibles will have a footnote next to the name "Mizraim" explaining that it means "Egypt." The name "Egypt" itself actually comes to us from the Greeks who gave the Land that name (i.e. "Aegyptos" from the Greek). In addition to the name "Mizraim," the ancient Egyptians also referred to their land as "Kemet" which means "Land of the Blacks." Western historians, however, say that the word "Kemet" refers to the color of the soil of the land rather than its people. But, the word "Kemet" is actually an ethnic term being a derivative of the word "Khem" (Cham or Ham) which means "burnt" or "black." Ham, who was one of the three sons of Noah and the direct ancestor of the Egyptians, was black. The Bible, in the Old Testament, repeatedly refers to Egypt as the "Land of Ham" (i.e., Psalm 105:23, 27; 106:22).

Regarding the ancient Egyptians, there is also considerable historical evidence, aside from the Holy Bible, that they were of Black or Negro origin. Even today the true Egyptian is not to be found in the cities but in the country sides and farmlands of Egypt. Most of the Egyptians in the cities carry a mixed ancestry of European and Asian, but mostly Asian from the immigration and invasions of various people into Egypt throughout the centuries. Very few people realize that Cleopatra was of Greek origin because the Greeks once ruled Egypt and she was descended from one of those Greek rulers. The true Egyptian found in the countryside, however, has dark brown to black skin and very pronounced Negro features. This is particularly true the further south one travels in Egypt. It was from the south that the original pharaohs and the people of Egypt settled the land. The original rulers and builders of Egyptian civilization were of completely Black or Negro origin.

An interesting piece of evidence showing how the ancient Egyptians viewed themselves is found in the tomb of Ramses III (1200 BC). On the wall of this tomb is a painting of four human figures. Each figure is identified with a particular race or group of people with whom the Egyptians had contact. The first figure is that of a finely clothed man who is entirely black with wooly hair who represented the ancient Egyptians. The second figure is that of barely clad fair-skinned man who represented the Europeans. The third figure is that of a finely clothed man who is entirely black with wooly hair who represented the other Blacks of Africa. The fourth figure is that of a finely clothed light brown-skinned man who represented the semitic people. Thus, the ancient Egyptians saw themselves as fully black!

It is important to understand, however, that the Negro or Black race is not monolithic. I realize that there are many scholars who make a distinction between being Negro and having black skin complexion because they take into consideration physical features (i.e. shape of nose, texture of hair, etc.) into their criteria for determining race and not just the criterion of skin color or skin complexion. However, these are all quite artificial criteria. In fact, the very classification of human races is in itself artificial since there really is only one race - the human race within which there are variations and permutations. Even the Bible has no terminology for race. Instead, the Bible refers to the divisions found in mankind in terms of tribe, language, or nation - but never race. However, since in our modern times the word "race" is so popular in designating divisions of mankind we are going to use the term. But, it should be kept in mind that there are wide varieties of characteristics even within a single race. Even among white Europeans, for example, you have varying shades of skin tone, hair color, and other physical traits or characteristics. The same is true of the Black race, but to a much wider degree.

DNA analysis of blacks in Africa confirms that African blacks possess a greater margin of genetic variability. It seems that black Africans carry a greater number of alleles - genetic variations of the same gene(s) in their DNA as compared to Europeans and others. Thus, it is not surprising that there are much wider physical varieties among blacks. For example, in Sudan, Somalia, and South India (where I am originally from) the blacks have more fine features. In fact, even blacks of ancient Nubia (also known as Kush) comprised individuals who had both straight hair as well as wooly hair. Just as whites have varying hair color (i.e. brown, red, blond, and brunette), so too blacks have varying hair texture (i.e. wooly, straight, wavy, and curly). The black aboriginals of Australia, for example, have curly/wavy hair. Many of the aboriginals even have blond hair. Such is the wide diversity within the Black race. Ancient Egyptian statues and paintings depict a wide variety of these Black types.

Also, in certain characteristics of language and culture ancient Egypt is uniquely linked to other Black cultures of Africa and this reinforces the Black identity of ancient Egyptian civilization since these unique linguistic and cultural characteristics are not found among Indo-European peoples. For example, the ancient Egyptians like their African brethren were matriarchal whereas Indo-Europeans were and are patriarchal. An exception to this were the ancient Etruscans of Italy. Although the ancient Etruscans, who were Indo-European, were matriarchal, their matriarchal culture and budding civilization was actually due to the influence of trade with the ancient Phoenicians (Canaanites) who were Hamitic and matriarchal. The ancestors of the ancient Egyptians, therefore, were not the patriarchal Indo-Europeans from the North as white supremacists would have us believe but rather the matriarchal black Africans from the South (Upper Egypt). Geographically speaking, the southern regions of ancient Egypt are referred to as "Upper Egypt." The reason for this is explained below in another paragraph.

It should be understood that the people of North India and Europe share a common linguistic and racial heritage and that is why they are referred to on the whole as being "Indo-European." The people of South India (comprising four states and making up roughly twenty-five percent of India's total population) are linguistically and racially known as Dravidians. The Dravidians of India are generally shorter, broader-nosed, with dark brown to black skin complexion and straight or wavy hair. Both archaeological and linguistic evidence shows that it was the ancient Dravidians who built the Indus Valley civilization (also known as the Harappan Civilization which was one of the world's four oldest civilizations after Mesopotamia and Egypt). The ancient Harappan civilization existed in what is now Pakistan. The Dravidians of the Indus Valley were conquered, killed in great mass, and enslaved by white nomadic barbarian invaders called Aryans who came from the north. The Dravidians who escaped Aryan enslavement or slaughter fled to the south and were able to hold their own against any further Aryan encroachment and advancement, and that is why the linguistic and racial make up of South India is different from that of North India. Of course, over the centuries there has been so much crossbreeding between the two peoples that neither the north now is purely Aryan nor the south purely Dravidian anymore. Historian, anthropologist, and educational psychologist Dr. Clyde A. Winters has provided much painstaking research and numerous resources and references showing the ultimate cultural and phonetic/linguistic links between the peoples of South India and Black Africa. It is worth visiting his site C.A. Winter's Homepage.

Another excellent, scholarly, well-documented, and highly acclaimed book for study on this subject is The African Origin of Civilization: Myth or Reality by well-known West African scientist, scholar, and Egyptologist Cheikh Anta Diop. The book is generally available at bookstores or may be ordered through any bookstore. The book may also be purchased over the internet (i.e. amazon.com). Although I agree with most of what Dr. Diop says in his book, I do strongly disagree with his support of Darwinian evolutionary theory concerning human origins and his belief that Judaism and its offspring Christianity is a by-product of Egyptian civilization. There is no doubt that some Judeo-Christian themes, principles, and truths existed in civilizations and cultures much older than that of the Hebrews (the Jews). The concept of one God, for example, was also believed and promoted in ancient Egypt by a certain pharaoh before there ever were Hebrews or Jews who possessed this truth. Elements of God's original truth have been scattered in all cultures of the world including that of ancient Egypt, but I believe (and with good reason) that God uniquely revealed Himself to the Jews in such a way that He gave them His truths unmixed with any errors. The Christian Scriptures teach that the Jews were not selected by God because they were deserving or because they were a great people, but precisely because of the opposite. God delights in using the lowly, undeserving, and insignificant to accomplish His great purposes, and it was God's marvelous plan and purpose to use the lowly, undeserving, and insignificant Jews as His instrument to bring all mankind unto Himself so that both Jews and Gentiles in Christ become equally His children with eternal promises and blessings.

It is, however, interesting to note that almost none of the Jews in modern Israel today are descendants of the original Jews of Palestine thousands of years ago. Most of the Jews in Israel today are descendants of Europeans who had converted to Judaism in the Middle Ages (known as Khazar or Ashkenazi Jews).

It is important over-all to remember that there were both primitive and advanced black societies in ancient Africa just as there were also both primitive (barbarian) and advanced white societies in Europe during ancient times. However, keep in mind that Western (or White) civilization came on to the world's scene thousands of years after Blacks had already established and built their civilizations, notably Egypt.

There is good reason to believe that the ancient Greeks borrowed much of their philosophy, religion, mathematics, and sciences from the Egyptians. Of course, the Greeks definitely modified and gave their own Greek names to these concepts which they learned and borrowed from the Egyptians. Many prominent ancient Greek philosophers admitted in their own writings (of which we have a record) that they learned their scientific and mathematical concepts in Egypt. Writers and publishers of modern history textbooks make sure not to mention or include these confessions. The simple fact is that history shows that the ancient Greeks never really advanced as a society or people until they made contacts with Egypt. Then, as they say, they really took off. In fact, it would not at all be pre-mature to say that the Black society and civilization of ancient Egypt jump- started Greek civilization which in-turn jump-started all Western or European civilization. An excellent and scholarly article to read which summarizes the various historical and archaeological evidences which exist supporting the Black heritage of ancient Egypt is Ancient Egypt: Africa's Stolen Legacy published in "New African" magazine. Another one is Still Out of Africa (<http://www.mindspring.com/~jeaton/Finch/index.html>) written by Dr. Charles S. Finch, III, M.D. of Morehouse School of Medicine. And, still, another very excellent and quite comprehensive website is: Ancient Africa's Black Kingdoms (<http://www.homestead.com/wysinger/ancientafrica.html>). If you wish to read an excellent essay which explains why the hair found on Egyptian mummies is straight rather than wooly go to: Hanging In The Hair (<http://www.homestead.com/wysinger/hair2.html>). Please understand that the purpose of my webpage, which you are now reading, is to provide only general information. It is not my purpose here in this site to present detailed documentation and references. Such necessary and important detailed documentation and references are available through contacting the sources that I mention on this page.

One must realize that geographers refer to northern Egypt as "Lower Egypt" and to southern Egypt as "Upper Egypt." The reason for this is because the Nile River in Egypt, unlike other rivers of the world, flows from the south to the north. So up the Nile is actually going south and that is why the southern part of Egypt is called "Upper Egypt" and down the Nile is actually going north and that is why the northern part of Egypt is referred to as "Lower Egypt."

In ancient times the border of southern (or "Upper") Egypt was much further south than where it is today. Upper Egypt in ancient times extended well into what is now the country of Sudan (known in ancient times as Nubia or Kush). It was from Upper Egypt (Nubia or Kush) that the first pharaoh of Egypt Narmer (also known as Menes) went out to conquer and unify all of Egypt into one nation or kingdom. It was from here (the South) that the original ancestors of the Egyptians, following the direction of the Nile River north, settled the land of Egypt. The Egyptians themselves recorded in their writings that their ancestors came from the south. For example, the Edfu text (which is an inscription still found in the Temple of Horus at Edfu) states:

"Several thousand years ago, we were led by our king from the South to settle up the Nile Valleys."

Western Egyptologists and historians continue to ignore such evidence and will certainly not publish it in school history textbooks. Western Egyptologists and historians continue to use the specious argument that the ancient Egyptians and Nubians (also known as Cushites) could not have belonged to the same race because they were separate countries and throughout history they fought one another for supremacy. But, ancient history shows us that separate nations that were white also fought one another (i.e. the ancient Romans and Gauls), but no one would argue that because of this the people of those nations didn't belong to the same race. In fact, Egypt was originally a colony of Nubia (Kush or Cush) but eventually separated from Nubia and became independent and even stronger than Nubia.

Throughout history both nations (Egypt and Cush) fought one another for political dominance even though both belonged to the same Black race. When the Jews were enslaved in Egypt they adopted many of the Egyptian customs including the Egyptian prejudices towards the Cushites. That is why we read in the Bible that after the Jews left Egypt Miriam (Moses'sister) criticized Moses for marrying a Cushite woman. The language of the ancient Egyptians was related to the black nation of Kush (Nubia) to the south. There is nothing, absolutely nothing, in the language of the ancient Egyptians that is related to Indo-European or Semitic. Ancient Egyptian language was not Afro-Asiatic as Western historians presently claim. It was entirely Hamitic.

There were also early black civilizations in Asia (such as the Sumerian civilization of Mesopotamia, for example, before various Semitic peoples entered and dominated the region). In fact, according to the Bible the descendants of Ham first settled in Asia (i.e. Mesopotamia and Arabia) before entering Africa. But, such black societies or civilizations which existed originally in Mesopotamia or Asia were not Semitic in origin, and, therefore, they were not Asian in that sense. Ancient Sumerian language truly was related to the Africoid or Hamitic languages of ancient Nubia and Egypt because they were essentially one people even though the Sumerians, who were blacks, built their civilization in Mesopotamia (Asia). This is not to say that Semitic peoples did not live in the region at the time of the Sumerians. Such Semitic peoples would probably have used the Sumerian language as the common language just as French persons today in the United States, for example, would use English as their common language. As was mentioned, the Sumerian civilization in Mesopotamia was later replaced by various Semitic cultures and peoples. Of course, long after the ancient Nubians and Egyptians had established their civilizations, Hamitic peoples mixed with Semitic peoples on the East African coast resulting in languages that were both Hamitic and Semitic in character, but the language of the original Egyptians was completely Hamitic from its foundation all the way up.

To get around all of this, Western Egyptologists and historians say that even though ancient Egyptians used a language connected to a black race and nation (the Kushites of Nubia) the Egyptians themselves, however, were white. That is why Western Egyptologists and historians refer to the ancient Egyptians as white Hamites even though there is not a shred of objective evidence to support this twisted hypothesis, and, in fact, there is an abundance of evidence to contradict it, not to mention plain good old common sense and logic. Western historians and Egyptologists would never apply such deficient logic and reasoning to other disciplines, but when it comes to the race of the ancient Egyptians their minds will bend over backwards to deny the predominantly Negro origins of ancient Egyptian history and civilization. This has not been the case with all Western historians and Egyptologists but it has generally been the case - with very few or rare exceptions. The interesting thing is that Eurocentrist Egyptologists and their radical supporters like Dinesh D'Souza and Lefkowitz who oppose scholars such as African Egyptologist Diop never give specific reasons as to why Diop, for example, is wrong. They will say that Diop's arguments are unsound, but they will never explain how or why they are unsound. The comprehensive scientific evidences and logic presented by Diop are never addressed or refuted specifically by these opponents, but only generally. It is also interesting to note that Diop was head and shoulders above other Egyptologists in his formal education and in his scientific (he was a physicist), linguistic, and Egyptological credentials.

Today Egypt is referred to as an Arab nation, but this is only because the Arabs conquered Egypt centuries ago and imposed upon the original people their Arab language, culture and Moslem religion. Many modern Egyptians of today are really the descendants of Arab, Persian, Greek, and other non-African peoples that entered into Egypt over the many centuries. The ancient or original Egyptians, however, were of African or Black (Negroid) descent, and this is still mostly true of the bulk of Egypt's rural population, especially in the south. Long before the Arabs invaded and conquered Egypt the famous and ancient Greek historian Herodotus (who is known as the Father of History) visited Egypt and wrote concerning the Egyptians: "They have burnt skin, flat noses, thick lips, and woolly hair" (Herodotus, Book II, p. 100, translated by George Rawlinson, New York: Tudor, 1928). Readers may wish to obtain the book Return to Glory. The book, written by white author and professional speaker Joel F. Freeman, discusses the historical and archaeological evidences for ancient black Egyptian civilization.

Now to get back to our subject. Even though Noah had pronounced a terrible curse on Canaan, the curse did not apply to the blacks of Africa who were taken as slaves to the Americas because those blacks were not descendants of the Canaanites. It must also be understood that the curse applied to the Canaanites in a national sense only. That is clear from the context of Scripture. Individual Canaanites in history who trusted in the true God were delivered from the curse (i.e. Rahab the harlot mentioned in the Book of Joshua in the Old Testament. The same Rahab is mentioned in the New Testament, Matthew 1:5, as being an ancestor of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ). As to why Noah pronounced a curse on Canaan for a sin that his father Ham had committed is not clearly explained in the Bible. In one sense it could be said that Ham was punished in his son Canaan. It also might be that Noah foresaw by revelation from God that Canaan would more likely follow and take after in the immoral footsteps and behavior of his father Ham. We know from history that the Canaanites practiced very gross sexual and other forms of immorality - even to the point of sacrificing their children in the fire to their idols which they worshipped and for this they were ultimately cursed with extinction as a nation.

The author, Babu G. Ranganathan, is an experienced Christian writer. Mr. Ranganathan has his B.A. with academic concentrations in Bible and Biology from Bob Jones University. As a religion and science writer he has been recognized in the 24th edition of Marquis Who's Who In The East. The author's articles have been published in various publications including Russia's Pravda and South Korea's The Seoul Times. The author's website may be accessed at:

<http://www.religionscience.com>

| 23039|2007-08-30 08:48:24|Manu Ampim|King Tut Exhibit Prompts Debate on His Skin Color|
Greetings All,

The King Tutankhamen exhibit has faced protests since it opened in June 2005. There were protests and events in Los Angeles, Ft. Lauderdale, Chicago, and now Philadelphia, because of the bogus forensic reconstruction image of him included with the 130 original artifacts in the exhibit. This modern image of a make-believe "caucasoid" King Tut is complete nonsense and I was glad to be able to address this issue along with my colleagues (Asa Hilliard, Theophile Obenga, and Martin Bernal) at an important Ft. Lauderdale, FL symposium in February 2006, and I have also addressed this issue in a detailed essay on my website.

http://manuampim.com/2005\_update.html

Tutankhamen's Africoid identity (with his dark brown and black skin color) is obvious according to all first-hand evidence and images. Yet, Hawass and National Geographic advisors such as Nina Jablonski are completely dishonest in their descriptions of King Tut's skin color and appearance.

There will be another big protest in Philly on Thursday, September 6th, when Zahi Hawass is scheduled to speak at the Univ. of Pennsylvania auditorium at 7 pm. Contact: Mukasa Afrika

215.520.7896.
spirits360@yahoo.com
Advancing the work,
Manu Ampim

---

<http://www.npr.org/templates/story/story.php?storyId=13992421>

King Tut Exhibit Prompts Debate on His Skin Color

by Joel Rose

Morning Edition, August 28, 2007 The King Tut exhibition has drawn millions of visitors to museums across the country since it opened two years ago. But some African-American scholars believe the exhibition makes King Tut look too white. The debate over Tut's race led the Franklin Institute Science Museum in Philadelphia, where the show is on display, to sponsor a conference on the subject.

The show, Tutankhamen and the Golden Age of the Pharaohs has drawn a steady stream of protesters since it opened in Los Angeles. But nowhere have they been as persistent or vocal as in Philadelphia.

More than 500 people showed up to hear scholars discuss Tut's race at the Franklin Institute. The auditorium couldn't hold them all, so the museum had to set up big-screen TVs in the lobby. The three speakers said the exhibition on display upstairs gives the false impression that King Tut was white.

And worse, says Temple University professor Molefi Asante, it implies that Egypt is not a part of Africa.

"We asked the students as they were coming out of the museum, you've seen the exhibition of King Tut, 'Where is he from?'" Asante said. "You would discover that people can see the exhibition of Tutankhamen, and come out and not know that they have seen Africa."

A forensic reconstruction of Tut's head and shoulders at the Franklin Institute exhibit is remarkably lifelike, until you get right up close to it. On the side of the glass case, there is a disclaimer that reads, "The features of [Tutankhamen's] face are based on scientific data. But the exact color of his skin and the size and shape of many facial details cannot be determined with full certainty."

"Our best guess is that he was neither lily white nor ebony black. He was probably somewhere in between," said Nina Jablonski, author of Skin: A Natural History.

Jablonski teaches anthropology at Penn State University. She also served as an advisor to the team from the National Geographic Society that produced the forensic reconstruction of King Tut that's currently on display. Jablonski points out that it's only a working hypothesis. Scientists have not been able to retrieve much DNA evidence from Tut or other mummies.

But they do have a good idea of who lived in Egypt 3,000 years ago ? and she says they probably looked a lot like Egyptians today.

"Modern Egyptians are a very heterogeneous group," Jablonski said. "Some of them have very Arabic features. Others of them have very African or so-called Nubian features. This is because the Nile River itself was a tremendous byway for movement of people in the past and present."

Jablonski says Tut's skin probably looked like a mixture of those people, only lighter, because the Boy King would have spent most of his time inside, protected from the sun. The speakers at the Franklin Institute rejected that hypothesis. In fact, they seemed to enjoy making fun of it.

"Okay, now let's look what this really is about. This is shocking. See if you recognize the person on the right," said activist Maulana Karenga, who remain best known as the founder of Kwanzaa. He got a big laugh by comparing the reconstructed image of King Tut with a picture of a young Barbara Streisand.

The panelists believe the Egyptians of Tut's time had, for the most part, very dark skin, like people from sub-Saharan Africa. Charles Finch is the director of International Health at Morehouse School of Medicine in Atlanta.

"Whenever ancient writers, Hebrew or Greek, make any reference to ancient Egyptians' color, it's always black," Finch said. "There was no issue back then. There was no discussion. There was no debate. It only became a debate in the last 200 years."

For example, Greek historian Herodotus wrote in the fifth century BC that the Egyptians were "dark-skinned and woolly-haired."

But as anthropologist Nina Jablonski points out, it's hard to say exactly what ancient historians meant when they described the skin they saw as "dark." And she says much of the archeological evidence points to a different conclusion.

"When we look at the representation of the Egyptian royalty on the walls of tombs, we see a range of sort of moderate, tan-colored skin on the royalty," Jablonski said. "This probably is a fairly close approximation of what skin color these people actually had."

Jablonski speaks with the patience of someone who has answered this question many times before, and expects to keep answering it until more definitive evidence comes along. That's why she hopes the King Tut exhibition will inspire students to become interested in reconstructing the past.

That could let the students, Jablonski says, "make a better stab at this in 20 or 25 years' time."

Until then, we'll have to make do with an educated guess.

Joel Rose reports for member station WHYY

| 23040|2007-08-30 09:38:42|Paul Kekai Manansala|King Tut Not Black Enough, Protesters Say|
Following up on Prof. Ampim's post on the Tutankhamen exhibit, here's a recent article from New America Media:

[http://news.ncmonline.com/news/view\_article.html?article\_id=5f039af70f004fb547c22e0120eda b4b](http://news.ncmonline.com/news/view_article.html?article_id=5f039af70f004fb547c22e0120eda b4b)

King Tut Not Black Enough, Protesters Say

Philadelphia museum perpetuates myth that Egypt and its people are not African, according to activists

Black News Journal, News Feature, Marilyn Kai Jewett, Posted: Aug 28, 2007

Editor's note: Dr. Asa Hiliard, who died recently in Egypt, was a leading scholar of African history. One of the organizations he was intimately involved with, the Association for the Study of Classical African Civilizations, is involved in the protest. Marilyn Kai Jewett filed this story as a special report to Taylor News Services.

Black activists in Philadelphia held their third demonstration recently to express disapproval of the King Tutankhamun exhibit at the city's Franklin Institute. The protesters are primarily angered by the fact that images of King Tut promoting the show and those in the exhibit have been altered to lighten his skin and change his African features to those of an Arab or Caucasian.

Tutankhamun, who lived around 1353 B.C., was a minor king of the 18th Dynasty. Tut was the son of Pharaoh Akhenaten (and grandson of Amenhotep III), a Nubian. He took the throne at age eight and died at 19. What makes him significant is that his tomb was found intact.

The coalition has presented officials of the museum with a list of demands: 1) A public apology for not properly representing King Tut as an African and falsely representing Kemet (ancient Egypt) as non-African; 2) Develop and display a historically, factual and scientific exhibit of the African foundation and identity of dynastic Kemet; 3) Display the pioneering accomplishments of African Nile Valley Civilization; and 4) Document and display the research and accomplishments of the renowned African scholar Cheikh Anta Diop in scientifically proving that Kemet was an African civilization.

The museum agreed to sponsor a symposium with African American historians Charles Finch III, Molefi Asante, Maulana Karenga and Theophile Obenga (via videotape).

Well-known author Shaharazad Ali, representing AAFRL, had a different spin on the corrective measures. "I'm not in agreement with asking for an apology," said Ali who was there with her 7 year-old grandson. "We asked for a debate between white scientists and black scientists/historians to determine whether or not King Tut was black. Of course, I suggest this is all nonsense. People go to jail everyday, getting convicted based on DNA. It would not be difficult to determine not only who King Tut was, where he came from, what he died from and everything else."

The demonstration was organized by a coalition of organizations that include the African American Freedom & Reconstruction League (AAFRL), Association for the Study of Classical African Civilizations (ASCAC), Laying the Foundation (LTF), National Coalition of Blacks for Reparations in America (N'COBRA) and Avenging the Ancestors Coalition (ATAC).

For more information on King Tutankhamun, the 18th Dynasty and the protest, go to www.kingtutankhamen.blogspot.com.

| 23041|2007-08-30 09:42:08|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: King Tut Not Black Enough, Protesters Say|

Here's an article featuring Mukasa Afrika.

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

---

<http://www.philadelphiaweekly.com/articles/15186>

'ROUND ABOUT

Continental Drift

A local teacher promotes Tut's African identity. |

by Kia Gregory

|

For Mukasa Afrika, it's another blow in a continuing assault.

In June 2005 National Geographic magazine featured the reconstructed image of King Tutankhamen on its cover. The headline read: "THE NEW FACE OF KING TUT." The young pharaoh had light eyes, a pointy nose, thin lips and a golden caramel hue.

In the search for King Tut's true identity, scientists in France, the U.S. and Egypt conducted three separate reconstructions that yielded three different kings: one Caucasian, one African and one Afrika mockingly calls "Arab-Caucasoid."

It's this one, reconstructed by the Supreme Council of Antiquities in Egypt under the leadership of Dr. Zahi Hawass, whom Afrika accuses of constantly excising Egypt from Africa, that has become famous, and is now on display at the Franklin Institute Science Museum, the final stop on the king's current U.S. tour.

Afrika, 32, tells stories from African history and culture with the ease with which most people discuss last night's American Idol. He speaks in the slow, assured manner of someone twice his age, and there's no doubt in his mind the boy king was African.

Race matters: Mukasa Afrika will protest the Tut exhibit Saturday to bring attention to oy king's African heritathe bge.

ADVERTISEMENT

"The mummy itself is evidence that King Tut is African," he says. He adds that paintings found in king's tomb show he had deep brown skin. Also the king's 18th dynasty descends from Thebes, located in the southern part of Egypt, making his family lineage African. He also points to the famous golden mask in which the king has almond-shaped eyes, a rounded nose and full lips.

The image on the cover of National Geographic was created with CAT scans, and according to the museum's website, a forensic anthropologist measured the mummy's cranial features to calculate the tissue depth of his nose, cheeks and lips. Then a paleo-artist determined the skin color based on the middle range of contemporary North Africans.

Afrika says that analysis is intentionally flawed.

He questions why scientists didn't use a melanin dosage test or a DNA test for a truer picture of King Tut's African identity.

"It's more about money than racism," Afrika says of the museum's "Golden Age" exhibit. "If they had an image of an African King Tut, how many fewer tickets would they sell? That's a question they don't wanna deal with."

After seeing the magazine cover, Afrika, through the Laying the Foundation organization, built a website, wrote essays, held workshops and hosted scholars to educate the public on the king's true identity. And when the King Tut exhibit came to the Franklin Institute, he, along with many community activists, stood in front of the museum's steps in protest.

This Saturday he'll do it again. And this time he and a coalition of groups will have demands for the Franklin Institute: to make a public apology for not properly representing King Tut as African; to develop and display a historical, factual and scientific exhibit of the African foundation and its contributions; to display the pioneering accomplishments of the African Nile Valley civilization in education, architecture, social organization, art and industry; to document and display the research and accomplishments of Cheikh Anta Diop in scientifically proving Egypt was indeed an African civilization.

"We must send a message," says Afrika, "that as people of African descent, we will not tolerate or accept the misrepresentation of our culture and history. We will send that message from the schools all the way to Egypt that we know King Tut was African."

Afrika's motivation isn't purely academic.

"African history saved my life," he says. "And it's destined to do the same for our people."

Afrika grew up on the poor side of Chicago, as he says, a very troubled teenager.

"I was one of these teenagers running the streets with my pants hanging down, not listening to my parents, getting into trouble with the law," he remembers. "Growing up without a sense of purpose, I got involved in a lot of things I shouldn't have been involved in," like gangs and drugs.

As Afrika puts it, he was wasting his existence.

"It's when I started to read about African history that I began to have a sense of purpose," he says. "So I know the power of these things personally, and as a teacher, I've seen it 100 times over. When history isn't simply a subject you get a grade in, but a part of your identity and culture, it's a powerful thing."

After getting kicked out of high school, Afrika eventually graduated, then he went off to college, where he majored in black studies. Now, in addition to being an elementary school teacher, he's also an author, lecturer and activist. And he refuses to accept that King Tut was anything but black.

"The consequences are very grave," he says of the museum's exhibit. "You're dealing with a people whose history has been stolen, people who have been deprived of their historical and cultural memory. If you take away a person's culture, you take away who they are. We can't afford to lose any more because so much has already been taken."

"We're not going to Greece and saying Alex the Great was African. We just want ours. Give us ours, and we'll be satisfied."

Just the Facts

>> The issue: The cultural identity of King Tut, and whether the "Golden Age" exhibit at the Franklin Institute is culturally inaccurate.

>> The question: Was the young pharaoh African?

>> What's next: A protest outside the Franklin Institute Saturday at noon, promoting the boy king's African identity.

| 23042|2007-08-30 10:04:28|Djehuti Sundaka|Re: BLACK FREEDOM IS NOT A CONTEST !
A Plea to put aside our Black |

We've had the internet for 10 years now with information continuing to be disseminated and the overall situation remaining ever the same. Masunda is still available to anyone for free online although I've moved on to more universal endeavors. Before the internet there was Garvey, Malik Shabazz, the Black Panthers, ASCAC, Conscious Rap, ect. There has never been a lack of information being made available to the people, only a lack of desire in attending to it. Short of controlling virtually everything a people sees or hears, no amount of information will ever overcome a majority's lack of desire for it. Human beings are an intelligent species but are not a primarily intellectual species. The masses of any population, past or present, are only concerned with the bottom line; "How do I maintain the life I have or carve out a better living for myself? How do I get over?" Without presenting the answer to that question for them by means of a community that's living better and protecting itself from the problems others are suffering from, the masses won't care about any information being presented to them. It'll just be some more of "that same ole Black nationalist stuff" to them and everything will proceed as it always has. To affect the minds of the masses, you have to affect the living conditions those minds are consistently being subjected to. To this day, Garvey had the largest mass movement of all and had actually affected people's lives for the better yet that movement was still rejected by the vast majority of the people in his time. Nothing less is going to make a dent upon the psyches of the masses today if a better means of living cannot be presented.

Djehuti Sundaka

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Franklin Jones wrote:

>

> Thank you my Brother

> You made many excellent point. I respect your position you are indeed very wise.

> However let us not under estimate the power of truth. And while we do not controll the main media we do have the internet- with it we can reach millions. For remember Harriet Tubman didn't have a bus.

> We can began to counter the problem by deseminating critical information

>

> Djehuti Sundaka wrote:

> The way to combat this psychological warfare is first by making this > information well known to African Americans, because knowing is half > the battle.

> For upon truly accepting this information Black people will began > to disbelieve -therefore dismiss- all of those false negative > assessments formerly given and accepted of themselves. This new > realization will allow blacks to began to overcome the > psychologically ingrained white is right perception that has been > unrelentingly indoctrinated upon the black mind that is rarely if > ever moved.

>

> *****

>

> Unless you have control of the media, you can't make the information

> well known. Such information has to be desired in order to be > received and that desire simply doesn't exist with the majority it's > intended for.

>

> There's really nothing new under the sun. Not since Garvey, not > since Shabazz, not since Masunda.

>

> Change doesn't come from pleading. It comes about by either direct > brute force or by intellegent imposition. Otherwise, the oppressed > are quite content to complain about conditions they are nevertheless > satisfied in living with.

>

> If one is concerned with people being psychologically manipulated > for the worse, one should engage in psychologically manipulating > people for the better 'cause telling them of their psychological > manipulation only results in majority resistance. A carrot stick > has to be placed before them and that carrot stick can only be > economic in nature. Forming an organization or community that > actively achieves a better standard of living for its members is a > carrot stick that can attract people to the information and > consciousness they otherwise shun.

>

> Djehuti Sundaka

>

>

| 23043|2007-08-30 10:08:13|Alex van Deelen|Re: The Moors - offtopic|
Paul,

> I don't think that would be possible. For example,

> are there any people still suffering from the effects > of the Barbary pirate and Moorish slave raids on

- > Europe? No, most people don't even know these
- > ever occurred.
- >
- > There are however still significant problems
- > remaining that their roots in the transatlantic
- > slave trade and its aftermath.

And not even just the effects.

There is a tendency to call every exploitative labour relation in Africa 'slavery'.

They don't do the same thing in Europe, where you had bonded labor, serfdom, prison labor, etc.

But in Africa, all these are suddenly called 'slavery'.

Plus, they try and take every opportunity to hold Africans accountable for the transatlantic slave trade.

Alex

| 23044|2007-08-30 11:41:44|Alex van Deelen|The Original Egyptians|

Also, would it be possible to make a tally of cultural characteristics of the Mesopotamians/Greeks - Ancient Egyptians - Luba/Nubians/Akan (any influential African culture).

with regards to:

matrilinearity/patrilinearity divine kingship

metaphysics

astrology

and other major or minor cultural institutions?

I think that could solve the issue of which cultural realm the Ancient Egyptians belong to.

Alex

| 23045|2007-08-30 11:46:23|Mahari Mengistu|Re: The Moors - offtopic|

I'd also like to add that I thought your rebuttal was masterful as well. Keep up the good work.

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "D. McIntyre" wrote:

>

> I had never heard of Irving's Alhambra until your post. Found a version online here:

> <http://etext.library.adelaide.edu.au/i/irving/washington/i72a/>

>

> I will take a good look at it and probably will incorporate it into my content rebuttal.

>

> I am working on a rebuttal that focuses on the content, not just the ethnicity, next. The > documentary is supposed to re-air, I think tomorrow. What I find interesting is that PBS > barely advertised it yet they are promoting it in their newsletter aimed at teachers.

>

> --> Deidra

>

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, cristofori whitakara wrote:

> >

> > washington irving's alhambra was written in the 1700s and the department of education > still refuses to put into the curriculum the influences of the african moors on european > cultures.

> >

> > Peter Kaiza wrote: A very good rebuttal ! You wonder why the > barbary raids are never mentioned in the west but these were slave raids by north africans > which nearly completely depopulated parts of England! Africans were never the only > victims of Slavery!

> >

> >

> > -----

> > To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> > From: pmanansala@

> > Date: Fri, 24 Aug 2007 21:26:24 +0000

> > Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: The Moors - offtopic

> >
> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "D. McIntyre" wrote:
> > >
> > > I just posted my (amateur) objections to a PBS aired documentary > > called Cities of Light: The > > > Rise and Fall of Islamic Spain.
> > >
> > > Please take a look and post your comments (criticisms also welcome):
> > > <http://www.yaminternet.com>
> > >
> > > Regards,
> > > Deidra
> > >
> >
> > Nice article, Deidra. Here's a more direct link for those who might > > have trouble finding it:
> >
> > <http://www.yaminternet.com/Blog/wordpress/?cat=5>
> >
> > Regards,
> > Paul Kekai Manansala
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> > -----
> > Play Movie Mash-up and win BIG prizes!
> >
> >
> >
> >
> > -----
> > Need a vacation? Get great deals to amazing places on Yahoo!
Travel.
> >
>
| 23046|2007-08-30 23:16:25|K. Loganathan|Ancient human mtDNA genotypes from England reveal lost variation ov|

Ancient human mtDNA genotypes from England reveal lost variation over the last millennium

Issue Volume 3, Number 5 / October 22, 2007

Pages 550-553

Article Category Molecular evolution

Article Type Research-Article

DOI 10.1098/rsbl.2007.0269

Authors

A.L. T<sup>1</sup>, M.T.P. Gilbert<sup>2, 3</sup>, R.C. Fleischer<sup>4</sup>, A.R. Hoelzel<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup>School of Biological and Biomedical Sciences, University of Durham, Durham DH1 3LE, UK

<sup>2</sup>Ancient Biomolecules Centre, Department of Zoology, University of Oxford, Oxford OX1 3PS, UK

<sup>3</sup>Ancient DNA and Evolution, Niels Bohr Institute, University of Copenhagen, Copenhagen 2100, Denmark

<sup>4</sup>NMNH?Genetics Program, Smithsonian Institution, Washington, DC 20008, USA

Abstract

We analysed the historical genetic diversity of human populations in Europe at the mtDNA control region for 48 ancient Britons who lived between ca AD 300 and 1000, and compared these with 6320 modern mtDNA genotypes from England and across Europe and the Middle East. We found that the historical sample shows greater genetic diversity than for modern England and other modern populations, indicating the loss of diversity over the last millennium. The pattern of haplotypic diversity was clearly European in the ancient sample, representing each of the modern haplogroups. There was also increased representation of one of the ancient haplotypes in modern populations. We consider these results in the context of possible selection or stochastic processes.

Keywords

ancient DNA, human, mtDNA, genetic diversity

References

Bandelt, H.J., Forster, P., Sykes, B.C. & Richards, M.B. 1995 Mitochondrial portraits of human populations using median networks. Genetics 141, 743?753.

Clifford, J. 1989 Eyam plague, 1665?1666. Sheffield, UK: The Print Centre.

Comas, D., Calafell, F., Mateu, E., P<sub>z</sub>-Lezaun, A., Bosch, E. & Bertranpetit, J. 1997 Mitochondrial DNA variation and the origin of the Europeans. Hum. Genet. 99, 443?449, (doi:10.1007/s004390050386).

Gilbert, M.T.P., Hansen, A.J., Willerslev, E., Rudbeck, L. & Barnes, I. 2003 Characterization of genetic miscoding lesions caused by postmortem damage. Am. J. Hum. Genet. 72, 48?61, (doi:10.1086/345379).

- Haak, W. et al. 2005 Ancient DNA from the first European farmers in 7500-year-old Neolithic sites. *Science310, 1016?1018, (doi:10.1126/science.1118725).
- Helgason, A., Sigurðsson, S., Gulcher, J., Stefansson, K. & Ward, R. 2000 Sampling saturation and the European mtDNA pool: implications for detecting relationships among populations. Archaeogenetics: DNA and the population prehistory of Europe (eds. Renfrew, C. & Boyle, K.), pp. 285?294, Cambridge, UK: McDonald Institute for Archaeological Research, University of Cambridge
- Helgason, A., Hickey, E., Goodacre, S., Bosnes, V., Stefansson, K., Ward, R. & Sykes, B. 2001 MtDNA and the islands of the North Atlantic: estimating the proportions of Norse and Gaelic ancestry. *Am. J. Hum. Genet.68, 723?737, (doi:10.1086/318785).
- Helgason, A., Hrafnkelsson, B., Gulcher, J.R., Ward, R. & Stefansson, K. 2003 A populationwide coalescent analysis of Icelandic matrilineal and patrilineal genealogies: evidence for a faster evolutionary rate of mtDNA lineages than Y chromosome. *Am. J. Hum. Genet.72, 1370?1388, (doi:10.1086/375453).
- Holmes, E.C., Worobey, M. & Rambaut, A. 1999 Phylogenetic evidence for recombination in Dengue virus. *Mol. Biol. Evol.16, 405?409.
- Huson, D.H. 1998 SplitsTree : a program for analysing and visualising evolutionary data. *Bioinformatics14, 68?73, (doi:10.1093/bioinformatics/14.1.68).
- Magurran, A.E. 1988 Ecological diversity and its measure. Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press.
- Marth, G.T., Czabarka, E., Murvai, J. & Sherry, S.T. 2004 The allele frequency spectrum in genome-wide human variation data reveals signals of differential demographic history in three large world populations. *Genetics166, 351?372, (doi:10.1534/genetics.166.1.351).
- Miller, K.W.P., Dawson, J.L. & Hagelberg, E. 1996 A concordance of nucleotide substitutions in the first and second hypervariable segments of the human mtDNA control region. *Int. J. Legal Med.109, 107?113, (doi:10.1007/BF01369668).
- Petit, R.J., El Mousadik, A. & Pons, O. 1998 Identifying populations for conservation on the basis of genetic markers. *Conserv. Biol.12, 844?855, (doi:10.1046/j.1523-1739.1998.96489.x).
- Piercy, R., Sullivan, K.M., Bensom, N. & Gill, P. 1993 The application of mtDNA typing to the study of white Caucasian genetic identification. *Int. J. Legal Med.106, 85?90, (doi:10.1007/BF01225046).
- Richards, M. et al. 1996 Palaeolithic and Neolithic lineages in the European mitochondrial gene pool. *Am. J. Hum. Genet.59, 185?203.
- Ruiz-Pensini, E., Mishmar, D., Brandon, M., Procaccio, V. & Wallace, D.C. 2004 Effects of purifying and adaptive selection on regional variation in human mtDNA. *Science303, 223?226, (doi:10.1126/science.1088434).
- Thomas, M.G. et al. 2002 Founding mothers of Jewish communities: geographically separated Jewish groups were independently founded by very few female ancestors. *Am. J. Hum. Genet.70, 1411?1420, (doi:10.1086/340609).
- Tómas A.L., Gilbert, M.T.P., Dumbacher, J.P. & Hoelzel, A.R. 2006 Tracing the phylogeography of human populations in Britain based on 4th?11th century mtDNA genotypes. *Mol. Biol. Evol.23, 152?161, (doi:10.1093/molbev/msj013).
- Vernesi, C. et al. 2004 The Etruscans: a population genetic study. *Am. J. Hum. Genet.74, 694?704, (doi:10.1086/383284).

Source: The Royal Society

<http://www.journals.royalsoc.ac.uk/content/apv8161868jo1071/>

---

Moody friends. Drama queens. Your life? Nope! - their life, your story.

Play Sims Stories at Yahoo! Games.

| 23047|2007-08-31 13:32:22|Mahari Mengistu|Re: BLACK FREEDOM IS NOT A CONTEST !

A Plea to put aside our Black |

Paul,

Also, since the truth is being revealed - finally - and "they" have control of the media I think what we should expect is an overpowering media propagandistic onslaught over the coming years.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala" wrote:

>

> One area to look at is genetics, a field we often discuss on this group.

>

> Right now, they've developed genetically-modified foods, or > Franken-foods as they're called by some.

>

> Knowing though some of the types that have stocked the genetic > research field since Day One, it's only a matter of time before we > will see research on genetically-modified humans. And of course some > will look at this research from the standpoint of race, and how it can > give a "racial advantage." It's pretty scary stuff, but the genie's > been let out of the bottle.

>

> It's hard to fight this kind of stuff when you're po folks.

>

> Regards,

> Paul Kekai Manansala

>

| 23048|2007-08-31 16:43:43|Paul Kekai Manansala|SOS for Nubian site|

Sending out an SOS

A plea goes out to rescue Qasr Ibrim, the sole in situ archaeological site remaining among Nubian monuments. Nevine El-Aref reports

---

Isolated on a high hillock in the middle of Lake Nasser, the monumental complex of Qasr Ibrim displays a collection of archaeological remnants of Egypt's various historical epochs that once witnessed a unique civilisation.

Qasr Ibrim was once an eagle's nest over Lower Nubia but is now an island, or at times a peninsula, on the east bank of the artificial Lake Nasser which came into being after the building of the Aswan High Dam in the early 1960's. The site was intermittently inhabited from as early as the Middle Kingdom until the 1840's. It also functioned as a military stronghold and a destination of religious pilgrimage for various armies and religious denominations.

Click to view caption

A panoramic view of Qasr Ibrim Island

---

Throughout its 3,000-year history, Qasr Ibrim has lain on the border territory between Egypt and her southern neighbours. Control of the area around Ibrim fluctuated with the changing political situations to the north and south. The fortress of Qasr Ibrim, situated high above the Nile, provided a secure military base for whoever was the controlling power at the time from which to watch over traffic on the river, and to oversee the nomads who roamed the Eastern Desert, an ever-present threat to the settled communities along the Nile. From the earliest feature so far discovered on the site -- a length of massive fortification wall from about 1000 BC through to the 16th century AD Ottoman garrison which occupied and repaired the fortress to guard their southern frontier -- Qasr Ibrim's military importance has always been paramount. Alongside its military role, however, Qasr Ibrim also functioned as a religious centre early in its history, and a centre of pilgrimage in both pagan and Christian times. Pharaonic and Roman temples have been discovered, and even today the site is dominated by the shell of a Christian cathedral which dwarfs the surrounding remains.

Since its construction during Pharaonic times as a military garrison, Qasr Ibrim, or PER-MIT as it was known during that time, has played a major political and military role, for almost 3,000 years in fact, in the surveillance of Egypt's southern borders and in preventing several military attacks from the south. It also had an economic importance as it was one of Egypt's main trade centres.

The Middle Kingdom fortress of King Senusert III is the oldest monument found on the island along with a number of New Kingdom chapels of the 18th dynasty kings Thutmose III, Amenhotep II and Queen Hatshepsut. It also houses a mud brick temple of the 25th dynasty Nubian ruler Taharqa and several residential houses of the same epoch.

During the Graeco-Roman era, no less than six mud brick temples dedicated to Isis, Amun and other ancient Egyptian deities were built along with a small military garrison and dormitory for soldiers. The name of the island had also been changed to PREMIS.

When Christianity took roots in Egypt, PHRIM, as the Copts pronounced it, became the seat of the Coptic Patriarchy where an enormous cathedral dedicated to the Virgin Mary was constructed during the sixth century. Taharqa Temple was also been transformed into a Coptic church. When the Ottomans invaded the island in the 16th century, they changed the name of the island into Ibrim, built a small mosque and left some Bosnian soldiers to protect their new territory. They intermarried with the Nubians and formed their own families. Down the ages the island has been transformed into a small town filled with temples, a fortress, colossi, houses, a mosque, cathedral and necropolis.

In the 1960s when Egypt decided to build the High Dam and called for the salvage operation of Nubian monuments, all temples were relocated to another, safer location except the monuments of Qasr Ibrim which was built on top of an 80-metre tall rock formation above the Nile's level, thus preventing its inundation by the flow of Lake Nasser after the completion of the dam.

Such remarkable preservation on site has recently been threatened by the high water levels of Lake Nasser associated with construction in Toshka.

Almost 60 per cent of the island has been inundated and water leaks into the temple most of the time. Water has also reached the foundation of the cathedral which has led to several cracks on its walls. Blocks of the podium located on the edge of the Nile have been dismantled which may lead to an eventual total collapse. The fortification walls have indeed collapsed, and mud-brick buildings near the new water line have fallen as well, either from the effect of direct water or from percolation. The most important of these are a 25th Dynasty temple, from which a wall painting has already collapsed and another is now in danger of disappearing.

Percolation through dry deposits also threatens the excellent organic preservation of the site. Once exposed to water, the organic matter decays rapidly to a brown smelly slime from which nothing can be recovered.

"The damages increase year after year which demands the intervention of UNESCO to rescue and protect the only vestige of Nubian monuments that still remain in situ," Mohamed El-Biali, head of Aswan and Nubian Monuments in the Supreme Council of Antiquities (SCA), told Al-Ahram Weekly. El-Biali said Egypt needs rapid and immediate action similar to that of the 1960s when UNESCO played a significant role in leading the international salvage campaign for Nubian monuments.

Egypt renewed its appeal to UNESCO in 2000 and 2005.

El-Biali suggests the establishment of a high-level committee consisting of restorers, researchers, archaeologists and documentation experts in order to document the site, restore its monuments, excavate its sand and protect it from present and future threats. El-Biali also called for the resumption of excavation works in the area especially that led by the British mission of the Egypt Exploration Society (EES).

EXCAVATIONS IN QASR IBRIM: Excavation at Qasr Ibrim started in 1963 as part of the UNESCO campaign to salvage the sites and monuments which would be lost after the construction of the High Dam. Excavation has continued, usually on a biennial basis, and there remains much to do.

The importance of such a site is two-fold. As the only surviving archaeological site in Lower Nubia, Qasr Ibrim is the only place where modern techniques of excavation and recording can be applied, or information gathered on subjects which the excavators of other Lower Nubian sites in the UNESCO campaign were unable, through pressure of time or lack of resources, to pursue. Furthermore, the site lies in a desert region with almost no rainfall, and originally at a height where very little insect activity took place. As a result, the preservation of materials not usually found on archaeological sites even in the rest of Egypt is outstanding. The EES routinely excavates leather, papyrus, wood, textiles and other plant remains, some going back to the first millennium BC.

"Despite the many seasons of excavation, there is still much to do," El-Biali said, adding that Qasr Ibrim has been excavated as one peels an onion, gradually stripping off the layers of occupation to reveal the ones below. The team is just now beginning to examine the early levels of occupation on the site: the first fortifications, the occupation of the Nubian pharaohs who ruled both Egypt and Nubia, the Roman fortress, and finally the remains of the Sudanese state which succeeded the Roman presence at Ibrim.

The methodical peeling process just described has recently come under pressure. Even when Lake Nasser is high, the water level is low enough to preserve much of the fortress, but work has proceeded slowly, to maximise the information recovered.

A number of Meroitic texts have been found along with Graeco and Latin papyri.

| 23049|2007-08-31 19:40:45|Fatima Horta|Re: King Tut Not Black Enough, Protesters Say|
I agree with their demands, I am not black but I think its time to reveal the truth and use the common sense.

I think some people, specially the ones that have been making movies about ancient Egypt in Hollywood scoffs at ancient Egyptians because they created this image of ancient Egyptians being blonde/brunette and blue eyed and it caused ignorance in people so they take it as a real fact instead of fiction because in the end that's what they want us to believe because in the end they are racist because their stereotype of being beautiful is someone white not black.

And now Arabs who occupied Egypt try to make us believe that ancient Egyptians were arabs and not blacks because they want to have all the credits about the building of the pyramids, monuments, etc. I am not against arabs I have some arab friends but I have to admit that they can have a big ego.

But that's other story what I try to say is that we need to study by ourselves the history and geography and if we use the common sense we could know that Egypt is in the African continent and in the pharaonic times the world was not globalized as today, now we can find a Japanese in Argentina, a Moroccan in United States, etc. because now we can travel easily but in the past it was not easy so if Egypt is in Africa obviously the people in Egypt was black!

I don't see something wrong with ancient Egyptians being black in the end they are more intelligent, clever, creatives than anyone of other race.

Sorry for my english, but it is not my primary language.

Fatima

Paul Kekai Manansala wrote:

Following up on Prof. Ampim's post on the Tutankhamen exhibit, here's a recent article from New America Media:

[http://news.ncmonline.com/news/view\_article.html?article\_id=5f039af70f004fb547c22e0120eda b4b](http://news.ncmonline.com/news/view_article.html?article_id=5f039af70f004fb547c22e0120eda b4b)

King Tut Not Black Enough, Protesters Say

Philadelphia museum perpetuates myth that Egypt and its people are not African, according to activists

Black News Journal, News Feature, Marilyn Kai Jewett, Posted: Aug 28, 2007

Editor's note: Dr. Asa Hiliard, who died recently in Egypt, was a leading scholar of African history. One of the organizations he was intimately involved with, the Association for the Study of Classical African Civilizations, is involved in the protest. Marilyn Kai Jewett filed this story as a special report to Taylor News Services.

Black activists in Philadelphia held their third demonstration recently to express disapproval of the King Tutankhamun exhibit at the city's Franklin Institute. The protesters are primarily angered by the fact that images of King Tut promoting the show and those in the exhibit have been altered to lighten his skin and change his African features to those of an Arab or Caucasian.

Tutankhamun, who lived around 1353 B.C., was a minor king of the 18th Dynasty. Tut was the son of Pharaoh Akhenaten (and grandson of Amenhotep III), a Nubian. He took the throne at age eight and died at 19. What makes him significant is that his tomb was found intact.

The coalition has presented officials of the museum with a list of demands: 1) A public apology for not properly representing King Tut as an African and falsely representing Kemet (ancient Egypt) as non-African; 2) Develop and display a historically, factual and scientific exhibit of the African foundation and identity of dynastic Kemet; 3) Display the pioneering accomplishments of African Nile Valley Civilization; and 4) Document and display the research and accomplishments of the renowned African scholar Cheikh Anta Diop in scientifically proving that Kemet was an African civilization.

The museum agreed to sponsor a symposium with African American historians Charles Finch III, Molefi Asante, Maulana Karenga and Theophile Obenga (via videotape).

Well-known author Shaharazad Ali, representing AAFRL, had a different spin on the corrective measures. "I'm not in agreement with asking for an apology," said Ali who was there with her 7 year-old grandson. "We asked for a debate between white scientists and black scientists/historians to determine whether or not King Tut was black. Of course, I suggest this is all nonsense. People go to jail everyday, getting convicted based on DNA. It would not be difficult to determine not only who King Tut was, where he came from, what he died from and everything else."

The demonstration was organized by a coalition of organizations that include the African American Freedom & Reconstruction League (AAFRL), Association for the Study of Classical African Civilizations (ASCAC), Laying the Foundation (LTF), National Coalition of Blacks for Reparations in America (N'COBRA) and Avenging the Ancestors Coalition (ATAC).

For more information on King Tutankhamun, the 18th Dynasty and the protest, go to www.kingtutankhamen .blogspot. com.

---

Park yourself in front of a world of choices in alternative vehicles.

Visit the Yahoo! Auto Green Center.

| 23050|2007-08-31 19:58:56|clyde winters|Re: SOS for Nubian site|

Thanks Paul. The article was good. There are many important Meroitic text from this site which detail the Roman-Meroitic War which I could decipher.

I was able to get one stela from here but, I can not publish the full text without permission. It will be a shame if the material at the site is lost.

Clyde

--- Paul Kekai Manansala <pmanansala@sbcglobal.net>
wrote:

> Sending out an SOS A plea goes out to rescue Qasr > Ibrim, the sole in > situ archaeological site remaining among Nubian
> monuments. Nevine
> El-Aref
>

<<mailto:naref@ahram.org.eg>?subject=Heritage%20::%20Sending%20out%20an%20\
> SOS> reports
>

> <http://weekly.ahram.org.eg/2007/860/hr1.htm>
> <<http://weekly.ahram.org.eg/2007/860/hr1.htm>>
> Click to view caption
> <<http://weekly.ahram.org.eg/2007/860/hr1.htm>> A > panoramic view of
> Qasr Ibrim Island
> Isolated on a high hillock in the middle of Lake
> Nasser, the monumental > complex of Qasr Ibrim displays a collection of > archaeological remnants > of Egypt's various historical epochs that once > witnessed a unique > civilisation.
>
> Qasr Ibrim was once an eagle's nest over Lower Nubia
> but is now an > island, or at times a peninsula, on the east bank of > the artificial Lake
> Nasser which came into being after the building of > the Aswan High Dam in > the early 1960's. The site was intermittently > inhabited from as early as > the Middle Kingdom until the 1840's. It also > functioned as a military > stronghold and a destination of religious pilgrimage
> for various armies
> and religious denominations.
>
> Throughout its 3,000-year history, Qasr Ibrim has > lain on the border
> territory between Egypt and her southern neighbours.
> Control of the area > around Ibrim fluctuated with the changing political > situations to the > north and south. The fortress of Qasr Ibrim,
> situated high above the > Nile, provided a secure military base for whoever > was the controlling > power at the time from which to watch over traffic
> on the river, and to > oversee the nomads who roamed the Eastern Desert, an > ever-present threat > to the settled communities along the Nile. From the > earliest feature so > far discovered on the site -- a length of massive > fortification wall

- > from about 1000 BC through to the 16th century AD
- > Ottoman garrison which
- > occupied and repaired the fortress to guard their
- > southern frontier --
- > Qasr Ibrim's military importance has always been
- > paramount. Alongside
- > its military role, however, Qasr Ibrim also
- > functioned as a religious
- > centre early in its history, and a centre of
- > pilgrimage in both pagan
- > and Christian times. Pharaonic and Roman temples
- > have been discovered,
- > and even today the site is dominated by the shell of
- > a Christian
- > cathedral which dwarfs the surrounding remains.
- >
- > Since its construction during Pharaonic times as a
- > military garrison,
- > Qasr Ibrim, or PER-MIT as it was known during that
- > time, has played a
- > major political and military role, for almost 3,000
- > years in fact, in
- > the surveillance of Egypt's southern borders and in
- > preventing several
- > military attacks from the south. It also had an
- > economic importance as
- > it was one of Egypt's main trade centres.
- >
- > The Middle Kingdom fortress of King Senusert III is
- > the oldest monument
- > found on the island along with a number of New
- > Kingdom chapels of the
- > 18th dynasty kings Thutmose III, Amenhotep II and
- > Queen Hatshepsut. It
- > also houses a mud brick temple of the 25th dynasty
- > Nubian ruler Taharqa
- > and several residential houses of the same epoch.
- >
- > During the Graeco-Roman era, no less than six mud
- > brick temples
- > dedicated to Isis, Amun and other ancient Egyptian
- > deities were built
- > along with a small military garrison and dormitory
- > for soldiers. The
- > name of the island had also been changed to PREMIS.
- >

- > When Christianity took roots in Egypt, PHRIM, as the
- > Copts pronounced
- > it, became the seat of the Coptic Patriarchy where
- > an enormous cathedral
- > dedicated to the Virgin Mary was constructed during
- > the sixth century.
- > Taharqa Temple was also been transformed into a
- > Coptic church. When the
- > Ottomans invaded the island in the 16th century,
- > they changed the name
- > of the island into Ibrim, built a small mosque and
- > left some Bosnian
- > soldiers to protect their new territory. They
- > intermarried with the
- > Nubians and formed their own families. Down the ages
- > the island has been
- > transformed into a small town filled with temples, a
- > fortress, colossi,
- > houses, a mosque, cathedral and necropolis.
- >
- > In the 1960s when Egypt decided to build the High
- > Dam and called for the
- > salvage operation of Nubian monuments, all temples
- > were relocated to
- > another, safer location except the monuments of Qasr
- > Ibrim which was
- > built on top of an 80-metre tall rock formation
- > above the Nile's level,
- > thus preventing its inundation by the flow of Lake
- > Nasser after the
- > completion of the dam.
- >
- > Such remarkable preservation on site has recently
- > been threatened by the
- > high water levels of Lake Nasser associated with
- > construction in Toshka.
- >
- > Almost 60 per cent of the island has been inundated
- > and water leaks into
- > the temple most of the time. Water has also reached
- > the foundation of
- > the cathedral which has led to several cracks on its
- > walls. Blocks of
- > the podium located on the edge of the Nile have been
- > dismantled which
- > may lead to an eventual total collapse. The

- > fortification walls have
- > indeed collapsed, and mud-brick buildings near the
- > new water line have
- > fallen as well, either from the effect of direct
- > water or from
- > percolation. The most important of these are a 25th
- > Dynasty temple, from
- > which a wall painting has already collapsed and
- > another is now in danger
- > of disappearing.
- >
- > Percolation through dry deposits also threatens the
- > excellent organic
- > preservation of the site. Once exposed to water, the
- > organic matter
- > decays rapidly to a brown smelly slime from which
- > nothing can be
- > recovered.
- >
- > "The damages increase year after year which demands
- > the intervention of
- > UNESCO to rescue and protect the only vestige of
- > Nubian monuments that
- > still remain in situ," Mohamed El-Biali, head of
- > Aswan and Nubian
- > Monuments in the Supreme Council of Antiquities
- > (SCA), told Al-Ahram
- > Weekly. El-Biali said Egypt needs rapid and
- > immediate action similar to
- > that of the 1960s when UNESCO played a significant
- > role in leading the
- > international salvage campaign for Nubian monuments.
- >
- > Egypt renewed its appeal to UNESCO in 2000 and 2005.
- >
- > El-Biali suggests the establishment of a high-level
- > committee consisting
- > of restorers, researchers, archaeologists and
- > documentation experts in
- > order to document the site, restore its monuments,
- > excavate its sand and
- > protect it from present and future threats. El-Biali
- > also called for the
- > resumption of excavation works in the area
- > especially that led by the
- > British mission of the Egypt Exploration Society

- > (EES).
- >
- > EXCAVATIONS IN QASR IBRIM: Excavation at Qasr Ibrim
- > started in 1963 as
- > part of the UNESCO campaign to salvage the sites and
- > monuments which
- > would be lost after the construction of the High
- > Dam. Excavation has
- > continued, usually on a biennial basis, and there
- > remains

=== message truncated ===

---

Be a better Heartthrob. Get better relationship answers from someone who knows. Yahoo!
Answers - Check it out.

<http://answers.yahoo.com/dir/?link=list&sid=396545433>

| 23051|2007-08-31 20:13:22|Manu Ampim|Re: King Tut Not Black Enough, Protesters Say|
Greetings Fatima,

I fully agree with your comments. The denial of ancient Egypt as a black African civilization is pathological. I too agree with the four demands of the coalition. I advised that the coalition's demand #1 should include that the fake 2005 image of "King Tut" be removed from the exhibit altogether. I was informed that this suggestion will be added.

Advancing the work,

Manu Ampim

"Primary research is the greatest weapon against the distortion of African culture & history." - MA

---

I agree with their demands, I am not black but I think its time to reveal the truth and use the common sense.

I think some people, specially the ones that have been making movies about ancient Egypt in Hollywood scoffs at ancient Egyptians because they created this image of ancient Egyptians being blonde/brunette and blue eyed and it caused ignorance in people so they take it as a real fact instead of fiction because in the end that's what they want us to believe because in the end they are racist because their stereotype of being beautiful is someone white not black.

And now Arabs who occupied Egypt try to make us believe that ancient Egyptians were arabs and not blacks because they want to have all the credits about the building of the pyramids, monuments, etc. I am not against arabs I have some arab friends but I have to admit that they can have a big ego.

But that's other story what I try to say is that we need to study by ourselves the history and geography and if we use the common sense we could know that Egypt is in the African continent and in the pharaonic times the world was not globalized as today, now we can find a Japanese in Argentina, a Moroccan in United States, etc. because now we can travel easily but in the past it was not easy so if Egypt is in Africa obviously the people in Egypt was black!

I don't see something wrong with ancient Egyptians being black in the end they are more intelligent, clever, creatives than anyone of other race.

Sorry for my english, but it is not my primary language.

Fatima

---

The coalition has presented officials of the museum with a list of demands: 1) A public apology for not properly representing King Tut as an African and falsely representing Kemet (ancient Egypt) as non-African; 2) Develop and display a historically, factual and scientific exhibit of the African foundation and identity of dynastic Kemet; 3) Display the pioneering accomplishments of African Nile Valley Civilization; and 4) Document and display the research and accomplishments of the renowned African scholar Cheikh Anta Diop in scientifically proving that Kemet was an African civilization.

| 23052|2007-08-31 21:21:41|Manu Ampim|Re: SOS for Nubian site|

Greetings,

This is one of the most crucial sites and issues related to dam projects and the fate of classical African monuments. Qasr Ibrim is the only site in Nubia where the monuments remained in-situ after the building of the Aswan High Dam (1960-1970). There were 12 Nubian temples moved to higher ground above Lake Nasser (which was created by the Aswan Dam), and 5 other saved Nubian temples were arrogantly given away by the Egyptian government to the U.S., Germany, Holland, Spain, and Italy as so-called "goodwill ambassadors."

Qasr Ibrim and the other Nubian monuments threatened to be flooded with the rising waters of Lake Nasser drew the attention of the world community as there began a last minute salvage effort to save these monuments. This 11th hour salvage effort could save only some of the monuments, while other structures are submerged under the deep waters of Lake Nasser and are thus permanently lost to the world.

This issue is important because during my fieldwork in the Sudan this August 2007 I learned that the American and European archaeological salvage teams have presented the idea that their work is "comprehensive archaeology" in excavating the 2,500 ancient Sudanese sites. However, the reality is that there is not enough time to undertake serious "comprehensive" research at these sites before the Merowe Dam is completed and the area is flooded. The work of these teams is nothing more than surface "salvage archaeology," which is not designed to undertake thorough work at these numerous sites. Qasr Ibrim is a perfect example of the extensive time and effort that it takes to properly and thoroughly excavate a site, as teams have been excavating at this site since 1963 and counting!

It seems clear that the game of calling the current work near the Merowe Dam in Sudan "comprehensive" is to have us to falsely believe that the information and artifacts that are uncovered at these sites is all that remains. However, the reality is that when the dam is completed and the more than 100-mile long lake is created the world will lose an incalculable amount of artifacts and knowledge about the powerful kingdoms of Kush and Nubia. There is a major difference between superficial 11th hour "salvage archaeology" and thorough "comprehensive archaeology."

Stay tuned for my full Sudan field research report this week.

Advancing the work,

Manu Ampim

"Primary research is the greatest weapon against the distortion of African culture & history." - MA

---

Thanks Paul. The article was good. There are many important Meroitic text from this site which detail the Roman-Meroitic War which I could decipher.

I was able to get one stela from here but, I can not publish the full text without permission. It will be a shame if the material at the site is lost.

Clyde

---

--- Paul Kekai Manansala <pmanansala@...>
wrote:

> Sending out an SOS A plea goes out to rescue Qasr

> Ibrim, the sole in > situ
archaeological site remaining among Nubian
> monuments. Nevine
>
El-Aref

>
>
href="http://weekly.ahram.org.eg/2007/860/hr1.htm"><http://weekly.ahram.org.eg/2007/860/hr1.htm>
>
<http://weekly.ahram.org.eg/2007/860/\_hr1.htm>

>
Click to view caption

> <
href="http://weekly.ahram.org.eg/2007/860/_hr1.htm">http://weekly.ahram.org.eg/2007/860/\_hr1.htm> A

> panoramic view of
> Qasr Ibrim Island
> Isolated on a high hillock in the middle of Lake > Nasser, the monumental > complex of Qasr Ibrim displays a collection of > archaeological remnants
> of Egypt's various historical epochs that once > witnessed a unique
>
civilisation.
>
> Qasr Ibrim was once an eagle's nest over Lower Nubia
> but is now an > island, or at times a peninsula, on the east bank of > the artificial Lake > Nasser which came into being after the building of
> the Aswan High Dam in > the early 1960's. The site was intermittently > inhabited from as early as > the Middle Kingdom until the 1840's. It also > functioned as a military > stronghold and a destination of religious pilgrimage > for various armies
> and religious denominations.
>
> Throughout its 3,000-year history, Qasr Ibrim has
> lain on the border > territory between Egypt and her southern neighbours.

> Control of the area > around Ibrim fluctuated with the changing political > situations to the > north and south.
The fortress of Qasr Ibrim, > situated high above the > Nile, provided a secure military base for whoever > was the controlling
>
power at the time from which to watch over traffic > on the river, and
to > oversee the nomads who roamed the Eastern Desert, an
>
ever-present threat > to the settled communities along the Nile. From
the > earliest feature so > far discovered on the site -- a length of massive > fortification wall
> from about 1000 BC through to the 16th century AD
> Ottoman garrison which > occupied and repaired the fortress to guard their > southern frontier -- > Qasr Ibrim's military importance has always been > paramount. Alongside > its military role, however, Qasr Ibrim also > functioned as a religious > centre early in its history, and a centre of
>
pilgrimage in both pagan > and Christian times. Pharaonic and Roman temples
> have been discovered, > and even today the site is dominated by the shell of > a Christian > cathedral which dwarfs the surrounding remains.
>
> Since its construction during Pharaonic times as a > military garrison, > Qasr Ibrim, or PER-MIT as it was known during that > time, has played a > major political and military role, for almost 3,000

- > years in fact, in
- > the surveillance of Egypt's southern borders and in
- > preventing several
- > military attacks from the south. It also had an
- > economic importance as
- > it was one of Egypt's main trade centres.
- >
- >
- The Middle Kingdom fortress of King Senusert III is
- > the oldest monument
- > found on the island along with a number of New
- > Kingdom chapels of the
- > 18th dynasty kings Thutmose III, Amenhotep II and
- >
- Queen Hatshepsut. It
- > also houses a mud brick temple of the 25th dynasty
- > Nubian ruler Taharqa
- > and several residential houses of the same epoch.
- >
- > During the Graeco-Roman era, no less than six mud
- > brick temples
- > dedicated to Isis, Amun and other ancient Egyptian
- > deities were built
- > along with a small military garrison and dormitory
- > for soldiers. The
- > name of the island had also been changed to PREMIS.
- >
- > When Christianity took roots in Egypt, PHRIM, as the
- > Copts pronounced
- > it, became the seat of the Coptic Patriarchy where
- > an enormous cathedral
- > dedicated to the Virgin Mary was constructed during
- > the sixth century.
- > Taharqa Temple
- was also been transformed into a
- > Coptic church. When the
- >
- Ottomans invaded the island in the 16th century,
- > they changed the name
- > of the island into Ibrim, built a small mosque and
- > left some Bosnian > soldiers to protect their new territory. They

>
intermarried with the > Nubians and formed their own families. Down the ages
> the island has been > transformed into a small town filled with temples, a > fortress, colossi, > houses, a mosque, cathedral and necropolis.
>
> In the 1960s when Egypt decided to build the High
> Dam and called for the > salvage operation of Nubian monuments, all temples
> were relocated to > another, safer location except the monuments of Qasr > Ibrim which was > built on top of an 80-metre tall rock formation
> above the Nile's level, > thus preventing its inundation by the flow of Lake > Nasser after the
>
completion of the dam.
>
> Such remarkable preservation on site has recently
> been threatened by the > high water levels of Lake Nasser associated with > construction in Toshka.
>
> Almost 60 per cent of the island has been inundated > and water leaks into
> the temple most of the time. Water has also reached > the foundation
of
> the cathedral which has led to several cracks on its > walls.
Blocks of > the podium located on the edge of the Nile have been
>
dismantled which > may lead to an eventual total collapse. The
>
fortification walls have > indeed collapsed, and mud-brick buildings near
the

> new water line have > fallen as well, either from the effect of direct
> water or from > percolation. The most important of these are a 25th > Dynasty temple, from > which a wall painting has already collapsed and > another is now in danger
> of disappearing.
>
> Percolation through dry deposits also threatens
the > excellent organic > preservation of the site. Once exposed to water, the > organic matter
> decays rapidly to a brown smelly slime from which > nothing can be > recovered.
>
> "The
damages increase year after year which demands > the intervention
of > UNESCO to rescue and protect the only vestige of > Nubian
monuments that > still remain in situ," Mohamed El-Biali, head of
>
Aswan and Nubian
> Monuments in the Supreme Council of Antiquities
>
(SCA), told Al-Ahram
> Weekly. El-Biali said Egypt needs rapid and
>
immediate action similar to > that of the 1960s when UNESCO played a significant > role in leading the > international salvage campaign for Nubian monuments.
>
> Egypt renewed its appeal to UNESCO in 2000
and 2005.
>
> El-Biali suggests the establishment of a high-level
> committee consisting > of restorers, researchers, archaeologists and > documentation experts in > order to document

the site, restore its monuments, > excavate its sand and > protect it from present and future threats. El-Biali > also called for the
>
resumption of excavation works in the area > especially that led by
the > British mission of the Egypt Exploration Society
>
(EES).
>
> EXCAVATIONS IN QASR IBRIM: Excavation at Qasr Ibrim
> started in 1963 as > part of the UNESCO campaign to salvage the sites and > monuments which > would be lost after the construction of the High > Dam. Excavation has > continued, usually on a biennial basis, and there > remains

| 23053|2007-09-01 12:27:18|kungfuhustle|Re: SOS for Nubian site|
Dr. Winters

That is a powerful statement.

As someone extremely interested in reading these translations, I have to ask why is it you can't publish a translation of a Meroitic text?

Who needs to give you permission to share the translation?

Does someone own it, or is it the African government?

Keep up the great work everyone.

meninarmarmer

On Fri, 2007-08-31 at 19:58 -0700, clyde winters wrote:

> Thanks Paul. The article was good. There are many > important Meroitic text from this site which detail
> the Roman-Meroitic War which I could decipher.
>
> I was able to get one stela from here but, I can not > publish the full text without permission. It will be a > shame if the material at the site is lost.
>
> Clyde
>
> --- Paul Kekai Manansala <pmanansala@sbcglobal.net>
> wrote:

>
>> Sending out an SOS A plea goes out to rescue Qasr >> Ibrim, the sole in >> situ archaeological site remaining among Nubian
>> monuments. Nevine
>> El-Aref
>>
>> <<mailto:naref@ahram.org.eg>?subject=Heritage%20::%20Sending%20out%20an% >> 20\
>> SOS> reports
>>
>> <http://weekly.ahram.org.eg/2007/860/hr1.htm>
>> <http://weekly.ahram.org.eg/2007/860/\_hr1.htm>
>> Click to view caption >> <http://weekly.ahram.org.eg/2007/860/\_hr1.htm> A >> panoramic view of
>> Qasr Ibrim Island
>> Isolated on a high hillock in the middle of Lake
>> Nasser, the monumental >> complex of Qasr Ibrim displays a collection of >> archaeological remnants
>> of Egypt's various historical epochs that once
>> witnessed a unique >> civilisation.
>>
>> Qasr Ibrim was once an eagle's nest over Lower Nubia
>> but is now an >> island, or at times a peninsula, on the east bank of >> the artificial Lake
>> Nasser which came into being after the building of
>> the Aswan High Dam in >> the early 1960's. The site was intermittently >> inhabited from as early as >> the Middle Kingdom until the 1840's. It also >> functioned as a military >> stronghold and a destination of religious pilgrimage
>> for various armies
>> and religious denominations.
>>
>> Throughout its 3,000-year history, Qasr Ibrim has
>> lain on the border
>> territory between Egypt and her southern neighbours.
>> Control of the area
>> around Ibrim fluctuated with the changing political >> situations to the >> north and south. The fortress of Qasr Ibrim,

> > situated high above the > > Nile, provided a secure military base for whoever
> > was the controlling > > power at the time from which to watch over traffic
> > on the river, and to > > oversee the nomads who roamed the Eastern Desert, an > > ever-present threat
> > to the settled communities along the Nile. From the > > earliest feature so > > far discovered on the site -- a length of massive > > fortification wall
> > from about 1000 BC through to the 16th century AD
> > Ottoman garrison which > > occupied and repaired the fortress to guard their
> > southern frontier -- > > Qasr Ibrim's military importance has always been > > paramount. Alongside > > its military role, however, Qasr Ibrim also > > functioned as a religious > > centre early in its history, and a centre of > > pilgrimage in both pagan
> > and Christian times. Pharaonic and Roman temples
> > have been discovered,
> > and even today the site is dominated by the shell of
> > a Christian
> > cathedral which dwarfs the surrounding remains.
> >
> > Since its construction during Pharaonic times as a
> > military garrison,
> > Qasr Ibrim, or PER-MIT as it was known during that > > time, has played a > > major political and military role, for almost 3,000
> > years in fact, in
> > the surveillance of Egypt's southern borders and in > > preventing several > > military attacks from the south. It also had an > > economic importance as > > it was one of Egypt's main trade centres.
> >
> > The Middle Kingdom fortress of King Senusert III is
> > the oldest monument
> > found on the island along with a number of New > > Kingdom chapels of the > > 18th dynasty kings Thutmose III, Amenhotep II and > > Queen Hatshepsut. It
> > also houses a mud brick temple of the 25th dynasty

> > Nubian ruler Taharqa
> > and several residential houses of the same epoch.
> >
> > During the Graeco-Roman era, no less than six mud
> > brick temples
> > dedicated to Isis, Amun and other ancient Egyptian
> > deities were built
> > along with a small military garrison and dormitory
> > for soldiers. The > > name of the island had also been changed to PREMIS.
> >
> > When Christianity took roots in Egypt, PHRIM, as the > > Copts pronounced
> > it, became the seat of the Coptic Patriarchy where
> > an enormous cathedral
> > dedicated to the Virgin Mary was constructed during
> > the sixth century.
> > Taharqa Temple was also been transformed into a > > Coptic church. When the > > Ottomans invaded the island in the 16th century,
> > they changed the name
> > of the island into Ibrim, built a small mosque and > > left some Bosnian > > soldiers to protect their new territory. They > > intermarried with the > > Nubians and formed their own families. Down the ages
> > the island has been > > transformed into a small town filled with temples, a
> > fortress, colossi,
> > houses, a mosque, cathedral and necropolis.
> >
> > In the 1960s when Egypt decided to build the High > > Dam and called for the > > salvage operation of Nubian monuments, all temples
> > were relocated to > > another, safer location except the monuments of Qasr > > Ibrim which was > > built on top of an 80-metre tall rock formation
> > above the Nile's level,
> > thus preventing its inundation by the flow of Lake
> > Nasser after the > > completion of the dam.
> >
> > Such remarkable preservation on site has recently > > been threatened by the > > high water levels of Lake Nasser associated with > > construction in Toshka.

> >
> > Almost 60 per cent of the island has been inundated
> > and water leaks into
> > the temple most of the time. Water has also reached > > the foundation of > > the cathedral which has led to several cracks on its > > walls. Blocks of > > the podium located on the edge of the Nile have been > > dismantled which > > may lead to an eventual total collapse. The > > fortification walls have > > indeed collapsed, and mud-brick buildings near the > > new water line have > > fallen as well, either from the effect of direct
> > water or from > > percolation. The most important of these are a 25th > > Dynasty temple, from > > which a wall painting has already collapsed and > > another is now in danger
> > of disappearing.
> >
> > Percolation through dry deposits also threatens the
> > excellent organic > > preservation of the site. Once exposed to water, the > > organic matter
> > decays rapidly to a brown smelly slime from which > > nothing can be > > recovered.
> >
> > "The damages increase year after year which demands
> > the intervention of > > UNESCO to rescue and protect the only vestige of > > Nubian monuments that > > still remain in situ," Mohamed El-Biali, head of > > Aswan and Nubian
> > Monuments in the Supreme Council of Antiquities
> > (SCA), told Al-Ahram
> > Weekly. El-Biali said Egypt needs rapid and > > immediate action similar to > > that of the 1960s when UNESCO played a significant > > role in leading the > > international salvage campaign for Nubian monuments.
> >
> > Egypt renewed its appeal to UNESCO in 2000 and 2005.
> >

> > El-Biali suggests the establishment of a high-level
> > committee consisting > > of restorers, researchers, archaeologists and > > documentation experts in > > order to document the site, restore its monuments,
> > excavate its sand and > > protect it from present and future threats. El-Biali
> > also called for the > > resumption of excavation works in the area
> > especially that led by the > > British mission of the Egypt Exploration Society
> > (EES).
> >
> > EXCAVATIONS IN QASR IBRIM: Excavation at Qasr Ibrim
> > started in 1963 as > > part of the UNESCO campaign to salvage the sites and > > monuments which > > would be lost after the construction of the High > > Dam. Excavation has > > continued, usually on a biennial basis, and there > > remains

> ==== message truncated ====

>

>

---

> Be a better Heartthrob. Get better relationship answers from someone > who knows. Yahoo! Answers - Check it out.

> <http://answers.yahoo.com/dir/?link=list&sid=396545433>

>

>

>

>

| 23054|2007-09-01 13:11:09|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: SOS for Nubian site|
Thanks Clyde. I came across some nice photos while browsing on this subject:

Bishop Maranos of Faras (near the Second Cataract) from 11th century.

Fragment of Revelation in Old Nubian language written in Coptic script from Qasr Ibrim.

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, clyde winters wrote:

>

> Thanks Paul. The article was good. There are many > important Meroitic text from this site which detail
> the Roman-Meroitic War which I could decipher.

>

> I was able to get one stela from here but, I can not > publish the full text without permission. It will be a > shame if the material at the site is lost.

>

> Clyde

>

>

> --- Paul Kekai Manansala pmanansala@...

> wrote:

>

> > Sending out an SOS A plea goes out to rescue Qasr > > Ibrim, the sole in > > situ archaeological site remaining among Nubian
> > monuments. Nevine
> > El-Aref

> >

>

> > SOS> reports

> >

> > <http://weekly.ahram.org.eg/2007/860/hr1.htm>

> >

> > Click to view caption

> > A

> > panoramic view of

> > Qasr Ibrim Island

> > Isolated on a high hillock in the middle of Lake

> > Nasser, the monumental

> > complex of Qasr Ibrim displays a collection of

> > archaeological remnants

> > of Egypt's various historical epochs that once

> > witnessed a unique

> > civilisation.

> >

> > Qasr Ibrim was once an eagle's nest over Lower Nubia

> > but is now an

> > island, or at times a peninsula, on the east bank of

> > the artificial Lake

> > Nasser which came into being after the building of
> > the Aswan High Dam in > > the early 1960's. The site was intermittently > > inhabited from as early as > > the Middle Kingdom until the 1840's. It also > > functioned as a military > > stronghold and a destination of religious pilgrimage
> > for various armies
> > and religious denominations.
> >
> > Throughout its 3,000-year history, Qasr Ibrim has
> > lain on the border
> > territory between Egypt and her southern neighbours.
> > Control of the area
> > around Ibrim fluctuated with the changing political > > situations to the > > north and south. The fortress of Qasr Ibrim,
> > situated high above the > > Nile, provided a secure military base for whoever
> > was the controlling > > power at the time from which to watch over traffic
> > on the river, and to > > oversee the nomads who roamed the Eastern Desert, an > > ever-present threat
> > to the settled communities along the Nile. From the > > earliest feature so > > far discovered on the site -- a length of massive > > fortification wall
> > from about 1000 BC through to the 16th century AD
> > Ottoman garrison which > > occupied and repaired the fortress to guard their
> > southern frontier -- > > Qasr Ibrim's military importance has always been > > paramount. Alongside > > its military role, however, Qasr Ibrim also > > functioned as a religious > > centre early in its history, and a centre of > > pilgrimage in both pagan
> > and Christian times. Pharaonic and Roman temples
> > have been discovered,
> > and even today the site is dominated by the shell of
> > a Christian
> > cathedral which dwarfs the surrounding remains.
> >
> > Since its construction during Pharaonic times as a
> > military garrison,

> > Qasr Ibrim, or PER-MIT as it was known during that > > time, has played a > > major political and military role, for almost 3,000
> > years in fact, in
> > the surveillance of Egypt's southern borders and in > > preventing several > > military attacks from the south. It also had an > > economic importance as > > it was one of Egypt's main trade centres.
> >
> > The Middle Kingdom fortress of King Senusert III is
> > the oldest monument
> > found on the island along with a number of New > > Kingdom chapels of the > > 18th dynasty kings Thutmose III, Amenhotep II and > > Queen Hatshepsut. It
> > also houses a mud brick temple of the 25th dynasty
> > Nubian ruler Taharqa
> > and several residential houses of the same epoch.
> >
> > During the Graeco-Roman era, no less than six mud
> > brick temples
> > dedicated to Isis, Amun and other ancient Egyptian
> > deities were built
> > along with a small military garrison and dormitory
> > for soldiers. The > > name of the island had also been changed to PREMIS.
> >
> > When Christianity took roots in Egypt, PHRIM, as the > > Copts pronounced
> > it, became the seat of the Coptic Patriarchy where
> > an enormous cathedral
> > dedicated to the Virgin Mary was constructed during
> > the sixth century.
> > Taharqa Temple was also been transformed into a > > Coptic church. When the > > Ottomans invaded the island in the 16th century,
> > they changed the name
> > of the island into Ibrim, built a small mosque and > > left some Bosnian > > soldiers to protect their new territory. They > > intermarried with the > > Nubians and formed their own families. Down the ages
> > the island has been > > transformed into a small town filled with temples, a
> > fortress, colossi,

> > houses, a mosque, cathedral and necropolis.
> >
> > In the 1960s when Egypt decided to build the High > > Dam and called for the > > salvage operation of Nubian monuments, all temples
> > were relocated to > > another, safer location except the monuments of Qasr > > Ibrim which was > > built on top of an 80-metre tall rock formation
> > above the Nile's level,
> > thus preventing its inundation by the flow of Lake
> > Nasser after the > > completion of the dam.
> >
> > Such remarkable preservation on site has recently > > been threatened by the > > high water levels of Lake Nasser associated with > > construction in Toshka.
> >
> > Almost 60 per cent of the island has been inundated
> > and water leaks into
> > the temple most of the time. Water has also reached > > the foundation of > > the cathedral which has led to several cracks on its > > walls. Blocks of > > the podium located on the edge of the Nile have been > > dismantled which > > may lead to an eventual total collapse. The > > fortification walls have > > indeed collapsed, and mud-brick buildings near the > > new water line have > > fallen as well, either from the effect of direct
> > water or from > > percolation. The most important of these are a 25th > > Dynasty temple, from > > which a wall painting has already collapsed and > > another is now in danger
> > of disappearing.
> >
> > Percolation through dry deposits also threatens the > > excellent organic > > preservation of the site. Once exposed to water, the > > organic matter
> > decays rapidly to a brown smelly slime from which > > nothing can be > > recovered.

> >
> > "The damages increase year after year which demands
> > the intervention of > > UNESCO to rescue and protect the only vestige of > > Nubian monuments that > > still remain in situ," Mohamed El-Biali, head of > > Aswan and Nubian
> > Monuments in the Supreme Council of Antiquities
> > (SCA), told Al-Ahram
> > Weekly. El-Biali said Egypt needs rapid and > > immediate action similar to > > that of the 1960s when UNESCO played a significant > > role in leading the > > international salvage campaign for Nubian monuments.
> >
> > Egypt renewed its appeal to UNESCO in 2000 and 2005.
> >
> > El-Biali suggests the establishment of a high-level
> > committee consisting > > of restorers, researchers, archaeologists and > > documentation experts in > > order to document the site, restore its monuments,
> > excavate its sand and > > protect it from present and future threats. El-Biali
> > also called for the > > resumption of excavation works in the area
> > especially that led by the > > British mission of the Egypt Exploration Society
> > (EES).
> >
> > EXCAVATIONS IN QASR IBRIM: Excavation at Qasr Ibrim
> > started in 1963 as > > part of the UNESCO campaign to salvage the sites and > > monuments which > > would be lost after the construction of the High > > Dam. Excavation has > > continued, usually on a biennial basis, and there > > remains
> === message truncated ===
>
>
>
>
>
>

---

> Be a better Heartthrob. Get better relationship answers from someone who knows. Yahoo! Answers - Check it out.

> <http://answers.yahoo.com/dir/?link=list&sid=396545433>

>

| 23055|2007-09-01 18:40:33|clyde winters|Re: SOS for Nubian site|

Hi

They are "owned/protected" by Museums and Universities in Britain. Since they "protect these documents you have to get their permission to publish translations of the material. I can publish parts of the text, but not the entire text.

Clyde

--- kungfuhustle <shalomic@nc.rr.com> wrote:

> Dr. Winters

>

> That is a powerful statement.

> As someone extremely interested in reading these translations, I have to > ask why is it you can't publish a translation of a Meroitic text?

> Who needs to give you permission to share the translation?

> Does someone own it, or is it the African government?

>

> Keep up the great work everyone.

>

> meninarmer

> On Fri, 2007-08-31 at 19:58 -0700, clyde winters wrote:

>> Thanks Paul. The article was good. There are many important Meroitic text from this site which detail

>> the Roman-Meroitic War which I could decipher.

>>

>> I was able to get one stela from here but, I can not >> publish the full text without permission. It will be a >> shame if the material at the site is lost.

>>

>> Clyde

>>

> > --- Paul Kekai Manansala
> <pmanansala@sbcglobal.net>
> > wrote:
> >
> > > Sending out an SOS A plea goes out to rescue
> > Qasr
> > > Ibrim, the sole in > > > situ archaeological site remaining among Nubian
> > > monuments. Nevine
> > > El-Aref
> > >
> >
>

<<mailto:naref@ahram.org.eg?subject=Heritage%20::%20Sending%20out%20an%20SOS>> reports
> > >
> > > <http://weekly.ahram.org.eg/2007/860/hr1.htm>
> > > <<http://weekly.ahram.org.eg/2007/860/hr1.htm>>
> > > Click to view caption
> > > <<http://weekly.ahram.org.eg/2007/860/hr1.htm>> A > > > panoramic view of
> > > Qasr Ibrim Island
> > > Isolated on a high hillock in the middle of Lake
> > > Nasser, the monumental > > > complex of Qasr Ibrim displays a collection of > > > archaeological remnants
> > > of Egypt's various historical epochs that once
> > > witnessed a unique > > > civilisation.
> > >
> > > Qasr Ibrim was once an eagle's nest over Lower > > Nubia
> > > but is now an > > > island, or at times a peninsula, on the east > > bank of
> > > the artificial Lake > > > Nasser which came into being after the building
> > of
> > > the Aswan High Dam in > > > the early 1960's. The site was intermittently > > > inhabited from as early as > > > the Middle Kingdom until the 1840's. It also > > > functioned as a military > > > stronghold and a destination of religious > pilgrimage

>>> for various armies
>>> and religious denominations.
>>>
>>> Throughout its 3,000-year history, Qasr Ibrim > has >>> lain on the border >>> territory between Egypt and her southern > neighbours.
>>> Control of the area >>> around Ibrim fluctuated with the changing > political >>> situations to the >>> north and south. The fortress of Qasr Ibrim,
>>> situated high above the >>> Nile, provided a secure military base for > whoever >>> was the controlling >>> power at the time from which to watch over > traffic
>>> on the river, and to >>> oversee the nomads who roamed the Eastern > Desert, an >>> ever-present threat >>> to the settled communities along the Nile. From
> the >>> earliest feature so >>> far discovered on the site -- a length of > massive >>> fortification wall
>>> from about 1000 BC through to the 16th century > AD
>>> Ottoman garrison which >>> occupied and repaired the fortress to guard
> their
>>> southern frontier -- >>> Qasr Ibrim's military importance has always been >>> paramount. Alongside >>> its military role, however, Qasr Ibrim also >>> functioned as a religious >>> centre early in its history, and a centre of >>> pilgrimage in both pagan
>>> and Christian times. Pharaonic and Roman temples
>>> have been discovered, >>> and even today the site is dominated by the > shell of

>>> a Christian
>>> cathedral which dwarfs the surrounding remains.
>>>
>>> Since its construction during Pharaonic times as
> a
>>> military garrison, >>> Qasr Ibrim, or PER-MIT as it was known during
> that
>>> time, has played a >>> major political and military role, for almost > 3,000
>>> years in fact, in >>> the surveillance of Egypt's southern borders and
> in >>> preventing several >>> military attacks from the south. It also had an >>> economic importance as >>> it was one of Egypt's main trade centres.
>>>
>>> The Middle Kingdom fortress of King Senusert III
> is
>>> the oldest monument
>>> found on the island along with a number of New >>> Kingdom chapels of the >>> 18th dynasty kings Thutmose III, Amenhotep II
> and >>> Queen Hatshepsut. It >>> also houses a mud brick temple of the 25th > dynasty
>>> Nubian ruler Taharqa
>>> and several residential houses of the same > epoch.
>>>
>>> During the Graeco-Roman era, no less than six > mud
>>> brick temples >>> dedicated to Isis, Amun and other ancient > Egyptian
>>> deities were built >>> along with a small military garrison and > dormitory
>>> for soldiers. The >>> name of the island had also been changed to > PREMIS.
>>>
>>> When Christianity took roots in Egypt, PHRIM, as

> the >>> Copts pronounced >>> it, became the seat of the Coptic Patriarchy
> where
>>> an enormous cathedral >>> dedicated to the Virgin Mary was constructed > during
>>> the sixth century.
>>> Taharqa Temple was also been transformed into a >>> Coptic church. When the >>> Ottomans invaded the island in the 16th century,
>>> they changed the name >>> of the island into Ibrim, built a small mosque
> and
>>> left some Bosnian >>> soldiers to protect their new territory. They >>> intermarried with the >>> Nubians and formed their own families. Down the > ages
>>> the island has been >>> transformed into a small town filled with > temples, a >>> fortress, colossi,
>>> houses, a mosque, cathedral and necropolis.
>>>
>>> In the 1960s when Egypt decided to build the > High
>>> Dam and called for the >>> salvage operation of Nubian monuments, all > temples
>>> were relocated to >>> another, safer location except the monuments of > Qasr
>>> Ibrim which was >>> built on top of an 80-metre tall rock formation
>

=== message truncated ===

---

Park yourself in front of a world of choices in alternative vehicles. Visit the Yahoo! Auto Green Center.

http://autos.yahoo.com/green\_center/

| 23056|2007-09-02 21:17:25|Paul Kekai Manansala|Germans look into building their own Great Pyramid|

A group of German entrepreneurs have received $123,000 in state funding to assess the feasibility of building the world's largest pyramid.

The entrepreneurs want to build a 1,600-foot-tall Great Pyramid near the east German town of Dessau, The Sunday Telegraph reported.

The pyramid, like those of ancient Egypt, would be used to house the bodies of the dead. However, instead of holding only one pharaoh and a handful of others, this pyramid would hold millions of people, the British newspaper said.

Jens Thiel, one of the masterminds behind the project, said a major priority would be to ensure space in the pyramid would be affordable to all.

Our current estimates are that a burial space in a concrete block will cost up to ($955), depending on the size, he said. Outlasting physical existence was reserved for the select few in Egypt, but this pyramid will be open to everyone. No one should be denied a place just because they can't afford it.

Copyright 2007 by United Press International

<http://social.moldova.org/stiri/eng/70666/>

| 23057|2007-09-03 10:18:37|Manu Ampim|[Ta-Seti] Re: Germans look into building their own Great Pyramid|

Greetings,

It is interesting that the modern Germans are in awe and thus want to copy African architectural designs almost 5,000 after this design was originated.

The article contains two errors. First, there is no evidence that the Great Pyramid housed any dead bodies of kings or anyone else.

Second, the article implies in the last paragraph that burial in Kemet was reserved only for people who could afford it, when the fact is that *everyone* in Kemet was buried. The amount of wealth and resources one had in Kemet determined if the deceased would be mummified, the size of the tomb, the number of funerary statues carved, and the amount of burial goods placed in the tomb, etc. but not whether someone could be buried. Africans in Kemet always buried their ancestors, unlike the early Germans who were nomads and thus they cremated their ancestors.

Advancing the work,
Manu Ampim

---

Germans look into building their own Great Pyramid

Posted by: "Paul Kekai Manansala"

Sun Sep2,2007 9:17pm (PST)

A group of German entrepreneurs have received $123,000 in state funding to assess the feasibility of building the world's largest pyramid.

The entrepreneurs want to build a 1,600-foot-tall Great Pyramid near the east German town of Dessau, The Sunday Telegraph reported.

The pyramid, like those of ancient Egypt, would be used to house the bodies of the dead. However, instead of holding only one pharaoh and a handful of others, this pyramid would hold millions of people, the British newspaper said.

Jens Thiel, one of the masterminds behind the project, said a major priority would be to ensure space in the pyramid would be affordable to all.

Our current estimates are that a burial space in a concrete block will cost up to ($955), depending on the size, he said. Outlasting physical existence was reserved for the select few in Egypt, but this pyramid will be open to everyone. No one should be denied a place just because they can't afford it.

Copyright 2007 by United Press International

"primary research is the greatest weapon against the distortion of African culture & history." - MA

"primary research is the greatest weapon against the distortion of African culture & history." -

| 23058|2007-09-03 19:15:07|jungle_man3003|Northern Egyptians overrepresented in uncovered portraiture?|

Several weeks ago, I was surveying various Ancient Egyptian statues and busts, and it struck me that most of these artifacts, particularly those from the Old to Middle Kingdoms, came from northern tombs like Saqqara, Men-Nefer or Giza. Indeed, most of the archaeological sites uncovered so far, except for the Valley of the Kings, seem to be close to the Delta ( <http://www.ancient-egypt.org/> ). Does that mean that collections of portraiture overrepresent northern Egyptians (with the "coastal North African" phenotype)? And why hasn't there been more archaeological work done in Upper Egypt?

| 23059|2007-09-04 06:34:43|Paul Kekai Manansala|Co-introgression of Y-chromosome haplogroups and the sickle cell ac|

Eur J Hum Genet. 2007 Aug 15;

Co-introgression of Y-chromosome haplogroups and the sickle cell gene across Africa's Sahel.

Bereir RE, Hassan HY, Salih NA, Underhill PA, Cavalli-Sforza LL, Hussain AA, Kwiatkowski D, Ibrahim ME.

<sup>1</sup>Institute of Endemic Diseases, Medical Campus, University of Khartoum, Khartoum, Sudan.

The Sahel that extends from the Atlantic Ocean to the Ethiopian highland is a historical reservoir of Africa's cultures and grandest populations and a known arena of ancient and recent migrations. We are interested in the issue whether such migrations were also carriers of genetic traits and whether this introgression could be associated with population genetic markers. Based on analysis of Y-chromosome haplogroups, we present evidence that the sickle gene, one of the major protective polymorphisms known in malaria, has in fact found its way only recently to the gene pool of the populations in eastern Sahel. We discuss the possible dynamics of the process and give estimates of the age of the introduction of the S allele into eastern Sahel. European Journal of Human Genetics advance online publication, 15 August 2007; doi:10.1038/sj.ejhg.5201892.

| 23060|2007-09-04 12:25:34|Alex van Deelen|Mom's Genes or Dad's? Map Can Tell (Washington Post)|

http://www.washingtonpost.com/wp-dyn/content/article/2007/09/03/AR2007090301106\_2.html?wpisrc=newsletter&wpisrc=newsletter&wpisrc=newsletter

Mom's Genes or Dad's? Map Can Tell.
One Man's DNA Shows We're Less Alike Than We Thought

By Rick Weiss
Washington Post Staff Writer
Tuesday, September 4, 2007; Page A01

Scientists have for the first time determined the order of virtually every letter of DNA code in an individual, offering an unprecedented readout of the separate genetic contributions made by that person's mother and father.

By providing a detailed look at maternal and paternal DNA strands, rather than the blended composite that was yielded by the 2001 Human Genome Project, the work offers the clearest snapshot yet of just how different those two contributions can be. Assuming the newly decoded sequence is typical, as scientists presume it is, there are five times as many differences between individuals' DNA as was previously thought.

In analyzing his DNA, scientist J. Craig Venter found out that he lacks one parental copy of the gstm1 gene, which neutralizes toxins and carcinogens. (Photo By Evan Hurd)

Of more practical import, the ability to create such a detailed genetic profile with relative ease suggests that it may not be long before people of ordinary means will be able to have their complete DNA codes spelled out, scientists said. That could tell a lot about a person's health risks, because such a profile would include not only the few genes that significantly increase the likelihood of getting certain diseases but also the many "lesser" genes that pose modest risks individually but that together have the bulk of impact on health.

For better or worse, the advance also stands to bring science to the pastime of guessing which parent deserves blame or credit for passing along certain traits.

"This is the ultimate form of genealogy. You'll have incredible information about yourself," said Stephen Scherer of the Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto, who was part of the multimillion-dollar project described in today's issue of the journal PLoS Biology. "I wouldn't be surprised if Internet-based browsers pop up before long that allow you to compare your genome to others."

The genetic sequence that was unveiled in all its naked detail belongs to J. Craig Venter, the Maryland scientist who led the project at the J. Craig Venter Institute in Rockville. It carries significantly more information than the two previously sequenced human genomes, released with great fanfare six years ago.

Those sequences -- one assembled by Venter and co-workers at Celera Genomics and the other by federally funded scientists -- were composites of several people. And although they were referred to as complete, they were in fact half-genomes -- or "haploid" -- containing a mom-and-pop mosaic of the 3 billion DNA letters found on just one set of the 23 chromosomes paired in every cell.

Not emphasized in 2001 was the fact that people have in their cells two versions of each of those 23 chromosomes, one from each parent -- a "diploid" genome. And increasingly scientists are finding that the difference between being healthy and being sick has a lot to do with how those genomes interact.

From Dad, a person may inherit a version of a gene that predisposes her to a disease, but from Mom she may inherit a protective version -- or an entirely different gene elsewhere on the genome that counteracts Dad's contribution.

"I might want to know: Do I have an additive risk from the genomes from both my parents, or did I get some helpful ones from her that counteract the ones from him?" Venter said.

Sorting out those details has been daunting.

"It's very easy to start mixing up the readouts from each parent because they are so similar," said Samuel Levy, who led the research with Venter. But new sequencing technologies and computational methods allow scientists to chop a person's DNA into pieces and reassemble the maternal and paternal segments independently.

Challenges remain. Although Venter's method produces a 6 billion-letter diploid genome, it does not produce complete paternal and maternal genomes of 3 billion letters each. But it does produce chunks of DNA that are hundreds of thousands of letters long, all from one parent or the other, allowing the most meaningful maternal-paternal comparisons yet. Previous such snippets topped out at about 13,000 letters, too few to be medically informative.

And unlike the Human Genome Project, whose focus on individual letters made it blind to many larger mutations or variations involving hundreds or thousands of letters, the newer methods that Venter used capture all sizes.

In analyzing his DNA, scientist J. Craig Venter found out that he lacks one parental copy of the gstm1 gene, which neutralizes toxins and carcinogens. (Photo By Evan Hurd)

The new work showed, for example, that Venter lacks one parental copy of the gstm1 gene, known to have a role in neutralizing toxins and carcinogens -- perhaps helping to explain why he has had asthma and skin cancer, Levy said.

All told, 44 percent of the genes Venter received from one parent were at least a little different from those he inherited from his other parent, and a third of those variations had never been seen in studies of those genes in other people. Although most of the differences may have no discernible health effect, the finding indicates that humans are more genetically diverse than was thought.

Specifically, older analyses suggested that humans' genetic codes are, on average, 99.9 percent identical (or 0.1 percent different), while the new estimate comes in at 99.5 percent (or 0.5 percent different). The true number may be as low as 99 percent, Venter said.

That means each person is the product of more genetic diversity -- and more biological negotiation and compromise during fetal development -- than was believed.

Venter is not alone in his effort to create personalized sequences, and at least one competitor offered a more tempered view of the work.

"I would call this a small, quantitative milestone," said George Church, a Harvard University professor of genetics who is also racing to produce cheap genomes.

He said Venter's sequence, like previous ones, still has many gaps, was cumbersome to make and, at a cost of tens of millions of dollars, was still way too expensive.

He also noted that recent research by Scherer had already suggested that human genetic variability is probably at least 0.3 percent, not the 0.1 percent floated in 2001, which Venter uses for comparison. So Venter's new finding of 0.5 percent amounts to something less than a sea change, Church said.

But Church sings with Venter's choir on the vast benefits that could come from inexpensive personalized genome sequencing.

Cost trends are encouraging. The first 3 billion-letter genome sequences took more than a decade to complete and cost billions of dollars. During Venter's latest project, costs dropped precipitously, and today, several scientists said, an entire diploid genome could probably be done for about $100,000. Some predict that a $1,000 genome will be available within five years.

Venter and others hope that at that point many people will get sequenced and, as Venter has already done with his own, will post their genomes on public databases along with their medical information and family history. That will allow computers to start drawing connections between gene patterns and diseases.

Given the risks involved in such personal revelations, including job discrimination and health insurance woes, no one knows how many people will take that route.

"It's going to be a very interesting social experiment to see the way people go," said Scherer, who has predicted that before long, parents of newborns will leave the hospital with a six-gigabyte computer file of their screaming bundle's genome loaded on their BlackBerrys. He said that people's fascination with technology -- and with themselves -- will prevail.

Among the ethics questions raised by the prospect of people posting their genomes is whether they have an obligation to kin who may not want their familial patterns put on display.

Asked if he had consulted his living parent, his three siblings or his 30-year-old son before posting his genome, Venter said: "I've not asked any of their permission, but we've discussed it all extensively. Their main response is not 'Oh, my God.' It's 'Can I get my genome done, too?' "

| 23061|2007-09-04 20:35:38|Paul Kekai Manansala|Christianity vs. the old gods of Nigeria|
By DULUE MBACHU, Associated Press Writer Tue Sep 4, 1:19 PM ET

ACHINA, Nigeria - Born to a family of traditional priests, Ibe Nwigwe converted to Christianity as a boy. Under the sway of born-again fervor as a man, he gathered the paraphernalia of ancestral worship ? a centuries-old stool, a metal staff with a wooden handle and the carved figure of a god ? and burned them as his pastor watched.

"I had experienced a series of misfortunes and my pastor told me it was because I had not completely broken the covenant with my ancestral idols," the 52-year-old Nwigwe said of the bonfire three years ago. "Now that I have done that, I hope I will be truly liberated."

Generations ago, European colonists and Christian missionaries looted Africa's ancient treasures. Now, Pentecostal Christian evangelists ? most of them Africans ? are helping wipe out remaining traces of how Africans once worked, played and prayed.

As poverty deepened in Nigeria from the mid-1980s, Pentecostal Christian church membership surged. The new faithful found comfort in preachers like evangelist Uma Ukpai who promised material success was next to godliness. He has boasted of overseeing the destruction of more than 100 shrines in one district in December 2005 alone.

Achina is typical of towns and villages in the ethnic Igbo-dominated Christian belt of southeastern Nigeria where this new Christian fundamentalism is evident. The old gods are being linked to the devil, and preachers are urging not only their rejection, but their destruction.

The Ezeokolo, the main shrine of Achina ? a community of mainly farmers and traders in Nigeria's rain forest belt ? has been repeatedly looted of its carved god figures. While no one has been caught, suspects range from people acting on Christian impulses to treasure thieves.

Recently, a village civic association volunteered to build a house to keep burglars away from a giant wooden gong decorated with carved male, female and snake figures. The gong in the market square is reputed to be more than 400 years old, and in decades past was sounded in times of emergency.

"We feared it may be stolen or destroyed like so many of our traditional cultural symbols," said Chuma Ezenwa, a Lagos-based lawyer.

But the move to protect a communal symbol has not changed the minds of others.

Ikechukwu Nzekwe, a 48-year-old farmer who belongs to a traditional masquerade cult, rues the action of his younger brother, a born-again Christian who destroyed the family's masquerade costume, including pieces dating back seven generations.

The masquerade cult was once part theater, appearing at festivals to perform songs and dances, and part traditional police ? its members helped enforce mores and customs. Now its role is largely restricted to theater, including performances and races by men in costumes depicting ancestral spirits.

Ukpai, the evangelist, tells followers the artifacts bear "curses and covenants" linked to the gods they represent.

"Since the curses and covenants do not automatically disappear when we repent, Rev. Dr. Uma Ukpai is a man called by God for the total liberation of mankind," he says on his Web site, claiming to have the spiritual backing of Jesus to break the curses.

Efforts to speak to Ukpai were unsuccessful, and e-mails to his office asking for an interview received no reply.

Early missionaries to Nigeria condemned most traditional practices as pagan. Roman Catholics and Anglicans later came to terms with most practices, even incorporating some traditional dances into church liturgy. But there was no room for local gods once their erstwhile worshippers became Christians.

Similarly, Muslim preachers in Nigeria's predominantly Islamic north forbade interaction with figures dedicated to local idols, although many cultural dances featuring traditional masks are still tolerated.

Most converts are in constant tension over how much of the old beliefs can be incorporated into their new faith, said Isidore Uzoatu, a specialist in the history of Christianity in Africa affiliated with Nnamdi Azikiwe University in southeastern Nigeria.

"Where the older Catholic and Anglican denominations are more tolerant, the Pentecostals reflect more strictly the idea of a jealous God that would brook no rival," said Uzoatu.

The changing attitudes have not escaped the attention of art dealers.

"This work you see here is from a shrine. It was brought to me by one woman who said her pastor had asked her to get rid of it," said Wahid Mumuni, a dealer at Ikoyi Hotel in Lagos, gesturing toward a carving.

Mumuni said the price was the equivalent of $1,500 and he expected a European visitor to take it away soon.

The National Commission for Museums and Monuments, which is responsible for protecting the country's cultural antiquities, has responded with a sensitization campaign.

"We are ... telling the Christians that they can't detach themselves from their past, that there is a beginning to their history," said Omotosho Eluyemi, a senior commission official.

The commission urges those who do not want to keep sacred objects to take them to local chiefs. It also seeks stricter enforcement of the law prohibiting export of artifacts.

Okwy Achor, an archaeologist, fears the government's response has been weak compared to the fervor of the evangelists.

Achina is part of the region where famed Igbo-Ukwu bronzes were discovered in a private compound in 1958. Older and more sophisticated than the better-known Benin and Ife bronzes, the Igbo-Ukwu bronzes date to between the 8th and 10th centuries and provide proof that a unique form of metallurgy evolved in Nigeria.

While Achina had few Christians 60 years ago, they now constitute more than 95 percent, says Emmanuel Eze, a retired teacher.

"There is hardly anyone around these days to speak up for tradition," said Eze.

| 23062|2007-09-05 07:51:18|Ta-Mareye|Re: Christianity vs. the old gods of Nigeria|
Oh, the Misery!

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala" wrote:

>
> By DULUE MBACHU, Associated Press Writer
> Tue Sep 4, 1:19 PM ET
>
>
> [<http://us.bc.yahoo.com/b?>

P=vTTAgEWTVvohLY2QRolXNw1tR475L0beIN4ADHYV&T=1\
> bju07vf7%2fX%3d1188962526%2fE%3d84929301%2fR%3dnews%2fK%3d5%2fV%

3d2.1%2f\
> W%3dH%2fY%3dYAHOO%2fF%3d77633344%2fH%

3dY2FjaGVoaW50PSJuZXdzIiBjb250ZW50P\
>

SJtYW47aXQ7QWZyaWNhO3BvdmVydHk7TmlnZXJpYTtob3VzZTtlbWVvY2ZVuY3k7cG9sa
W NIO\
>

0l0O3ByaWNIO2dvdmVybml1bnQ7cmVmdXJsX25ld3NfeWFob29fY29tliByZWZ1cmw9In JIZ\
>

nVybf9uZXdzX3lhaG9vX2NvbSIgdG9waWNzPSJyZWZ1cmxlbmV3c195YWhvb19jb20i% 2fQ%\
> 3d-1%2fS%3d1%2fJ%3d9B519345&U=13brghsls%2fN%3dmKgGjdGDJG8-%2fC%

3d607818.\]
> 11107739.11753943.1442997%2fD%3dLREC%2fB%3d4799591]
> ACHINA, Nigeria - Born to a family of traditional priests, Ibe

Nwigwe > converted to Christianity as a boy. Under the sway of born-again fervor > as a man, he gathered the paraphernalia of ancestral worship ? a > centuries-old stool, a metal staff with a wooden handle and the carved

> figure of a god ? and burned them as his pastor watched.
>
>

>

> [Photo]

>

>

>

> "I had experienced a series of misfortunes and my pastor told me

it was > because I had not completely broken the covenant with my ancestral > idols," the 52-year-old Nwigwe said of the bonfire three years ago. "Now > that I have done that, I hope I will be truly liberated."

>

> Generations ago, European colonists and Christian missionaries looted

> Africa's ancient treasures. Now, Pentecostal Christian evangelists ?

> most of them Africans ? are helping wipe out remaining traces of how

> Africans once worked, played and prayed.

>

> As poverty deepened in Nigeria from the mid-1980s, Pentecostal > church membership surged. The new faithful found comfort in preachers

Christian

> like evangelist Uma Ukpai who promised material success was next to > godliness. He has boasted of overseeing the destruction of more than 100

> shrines in one district in December 2005 alone.

>

> Achina is typical of towns and villages in the ethnic Igbo-dominated

> Christian belt of southeastern Nigeria where this new Christian > fundamentalism is evident. The old gods are being linked to the devil,

> and preachers are urging not only their rejection, but their > destruction.

>
> The Ezeokolo, the main shrine of Achina ? a community of mainly > farmers and traders in Nigeria's rain forest belt ? has been > repeatedly looted of its carved god figures. While no one has been > caught, suspects range from people acting on Christian impulses to > treasure thieves.

>
> Recently, a village civic association volunteered to build a house

to > keep burglars away from a giant wooden gong decorated with carved male, > female and snake figures. The gong in the market square is reputed to be > more than 400 years old, and in decades past was sounded in times

of > emergency.
>
> "We feared it may be stolen or destroyed like so many of our traditional > cultural symbols," said Chuma Ezenwa, a Lagos-based lawyer.

>
> But the move to protect a communal symbol has not changed the minds of > others.

>
> Ikechukwu Nzekwe, a 48-year-old farmer who belongs to a traditional > masquerade cult, rues the action of his younger brother, a born-again

> Christian who destroyed the family's masquerade costume, including > pieces dating back seven generations.
>
> The masquerade cult was once part theater, appearing at festivals

to > perform songs and dances, and part traditional police ? its members > helped enforce mores and customs. Now its role is largely restricted to > theater, including performances and races by men in costumes depicting > ancestral spirits.

>

> Ukpai, the evangelist, tells followers the artifacts bear "curses

and > covenants" linked to the gods they represent.

>

> "Since the curses and covenants do not automatically disappear

when we > repent, Rev. Dr. Uma Ukpai is a man called by God for the total > liberation of mankind," he says on his Web site, claiming to have

the > spiritual backing of Jesus to break the curses.

>

> Efforts to speak to Ukpai were unsuccessful, and e-mails to his office

> asking for an interview received no reply.

>

> Early missionaries to Nigeria condemned most traditional practices

as > pagan. Roman Catholics and Anglicans later came to terms with most > practices, even incorporating some traditional dances into church > liturgy. But there was no room for local gods once their erstwhile > worshippers became Christians.

>

> Similarly, Muslim preachers in Nigeria's predominantly Islamic north

> forbade interaction with figures dedicated to local idols, although many > cultural dances featuring traditional masks are still tolerated.

>

> Most converts are in constant tension over how much of the old beliefs

> can be incorporated into their new faith, said Isidore Uzoatu, a > specialist in the history of Christianity in Africa affiliated with > Nnamdi Azikiwe University in southeastern Nigeria.

>
> "Where the older Catholic and Anglican denominations are more tolerant,

> the Pentecostals reflect more strictly the idea of a jealous God

that > would brook no rival," said Uzoatu.

>

> The changing attitudes have not escaped the attention of art dealers.

>

> "This work you see here is from a shrine. It was brought to me by one > woman who said her pastor had asked her to get rid of it," said

Wahid

> Mumuni, a dealer at Ikoyi Hotel in Lagos, gesturing toward a carving.

>

> Mumuni said the price was the equivalent of $1,500 and he expected

a

> European visitor to take it away soon.

>

> The National Commission for Museums and Monuments, which is responsible > for protecting the country's cultural antiquities, has responded with a > sensitization campaign.

>

> "We are ... telling the Christians that they can't detach themselves

> from their past, that there is a beginning to their history," said

> Omotosho Eluyemi, a senior commission official.

>

> The commission urges those who do not want to keep sacred objects

to > take them to local chiefs. It also seeks stricter enforcement of the law > prohibiting export of artifacts.

>

> Okwy Achor, an archaeologist, fears the government's response has been > weak compared to the fervor of the evangelists.

>

> Achina is part of the region where famed Igbo-Ukwu bronzes were > discovered in a private compound in 1958. Older and more sophisticated > than the better-known Benin and Ife bronzes, the Igbo-Ukwu bronzes date > to between the 8th and 10th centuries and provide proof that a unique

> form of metallurgy evolved in Nigeria.

>

> While Achina had few Christians 60 years ago, they now constitute

more > than 95 percent, says Emmanuel Eze, a retired teacher.

>

> "There is hardly anyone around these days to speak up for tradition,"

> said Eze.

>

| 23063|2007-09-05 09:08:50|Progeny Press|Re: Christianity vs. the old gods of Nigeria|

Few organisations are speaking and writing for tradition in Africa. One of the few examples is the website dedicated to African literature and culture: www.africaresearch.org In the site run by a team of IRCALC (International Research Confederacy on African Literature and Culture) editors, issues such as the African past, traditional precepts and traditional religious values versus western religious doctrines such as Christianity have been examined by various writers. One can only hope that in some years ahead the younger generation of thinking Africans would develop the zeal for genuine enquiry on their past (and present in spite of the poverty-inspired surge of Christian pentecostalism and other religious extremisms riding like a wave of hot air across the continent.

Paul Kekai Manansala wrote:

| By DULUE MBACHU, Associated Press Writer Tue Sep 4, 1:19 PM ET

| .

ACHINA, Nigeria - Born to a family of traditional priests, Ibe Nwigwe converted to Christianity as a boy. Under the sway of born-again fervor as a man, he gathered the paraphernalia of ancestral worship ? a centuries-old stool, a metal staff with a wooden handle and the carved figure of a god ? and burned them as his pastor watched.

"I had experienced a series of misfortunes and my pastor told me it was because I had not completely broken the covenant with my ancestral idols," the 52-year-old Nwigwe said of the bonfire three years ago. "Now that I have done that, I hope I will be truly liberated."

Generations ago, European colonists and Christian missionaries looted Africa's ancient treasures. Now, Pentecostal Christian evangelists ? most of them Africans ? are helping wipe out remaining traces of how Africans once worked, played and prayed.

As poverty deepened in Nigeria from the mid-1980s, Pentecostal Christian church membership surged. The new faithful found comfort in preachers like evangelist Uma Ukpai who promised material success was next to godliness. He has boasted of overseeing the destruction of more than 100 shrines in one district in December 2005 alone.

Achina is typical of towns and villages in the ethnic Igbo-dominated Christian belt of southeastern Nigeria where this new Christian fundamentalism is evident. The old gods are being linked to the devil, and preachers are urging not only their rejection, but their destruction.

The Ezeokolo, the main shrine of Achina ? a community of mainly farmers and traders in Nigeria's rain forest belt ? has been repeatedly looted of its carved god figures. While no one has been caught, suspects range from people acting on Christian impulses to treasure thieves.

Recently, a village civic association volunteered to build a house to keep burglars away from a giant wooden gong decorated with carved male, female and snake figures. The gong in the market square is reputed to be more than 400 years old, and in decades past was sounded in times of emergency.

"We feared it may be stolen or destroyed like so many of our traditional cultural symbols," said Chuma Ezenwa, a Lagos-based lawyer.

But the move to protect a communal symbol has not changed the minds of others. Ikechukwu Nzekwe, a 48-year-old farmer who belongs to a traditional masquerade cult, rues the action of his younger brother, a born-again Christian who destroyed the family's masquerade costume, including pieces dating back seven generations.

The masquerade cult was once part theater, appearing at festivals to perform songs and dances, and part traditional police ? its members helped enforce mores and customs. Now its role is largely restricted to theater, including performances and races by men in costumes depicting ancestral spirits.

Ukpai, the evangelist, tells followers the artifacts bear "curses and covenants" linked to the gods they represent.

"Since the curses and covenants do not automatically disappear when we repent, Rev. Dr. Uma Ukpai is a man called by God for the total liberation of mankind," he says on his Web site, claiming to have the spiritual backing of Jesus to break the curses.

Efforts to speak to Ukpai were unsuccessful, and e-mails to his office asking for an interview received no reply.

Early missionaries to Nigeria condemned most traditional practices as pagan. Roman Catholics and Anglicans later came to terms with most practices, even incorporating some traditional dances into church liturgy. But there was no room for local gods once their erstwhile worshippers became Christians.

Similarly, Muslim preachers in Nigeria's predominantly Islamic north forbade interaction with figures dedicated to local idols, although many cultural dances featuring traditional masks are still tolerated.

Most converts are in constant tension over how much of the old beliefs can be incorporated into their new faith, said Isidore Uzoatu, a specialist in the history of Christianity in Africa affiliated with Nnamdi Azikiwe University in southeastern Nigeria.

"Where the older Catholic and Anglican denominations are more tolerant, the Pentecostals reflect more strictly the idea of a jealous God that would brook no rival," said Uzoatu.

The changing attitudes have not escaped the attention of art dealers.

"This work you see here is from a shrine. It was brought to me by one woman who said her pastor had asked her to get rid of it," said Wahid Mumuni, a dealer at Ikoyi Hotel in Lagos, gesturing toward a carving.

Mumuni said the price was the equivalent of $1,500 and he expected a European visitor to take it away soon.

The National Commission for Museums and Monuments, which is responsible for protecting the country's cultural antiquities, has responded with a sensitization campaign.

"We are ... telling the Christians that they can't detach themselves from their past, that there is a beginning to their history," said Omotosho Eluyemi, a senior commission official.

The commission urges those who do not want to keep sacred objects to take them to local chiefs. It also seeks stricter enforcement of the law prohibiting export of artifacts. Okwy Achor, an archaeologist, fears the government's response has been weak compared to the fervor of the evangelists.

Achina is part of the region where famed Igbo-Ukwu bronzes were discovered in a private compound in 1958. Older and more sophisticated than the better-known Benin and Ife bronzes, the Igbo-Ukwu bronzes date to between the 8th and 10th centuries and provide proof that a unique form of metallurgy evolved in Nigeria.

While Achina had few Christians 60 years ago, they now constitute more than 95 percent, says Emmanuel Eze, a retired teacher.

"There is hardly anyone around these days to speak up for tradition," said Eze.

For ideas on reducing your carbon footprint visit Yahoo! For Good this month.

| 23064|2007-09-05 14:55:09|Milton E. Moore Bey|Moors Petition Congress for Name Recognition|
Islam Moors,

Like that of the Free Sundry Moors (our Ancestors), we the Moorish Americans of this era of time also petitioned the Government to be on the same footing or status as state citizens. On January 6, 2007 members of the Moorish Science Temple of America's Political Committee, Bro. T. Irons El, Bro. T. Peek El and Bro. A. Anderson El went to the Missouri State Capital in Jefferson City, Missouri to submit to state legislators a Missouri congressional petition for the congressional recognition of our Free National Name of Moorish American (Bey and El). Present to except the petition on behalf of the State of Missouri was State Representative Rodney Hubbard, State Representative Jamila Nasheed and State Representative Talibid El-Amin.

In the Journals of the House of Representatives we find the petition of the Sundry Free Moors. According to the United States Constitution, treaties are the law of the land and the Moroccan & American Friendship Treaty of 1787 specifically deals with Moorish Americans. The Sundry Free Moors were able to use the Moroccan & American Treaty of 1787 and the Articles of Confederation in which they were referred to as Free Inhabitants In The 13 Colonies to secure their rights on the same footing or status as state citizens without otherwise being obligated members of their social equality. The Sundry Free Moors were subjects of the Emperor of Morocco making them true citizens of the United States.

The Document says: "A petition was presented to the House of Representatives from the Sundry Free Moors, subjects of the Emperor of Morocco; and residents in this state, praying that in case they should commit any fault amenable to be brought to justice, that they

as subjects to a Prince in alliance with the United States of America may be tried under the same laws as the citizens of the state would be liable to be tried and not under the Negro act," which was received and read. Thus in 1789 the Sundry Free Moors proclaimed their Free National name of Moorish-American.

In studying and researching the Dred Scott Supreme Court Case we find the Massachusetts Act of March 6, 1788. The Act says, "Thus an act was passed in Massachusetts on 6th of March 1788, forbidding any Negro not a subject of Morocco, or a citizen of the United States, from tarrying in the commonwealth." This act shows with out a doubt that we must proclaim our Free National Name of Moorish American to be on the same footing or status as state citizens.

To consummate the dual ties of our Moroccan (Moorish) American heritage, ancestry and birth right, we returned to Morocco in the years of 1986 & 1990 and when we got there, the Moroccan citizens said, "We knew you were in America, what took you so long to come home", and they also said, "You are our Brothers, it is our honor to treat you as such". The Officials of Morocco themselves said that they acknowledge the the epic and journals of the Sundry Free Moors, citizens of Morocco and we their descendants born in America.

Peace

Bro. Milton Moore-Bey

A true Moorish-American Asiatic Moslem born here in America, not a certified Negro from St. Louis, Missouri. I am a citizen under the Constitution, not as property of the State of Missouri.

| 23065|2007-09-05 22:56:24|Paul Kekai Manansala|A serving of Philistine culture: Boar, dog and fine wine|

By Ofri Ilani

<http://www.haaretz.com/hasen/spages/900447.html>

Few peoples are described in the Bible with as much hostility as the Philistines, who lived in the coastal plain during the period it documents. In Judges and in 1 Samuel, the Philistines are described as being "uncircumcised" and presented as one of the most despised enemies of the Jewish people and its leaders, from Samson to King David. Recent archaeological discoveries in Israel, however, cast a different light on the relations between the two peoples. Research into the dispersal of Philistine cooking methods among various populations in Israel shows that the Philistines spread their culture beyond the areas under their control. While the two cultures never mixed, the early Hebrews apparently copied many important components of the Philistine lifestyle.

Excavations in Philistine cities carried out over the past several years offer a picture of a people with a rich and interesting culture that often conflicts with their biblical image. "They were very sophisticated for their time," Prof. Aren Maeir, chairman of the Martin (Szusz) Department of Land of Israel Studies and Archaeology at Bar-Ilan University and director of the Tell es-Safi/Gath Archaeological Project.

"There's no doubt that the social organization of the Philistines was much more developed than that of the Israelites, and apparently of the Canaanites as well." An article by Maeir and his colleagues on the cooking methods and the diet of the Philistines and neighboring populations, due to appear in a forthcoming issue of the American Journal of Archaeology, examines the cultural inter-relations among the various groups.

Advertisement

Crock-pot cookery

Unlike most of the peoples living in the region in the biblical era, the Philistines were not Semites, but rather one of the Sea Peoples who immigrated from the Aegean Sea region of today's Greece and western Turkey. They brought with them technologies new to the area, including a wide range of pottery vessels and a sophisticated political organization.

They prepared meals in a characteristic sealed pottery vessel suited to long cooking times at low heat, while most inhabitants of Canaan at the time used open pots and faster cooking methods. The bones found at the Philistine cities showed that their diet was also different from those of their neighbors. While the Canaanites and Israelites ate mainly beef and lamb, the Philistines ate mainly pork, with an occasional meal of dog meat. The Philistines' wine culture was also very well-developed.

Until recently, researchers believed the Philistines assimilated into the local population, and their culture died out after about 200 years. Not so, Maeir says. "Findings from the digs at Gath (Tell es-Safi) and other Philistine sites show that their unique cooking implements continued to appear centuries after their arrival," proving that the Philistines preserved many aspects of their culture for centuries.

In addition, the Philistine pots spread to other areas of Canaan. And, Maeir recalls, even the biblical stories of constant conflict between the Israelites and the Philistines has another side. "It's true that

Samson comes into conflict with the Philistines repeatedly," Maier said, "but on the other hand he also chooses Philistine wives - not once, but twice.

| 23066|2007-09-06 09:48:50|Paul Kekai Manansala|A New Palaeolithic Revolution|

11-11

Jerome M. Eisenberg, Ph.D. and Dr Sean Kingsley

http://minervamagazine.com/news.asp?min\_issue=JUL\_AUG2007#0

11-11

For decades archaeologists have rightly respected the Neolithic period c. 8500 BC as a revolutionary era of the most profound change, when the wiring of mankind's brain shifted from transient hunter-gathering to permanent settlement in farming communities. Hearths, temples, articulated burials, whistling 'wheat' fields and security replaced the uncertain ravages of seasonal running with the pack. Or so stereotypes maintain.

Now, from the remote shores of Budrinna on Lake Fezzan in Libya, and Melka Konture on the banks of the River Awash in Ethiopia, a series of stunning discoveries are set to challenge the originality of the Neolithic Revolution. After 39 years of surveys and excavations, Professor Helmut Ziegert of Hamburg University presents his results as a world exclusive in Minerva (pp. 8-9). In both African locations he has discovered huts and sedentary village life dating between an astonishing 400,000 and 200,000 Before Present - if correct, literally a quantum leap in our understanding of man's evolution. Near aquatic resources, and not alongside agricultural fields, Professor Ziegert contests that our ancestors settled down for the first time in small communities of 40-50 people.

This sensation just scratches the surface of one of prehistory's most incredible revelations: from Choukoutien in China to Bilzingsleben in Germany, Ziegert claims to have identified 35 other Lower Palaeolithic villages with comparable huts and even cemeteries. A pattern prevails. After decades of fieldwork and contemplation, Helmut Ziegert is convinced that future discoveries will uphold his conclusions. His discoveries have nothing to do with luck, he maintains, but are a matter of applying problem-oriented research. Where evolutionary biologists have typically hunted ancestral humans bones exclusively to understand adaptations to mankind - missing links - as an archaeologist Professor Ziegert has asked more specific, holistic questions of the wider evidence.

At the heart of this new Lower Palaeolithic 'out of Africa' village theory are two world-changing ideas. First, that Homo erectus, Upright Man,

Image Caption: The 'Rangki Papa' (Father of all Rafts') built using Palaeolithic technology and approaching the coast of Komodo, Bali, having succeeded in crossing from Sumbawa, 7 October 2004. The vessel travelled 36.4km in 9 hours 22 minutes, had far more modernistic tendencies than previously believed; and second, that as unique as the farming villages of Jericho in the West Bank and Catalhoyk in Turkey are, their occupants were not the best behind the origins of sedentism. The innovative capacity of Homo erectus has challenged scholars for decades and remains a scholarly cauldron. Anthropologists such as Richard Leakey have long insisted that Upright Man was socially more akin to modern humans than primitive predecessors because the increased cranial capacity coincided with more sophisticated tool technology. Other scientists contend Homo erectus was sufficiently advanced to have even mastered maritime transport. Yet both this assertion and the very idea that he got to grips with controlled fire are still considered controversial.

Only three years ago, however, Nira Alperson of the Hebrew University in Jerusalem discovered the oldest evidence of fire management at Gesher Benot Ya'akov on the banks of the Jordan River in Israel's northern Galilee. The team analysed over 50,000 pieces of wood and nearly 36,000 flints from two hearths associated with a Homo erectus settlement dating back 790,000 years.

More contentiously, Robert Bednarik is convinced that Upright Man ushered in the dawn of trans-ocean travel between 900,000 and 800,000 years ago as part of a wider revolution, usually attributed to the anatomically modern Homo sapiens, that included communicating in a spoken language and eventually carving and painting art 400,000 to 300,000 Before Present. To test his theory, Bednarik built a 17.5m by 2.8-ton bamboo raft, Nale Tasih 4, and crossed the 29km-wide strait of sea from the east coast of Bali to the neighbouring island of Lombok. The results have convinced Bednarik that 'Between 400,000 and 200,000 years ago, hominins are also known to have crossed to at least two islands in Europe, Corsica, and Sardinia. This is soundly demonstrated, but in addition it is possible that much earlier they managed to cross the Strait of Gibraltar. Unfortunately, that cannot be proved conclusively, because the alternative of reaching Europe by land has always existed'. Stone Age 'seafaring appears to have been possible', agrees anthropologist Tim Bromage of Hunter College of the City University of New York, who has identified 30cm-wide South Asian bamboo as providing a versatile material for building rafts and simple stone tools.

So, Professor Ziegert's 'Out of Africa' aquatic model for the rise of village life in the Lower Palaeolithic does not emerge out of a cultural and intellectual void. As a veteran of over 81 archaeological surveys and excavations from Germany to Ecuador, ranging in date from the Lower Palaeolithic to the Islamic period, Ziegert is nothing if not scientifically cautious, which makes the current revelation all the more exciting.

Between 2007 and 2010 he will be back in the field, returning to Budrinna and Melka Konture to fine-tune his life's work. To delve greater depth into the mystery of the ecology, function, structure, economy of these villages, he plans to search out cemeteries (complementary signs of fixed settlement) and use potassium argon isotopic dating, stratigraphy, and tool typology to measure the ebb and flow of village life in this dizzy, distant prehistoric past.

| 23067|2007-09-06 12:11:53|clyde winters|Re: A New Palaeolithic Revolution|

Thanks Paul .

This paper changes many of ideas about early civilization

Clyde

--- Paul Kekai Manansala <pmanansala@sbcglobal.net>
wrote:

- >
- > Image Caption: The `Rangki Papa' (`Father of all
- > Rafts')
- > built using Palaeolithic technology and approaching
- > the coast of Komodo,
- > Bali, having succeeded in crossing from Sumbawa, 7
- > October 2004. The
- > vessel travelled 36.4km in 9 hours 22 minutes,
- > Jerome M. Eisenberg, Ph.D. and Dr Sean Kingsley
- >
- >

http://minervamagazine.com/news.asp?min\_issue=JUL\_AUG2007#0

- >
- >
- >
- > For decades archaeologists have rightly respected
- > the Neolithic period
- > c. 8500 BC as a revolutionary era of the most
- > profound change, when the
- > wiring of mankind's brain shifted from transient
- > hunter-gathering to
- > permanent settlement in farming communities.
- > Hearths, temples,
- > articulated burials, whistling `wheat' fields and
- > security
- > replaced the uncertain ravages of seasonal running
- > with the pack. Or so

- > stereotypes maintain.
- >
- > Now, from the remote shores of Budrinna on Lake
- > Fezzan in Libya, and
- > Melka Konture on the banks of the River Awash in
- > Ethiopia, a series of
- > stunning discoveries are set to challenge the
- > originality of the
- > Neolithic Revolution. After 39 years of surveys and
- > excavations,
- > Professor Helmut Ziegert of Hamburg University
- > presents his results as a
- > world exclusive in Minerva (pp. 8-9). In both
- > African locations he has
- > discovered huts and sedentary village life dating
- > between an astonishing
- > 400,000 and 200,000 Before Present - if correct,
- > literally a quantum
- > leap in our understanding of man's evolution. Near
- > aquatic
- > resources, and not alongside agricultural fields,
- > Professor Ziegert
- > contests that our ancestors settled down for the
- > first time in small
- > communities of 40-50 people.
- >
- > This sensation just scratches the surface of one of
- > prehistory's
- > most incredible revelations: from Choukoutien in
- > China to Bilzingsleben
- > in Germany, Ziegert claims to have identified 35
- > other Lower
- > Palaeolithic villages with comparable huts and even
- > cemeteries. A
- > pattern prevails. After decades of fieldwork and
- > contemplation, Helmut
- > Ziegert is convinced that future discoveries will
- > uphold his
- > conclusions. His discoveries have nothing to do with
- > luck, he maintains,
- > but are a matter of applying problem-oriented
- > research. Where
- > evolutionary biologists have typically hunted
- > ancestral humans bones
- > exclusively to understand adaptations to mankind -
- > missing links - as an

> archaeologist Professor Ziegert has asked more > specific, holistic > questions of the wider evidence.
>
> At the heart of this new Lower Palaeolithic 'out of > Africa'
> village theory are two world-changing ideas. First,
> that Homo erectus,
> Upright Man, had far more modernistic tendencies
> than previously > believed; and second, that as unique as the farming > villages of Jericho > in the West Bank and Catalhoyk in Turkey are, their > occupants were > not the brains behind the origins of sedentism. The > innovative capacity > of Homo erectus has challenged scholars for decades > and remains a > scholarly cauldron. Anthropologists such as Richard > Leakey have long > insisted that Upright Man was socially more akin to > modern humans than
> to his primitive predecessors because the increased > cranial capacity
> coincided with more sophisticated tool technology.
> Other scientists > contend that Homo erectus was sufficiently advanced > to have even > mastered maritime transport. Yet both this assertion > and the very idea
> that he ever got to grips with controlled fire are > still considered > controversial.
>
> Only three years ago, however, Nira Alperson of the > Hebrew University in > Jerusalem discovered the oldest evidence of fire
> management at Gesher
> Benot Ya'aqov on the banks of the Jordan River in > Israel's
> northern Galilee. The team analysed over 50,000 > pieces of wood and > nearly 36,000 flints from two hearths associated > with a Homo erectus > settlement dating back 790,000 years.
>

> More contentiously, Robert Bednarik is convinced > that Upright Man
> ushered in the dawn of trans-ocean travel between > 900,000 and 800,000
> years ago as part of a wider revolution, usually > attributed to the > anatomically modern Homo sapiens, that included > communicating with a > spoken language and eventually carving and painting > art 400,000 to > 300,000 Before Present. To test his theory, Bednarik > built a 17.5m-long,
> 2.8-ton bamboo raft, Nale Tasih 4, and crossed the > 29km-wide stretch of > sea from the east coast of Bali to the neighbouring > island of Lombok.
> The results have convinced Bednarik that 'Between
> 400,000 and
> 200,000 years ago, hominins are also known to have > crossed to at least > two islands in Europe, Corsica, and Sardinia. This > is soundly > demonstrated, but in addition it is possible that > much earlier they > managed to cross the Strait of Gibraltar.
> Unfortunately, that cannot be > proved conclusively, because the alternative of > reaching Europe by land > has always existed'. Stone Age 'seafaring appears to > have been > possible', agrees anthropologist Tim Bromage of > Hunter College of > the City University of New York, who has identified
> 30cm-wide South-east > Asian bamboo as providing a versatile material for > building rafts with > simple stone tools.
>
> So, Professor Ziegert's 'Out of Africa' aquatic > model for > the rise of village life in the Lower Palaeolithic > does not emerge out > of a cultural and intellectual void. As a veteran of > over 81
> archaeological surveys and excavations from Germany
> to Ecuador, ranging

- > in date from the Lower Palaeolithic to the Islamic
- > period, Ziegert is
- > nothing if not scientifically cautious, which makes
- > the current
- > revelation all the more exciting. Between 2007 and
- > 2010 he will be back
- > in the field, returning to Budrinna and Melka
- > Konture to fine-tune his
- > life's work. To delve in greater depth into the
- > mystery of the
- > ecology, function, structure, and economy of these
- > villages, he plans to
- > search out cemeteries (complementary signs of fixed
- > settlement) and use
- > potassium argon isotopic dating, stratigraphy, and
- > tool typology to
- > measure the ebb and flow of village life in this
- > dizzy, distant
- > prehistoric past.
- >

---

Take the Internet to Go: Yahoo!Go puts the Internet in your pocket: mail, news, photos & more.

<http://mobile.yahoo.com/go?refer=1GNXIC>

| 23068|2007-09-06 14:12:34|cristofori whitakara|Re: The Moors - offtopic|

just a thought: is the united states of america a sort of reparations for what europeans did to each other?

Alex van Deelen wrote:

Paul,

- > I don't think that would be possible. For example,
- > are there any people still suffering from the effects
- > of the Barbary pirate and Moorish slave raids on
- > Europe? No, most people don't even know these
- > ever occurred.
- >
- > There are however still significant problems
- > remaining that their roots in the transatlantic
- > slave trade and its aftermath.

And not even just the effects.

There is a tendency to call every exploitative labour relation in Africa 'slavery'.

They don't do the same thing in Europe, where you had bonded labor, serfdom, prison labor, etc.

But in Africa, all these are suddenly called 'slavery'.

Plus, they try and take every opportunity to hold Africans accountable for the transatlantic slave trade.

Alex

---

Park yourself in front of a world of choices in alternative vehicles.

Visit the Yahoo! Auto Green Center.

| 23069|2007-09-07 07:38:00|Mahari Mengistu|Re: A New Palaeolithic Revolution|

Yes and fits very much in line with some Afrocentric thinkers.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, clyde winters wrote:

>

> Thanks Paul .

> This paper changes many of ideas about early > civilization

>

> Clyde

>

>

> --- Paul Kekai Manansala

> wrote:

>

>>

>> Image Caption: The `Rangki Papa' (`Father of all

>> Rafts')

>> built using Palaeolithic technology and approaching

>> the coast of Komodo,

>> Bali, having succeeded in crossing from Sumbawa, 7

>> October 2004. The

>> vessel travelled 36.4km in 9 hours 22 minutes,

>> Jerome M. Eisenberg, Ph.D. and Dr Sean Kingsley

>>
>>
> http://minervamagazine.com/news.asp?min\_issue=JUL\_AUG2007#0
>>
>>
>>
>> For decades archaeologists have rightly respected
>> the Neolithic period
>> c. 8500 BC as a revolutionary era of the most >> profound change, when the >> wiring of mankind's brain shifted from transient >> hunter-gathering to
>> permanent settlement in farming communities.
>> Hearths, temples,
>> articulated burials, whistling `wheat' fields and
>> security
>> replaced the uncertain ravages of seasonal running
>> with the pack. Or so >> stereotypes maintain.
>>
>> Now, from the remote shores of Budrinna on Lake
>> Fezzan in Libya, and >> Melka Konture on the banks of the River Awash in >> Ethiopia, a series of >> stunning discoveries are set to challenge the >> originality of the >> Neolithic Revolution. After 39 years of surveys and >> excavations,
>> Professor Helmut Ziegert of Hamburg University
>> presents his results as a >> world exclusive in Minerva (pp. 8-9). In both >> African locations he has >> discovered huts and sedentary village life dating
>> between an astonishing
>> 400,000 and 200,000 Before Present - if correct,
>> literally a quantum
>> leap in our understanding of man's evolution. Near >> aquatic >> resources, and not alongside agricultural fields, >> Professor Ziegert
>> contests that our ancestors settled down for the >> first time in small >> communities of 40-50 people.
>>
>> This sensation just scratches the surface of one of
>> prehistory's

> > most incredible revelations: from Choukoutien in > > China to Bilzingsleben
> > in Germany, Ziegert claims to have identified 35
> > other Lower > > Palaeolithic villages with comparable huts and even > > cemeteries. A > > pattern prevails. After decades of fieldwork and > > contemplation, Helmut > > Ziegert is convinced that future discoveries will > > uphold his > > conclusions. His discoveries have nothing to do with > > luck, he maintains,
> > but are a matter of applying problem-oriented
> > research. Where > > evolutionary biologists have typically hunted
> > ancestral humans bones
> > exclusively to understand adaptations to mankind -
> > missing links - as an > > archaeologist Professor Ziegert has asked more > > specific, holistic > > questions of the wider evidence.
> >
> > At the heart of this new Lower Palaeolithic 'out of > > Africa'
> > village theory are two world-changing ideas. First,
> > that Homo erectus,
> > Upright Man, had far more modernistic tendencies
> > than previously > > believed; and second, that as unique as the farming
> > villages of Jericho > > in the West Bank and Catalhoyk in Turkey are, their > > occupants were > > not the brains behind the origins of sedentism. The > > innovative capacity
> > of Homo erectus has challenged scholars for decades
> > and remains a > > scholarly cauldron. Anthropologists such as Richard > > Leakey have long > > insisted that Upright Man was socially more akin to > > modern humans than
> > to his primitive predecessors because the increased > > cranial capacity
> > coincided with more sophisticated tool technology.
> > Other scientists > > contend that Homo erectus was sufficiently advanced > > to have even > > mastered maritime transport. Yet both this assertion

> > and the very idea
> > that he ever got to grips with controlled fire are > > still considered > > controversial.
> >
> > Only three years ago, however, Nira Alperson of the > > Hebrew University in > > Jerusalem discovered the oldest evidence of fire
> > management at Gesher
> > Benot Ya'aqov on the banks of the Jordan River in > > Israel's
> > northern Galilee. The team analysed over 50,000
> > pieces of wood and > > nearly 36,000 flints from two hearths associated > > with a Homo erectus
> > settlement dating back 790,000 years.
> >
> > More contentiously, Robert Bednarik is convinced
> > that Upright Man
> > ushered in the dawn of trans-ocean travel between > > 900,000 and 800,000
> > years ago as part of a wider revolution, usually > > attributed to the > > anatomically modern Homo sapiens, that included
> > communicating with a > > spoken language and eventually carving and painting
> > art 400,000 to > > 300,000 Before Present. To test his theory, Bednarik
> > built a 17.5m-long,
> > 2.8-ton bamboo raft, Nale Tasih 4, and crossed the > > 29km-wide stretch of > > sea from the east coast of Bali to the neighbouring > > island of Lombok.
> > The results have convinced Bednarik that `Between
> > 400,000 and
> > 200,000 years ago, hominins are also known to have > > crossed to at least > > two islands in Europe, Corsica, and Sardinia. This > > is soundly
> > demonstrated, but in addition it is possible that > > much earlier they > > managed to cross the Strait of Gibraltar.
> > Unfortunately, that cannot be > > proved conclusively, because the alternative of > > reaching Europe by land

> > has always existed'. Stone Age `seafaring appears to > > have been > > possible', agrees anthropologist Tim Bromage of > > Hunter College of > > the City University of New York, who has identified
> > 30cm-wide South-east > > Asian bamboo as providing a versatile material for > > building rafts with > > simple stone tools.
> >
> > So, Professor Ziegert's `Out of Africa' aquatic > > model for > > the rise of village life in the Lower Palaeolithic
> > does not emerge out > > of a cultural and intellectual void. As a veteran of > > over 81
> > archaeological surveys and excavations from Germany
> > to Ecuador, ranging > > in date from the Lower Palaeolithic to the Islamic > > period, Ziegert is > > nothing if not scientifically cautious, which makes
> > the current > > revelation all the more exciting. Between 2007 and > > 2010 he will be back > > in the field, returning to Budrinna and Melka > > Konture to fine-tune his > > life's work. To delve in greater depth into the > > mystery of the > > ecology, function, structure, and economy of these > > villages, he plans to > > search out cemeteries (complementary signs of fixed > > settlement) and use
> > potassium argon isotopic dating, stratigraphy, and
> > tool typology to > > measure the ebb and flow of village life in this > > dizzy, distant
> > prehistoric past.
> >
>
>
>
>
>
>

---

> Take the Internet to Go: Yahoo!Go puts the Internet in your pocket:

mail, news, photos & more.

> <http://mobile.yahoo.com/go?refer=1GNXIC>

>

| 23070|2007-09-07 08:47:28|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: The Moors - offtopic|
Although we have a European Union now and talk of a European culture, medieval Europe was the scene of some the most constant warfare found anywhere.

We hear today of the "eternal" Israeli-Palestinian conflict but the French and British fought the "Hundred Years War" during medieval times.

Earlier in the last century, labor unions fought to keep out immigrants from Latin America, the Caribbean and Asia, while keeping the door wide open for the "huddled masses" from Europe.

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, cristofori whitakara
wrote:

>

> just a thought: is the united states of america a sort of reparations for what europeans did to each other?

>

> Alex van Deelen wrote: Paul,

>

> > I don't think that would be possible. For example,
> > are there any people still suffering from the effects > > of the Barbary pirate and Moorish slave raids on > > Europe? No, most people don't even know these > > ever occurred.

> >

> > There are however still significant problems
> > remaining that their roots in the transatlantic > > slave trade and its aftermath.

>

> And not even just the effects.

>

> There is a tendency to call every exploitative > labour relation in Africa 'slavery'.

>

> They don't do the same thing in Europe,
> where you had bonded labor, serfdom, > prison labor, etc.

 >
 > But in Africa, all these are suddenly called 'slavery'.
 >
 > Plus, they try and take every opportunity > to hold Africans accountable for the > transatlantic slave trade.
 >
 > Alex
 >
 >
 >
 >
 >
 >
 >
 > -----
 > Park yourself in front of a world of choices in alternative vehicles.
 > Visit the Yahoo! Auto Green Center.
 >
 | 23071|2007-09-07 08:56:03|Paul Kekai Manansala|YAP+ haplotype in South Asia|
 The YAP+ variant of the Y chromosome has been found in the Andaman and Nicobar islands off the coast of India.

YAP here belongs to haplogroup D as compared to haplogroup E of Africa, West Asia and Europe.

Now, haplogroup D has also been found among "tribal" peoples of Northeast India sometimes at frequencies of up to 65%.

---
ABSTRACT

Ann Hum Biol. 2007 Sep-Oct;34(5):582-6

YAP insertion signature in South Asia.

Chandrasekar A et al.

A total of 2169 samples from 21 tribal populations from different regions of India were scanned for the Y-chromosome Alu polymorphism.
 This study reports, for the first time, high frequencies (8-65%) of Y
 Alu polymorphic (YAP) insertion in northeast Indian tribes. All seven Jarawa samples from the Andaman and Nicobar islands had the YAP insertion, in conformity with an earlier study of Andaman Islanders.
 One isolated case with haplotype E* was found in Dungri Bhill, a western Indian population, while YAP insertion in northeast India and Andaman tribes was found in association with haplotype D* (M168, M174). YAP insertion frequencies reported in the mainland Indian populations are negligible, according to previous studies. Genetic drift may be the causative factor for the variable frequency of the YAP insertion in the mainland populations, while the founder effect may have resulted in the highest incidence of haplotype D among the Andaman Islanders. The results of YAP insertion and the evidence of previous mtDNA studies indicate an early out of Africa migration to the Andaman and Nicobar Islands. The findings of YAP insertion in northeast Indian tribes are very significant for understanding the evolutionary history of the region.

---

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23072|2007-09-07 10:45:40|olmec982000|Re: YAP+ haplotype in South Asia|

Table 3. Haplotype distribution among different populations

Population	Haplotype	No. of sequences	Nucleotide position
			365?370 <sup>b</sup>	494	544	595	672
Chimpanzee <sup>a</sup>	O	2	?	C	G	C	G
Asians	A	44	GGCCAA	C	A	C	C
Italians (mainland)	A	7	GGCCAA	C	A	C	C
	B	3	?	A	G	C	G
Italians (Sardinia)	A	9	GGCCAA	C	A	C	C
	C	1	?	A	G	T	G
Other Europeans	A	24	GGCCAA	C	A	C	C
Nigerians	B	26	?	A	G	C	G
	D	13	GGCCAA	C	G	C	C
	A	1	GGCCAA	C	A	C	C
Pygmies	D	6	GGCCAA	C	G	C	C
	B	3	?	A	G	C	G
Kenyan	B	1	?	A	G	C	G
!Kung	D	1	GGCCAA	C	G	C	C

<sup>a</sup> The chimpanzee sequences are from HARRIS and HEY 1999 .

<sup>b</sup> A duplication of the nucleotides GGCCAA at positions 359?364.

Paul I don't understand the conclusions of this paper. In the table above we find that haplotype D was found among Nigerians and Pygmies. Thirty-three (33) percent of the Nigerians carried this gene while 67% of the Pygmies carried haplotype D.

If this high frequency of haplotype D among Pygmies and Nigerians contradicts the conclusions of the paper. This finding indicates a strong relationship between Africans and Southeast Asians in my opinion.

Please explain to me why the groups are seen as different given the presence of haplotype D among Indians and Africans? Thanks.

Clyde

If haplotype D is found among Nigerians

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoo.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala" wrote:

- >
- > The YAP+ variant of the Y chromosome has been found in the Andaman and
- > Nicobar islands off the coast of India.
- >
- > YAP here belongs to haplogroup D as compared to haplogroup E of
- > Africa, West Asia and Europe.
- >
- > Now, haplogroup D has also been found among "tribal" peoples of
- > Northeast India sometimes at frequencies of up to 65%.
- >
- > ---
- > ABSTRACT
- >
- > Ann Hum Biol. 2007 Sep-Oct;34(5):582-6
- >
- > YAP insertion signature in South Asia.
- >
- > Chandrasekar A et al.
- >
- > A total of 2169 samples from 21 tribal populations from different
- > regions of India were scanned for the Y-chromosome Alu polymorphism.
- > This study reports, for the first time, high frequencies (8-65%) of Y
- > Alu polymorphic (YAP) insertion in northeast Indian tribes. All seven
- > Jarawa samples from the Andaman and Nicobar islands had the YAP
- > insertion, in conformity with an earlier study of Andaman Islanders.
- > One isolated case with haplotype E* was found in Dungri Bhill, a
- > western Indian population, while YAP insertion in northeast India and
- > Andaman tribes was found in association with haplotype D* (M168,
- > M174). YAP insertion frequencies reported in the mainland Indian
- > populations are negligible, according to previous studies. Genetic
- > drift may be the causative factor for the variable frequency of the

- > YAP insertion in the mainland populations, while the founder effect
- > may have resulted in the highest incidence of haplotype D among the
- > Andaman Islanders. The results of YAP insertion and the evidence of
- > previous mtDNA studies indicate an early out of Africa migration to
- > the Andaman and Nicobar Islands. The findings of YAP insertion in
- > northeast Indian tribes are very significant for understanding the
- > evolutionary history of the region.
- > ---
- >
- > Regards,
- > Paul Kekai Manansala
- >

| 23073|2007-09-07 11:17:16|cristofori whitakara|Re: A serving of Philistine culture: Boar, dog and fine wine|

i find it interesting that in this report it speaks of the philistine migration from the aegean area and in genesis 10 it is written that the Philistim came out of Casluhim(Colchis--Black Sea) the 6th son of Mizraim(Kemet). Could the organizational skills and cooking skills derive from their relationship with the Kemetians?

Paul Kekai Manansala wrote:

By Ofri Ilani

<http://www.haaretz.com/hasen/spages/900447.html>

Few peoples are described in the Bible with as much hostility as the Philistines, who lived in the coastal plain during the period it documents. In Judges and in 1 Samuel, the Philistines are described as being "uncircumcised" and presented as one of the most despised enemies of the Jewish people and its leaders, from Samson to King David. Recent archaeological discoveries in Israel, however, cast a different light on the relations between the two peoples. Research into the dispersal of Philistine cooking methods among various populations in Israel shows that the Philistines spread their culture beyond the areas under their control. While the two cultures never mixed, the early Hebrews apparently copied many important components of the Philistine lifestyle.

Excavations in Philistine cities carried out over the past several years offer a picture of a people with a rich and interesting culture that often conflicts with their biblical image. "They were very sophisticated for their time," Prof. Aren Maeir, chairman of the Martin (Szusz) Department of Land of Israel Studies and Archaeology at Bar-Ilan University and director of the Tell es-Safi/Gath Archaeological Project.

"There's no doubt that the social organization of the Philistines was much more developed than that of the Israelites, and apparently of the Canaanites as well." An article by Maeir and his colleagues on the cooking methods and the diet of the Philistines and neighboring populations, due to appear in a forthcoming issue of the American Journal of Archaeology, examines the cultural inter-relations among the various groups.

Advertisement

Crock-pot cookery

Unlike most of the peoples living in the region in the biblical era, the Philistines were not Semites, but rather one of the Sea Peoples who immigrated from the Aegean Sea region of today's Greece and western Turkey. They brought with them technologies new to the area, including a wide range of pottery vessels and a sophisticated political organization.

They prepared meals in a characteristic sealed pottery vessel suited to long cooking times at low heat, while most inhabitants of Canaan at the time used open pots and faster cooking methods. The bones found at the Philistine cities showed that their diet was also different from those of their neighbors. While the Canaanites and Israelites ate mainly beef and lamb, the Philistines ate mainly pork, with an occasional meal of dog meat. The Philistines' wine culture was also very well-developed.

Until recently, researchers believed the Philistines assimilated into the local population, and their culture died out after about 200 years. Not so, Maeir says. "Findings from the digs at Gath (Tell es-Safi) and other Philistine sites show that their unique cooking implements continued to appear centuries after their arrival," proving that the Philistines preserved many aspects of their culture for centuries.

In addition, the Philistine pots spread to other areas of Canaan. And, Maeir recalls, even the biblical stories of constant conflict between the Israelites and the Philistines has another side. "It's true that Samson comes into conflict with the Philistines repeatedly," Maeir said, "but on the other hand he also chooses Philistine wives - not once, but twice.

---

Luggage? GPS? Comic books?

Check out fitting gifts for grads at Yahoo! Search.

| 23074|2007-09-07 11:40:12|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: YAP+ haplotype in South Asia|

Clyde,

The haplotypes in the table you listed might be linked to the X chromosome rather than the Y chromosome.

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

olmec982000 wrote:

Table 3. Haplotype distribution among different populations

Population	Haplotype	No. of sequences	Nucleotide position
			365	370 <sup>b</sup>	494	544	595 672
Chimpanzee <sup>a</sup>	O	2	?	C	G	C	G
Asians	A	44	GGCCAA	C	A	C	C
Italians (mainland)	A	7	GGCCAA	C	A	C	C
	B	3	?	A	G	C	G
Italians (Sardinia)	A	9	GGCCAA	C	A	C	C
	C	1	?	A	G	T	G
Other Europeans	A	24	GGCCAA	C	A	C	C
Nigerians	B	26	?	A	G	C	G
	D	13	GGCCAA	C	G	C	C
	A	1	GGCCAA	C	A	C	C
Pygmies	D	6	GGCCAA	C	G	C	C
	B	3	?	A	G	C	G
Kenyan	B	1	?	A	G	C	G
!Kung	D	1	GGCCAA	C	G	C	C

<sup>a</sup> The chimpanzee sequences are from HARRIS and HEY 1999 .

<sup>b</sup> A duplication of the nucleotides GGCCAA at positions 359-364.

Paul I don't understand the conclusions of this paper. In the table above we find that haplotype D was found among Nigerians and Pygmies. Thirty-three (33) percent of the Nigerians carried this gene while 67% of the Pygmies carried haplotype D.

If this high frequency of haplotype D among Pygmies and Nigerians contradicts the conclusions of the paper. This finding indicates a strong relationship between between Africans and Southeast Asians in my opinion.

Please explain to me why the groups are seen as different given the presence of hyplotype D among Indians and Africans? Thanks.

Clyde

If haplotype D is found among Nigerians

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, "Paul Kekai Manansala" wrote:

>

> The YAP+ variant of the Y chromosome has been found in the Andaman and > Nicobar islands off the coast of India.

>

> YAP here belongs to haplogroup D as compared to haplogroup E of > Africa, West Asia and Europe.

>

> Now, haplogroup D has also been found among "tribal" peoples of > Northeast India sometimes at frequencies of up to 65%.

>

> ---

> ABSTRACT

>

> Ann Hum Biol. 2007 Sep-Oct;34(5) :582-6

>

> YAP insertion signature in South Asia.

>

> Chandrasekar A et al.

>

> A total of 2169 samples from 21 tribal populations from different > regions of India were scanned for the Y-chromosome Alu polymorphism.
> This study reports, for the first time, high frequencies (8-65%) of Y
> Alu polymorphic (YAP) insertion in northeast Indian tribes. All seven > Jarawa samples from the Andaman and Nicobar islands had the YAP > insertion, in conformity with an earlier study of Andaman Islanders.
> One isolated case with haplotype E* was found in Dungri Bhill, a > western Indian population, while YAP insertion in northeast India and > Andaman tribes was found in association with haplotype D* (M168, > M174). YAP insertion frequencies reported in the mainland Indian > populations are negligible, according to previous studies. Genetic > drift may be the causative factor for the variable frequency of the > YAP insertion in the mainland populations, while the founder effect
> may have resulted in the highest incidence of haplotype D among the > Andaman Islanders. The results of YAP insertion and the evidence of > previous mtDNA studies indicate an early out of Africa migration to > the Andaman and Nicobar Islands. The findings of YAP insertion in > northeast Indian tribes are very significant for understanding the > evolutionary history of the region.

> ---

>

> Regards,

> Paul Kekai Manansala

>

| 23075|2007-09-07 11:58:44|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: A serving of Philistine culture: Boar, dog and fine wine|

The Egyptians in general were adverse to killing dogs. There was a story of Roman citizens who were stoned to death during the Roman occupation because they accidentally killed a dog. People were often buried with their dog, often in the same coffin.

The pig also generally was taboo as food probably for one of several reasons: Seth worshippers would not eat pork because the pig was a symbol of Seth; those who considered Seth a type of devil would thought of the pig as unclean; Isis worshippers would consider the pig sacred as it was considered a holy animal linked with Isis.

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

cristofori whitakara wrote:

i find it interesting that in this report it speaks of the philistine migration from the aegean area and in genesis 10 it is written that the Philistim came out of Casluhim(Colchis- - Black Sea) the 6th son of Mizraim(Kemet) . Could the organizational skills and cooking skills derive from their relationship with the Kemetians?

Paul Kekai Manansala wrote:

By Ofri Ilani

<http://www.haaretz.com/hasen/spages/900447.html>

Few peoples are described in the Bible with as much hostility as the Philistines, who lived in the coastal plain during the period it documents. In Judges and in 1 Samuel, the Philistines are described as being "uncircumcised" and presented as one of the most despised enemies of the Jewish people and its leaders, from Samson to King David. Recent archaeological discoveries in Israel, however, cast a different light on the relations between the two peoples. Research into the dispersal of Philistine cooking methods among various populations in Israel shows that the Philistines spread their culture beyond the areas under their control. While the two cultures never mixed, the early Hebrews apparently copied many important components of the Philistine lifestyle.

Excavations in Philistine cities carried out over the past several years offer a picture of a people with a rich and interesting culture that often conflicts with their biblical image. "They were very sophisticated for their time," Prof. Aren Maeir, chairman of the Martin (Szusz) Department of Land of Israel Studies and Archaeology at Bar-Ilan University and director of the Tell es-Safi/Gath Archaeological Project.

"There's no doubt that the social organization of the Philistines was much more developed than that of the Israelites, and apparently of the Canaanites as well." An article by Maeir and his colleagues on the cooking methods and the diet of the Philistines and neighboring populations, due to appear in a forthcoming issue of the American Journal of Archaeology, examines the cultural inter-relations among the various groups.

Advertisement

Crock-pot cookery

Unlike most of the peoples living in the region in the biblical era, the Philistines were not Semites, but rather one of the Sea Peoples who immigrated from the Aegean Sea region of today's Greece and western Turkey. They brought with them technologies new to the area, including a wide range of pottery vessels and a sophisticated political organization.

They prepared meals in a characteristic sealed pottery vessel suited to long cooking times at low heat, while most inhabitants of Canaan at the time used open pots and faster cooking methods. The bones found at the Philistine cities showed that their diet was also different from those of their neighbors. While the Canaanites and Israelites ate mainly beef and lamb, the Philistines ate mainly pork, with an occasional meal of dog meat. The Philistines' wine culture was also very well-developed.

Until recently, researchers believed the Philistines assimilated into the local population, and their culture died out after about 200 years. Not so, Maeir says. "Findings from the digs at Gath (Tell es-Safi) and other Philistine sites show that their unique cooking implements continued to appear centuries after their arrival," proving that the Philistines preserved many aspects of their culture for centuries.

In addition, the Philistine pots spread to other areas of Canaan. And, Maeir recalls, even the biblical stories of constant conflict between the Israelites and the Philistines has another side. "It's true that Samson comes into conflict with the Philistines repeatedly," Maeir said, "but on the other hand he also chooses Philistine wives - not once, but twice.

---

Luggage? GPS? Comic books?
Check out fitting gifts for grads at Yahoo! Search.

| 23076|2007-09-07 12:44:32|clyde winters|Re: YAP+ haplotype in South Asia|
Hi paul

Thanks.

Clyde

--- Paul Kekai Manansala <p.manansala@sbcglobal.net>
wrote:

> Clyde,
>
> The haplotypes in the table you listed might be > linked to the X chromosome rather than the Y > chromosome.
>
> Regards,
> Paul Kekai Manansala
>
>
> olmec982000 <olmec982000@yahoo.com> wrote:
> Table 3. Haplotype > distribution among different populations
> -----
>
>
>
> Nucleotide position
>
> -----
> Population Haplotype No. of sequences 365-370b > 494 544 595 672
> -----
> Chimpanzee O 2 - C G C G Asians A 44 GGCCAA C
> A C C Italians (mainland) A 7 GGCCAA C A C C
> B 3 - A G C G Italians (Sardinia) A 9 GGCCAA C A
> C C
> C 1 - A G T G Other Europeans A 24 GGCCAA C A C
> C Nigerians B 26 - A G C G
> D 13 GGCCAA C G C C
> A 1 GGCCAA C A C C Pygmies D 6 GGCCAA C G C C

> B 3 ◆ A G C G Kenyan B 1 ◆ A G C G !Kung D 1 > GGCCAA C G C C a The chimpanzee sequences are from > HARRIS and HEY 1999 .
 > b A duplication of the nucleotides GGCCAA at > positions 359◆364.
 >
 >
 > Paul I don't understand the conclusions of this > paper. In the table above we find that haplotype D > was found among Nigerians and Pygmies. Thirty-three > (33) percent of the Nigerians carried this gene > while 67% of the Pygmies carried haplotype D.
 > If this high frequency of haplotype D among Pygmies > and Nigerians contradicts the conclusions of the > paper. This finding indicates a strong relationship > between between Africans and Southeast Asians in my > opinion.
 > Please explain to me why the groups are seen as > different given the presence of hyplotype D among > Indians and Africans? Thanks.
 > Clyde
 >
 >
 > If haplotype D is found among Nigerians
 > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai > Manansala" wrote:
 > >
 > > The YAP+ variant of the Y chromosome has been > found in the Andaman and > > Nicobar islands off the coast of India.
 > >
 > > YAP here belongs to haplogroup D as compared to > haplogroup E of > > Africa, West Asia and Europe.
 > >
 > > Now, haplogroup D has also been found among > "tribal" peoples of > > Northeast India sometimes at frequencies of up to > 65%.
 > >
 > > ---
 > > ABSTRACT
 > >
 > > Ann Hum Biol. 2007 Sep-Oct;34(5):582-6
 > >
 > > YAP insertion signature in South Asia.

> >
> > Chandrasekar A et al.
> >
> > A total of 2169 samples from 21 tribal populations > from different > > regions of India were scanned for the Y-chromosome > Alu polymorphism.
> > This study reports, for the first time, high > frequencies (8-65%) of Y
> > Alu polymorphic (YAP) insertion in northeast > Indian tribes. All seven > > Jarawa samples from the Andaman and Nicobar > islands had the YAP > > insertion, in conformity with an earlier study of > Andaman Islanders.
> > One isolated case with haplotype E* was found in > Dungri Bhill, a > > western Indian population, while YAP insertion in > northeast India and > > Andaman tribes was found in association with > haplotype D* (M168, > > M174). YAP insertion frequencies reported in the > mainland Indian > > populations are negligible, according to previous > studies. Genetic > > drift may be the causative factor for the variable > frequency of the > > YAP insertion in the mainland populations, while > the founder effect > > may have resulted in the highest incidence of > haplotype D among the > > Andaman Islanders. The results of YAP insertion > and the evidence of > > previous mtDNA studies indicate an early out of > Africa migration to > > the Andaman and Nicobar Islands. The findings of > YAP insertion in > > northeast Indian tribes are very significant for > understanding the > > evolutionary history of the region.
> > ---
> >
> > Regards,
> > Paul Kekai Manansala
> >
>

>
>
>
>

---

Choose the right car based on your needs. Check out Yahoo! Autos new Car Finder tool.

<http://autos.yahoo.com/carfinder/>

| 23077|2007-09-07 13:08:37|cristofori whitakara|Re: King Tut Not Black Enough, Protesters Say|

could the denial be from the fact that is the ancient egyptians were black and the jews lived in that country for over 400 years thus their being black which would cause settlement problems in israel by white europeans jews with no connection to jacob(israel) or joseph a governor of egypt?

Manu Ampim wrote:

Greetings Fatima,

I fully agree with your comments. The denial of ancient Egypt as a black African civilization is pathological. I too agree with the four demands of the coalition. I advised that the coalition's demand #1 should include that the fake 2005 image of "King Tut" be removed from the exhibit altogether. I was informed that this suggestion will be added.

Advancing the work,

Manu Ampim

"Primary research is the greatest weapon against the distortion of African culture & history." - MA

---

I agree with their demands, I am not black but I think its time to reveal the truth and use the common sense.

I think some people, specially the ones that have been making movies about ancient Egypt in Hollywood scoffs at ancient Egyptians because they created this image of ancient Egyptians being blonde/brunette and blue eyed and it caused ignorance in people so they take it as a real fact instead of fiction because in the end that's what they want us to believe because in the end they are racist because their stereotype of being beautiful is someone white not black.

And now Arabs who occupied Egypt try to make us believe that ancient Egyptians were arabs and not blacks because they want to have all the credits about the building of the pyramids, monuments, etc. I am not against arabs I have some arab friends but I have to admit that they can have a big ego.

But that's other story what I try to say is that we need to study by ourselves the history and geography and if we use the common sense we could know that Egypt is in the African continent and in the pharaonic times the world was not globalized as today, now we can find a Japanese in Argentina, a Moroccan in United States, etc. because now we can travel easily but in the past it was not easy so if Egypt is in Africa obviously the people in Egypt was black!

I don't see something wrong with ancient Egyptians being black in the end they are more intelligent, clever, creatives than anyone of other race.

Sorry for my english, but it is not my primary language.

Fatima

---

The coalition has presented officials of the museum with a list of demands: 1) A public apology for not properly representing King Tut as an African and falsely representing Kemet (ancient Egypt) as non-African; 2) Develop and display a historically, factual and scientific exhibit of the African foundation and identity of dynastic Kemet; 3) Display the pioneering accomplishments of African Nile Valley Civilization; and 4) Document and display the research and accomplishments of the renowned African scholar Cheikh Anta Diop in scientifically proving that Kemet was an African civilization.

---

Park yourself in front of a world of choices in alternative vehicles.

Visit the Yahoo! Auto Green Center.

| 23078|2007-09-07 13:13:02|Djehuti Sundaka|Re: A serving of Philistine culture: Boar, dog and fine wine|

Kasluhim may refer to the island of Kos where the Eqwosh had formed the largest group of "Sea Peoples" to attack Kamat during the reign of Riamasisw III. It has no etymological connection to Colchis.

Djehuti Sundaka

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, cristofori whitakara wrote:

>

> i find it interesting that in this report it speaks of the philistine migration from the aegean area and in genesis 10 it is written that the Philistim came out of Casluhim(Colchis--Black Sea) the 6th son of Mizraim(Kemet). Could the organizational skills and cooking skills derive from their relationship with the Kemetians?

>

> Paul Kekai Manansala wrote: By Ofri Ilani

>

> <http://www.haaretz.com/hasen/spages/900447.html>

>

> Few peoples are described in the Bible with as much hostility as

the

> Philistines, who lived in the coastal plain during the period it > documents. In Judges and in 1 Samuel, the Philistines are described as > being "uncircumcised" and presented as one of the most despised > enemies of the Jewish people and its leaders, from Samson to King > David. Recent archaeological discoveries in Israel, however, cast a > different light on the relations between the two peoples. Research > into the dispersal of Philistine cooking methods among various > populations in Israel shows that the Philistines spread their culture

- > beyond the areas under their control. While the two cultures never
- > mixed, the early Hebrews apparently copied many important components

- > of the Philistine lifestyle.
- >
- > Excavations in Philistine cities carried out over the past several
- > years offer a picture of a people with a rich and interesting

culture

- > that often conflicts with their biblical image. "They were very
- > sophisticated for their time," Prof. Aren Maeir, chairman of the
- > Martin (Szusz) Department of Land of Israel Studies and Archaeology at

- > Bar-Ilan University and director of the Tell es-Safi/Gath
- > Archaeological Project.
- >
- > "There's no doubt that the social organization of the Philistines

was

- > much more developed than that of the Israelites, and apparently of

the

- > Canaanites as well." An article by Maeir and his colleagues on the
- > cooking methods and the diet of the Philistines and neighboring
- > populations, due to appear in a forthcoming issue of the American
- > Journal of Archaeology, examines the cultural inter-relations among
- > the various groups.
- > Advertisement
- > Crock-pot cookery
- >
- > Unlike most of the peoples living in the region in the biblical era,

- > the Philistines were not Semites, but rather one of the Sea Peoples
- > who immigrated from the Aegean Sea region of today's Greece and
- > western Turkey. They brought with them technologies new to the area,

- > including a wide range of pottery vessels and a sophisticated
- > political organization.
- >
- > They prepared meals in a characteristic sealed pottery vessel suited > to long cooking times at low heat, while most inhabitants of Canaan at > the time used open pots and faster cooking methods. The bones found at > the Philistine cities showed that their diet was also different

from > those of their neighbors. While the Canaanites and Israelites ate > mainly beef and lamb, the Philistines ate mainly pork, with an > occasional meal of dog meat. The Philistines' wine culture was also > very well-developed.

>

> Until recently, researchers believed the Philistines assimilated

into > the local population, and their culture died out after about 200 > years. Not so, Maeir says. "Findings from the digs at Gath (Tell > es-Safi) and other Philistine sites show that their unique cooking > implements continued to appear centuries after their arrival," proving > that the Philistines preserved many aspects of their culture for > centuries.

>

> In addition, the Philistine pots spread to other areas of Canaan.

And,

> Maeir recalls, even the biblical stories of constant conflict between > the Israelites and the Philistines has another side. "It's true

that

> Samson comes into conflict with the Philistines repeatedly," Maeir > said, "but on the other hand he also chooses Philistine wives - not > once, but twice.

>

>

>

>

>

>

> -----

- > Luggage? GPS? Comic books?
- > Check out fitting gifts for grads at Yahoo! Search.
- >

| 23079|2007-09-07 14:50:16|Djehuti Sundaka|Re: King Tut Not Black Enough, Protesters Say|

Strictly speaking, the Exodus from Kamat, as an event involving an element of the people of YisraEl, is not an event to be found in history. The notion of a family of 70 settling down within the most populous advanced nation of the time, growing within 400 years into a separate nation of over 2.5 million with its own independent identity (rather than having been assimilated), without a single reference being made to them by the indigenous population, is not a notion of historical plausibility. The notion of a pharaoh granting release to an enslaved labor force or of a group of urbanite slaves escaping the most powerful army of the time only to end up surviving in a wilderness that had been under the control of that very same army is also a notion without historical plausibility. Likewise, the notion of escaping to a "Promise land" that was under the control of that foreign army along with indigenous vassals who were constantly deporting boatloads of people into Kamat for enslavement is a notion without historical plausibility. It should therefore be of no surprise that while the author of such notions had obviously been oblivious to the history of the New Kingdom dominion over Kna'an, all of these notions are only presented as being possible through the agency of divine providence. Without the aspect of miraculous acts carried out by supernatural beings, the notion of a biblical Exodus was recognized as being implausible even by the author of the story. When modern-day scholars present multiple possibilities for each event to provide a naturalistic perspective (such as reducing YisraEl to just the tribe of Lewiy due to the presence of certain personal names from Kamat i.e. Mosheh, Kofniy, and Piynahas), the fact ever remains that the New Kingdom period in which YisraEl is thought to have been enslaved is known to have preserved lists of peoples enslaved from both the urban centers and the wilderness. In none of these lists are individuals under the designation of "YisraEl" (or any part thereof) ever mentioned. Furthermore, such lists show that enslaved peoples had been dispersed to various parts of the land to fulfill various labor needs. Only members of an ethnicity recognized to have possessed a specialized skill valued by the state could remain together in a place of their own. As YisraEl is claimed to have been a people specialized in shepherding (Genesis 47:3-6), yet like the actual known shepherding peoples (i.e. shasw), had been assigned non-shepherding labor (Exodus 1:11-14), they obviously couldn't have possessed a specialized skill that would have been valued enough to have kept them together. Upon enslavement, their existence as a people would have been immediately dissolved (as would have been naturally desired by those to have enslaved them cf. Exodus 1:9-10). No ethnic entity would have existed in a single area to have been spared the plagues (Exodus 8:22, 9:26) or to have uniformly left a single location (Exodus 12:37). As shown above, YisraEl had been an entity only known to have existed outside of Kamat, never within it. Thus, the notion of any part of YisraEl having ever been enslaved in Kamat as a group is a non-historical notion.

Djehuti Sundaka

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, cristofori whitakara wrote:

>

> could the denial be from the fact that is the ancient egyptians were black and the jews lived in that country for over 400 years thus their being black which would cause settlement problems in israel by white europeans jews with no connection to jacob(israel) or joseph a governor of egypt?

>

> Manu Ampim wrote: Greetings Fatima,

>

> I fully agree with your comments. The denial of ancient Egypt

as a black African civilization is pathological. I too agree with the four demands of the coalition. I advised that the coalition's demand #1 should include that the fake 2005 image of "King Tut" be removed from the exhibit altogether. I was informed that this suggestion will be added.

>

> Advancing the work,

>

> Manu Ampim

>

> "Primary research is the greatest weapon against the distortion

of African culture & history." - MA

>

> -----

>

>

>

>

> I agree with their demands, I am not black but I think its time

to reveal the truth and use the common sense.

> I think some people, specially the ones that have been making movies about ancient Egypt in Hollywood scoffs at ancient Egyptians because they created this image of ancient Egyptians being blonde/brunette and blue eyed and it caused ignorance in people so they take it as a real fact instead of fiction because in the end that's what they want us to believe because in the end they are racist because their stereotype of being beautiful is someone white not black.

>

> And now Arabs who occupied Egypt try to make us believe that ancient Egyptians were arabs and not blacks because they want to have all the credits about the building of the pyramids, monuments, etc. I am not against arabs I have some arab friends but I have to admit that they can have a big ego.

>

> But that's other story what I try to say is that we need to study by ourselves the history and geography and if we use the common sense we could know that Egypt is in the African continent and in the pharaonic times the world was not globalized as today, now we can find a Japanese in Argentina, a Moroccan in United States, etc. because now we can travel easily but in the past it was not easy so if Egypt is in Africa obviously the people in Egypt was black!

>

> I don't see something wrong with ancient Egyptians being black in the end they are more intelligent, clever, creatives than anyone of other race.

>

> Sorry for my english, but it is not my primary language.

>

> Fatima

>

>

>

>

> -----

>

>

>

> The coalition has presented officials of the museum with a list of demands: 1) A public apology for not properly representing King Tut as an African and falsely representing Kemet (ancient Egypt) as non-African; 2) Develop and display a historically, factual and scientific exhibit of the African foundation and identity of dynastic Kemet; 3) Display the pioneering accomplishments of African Nile Valley Civilization; and 4) Document and display the research and accomplishments of the renowned African scholar Cheikh Anta Diop in scientifically proving that Kemet was an African civilization.

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

> -----

> Park yourself in front of a world of choices in alternative

vehicles.

> Visit the Yahoo! Auto Green Center.

>

| 23080|2007-09-07 17:51:15|K. Loganathan|Fwd: [Indo-Eurasia] African mega-droughts and human migration|

Steve Farmer wrote:

CC: Steve Farmer

To: Indo-Eurasian_research@yahooogroups.com

From: Steve Farmer

Date: Fri, 7 Sep 2007 11:14:35 -0700

Subject: [Indo-Eurasia] African mega-droughts and human migration

Dear List,

A major paper was published in this week's PNAS on climate change in Africa and human migration. Thanks to Bob Simpkins for pointing to this very important paper:

Abstract only:

<http://tinyurl.com/2gou33>

Full paper (open access):

<http://tinyurl.com/yuff98> (2+ meg download)

Steve

*****

Plaintext of abstract:

East African megadroughts between 135 and 75 thousand years ago and bearing on early-modern human origins

Christopher A. Scholz a,b, Thomas C. Johnson c, Andrew S. Cohen d, John W. King e, John A. Peck f, Jonathan T. Overpeck d, Michael R. Talbot g, Erik T. Brown c, Leonard Kalindekaffe h, Philip Y. O. Amoko i, Robert P. Lyons a, Timothy M. Shanahan d, Isla S. Castaño c, Clifford W. Heil e, Steven L. Forman j, Lanny R. McHargue k, Kristina R. Beuning l, Jeanette Gomez j, and James Pierson j
aDepartment of Earth Sciences, 204 Heroy Geology Laboratory, Syracuse University, Syracuse, NY 13244; cLarge Lakes Observatory and Department of Geological Sciences, University of Minnesota, Duluth, MN 55812; dDepartment of Geosciences, University of Arizona, Tucson, AZ 85721; eGraduate School of Oceanography, University of Rhode Island, Narragansett, RI 02882; fDepartment of Geology and Environmental Science, University of Akron, Akron, OH 44325; gDepartment of Earth Science, University of Bergen, N-5007 Bergen, Norway; hMalawi Geological Survey Department, Zomba, Malawi; iGeological Survey Department of Ghana, Accra, Ghana; jDepartment of Earth and Environmental Sciences, University of Illinois, Chicago, IL 60607; kScottish Universities Environmental Research Centre, East Kilbride G75 0QF, Scotland; and lDepartment of Biology, University of Wisconsin-Eau Claire, Eau-Claire, WI 54702

Edited by William F. Ruddiman, University of Virginia, Charlottesville, VA, and accepted by the Editorial Board July 27, 2007 (received for review April 30, 2007)

The environmental backdrop to the evolution and spread of early Homo sapiens in East Africa is known mainly from isolated outcrops and distant marine sediment cores. Here we present results from new scientific drill cores from Lake Malawi, the first long and continuous, high-fidelity records of tropical climate change from the continent itself. Our record shows periods of severe aridity between 135 and 75 thousand years (kyr) ago, when the lake's water volume was reduced by at least 95%. Surprisingly, these intervals of pronounced tropical African aridity in the early late-Pleistocene were much more severe than the Last Glacial Maximum (LGM), the period previously recognized as one of the most arid of the Quaternary. From these cores and from records from Lakes Tanganyika (East Africa) and Bosumtwi (West Africa), we document a major rise in water levels and a shift to more humid conditions over much of tropical Africa after [approx.]

70 kyr ago. This transition to wetter, more stable conditions coincides with diminished orbital eccentricity, and a reduction in precession-dominated climatic extremes. The observed climate mode switch to decreased environmental variability is consistent with terrestrial and marine records from in and around tropical Africa, but our records provide evidence for dramatically wetter conditions after 70 kyr ago. Such climate change may have stimulated the expansion and migrations of early modern human populations.

Author contributions: C.A.S., T.C.J., A.S.C., J.W.K., J.A.P., J.T.O., and M.R.T. designed research; C.A.S., T.C.J., A.S.C., J.W.K., E.T.B., L.K., P.Y.O.A., R.P.L., T.M.S., I.S.C., C.W.H., S.L.F., L.R.M., and K.R.B. performed research; C.A.S., T.C.J., A.S.C., J.W.K., J.A.P., E.T.B., R.P.L., S.L.F., L.R.M., J.G., and J.P. analyzed data; and C.A.S. wrote the paper.

---

Fussy? Opinionated? Impossible to please? Perfect. Join Yahoo!'s user panel and lay it on us.
| 23081|2007-09-07 20:23:17|kungfuhustle|Re: King Tut Not Black Enough, Protesters Say|
That would present a real problem for zionist "jews".

On Fri, 2007-09-07 at 13:08 -0700, cristofori whitakara wrote:

- > could the denial be from the fact that is the ancient egyptians were
- > black and the jews lived in that country for over 400 years thus their
- > being black which would cause settlement problems in israel by white
- > europeans jews with no connection to jacob(israel) or joseph a
- > governor of egypt?

- >
- > Manu Ampim <Profmanu@acninc.net> wrote:

- >
- > Greetings Fatima,

- >
- > I fully agree with your comments. The denial of ancient Egypt
- > as a black African civilization is pathological. I too agree
- > with the four demands of the coalition. I advised that the
- > coalition's demand #1 should include that the fake 2005 image
- > of "King Tut" be removed from the exhibit altogether. I was
- > informed that this suggestion will be added.

- >
- > Advancing the work,

- >
- > Manu Ampim

- >
- > "Primary research is the greatest weapon against the
- > distortion of African culture & history." - MA

- >

> _____
>
> I agree with their demands, I am not black but I think its
> time to reveal the truth and use the common sense.
> I think some people, specially the ones that have been making > movies about ancient Egypt in Hollywood scoffs at ancient > Egyptians because they created this image of ancient Egyptians > being blonde/brunette and blue eyed and it caused ignorance in > people so they take it as a real fact instead of fiction > because in the end that's what they want us to believe because > in the end they are racist because their stereotype of being > beautiful is someone white not black.
>
> And now Arabs who occupied Egypt try to make us believe that > ancient Egyptians were arabs and not blacks because they want > to have all the credits about the building of the pyramids, > monuments, etc. I am not against arabs I have some arab > friends but I have to admit that they can have a big ego.
>
> But that's other story what I try to say is that we need to > study by ourselves the history and geography and if we use the > common sense we could know that Egypt is in the African > continent and in the pharaonic times the world was not > globalized as today, now we can find a Japanese in Argentina, > a Moroccan in United States, etc. because now we can travel > easily but in the past it was not easy so if Egypt is in > Africa obviously the people in Egypt was black!
>
> I don't see something wrong with ancient Egyptians being black
> in the end they are more intelligent, clever, creatives than > anyone of other race.
>
> Sorry for my english, but it is not my primary language.
>
> Fatima
>
>
> _____
>
>
> The coalition has presented officials of the museum with a > list of demands: 1) A public apology for not properly > representing King Tut as an African and falsely representing > Kemet (ancient Egypt) as non-African; 2) Develop and display a > historically, factual and scientific exhibit of the African > foundation and identity of dynastic Kemet; 3) Display the

- > pioneering accomplishments of African Nile Valley
- > Civilization; and 4) Document and display the research and
- > accomplishments of the renowned African scholar Cheikh Anta
- > Diop in scientifically proving that Kemet was an African
- > civilization.

>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

-
- > Park yourself in front of a world of choices in alternative vehicles.
  - > Visit the Yahoo! Auto Green Center.

>
>
>

| 23082|2007-09-08 08:51:37|cristofori whitakara|Re: King Tut Not Black Enough, Protesters Say|

does this mean that what is written in Exodus is talking about Egyptian bondage of self?

Djehuti Sundaka wrote:

Strictly speaking, the Exodus from Kamat, as an event involving an element of the people of YisraEl, is not an event to be found in history. The notion of a family of 70 settling down within the most populous advanced nation of the time, growing within 400 years into a separate nation of over 2.5 million with its own independent identity (rather than having been assimilated) , without a single reference being made to them by the indigenous population, is not a notion of historical plausibility. The notion of a pharaoh granting release to an enslaved labor force or of a group of urbanite slaves escaping the most powerful army of the time only to end up surviving in a wilderness that had been under the control of that very same army is also a notion without historical plausibility. Likewise, the notion of escaping to a "Promise land" that was under the control of that foreign army along with indigenous vassals who were constantly deporting boatloads of people into Kamat for enslavement is a notion without historical plausibility. It should therefore be of no surprise that while the author of such notions had obviously been oblivious to the history of the New Kingdom dominion over Kna'an, all of these notions are only presented as being possible through the agency of divine providence. Without the aspect of miraculous acts carried out by supernatural beings, the notion of a biblical Exodus was recognized as being implausible even by the author of the story. When modern-day scholars present multiple possibilities for each event to provide a naturalistic perspective (such as reducing YisraEl to just the tribe of Lewiy due to the presence of certain personal names from Kamat i.e. Mosheh, Kofniy, and Piynahas), the fact ever remains that the New Kingdom period in which YisraEl is thought to have been enslaved is known to have preserved lists of peoples enslaved from both the urban centers and the wilderness. In none of these lists are individuals under the designation of "YisraEl" (or any part thereof) ever mentioned. Furthermore, such lists show that enslaved peoples had been dispersed to various parts of the land to fulfill various labor needs. Only members of an ethnicity recognized to have possessed a specialized skill valued by the state could remain together in a place of their own. As YisraEl is claimed to have been a people specialized in shepherding (Genesis 47:3-6), yet like the actual known shepherding peoples (i.e. shasw), had been assigned non-shepherding labor (Exodus 1:11-14), they obviously couldn't have possessed a specialized skill that would have been valued enough to have kept them together. Upon enslavement, their existence as a people would have been immediately dissolved (as would have been naturally desired by those to have enslaved them cf. Exodus 1:9-10). No ethnic entity would have existed in a single area to have been spared the plagues (Exodus 8:22, 9:26) or to have uniformly left a single location (Exodus 12:37). As shown above, YisraEl had been an entity only known to have existed outside of Kamat, never within it. Thus, the notion of any part of YisraEl having ever been enslaved in Kamat as a group is a non-historical notion.

Djehuti Sundaka

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, cristofori whitakara wrote:

>

> could the denial be from the fact that is the ancient egyptians were black and the jews lived in that country for over 400 years thus their being black which would cause settlement problems in israel by white europeans jews with no connection to jacob(israel) or joseph a governor of egypt?

>

> Manu Ampim wrote: Greetings Fatima,

>

> I fully agree with your comments. The denial of ancient Egypt as a black African civilization is pathological. I too agree with the four demands of the coalition. I advised that the coalition's demand #1 should include that the fake 2005 image of "King Tut" be removed from the exhibit altogether. I was informed that this suggestion will be added.

>
> Advancing the work,
>
> Manu Ampim
>
> "Primary research is the greatest weapon against the distortion
of African culture & history." - MA
>
> -----
>
>
>
>
>
> I agree with their demands, I am not black but I think its time
to reveal the truth and use the common sense.
> I think some people, specially the ones that have been making movies about ancient Egypt in Hollywood scoffs at ancient Egyptians because they created this image of ancient Egyptians being blonde/brunette and blue eyed and it caused ignorance in people so they take it as a real fact instead of fiction because in the end
that's what they want us to believe because in the end they are racist because their stereotype of being beautiful is someone white not black.
>
> And now Arabs who occupied Egypt try to make us believe that ancient Egyptians were arabs and not blacks because they want to have all the credits about the building of the pyramids, monuments, etc. I am not against arabs I have some arab friends but I have to admit that they can have a big ego.
>
> But that's other story what I try to say is that we need to study by ourselves the history and geography and if we use the common sense we could know that Egypt is in the African continent and in the pharaonic times the world was not globalized as today, now we can find a Japanese in Argentina, a Moroccan in United Stated, etc. because now we can travel easily but in the past it was not easy so if Egypt is in Africa obviously the people in Egypt was black!
>
> I don't see something wrong with ancient Egyptians being black in the end they are more intelligent, clever, creatives than anyone of other race.
>
> Sorry for my english, but it is not my primary language.
>
> Fatima

>
 >
 >
 >
 > -----
 >
 >
 >
 > The coalition has presented officials of the museum with a list of demands: 1) A public apology for not properly representing King Tut as an African and falsely representing Kemet (ancient Egypt) as non-African; 2) Develop and display a historically, factual and scientific exhibit of the African foundation and identity of dynastic Kemet; 3) Display the pioneering accomplishments of African Nile Valley Civilization; and 4) Document and display the research and accomplishments of the renowned African scholar Cheikh Anta Diop in scientifically proving that Kemet was an African civilization.
 >
 >
 >
 >
 >
 >
 >
 >
 > -----
 > Park yourself in front of a world of choices in alternative vehicles.
 > Visit the Yahoo! Auto Green Center.
 >

---

Luggage? GPS? Comic books?

Check out fitting gifts for grads at Yahoo! Search.

| 23083|2007-09-08 10:30:03|Djehuti Sundaka|Re: King Tut Not Black Enough, Protesters Say|

It means that what is written in Exodus is pure fabrication inspired by previous fabrications ultimately inspired by the historical Expulsion of the Hika-Khaswt. Literary parallels between the Exodus story and the Io and Danaos myths indicate derivation from an original 'Exodus' story that had been written in Zur (Tyre) around the time of EthBaal (the father of Queen IyzeBel cf. 1Kings 16:31) and itself would seem to have been inspired by the 19th Dynasty story of "The Quarrel of Apophis and Seqenenre". This, of course, had been inspired by the historical event of the Expulsion. The Exodus story is far more the product of literary history than actual history. A story that was over a thousand years in the making:

1. Expulsion of Hika-Xaswt (c. 1550 BCE)
2. "The Quarrel of Apophis and Seqenenre" (c. 1230 BCE)
3. The Zuriy 'Exodus' account (c. 870 BCE)
4. The Shomeriy 'Exodus' account (c. 780 BCE)
5. The J account (c. 770 BCE)
6. The E account (c. 760 BCE)
7. The P account (c. 628 BCE)
8. The D account (c. 622 BCE)
9. The R account (c. 457 BCE)

Djehuti Sundaka

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, cristofori whitakara wrote:

>

> does this mean that what is written in Exodus is talking about Egyptian bondage of self?

>

> Djehuti Sundaka wrote: Strictly speaking, the Exodus from Kamat, as an event involving an > element of the people of YisraEl, is not an event to be found in > history. The notion of a family of 70 settling down within the most > populous advanced nation of the time, growing within 400 years

into > a separate nation of over 2.5 million with its own independent > identity (rather than having been assimilated), without a single > reference being made to them by the indigenous population, is not

a > notion of historical plausibility. The notion of a pharaoh granting > release to an enslaved labor force or of a group of urbanite slaves

> escaping the most powerful army of the time only to end up surviving

> in a wilderness that had been under the control of that very same > army is also a notion without historical plausibility. Likewise, > the notion of escaping to a "Promise land" that was under the > control of that foreign army along with indigenous vassals who were > constantly deporting boatloads of people into Kamat for enslavement

> is a notion without historical plausibility. It should therefore

be > of no surprise that while the author of such notions had obviously > been oblivious to the history of the New Kingdom dominion over

> Kna'an, all of these notions are only presented as being possible > through the agency of divine providence. Without the aspect of > miraculous acts carried out by supernatural beings, the notion of

a > biblical Exodus was recognized as being implausible even by the > author of the story. When modern-day scholars present multiple > possibilities for each event to provide a naturalistic perspective

> (such as reducing YisraEl to just the tribe of Lewiy due to the > presence of certain personal names from Kamat i.e. Mosheh, Kofniy, > and Piynehas), the fact ever remains that the New Kingdom period

in > which YisraEl is thought to have been enslaved is known to have > preserved lists of peoples enslaved from both the urban centers

and

> the wilderness. In none of these lists are individuals under the > designation of "YisraEl" (or any part thereof) ever mentioned.

> Furthermore, such lists show that enslaved peoples had been > dispersed to various parts of the land to fulfill various labor > needs. Only members of an ethnicity recognized to have possessed a > specialized skill valued by the state could remain together in a > place of their own. As YisraEl is claimed to have been a people > specialized in shepherding (Genesis 47:3-6), yet like the actual > known shepherding peoples (i.e. shasw), had been assigned non-> shepherding labor (Exodus 1:11-14), they obviously couldn't have > possessed a specialized skill that would have been valued enough

to

- > have kept them together. Upon enslavement, their existence as a
- > people would have been immediately dissolved (as would have been
- > naturally desired by those to have enslaved them cf. Exodus 1:9-
- > 10). No ethnic entity would have existed in a single area to have
- > been spared the plagues (Exodus 8:22, 9:26) or to have uniformly
- > left a single location (Exodus 12:37). As shown above, YisraEl had
- > been an entity only known to have existed outside of Kamat, never
- > within it. Thus, the notion of any part of YisraEl having ever

been

- > enslaved in Kamat as a group is a non-historical notion.

>

- > Djehuti Sundaka

>

- > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, cristofori whitakara

- > wrote:

>>

- >> could the denial be from the fact that is the ancient egyptians
- > were black and the jews lived in that country for over 400 years
- > thus their being black which would cause settlement problems in
- > israel by white europeans jews with no connection to jacob(israel)
- > or joseph a governor of egypt?

>>

- >> Manu Ampim wrote: Greetings Fatima,

>>

- >> I fully agree with your comments. The denial of ancient Egypt
- > as a black African civilization is pathological. I too agree with
- > the four demands of the coalition. I advised that the coalition's
- > demand #1 should include that the fake 2005 image of "King Tut" be
- > removed from the exhibit altogether. I was informed that this
- > suggestion will be added.

>>

- >> Advancing the work,

>>

- >> Manu Ampim

>>

- >> "Primary research is the greatest weapon against the distortion
- > of African culture & history." - MA

>>

- >> -----

>>

>>

>>

>>

>>

- >> I agree with their demands, I am not black but I think its time

- > to reveal the truth and use the common sense.
- >> I think some people, specially the ones that have been making
- > movies about ancient Egypt in Hollywood scoffs at ancient

Egyptians

- > because they created this image of ancient Egyptians being
- > blonde/brunette and blue eyed and it caused ignorance in people so
- > they take it as a real fact instead of fiction because in the end
- > that's what they want us to believe because in the end they are
- > racist because their stereotype of being beautiful is someone

white

- > not black.
- >>
- >> And now Arabs who occupied Egypt try to make us believe that
- > ancient Egyptians were Arabs and not blacks because they want to
- > have all the credits about the building of the pyramids,

monuments,

- > etc. I am not against Arabs I have some Arab friends but I have to
- > admit that they can have a big ego.
- >>
- >> But that's other story what I try to say is that we need to
- > study by ourselves the history and geography and if we use the
- > common sense we could know that Egypt is in the African continent
- > and in the pharaonic times the world was not globalized as today,
- > now we can find a Japanese in Argentina, a Moroccan in United
- > States, etc. because now we can travel easily but in the past it

was

- > not easy so if Egypt is in Africa obviously the people in Egypt

was

- > black!
- >>
- >> I don't see something wrong with ancient Egyptians being black
- > in the end they are more intelligent, clever, creatives than

anyone

- > of other race.
- >>
- >> Sorry for my English, but it is not my primary language.
- >>
- >> Fatima
- >>
- >>

> >
> >
> > -----
> >
> >
> >
> >
> > The coalition has presented officials of the museum with a list > of demands: 1) A public apology for not properly representing King > Tut as an African and falsely representing Kemet (ancient Egypt)

as
> non-African; 2) Develop and display a historically, factual and > scientific exhibit of the African foundation and identity of > dynastic Kemet; 3) Display the pioneering accomplishments of

African
> Nile Valley Civilization; and 4) Document and display the research > and accomplishments of the renowned African scholar Cheikh Anta

Diop
> in scientifically proving that Kemet was an African civilization.

> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> > -----
> > Park yourself in front of a world of choices in alternative
> vehicles.
> > Visit the Yahoo! Auto Green Center.

> >
>
>
>
>
>
>
> -----
> Luggage? GPS? Comic books?
> Check out fitting gifts for grads at Yahoo! Search.
>

| 23084|2007-09-08 10:35:40|Djehuti Sundaka|Re: King Tut Not Black Enough, Protesters Say|
Indications imply that the original `Jews' (i.e. the specific ethnic element to have designated themselves as `Yehwdah') had been non-

Semitic, Aryan influenced, anti-Semites. Confirmation of the non-Semitic element is provided by genetic studies showing the "Cohen modal haplotype" of Jewish priests to be of Northeast Caucasian extraction dating back to c. 1000 BCE (around the time of Zadowq). In contrast with the overall Arab (i.e. Semitic) population, the genes of both Palestinians and the global Jewish population in general also reveal that their greatest ethnic affiliation is with the non-Semitic people known as the Kurds. However, though a strong patrilineal affiliation with the Kurds is genetically established, a strong maternal affiliation found in the mtDNA of Palestinians, Shomeriym (Samaritans), and Iraqi Jews, indicates an ancient female Jewish origin from the indigenous women of Kna'an (cf. Human Mutation 24:248-260, 2004). The people of YisraEl and Yehwdah had therefore been a people descended from northern non-Semitic men and indigenous Semitic women. The 'original Jews' had been the southern Kna'an highlanders of patrilineal Khurri descent. Such an ancestry had perhaps been implied by the J-writer's story of the sons of YisraEl leaving Kharran to dwell at Shechem only to end up killing all the males of Shechem while taking possession of their women (Genesis 34:25-29, cf. Deuteronomy 21:10-13). This inference is even more explicit in the J-writer's obtrusive story of Yehwdah only having sons by two Kna'aniy women (Genesis 38:2-6, 38:18).

The Shechem centered hapiru to have eventually called themselves "YisraEl" (i.e. El-Contends) had probably come into being in the rural highlands between Shechem and Megidow (during the reign of Amonemhat III cf. "Egypt, Canaan, And Israel In Ancient Times" p. 269, 274) and had probably become "YisraEl" during the great rebellion in the fifth year of Ramesses II following the Battle of Qadesh. Like the people of Yerushalayim, the people of YisraEl had probably been of predominate Khurri descent. This identification is supported by the fact that the Khurri had composed roughly 40% of the Kna'an population during the New Kingdom making it the single largest ethnicity of the land. During the 18th Dynasty the entire region had been named after them in becoming known as the land of the Kharw (Khurri) while at the beginning of the 22nd Dynasty, a people living in an area conforming to the biblical borders of Yowsef had been specifically referred to as "Asiatics of the army of Mitanni".

Djehuti Sundaka

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, cristofori whitakara wrote:

>

> could the denial be from the fact that is the ancient egyptians

were black and the jews lived in that country for over 400 years
thus their being black which would cause settlement problems in israel by white europeans jews with no connection to jacob(israel)
or joseph a governor of egypt?

>

> Manu Ampim wrote: Greetings Fatima,

>

> I fully agree with your comments. The denial of ancient Egypt

as a black African civilization is pathological. I too agree with the four demands of the coalition. I advised that the coalition's demand #1 should include that the fake 2005 image of "King Tut" be removed from the exhibit altogether. I was informed that this suggestion will be added.

>

> Advancing the work,

>

> Manu Ampim

>

> "Primary research is the greatest weapon against the distortion

of African culture & history." - MA

>

> -----

>

>

>

>

> I agree with their demands, I am not black but I think its time

to reveal the truth and use the common sense.

> I think some people, specially the ones that have been making

movies about ancient Egypt in Hollywood scoffs at ancient Egyptians
because they created this image of ancient Egyptians being blonde/brunette and blue eyed and it caused ignorance in people so they take it as a real fact instead of fiction because in the end
that's what they want us to believe because in the end they are racist because their stereotype of being beautiful is someone white
not black.

>

> And now Arabs who occupied Egypt try to make us believe that ancient Egyptians were arabs and not blacks because they want to have all the credits about the building of the pyramids, monuments, etc. I am not against arabs I have some arab friends but I have to admit that they can have a big ego.

>

> But that's other story what I try to say is that we need to study by ourselves the history and geography and if we use the common sense we could know that Egypt is in the African continent and in the pharaonic times the world was not globalized as today, now we can find a Japanese in Argentina, a Moroccan in United Stated, etc. because now we can travel easily but in the past it was not easy so if Egypt is in Africa obviously the people in Egypt was black!

>

> I don't see something wrong with ancient Egyptians being black

in the end they are more intelligent, clever, creatives than anyone of other race.

>

> Sorry for my english, but it is not my primary language.

>

> Fatima

>

>

>

>

> -----

>

>

>

> The coalition has presented officials of the museum with a list of demands: 1) A public apology for not properly representing King Tut as an African and falsely representing Kemet (ancient Egypt) as non-African; 2) Develop and display a historically, factual and scientific exhibit of the African foundation and identity of dynastic Kemet; 3) Display the pioneering accomplishments of African Nile Valley Civilization; and 4) Document and display the research and accomplishments of the renowned African scholar Cheikh Anta Diop in scientifically proving that Kemet was an African civilization.

>

>

>

>

>

>
>
> -----
> Park yourself in front of a world of choices in alternative

vehicles.

> Visit the Yahoo! Auto Green Center.

>

| 23085|2007-09-08 17:25:00|kungfuhustle|Re: King Tut Not Black Enough, Protesters Say|
SO, this would imply the Jews are recent relative to Egypt.

What about the origins of the Hebrews?

Is this, in your opinion, an Egyptian group that separated from Egypt, perhaps via Tell el Amarna?

Meninarmer

On Sat, 2007-09-08 at 17:35 +0000, Djehuti Sundaka wrote:

> Indications imply that the original `Jews' (i.e. the specific ethnic > element to have designated themselves as `Yehwdah') had been non-> Semitic, Aryan influenced, anti-Semites. Confirmation of the non-> Semitic element is provided by genetic studies showing the "Cohen > modal haplotype" of Jewish priests to be of Northeast Caucasian > extraction dating back to c. 1000 BCE (around the time of Zadowq).
> In contrast with the overall Arab (i.e. Semitic) population, the > genes of both Palestinians and the global Jewish population in > general also reveal that their greatest ethnic affiliation is with > the non-Semitic people known as the Kurds. However, though a strong > patrilineal affiliation with the Kurds is genetically established, a > strong maternal affiliation found in the mtDNA of Palestinians, > Shomeriym (Samaritans), and Iraqi Jews, indicates an ancient female > Jewish origin from the indigenous women of Kna'an (cf. Human > Mutation 24:248-260, 2004). The people of YisraEl and Yehwdah had > therefore been a people descended from northern non-Semitic men and > indigenous Semitic women. The `original Jews' had been the southern > Kna'an highlanders of patrilineal Khurri descent. Such an ancestry > had perhaps been implied by the J-writer's story of the sons of > YisraEl leaving Kharran to dwell at Shechem only to end up killing > all the males of Shechem while taking possession of their women > (Genesis 34:25-29, cf. Deuteronomy 21:10-13). This inference is > even more explicit in the J-writer's obtrusive story of Yehwdah only > having sons by two Kna'ani women (Genesis 38:2-6, 38:18).
>
> The Shechem centered hapiru to have eventually called > themselves "YisraEl" (i.e. El-Contends) had probably come into being > in the rural highlands between Shechem and Megidow (during the reign > of Amanehatip III cf. "Egypt, Canaan, And Israel In Ancient Times"
> p. 269, 274) and had probably become "YisraEl" during the great > rebellion in the fifth year of Riamasisw II following the Battle of > Qadesh. Like the people of Yerwshalayim, the people of YisraEl had > probably been of predominate Khurri descent. This identification is > supported by the fact that the Khurri had composed roughly 40% of > the Kna'an population during the New Kingdom making it the single > largest ethnicity of the land. During the 18th Dynasty the entire > region had been named after them in becoming known as the land of > the Kharw (Khurri) while at the beginning of the 22nd Dynasty, a > people living in an area conforming to the biblical borders of > Yowsef had been specifically referred to as "Asiatics of the army of > Mitanni".

>

> Djehuti Sundaka

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, cristofori whitakara

> wrote:

>>

>> could the denial be from the fact that is the ancient egyptians
> were black and the jews lived in that country for over 400 years
> thus their being black which would cause settlement problems in > israel by white europeans jews with no connection to jacob(israel)
> or joseph a governor of egypt?

>>

>> Manu Ampim wrote: Greetings Fatima,

>>

>> I fully agree with your comments. The denial of ancient Egypt > as a black African civilization is pathological. I too agree with > the four demands of the coalition. I advised that the coalition's > demand #1 should include that the fake 2005 image of "King Tut" be > removed from the exhibit altogether. I was informed that this > suggestion will be added.

>>

>> Advancing the work,

>>

>> Manu Ampim

>>

>> "Primary research is the greatest weapon against the distortion
> of African culture & history." - MA

>>

>> -----

>>

>>

>>

>>

>> I agree with their demands, I am not black but I think its time
> to reveal the truth and use the common sense.

> > I think some people, specially the ones that have been making > movies about ancient Egypt in Hollywood scoffs at ancient Egyptians
> because they created this image of ancient Egyptians being > blonde/brunette and blue eyed and it caused ignorance in people so > they take it as a real fact instead of fiction because in the end
> that's what they want us to believe because in the end they are > racist because their stereotype of being beautiful is someone white
> not black.

> >

> > And now Arabs who occupied Egypt try to make us believe that > ancient Egyptians were Arabs and not blacks because they want to > have all the credits about the building of the pyramids, monuments, > etc. I am not against Arabs I have some Arab friends but I have to > admit that they can have a big ego.

> >

> > But that's other story what I try to say is that we need to > study by ourselves the history and geography and if we use the > common sense we could know that Egypt is in the African continent
> and in the pharaonic times the world was not globalized as today,
> now we can find a Japanese in Argentina, a Moroccan in United > States, etc. because now we can travel easily but in the past it was > not easy so if Egypt is in Africa obviously the people in Egypt was > black!

> >

> > I don't see something wrong with ancient Egyptians being black > in the end they are more intelligent, clever, creatives than anyone > of other race.

> >

> > Sorry for my English, but it is not my primary language.

> >

> > Fatima

> >

> >

> >

> >

> > -----

> >

> >

> >

> >

> > The coalition has presented officials of the museum with a list > of demands: 1) A public apology for not properly representing King > Tut as an African and falsely representing Kemet (ancient Egypt) as > non-African; 2) Develop and display a historically, factual and > scientific exhibit of the African foundation and identity of > dynastic Kemet; 3) Display the pioneering accomplishments of African > Nile Valley Civilization; and 4) Document and display the research > and accomplishments of the renowned African scholar Cheikh Anta Diop > in scientifically proving that Kemet was an African civilization.

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> > -----

> > Park yourself in front of a world of choices in alternative
> vehicles.

> > Visit the Yahoo! Auto Green Center.

> >

>

>

>

>

>

| 23086|2007-09-08 17:26:22|JASON WOODS|Re: King Tut Not Black Enough, Protesters Say|

I just read a book called the Tutankhamen and the exodus conspiracy by Andrew Collins which states that Carter and Carnarvon found Hebraic papyruses in the tomb of King Tut which disproved an Ashkenazi Jewish exodus out of Kemet and thus any legitimacy of a Zionist Jewish state in the middle east. The entire myth of "The Curse" of King Tut was to provide cover for the murders of those who threatened to expose the truth of the African origins of the Hebrews. Kemet is the home of the ancient Hebrew people and biblical history can only be authenticated with Kemetian documentation, temples and tombs.

The denial of the African origins of the Hebrews and Kemetians are both for the sole purpose of propping up fictitious western religions for the spiritual enslavement of African people specifically and the world in general.

An Informed Afrikan

kungfuhustle wrote:

That would present a real problem for Zionist "Jews".

On Fri, 2007-09-07 at 13:08 -0700, Cristofori Whitakara wrote:

> could the denial be from the fact that the ancient Egyptians were > black and the Jews lived in that country for over 400 years thus their > being black which would cause settlement problems in Israel by white > Europeans Jews with no connection to Jacob (Israel) or Joseph a > governor of Egypt?

>

> Manu Ampim <Profmanu@acninc.net> wrote:

>

> Greetings Fatima,

>

> I fully agree with your comments. The denial of ancient Egypt

> as a black African civilization is pathological. I too agree > with the four demands of the coalition. I advised that the > coalition's demand #1 should include that the fake 2005 image > of "King Tut" be removed from the exhibit altogether. I was > informed that this suggestion will be added.

>

> Advancing the work,

>

> Manu Ampim

>

> "Primary research is the greatest weapon against the > distortion of African culture & history." - MA

>

> _____

_____ --

>

> I agree with their demands, I am not black but I think its

> time to reveal the truth and use the common sense.

> I think some people, specially the ones that have been making

> movies about ancient Egypt in Hollywood scoffs at ancient

> Egyptians because they created this image of ancient Egyptians

> being blonde/brunette and blue eyed and it caused ignorance in

> people so they take it as a real fact instead of fiction

> because in the end that's what they want us to believe because > in the end they are racist because their stereotype of being > beautiful is someone white not black.

>

> And now Arabs who occupied Egypt try to make us believe that > ancient Egyptians were Arabs and not blacks because they want > to have all the credits about the building of the pyramids, > monuments, etc. I am not against Arabs I have some Arab > friends but I have to admit that they can have a big ego.

>

> But that's other story what I try to say is that we need to > study by ourselves the history and geography and if we use the > common sense we could know that Egypt is in the African > continent and in the pharaonic times the world was not > globalized as today, now we can find a Japanese in Argentina,

> a Moroccan in United States, etc. because now we can travel

> easily but in the past it was not easy so if Egypt is in > Africa obviously the people in Egypt was black!

>

> I don't see something wrong with ancient Egyptians being black

> in the end they are more intelligent, clever, creatives than > anyone of other race.

>

> Sorry for my english, but it is not my primary language.

>

> Fatima

>

>

> _____

_____

>

>

> The coalition has presented officials of the museum with a > list of demands: 1) A public apology for not properly

> representing King Tut as an African and falsely representing

> Kemet (ancient Egypt) as non-African; 2) Develop and display a

> historically, factual and scientific exhibit of the African > foundation and identity of dynastic Kemet; 3) Display the

> pioneering accomplishments of African Nile Valley

> Civilization; and 4) Document and display the research and

> accomplishments of the renowned African scholar Cheikh Anta

> Diop in scientifically proving that Kemet was an African > civilization.

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

> _____

_____

> Park yourself in front of a world of choices in alternative vehicles.

> Visit the Yahoo! Auto Green Center.

>

>

>

---

Pinpoint customers who are looking for what you sell.

| 23087|2007-09-08 21:32:20|kungfuhustle|Re: King Tut Not Black Enough, Protesters Say|

There is no doubt, a great concern that the catholic church (Rome) succeeded in destroying and suppressing a great deal of historic facts and detail.

I fear that if today's egyptologist dug under the Vatican, more ancient egyptian treasures would be discovered vaulted away then have been found in Egypt to date.

Have you watched these two brothers public Television show?

http://www.hebrewisraelites.org/introduction\_to.htm

On Fri, 2007-09-07 at 21:52 -0700, JASON WOODS wrote:

> I just read a book called the Tutankhamen and the exodus conspiracy by > Andrew Collins which states that Carter and Carnarvon found Hebraic > papyruses in the tomb of King Tut which disproved an Ashkenazi Jewish > exodus out of Kemet and thus any legitimacy of a Zionist Jewish state > in the middle east. The entire myth of "The Curse" of King Tut was to > provide cover for the murders of those who threatened to expose the > truth of the African origins of the Hebrews. Kemet is the home of the > ancient Hebrew people and biblical history can only be authenticated > with Kemetian documentation, temples and tombs.

>

> The denial of the African origins of the Hebrews and Kemetians are > both for the sole purpose of propping up fictitious western religions > for the spiritual enslavement of African people specifically and the > world in general.

>

> An Informed Afrikan

> kungfuhustle <shalomic@nc.rr.com> wrote:

> That would present a real problem for Zionist "Jews".

>

> On Fri, 2007-09-07 at 13:08 -0700, Cristofori Whitakara wrote:

>> Could the denial be from the fact that is the ancient

> Egyptians were >> black and the Jews lived in that country for over 400 years

> thus their >> being black which would cause settlement problems in Israel

> by white

>> Europeans, Jews with no connection to Jacob (Israel) or Joseph

> a >> governor of Egypt?

>>

>> Manu Ampim <Profmanu@acninc.net> wrote:

>>

>> Greetings Fatima,

>>

>> I fully agree with your comments. The denial of ancient

> Egypt

>> as a black African civilization is pathological. I too agree >> with the four demands of the coalition. I advised that the >> coalition's demand #1 should include that the fake 2005

> image

>> of "King Tut" be removed from the exhibit altogether. I was >> informed that this suggestion will be added.

> >
> > Advancing the work,
> >
> > Manu Ampim
> >
> > "Primary research is the greatest weapon against the > > distortion of African culture & history." - MA
> >
> > _____
> >
> > I agree with their demands, I am not black but I think its
> > time to reveal the truth and use the common sense.
> > I think some people, specially the ones that have been > > making
> > movies about ancient Egypt in Hollywood scoffs at ancient > > Egyptians because they created this image of ancient > > Egyptians
> > being blonde/brunette and blue eyed and it caused ignorance
> > in
> > people so they take it as a real fact instead of fiction > > because in the end that's what they want us to believe > > because
> > in the end they are racist because their stereotype of being > > beautiful is someone white not black.
> >
> > And now Arabs who occupied Egypt try to make us believe that > > ancient Egyptians were arabs and not blacks because they > > want > > to have all the credits about the building of the pyramids, > > monuments, etc. I am not against arabs I have some arab > > friends but I have to admit that they can have a big ego.
> >
> > But that's other story what I try to say is that we need to > > study by ourselves the history and geography and if we use
> > the
> > common sense we could know that Egypt is in the African > > continent and in the pharaonic times the world was not > > globalized as today, now we can find a Japanese in > > Argentina,
> > a Moroccan in United States, etc. because now we can travel > > easily but in the past it was not easy so if Egypt is in > > Africa obviously the people in Egypt was black!
> >
> > I don't see something wrong with ancient Egyptians being
> > black
> > in the end they are more intelligent, clever, creatives than > > anyone of other race.

> >

> > Sorry for my english, but it is not my primary language.

> >

> > Fatima

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> > The coalition has presented officials of the museum with a > > list of demands: 1) A public apology for not properly > > representing King Tut as an African and falsely representing > > Kemet (ancient Egypt) as non-African; 2) Develop and display
> a

> > historically, factual and scientific exhibit of the African > > foundation and identity of dynastic Kemet; 3) Display the > > pioneering accomplishments of African Nile Valley > > Civilization; and 4) Document and display the research and > > accomplishments of the renowned African scholar Cheikh Anta > > Diop in scientifically proving that Kemet was an African > > civilization.

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> > Park yourself in front of a world of choices in alternative

> vehicles.

> > Visit the Yahoo! Auto Green Center.

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

>

>

| 23088|2007-09-09 08:45:46|Djehuti Sundaka|Re: King Tut Not Black Enough, Protesters Say|
"Hebrew" or actually "Ibriy" is a designation not found to predate the J-source i.e. c. 770 BCE. It may have been derived from the word 'hapiru' which was a socioeconomic term, not an ethnic one. Nevertheless, as a socioeconomic entity, such people in Kna'an were composed of the predominate ethnicity of the land, that ethnicity being the Khurri (Hurrians) during the New Kingdom period. Such people were rebellious individuals living on the fringes of urban society and often employed as mercenaries. YisraEl had probably formed from a group centered around Shechem and originating from rural hill country inhabitants between Shechem and Megidow. In short, "Hebrew" is a fictitious ethnic designation.

Djehuti Sundaka

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:

>

> SO, this would imply the Jews are recent relative to Egypt.

> What about the origins of the Hebrews?

> Is this, in your opinion, an Egyptian group that separated from Egypt,

> perhaps via Tell el Amarna?

>

> Meninarmer

>

> On Sat, 2007-09-08 at 17:35 +0000, Djehuti Sundaka wrote:

>> Indications imply that the original 'Jews' (i.e. the specific ethnic >> element to have designated themselves as 'Yehwdah') had been non-

>> Semitic, Aryan influenced, anti-Semites. Confirmation of the non-

>> Semitic element is provided by genetic studies showing the "Cohen

>> modal haplotype" of Jewish priests to be of Northeast Caucasian >> extraction dating back to c. 1000 BCE (around the time of Zadowq).

>> In contrast with the overall Arab (i.e. Semitic) population, the

>> genes of both Palestinians and the global Jewish population in >> general also reveal that their greatest ethnic affiliation is with >> the non-Semitic people known as the Kurds. However, though a strong

>> patrilineal affiliation with the Kurds is genetically established, a >> strong maternal affiliation found in the mtDNA of Palestinians,

> > Shomeriym (Samaritans), and Iraqi Jews, indicates an ancient female

> > Jewish origin from the indigenous women of Kna'an (cf. Human > > Mutation 24:248-260, 2004). The people of YisraEl and Yehwdah had > > therefore been a people descended from northern non-Semitic men and > > indigenous Semitic women. The `original Jews' had been the southern

> > Kna'an highlanders of patrilineal Khurri descent. Such an ancestry

> > had perhaps been implied by the J-writer's story of the sons of > > YisraEl leaving Kharran to dwell at Shechem only to end up killing

> > all the males of Shechem while taking possession of their women

> > (Genesis 34:25-29, cf. Deuteronomy 21:10-13). This inference is > > even more explicit in the J-writer's obtrusive story of Yehwdah only > > having sons by two Kna'ani women (Genesis 38:2-6, 38:18).

> >

> > The Shechem centered hapiru to have eventually called > > themselves "YisraEl" (i.e. El-Contends) had probably come into being > > in the rural highlands between Shechem and Megidow (during the reign > > of Amanehatip III cf. "Egypt, Canaan, And Israel In Ancient Times"

> > p. 269, 274) and had probably become "YisraEl" during the great

> > rebellion in the fifth year of Riamasisw II following the Battle of > > Qadesh. Like the people of Yerwshalayim, the people of YisraEl had > > probably been of predominate Khurri descent. This identification is > > supported by the fact that the Khurri had composed roughly 40% of > > the Kna'an population during the New Kingdom making it the single > > largest ethnicity of the land. During the 18th Dynasty the entire > > region had been named after them in becoming known as the land of > > the Kharw (Khurri) while at the beginning of the 22nd Dynasty, a > > people living in an area conforming to the biblical borders of > > Yowsef had been specifically referred to as "Asiatics of the army of > > Mitanni".

> >
> > Djehuti Sundaka
> >
> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, cristofori whitakara
> > wrote:
> > >
> > > could the denial be from the fact that is the ancient
egyptians
> > were black and the jews lived in that country for over 400 years
> > thus their being black which would cause settlement problems in > > israel by white europeans jews with no connection to jacob (israel)
> > or joseph a governor of egypt?
> > >
> > > Manu Ampim wrote: Greetings Fatima,
> > >
> > > I fully agree with your comments. The denial of ancient Egypt > > as a black African civilization is pathological. I too agree
with > > the four demands of the coalition. I advised that the coalition's > > demand #1 should include that the fake 2005 image of "King Tut"
be > > removed from the exhibit altogether. I was informed that this > > suggestion will be added.
> > >
> > > Advancing the work,
> > >
> > > Manu Ampim
> > >
> > > "Primary research is the greatest weapon against the distortion
> > of African culture & history." - MA
> > >
> > > -----
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > > I agree with their demands, I am not black but I think its time
> > to reveal the truth and use the common sense.
> > > I think some people, specially the ones that have been making > > movies about ancient Egypt in Hollywood scoffs at ancient Egyptians

> > because they created this image of ancient Egyptians being > > blonde/brunette and blue eyed and it caused ignorance in people
so > > they take it as a real fact instead of fiction because in the end
> > that's what they want us to believe because in the end they are > > racist because their stereotype of being beautiful is someone
white
> > not black.
> > >
> > > And now Arabs who occupied Egypt try to make us believe that > > ancient Egyptians were arabs and not blacks because they want to > > have all the credits about the building of the pyramids,
monuments,
> > etc. I am not against arabs I have some arab friends but I have
to > > admit that they can have a big ego.
> > >
> > > But that's other story what I try to say is that we need to > > study by ourselves the history and geography and if we use the > > common sense we could know that Egypt is in the African continent
> > and in the pharaonic times the world was not globalized as
today,
> > now we can find a Japanese in Argentina, a Moroccan in United > > States, etc. because now we can travel easily but in the past it
was > > not easy so if Egypt is in Africa obviously the people in Egypt
was
> > black!
> > >
> > > I don't see something wrong with ancient Egyptians being black > > in the end they are more intelligent, clever, creatives than anyone
> > of other race.
> > >
> > > Sorry for my english, but it is not my primary language.
> > >
> > > Fatima
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > > -----
> > >
> > >

> > >

> > > The coalition has presented officials of the museum with a list > > of demands: 1) A public apology for not properly representing King

> > Tut as an African and falsely representing Kemet (ancient Egypt) as

> > non-African; 2) Develop and display a historically, factual and

> > scientific exhibit of the African foundation and identity of > > dynastic Kemet; 3) Display the pioneering accomplishments of African > > Nile Valley Civilization; and 4) Document and display the research

> > and accomplishments of the renowned African scholar Cheikh Anta Diop

> > in scientifically proving that Kemet was an African civilization.

> > >

> > >

> > >

> > >

> > >

> > >

> > >

> > > -----

> > > Park yourself in front of a world of choices in alternative > > vehicles.

> > > Visit the Yahoo! Auto Green Center.

> > >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

>

| 23089|2007-09-09 10:58:34|kungfuhustle|Re: King Tut Not Black Enough, Protesters Say|
Based on your statement, wouldn't "Jew" be in the same boat? A social construct versus racial ethnic based?
Is/was the "Hebrew" designation related to the use of sematic language?

On Sun, 2007-09-09 at 15:45 +0000, Djehuti Sundaka wrote:

> "Hebrew" or actually "Ibriy" is a designation not found to predate

> the J-source i.e. c. 770 BCE. It may have been derived from the > word 'hapiru' which was a socioeconomic term, not an ethnic one.

> Nevertheless, as a socioeconomic entity, such people in Kna'an were > composed of the predominate ethnicity of the land, that ethnicity

> being the Khurri (Hurrians) during the New Kingdom period. Such > people were rebellious individuals living on the fringes of urban > society and often employed as mercenaries. YisraEl had probably > formed from a group centered around Shechem and originating from > rural hill country inhabitants between Shechem and Megidow. In > short, "Hebrew" is a fictitious ethnic designation.

>

> Djehuti Sundaka

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:

>>

>> SO, this would imply the Jews are recent relative to Egypt.

>> What about the origins of the Hebrews?

>> Is this, in your opinion, an Egyptian group that separated from > Egypt,

>> perhaps via Tell el Amarna?

>>

>> Meninarmer

>>

>> On Sat, 2007-09-08 at 17:35 +0000, Djehuti Sundaka wrote:

>>> Indications imply that the original 'Jews' (i.e. the specific > ethnic

>>> element to have designated themselves as 'Yehwdah') had been non-

>>> Semitic, Aryan influenced, anti-Semites. Confirmation of the non-

>>> Semitic element is provided by genetic studies showing
> the "Cohen

>>> modal haplotype" of Jewish priests to be of Northeast Caucasian >>> extraction dating back to c. 1000 BCE (around the time of > Zadowq).

>>> In contrast with the overall Arab (i.e. Semitic) population, the

>>> genes of both Palestinians and the global Jewish population in >>> general also reveal that their greatest ethnic affiliation is

> with >>> the non-Semitic people known as the Kurds. However, though a > strong

>>> patrilineal affiliation with the Kurds is genetically

> established, a >>> strong maternal affiliation found in the mtDNA of Palestinians,

>>> Shomeriym (Samaritans), and Iraqi Jews, indicates an ancient
> female

>>> Jewish origin from the indigenous women of Kna'an (cf. Human >>> Mutation 24:248-260, 2004). The people of YisraEl and Yehwdah
> had >>> therefore been a people descended from northern non-Semitic men

> and >>> indigenous Semitic women. The 'original Jews' had been the > southern

>>> Kna'an highlanders of patrilineal Khurri descent. Such an

> ancestry
>>> had perhaps been implied by the J-writer's story of the sons of >>> YisraEl leaving Kharran to dwell at Shechem only to end up > killing
>>> all the males of Shechem while taking possession of their women >>> (Genesis 34:25-29, cf. Deuteronomy 21:10-13). This inference is >>> even more explicit in the J-writer's obtrusive story of Yehwdah
> only >>> having sons by two Kna'aniy women (Genesis 38:2-6, 38:18).
>>>
>>> The Shechem centered hapiru to have eventually called >>> themselves "YisraEl" (i.e. El-Contends) had probably come into > being >>> in the rural highlands between Shechem and Megidow (during the > reign
>>> of Amanehatip III cf. "Egypt, Canaan, And Israel In Ancient > Times"
>>> p. 269, 274) and had probably become "YisraEl" during the great >>> rebellion in the fifth year of Riamasisw II following the Battle
> of >>> Qadesh. Like the people of Yerwshalayim, the people of YisraEl
> had >>> probably been of predominate Khurri descent. This identification
> is >>> supported by the fact that the Khurri had composed roughly 40%
> of >>> the Kna'an population during the New Kingdom making it the > single >>> largest ethnicity of the land. During the 18th Dynasty the > entire >>> region had been named after them in becoming known as the land
> of >>> the Kharw (Khurri) while at the beginning of the 22nd Dynasty, a >>> people living in an area conforming to the biblical borders of >>> Yowsef had been specifically referred to as "Asiatics of the > army of >>> Mitanni".
>>>
>>> Djehuti Sundaka
>>>
>>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, cristofori whitakara
>>> wrote:
>>>>
>>>> could the denial be from the fact that is the ancient
> egyptians
>>> were black and the jews lived in that country for over 400 years

>>> thus their being black which would cause settlement problems in >>> israel by white europeans jews with no connection to jacob > (israel)
>>> or joseph a governor of egypt?
>>>>
>>>> Manu Ampim wrote: Greetings Fatima,
>>>>
>>>> I fully agree with your comments. The denial of ancient Egypt >>> as a black African civilization is pathological. I too agree
> with
>>> the four demands of the coalition. I advised that the > coalition's >>> demand #1 should include that the fake 2005 image of "King Tut"
> be >>> removed from the exhibit altogether. I was informed that this >>> suggestion will be added.
>>>>
>>>> Advancing the work,
>>>>
>>>> Manu Ampim
>>>>
>>>> "Primary research is the greatest weapon against the
> distortion
>>> of African culture & history." - MA
>>>>
>>>> -----
>>>>
>>>>
>>>>
>>>>
>>>>
>>>> I agree with their demands, I am not black but I think its
> time
>>> to reveal the truth and use the common sense.
>>>> I think some people, specially the ones that have been making
>>> movies about ancient Egypt in Hollywood scoffs at ancient > Egyptians
>>> because they created this image of ancient Egyptians being >>> blonde/brunette and blue eyed and it caused ignorance in people
> so >>> they take it as a real fact instead of fiction because in the > end
>>> that's what they want us to believe because in the end they are >>> racist because their stereotype of being beautiful is someone
> white
>>> not black.
>>>>

>>>> And now Arabs who occupied Egypt try to make us believe that >>> ancient Egyptians were arabs and not blacks because they want to >>> have all the credits about the building of the pyramids,
> monuments,
>>> etc. I am not against arabs I have some arab friends but I have
> to >>> admit that they can have a big ego.
>>>>
>>>> But that's other story what I try to say is that we need to >>> study by ourselves the history and geography and if we use the >>> common sense we could know that Egypt is in the African > continent
>>> and in the pharaonic times the world was not globalized as
> today,
>>> now we can find a Japanese in Argentina, a Moroccan in United >>> Stated, etc. because now we can travel easily but in the past it
> was >>> not easy so if Egypt is in Africa obviously the people in Egypt
> was
>>> black!
>>>>
>>>> I don't see something wrong with ancient Egyptians being black >>> in the end they are more intelligent, clever, creatives than > anyone
>>> of other race.
>>>>
>>>> Sorry for my english, but it is not my primary language.
>>>>
>>>> Fatima
>>>>
>>>>
>>>>
>>>>
>>>> -----
>>>>
>>>>
>>>>
>>>> The coalition has presented officials of the museum with a > list
>>> of demands: 1) A public apology for not properly representing > King
>>> Tut as an African and falsely representing Kemet (ancient Egypt)
> as
>>> non-African; 2) Develop and display a historically, factual and >>> scientific exhibit of the African foundation and identity of >>> dynastic Kemet; 3) Display the pioneering accomplishments of

> African >>> Nile Valley Civilization; and 4) Document and display the
 > research
 >>> and accomplishments of the renowned African scholar Cheikh Anta
 > Diop
 >>> in scientifically proving that Kemet was an African civilization.
 >>>>
 >>>>
 >>>>
 >>>>
 >>>>
 >>>>
 >>>>
 >>>> -----
 >>>> Park yourself in front of a world of choices in alternative
 >>> vehicles.
 >>>> Visit the Yahoo! Auto Green Center.
 >>>>
 >>>
 >>>
 >>>
 >>>
 >>>
 >>>
 >>
 >
 >
 >
 >
 >
 | 23090|2007-09-09 12:18:27|Djehuti Sundaka|Re: King Tut Not Black Enough, Protesters Say|
 Yes.

Apart from the settlement of Efrayim by Amaleq, YisraEl had not been composed of different tribes as portrayed in the Bible. Such "tribal" designations had been derived from the names of the geographical regions occupied by YisraEl (i.e. Efrayim, Binyamiyn, Makiyr, Gilead/Gad, cf. Judges 5:14/17). Apart from "Lewiy" ("Joined" i.e. the Shiloh refugees who had joined the people of Binyamiyn), other designations had probably never existed until coined by the J-writer. Such designations would include "Rewben" (not known in either the song of Numbers 21:27-30 or in the Moabite Stone), "Shimown", "Yehwdah" (an area probably extended from Khebrow to Beersheba during the reign of King Yehowshafat), "Asher" (corresponding to Fnix, a region never apart of YisraEl except through alliance cf. 1Kings 16:29-32, Amos 1:9), "Yissakar" (part of the YizreEl administrative division begun under the Omriy dynasty cf. "The Bible Unearthed", p. 192), and "Yowsef" (the original territory of YisraEl). However, the designation of "Menashsheh" had been an E-document designation corresponding to the original Makiyr highlands north of Shechem. The southern territory of Dan had been a fictional creation of the DH-writer (cf. Joshua 19:40-46), not known to the J-writer (cf. Judges 18:1-2, 18:11), while the northern territory of Dan had been a single city that, along with the region of Naftaliy, had never been apart of YisraEl until conquered under the Omriy dynasty ("The Bible Unearthed", p. 203-205). In fact, the entire region of Galilee had been apart of Aram prior to the Omriy dynasty (1Kings 15:20) and seems to have only been known as Naftaliy (2Kings 15:29 cf. Tiglath-pileser III's account) with the name "Zebwlwn" pertaining to the sea area (cf. Genesis 49:13, Deuteronomy 33:18-19, Isaiah 9:1, in contrast to the landlocked area described in Joshua 19:10-15).

Thus the name "Yehwdah" from which the term "Jews" ultimately derives, had been a geopolitical term created to include non-YisraEl ethnicities under the dominion of Yerwshalayim such as the western lowland inhabitants of Lachish and the peoples south of Khebrown. The term "Hebrew" has modernly been applied to what was otherwise the indigenous language of Kna'an (i.e. "Canaanite").

Djehuti Sundaka

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:

>

> Based on your statement, wouldn't "Jew" be in the same boat? A social > construct versus racial ethnic based?

> Is/was the "Hebrew" designation related to the use of sematic language?

>

> On Sun, 2007-09-09 at 15:45 +0000, Djehuti Sundaka wrote:

> > "Hebrew" or actually "Ibriy" is a designation not found to predate

> > the J-source i.e. c. 770 BCE. It may have been derived from the > > word 'hapiru' which was a socioeconomic term, not an ethnic one.

> > Nevertheless, as a socioeconomic entity, such people in Kna'an were > > composed of the predominate ethnicity of the land, that ethnicity

> > being the Khurri (Hurrians) during the New Kingdom period. Such > > people were rebellious individuals living on the fringes of urban

> > society and often employed as mercenaries. YisraEl had probably

> > formed from a group centered around Shechem and originating from > > rural hill country inhabitants between Shechem and Megidow. In > > short, "Hebrew" is a fictitious ethnic designation.
> >
> > Djehuti Sundaka
> >
> > --- In Ta.Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:
> > >
> > > SO, this would imply the Jews are recent relative to Egypt.
> > > What about the origins of the Hebrews?
> > > Is this, in your opinion, an Egyptian group that separated
from
> > Egypt,
> > > perhaps via Tell el Amarna?
> > >
> > > Meninarmer
> > >
> > > On Sat, 2007-09-08 at 17:35 +0000, Djehuti Sundaka wrote: > > > > Indications imply that the original `Jews' (i.e. the specific > > ethnic > > > element to have designated themselves as `Yehwdah') had been
non-> > > > Semitic, Aryan influenced, anti-Semites. Confirmation of the non-
> > > > Semitic element is provided by genetic studies showing
> > the "Cohen
> > > > modal haplotype" of Jewish priests to be of Northeast Caucasian
> > > > extraction dating back to c. 1000 BCE (around the time of > > Zadowq).
> > > > In contrast with the overall Arab (i.e. Semitic) population,
the > > > > genes of both Palestinians and the global Jewish population
in > > > > general also reveal that their greatest ethnic affiliation
is
> > with > > > > the non-Semitic people known as the Kurds. However, though a > > strong
> > > > patrilineal affiliation with the Kurds is genetically
> > established, a > > > > strong maternal affiliation found in the mtDNA of Palestinians, > > > > Shomeriym (Samaritans), and Iraqi Jews, indicates an ancient
> > female

> > > Jewish origin from the indigenous women of Kna'an (cf. Human > > > Mutation 24:248-260, 2004). The people of YisraEl and Yehwdah
 > > had > > > therefore been a people descended from northern non-Semitic men
 > > and > > > indigenous Semitic women. The `original Jews' had been the > > southern > > > Kna'an highlanders of patrilineal Khurri descent. Such an > > ancestry
 > > > had perhaps been implied by the J-writer's story of the sons
 of > > > YisraEl leaving Kharran to dwell at Shechem only to end up
 > > killing > > > all the males of Shechem while taking possession of their women > > > (Genesis 34:25-29, cf. Deuteronomy 21:10-13). This inference
 is > > > even more explicit in the J-writer's obtrusive story of Yehwdah
 > > only > > > having sons by two Kna'aniy women (Genesis 38:2-6, 38:18).
 > > >
 > > > The Shechem centered hapiru to have eventually called > > > themselves "YisraEl" (i.e. El-Contends) had probably come into
 > > being > > > in the rural highlands between Shechem and Megidow (during
 the
 > > reign
 > > > of Amonemhat III cf. "Egypt, Canaan, And Israel In Ancient > > Times"
 > > > p. 269, 274) and had probably become "YisraEl" during the great > > > rebellion in the fifth year of Ramesses II following the Battle
 > > of > > > Qadesh. Like the people of Yerushalayim, the people of YisraEl
 > > had > > > probably been of predominate Khurri descent. This identification
 > > is > > > supported by the fact that the Khurri had composed roughly 40%

> > of
> > > the Kna'an population during the New Kingdom making it the > > single > > > largest ethnicity of the land. During the 18th Dynasty the > > entire > > > region had been named after them in becoming known as the land
> > of > > > the Kharw (Khurri) while at the beginning of the 22nd Dynasty, a > > > people living in an area conforming to the biblical borders
of > > > Yowsef had been specifically referred to as "Asiatics of the > > army of > > > Mitanni".
> > >
> > > Djehuti Sundaka
> > >
> > > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, cristofori whitakara
> > > wrote:
> > > >
> > > > could the denial be from the fact that is the ancient
> > egyptians > > > > were black and the jews lived in that country for over 400
years
> > > > thus their being black which would cause settlement problems
in > > > > israel by white europeans jews with no connection to jacob > > (israel)
> > > > or joseph a governor of egypt?
> > > >
> > > > Manu Ampim wrote: Greetings Fatima,
> > > >
> > > > I fully agree with your comments. The denial of ancient
Egypt
> > > > as a black African civilization is pathological. I too agree
> > with
> > > > the four demands of the coalition. I advised that the > > coalition's > > > > demand #1 should include that the fake 2005 image of "King Tut"
> > be > > > > removed from the exhibit altogether. I was informed that this > > > > suggestion will be added.
> > > >

>>>>> Advancing the work,
>>>>>
>>>>> Manu Ampim
>>>>>
>>>>> "Primary research is the greatest weapon against the
>> distortion
>>>>> of African culture & history." - MA
>>>>>
>>>>> -----
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>> I agree with their demands, I am not black but I think its
>> time
>>>>> to reveal the truth and use the common sense.
>>>>> I think some people, specially the ones that have been making
>>>>> movies about ancient Egypt in Hollywood scoffs at ancient >> Egyptians
>>>>> because they created this image of ancient Egyptians being >>>>> blonde/brunette and blue eyed and it caused ignorance in people
>> so >>>>> they take it as a real fact instead of fiction because in
the
>> end
>>>>> that's what they want us to believe because in the end they
are >>>>> racist because their stereotype of being beautiful is someone
>> white
>>>>> not black.
>>>>>
>>>>>> And now Arabs who occupied Egypt try to make us believe
that >>>>> ancient Egyptians were arabs and not blacks because they want to
>>>>> have all the credits about the building of the pyramids,
>> monuments,
>>>>> etc. I am not against arabs I have some arab friends but I have
>> to >>>>> admit that they can have a big ego.
>>>>>
>>>>>> But that's other story what I try to say is that we need

to

>>>> study by ourselves the history and geography and if we use the >>>> common sense we could know that Egypt is in the African >> continent

>>>> and in the pharaonic times the world was not globalized as
>> today,

>>>> now we can find a Japanese in Argentina, a Moroccan in United

>>>> Stated, etc. because now we can travel easily but in the past it

>> was >>>> not easy so if Egypt is in Africa obviously the people in Egypt

>> was

>>>> black!

>>>>>

>>>>> I don't see something wrong with ancient Egyptians being
black

>>>> in the end they are more intelligent, clever, creatives than >> anyone

>>>> of other race.

>>>>>

>>>>> Sorry for my english, but it is not my primary language.

>>>>>

>>>>> Fatima

>>>>>

>>>>>

>>>>>

>>>>>

>>>>> -----

>>>>>

>>>>>

>>>>>

>>>>> The coalition has presented officials of the museum with a
>> list

>>>> of demands: 1) A public apology for not properly representing

>> King

>>>> Tut as an African and falsely representing Kemet (ancient Egypt)

>> as

>>>> non-African; 2) Develop and display a historically, factual
and

>>>> scientific exhibit of the African foundation and identity of

>>>> dynastic Kemet; 3) Display the pioneering accomplishments of

> > African > > > Nile Valley Civilization; and 4) Document and display the
> > research
> > > and accomplishments of the renowned African scholar Cheikh
Anta

> > Diop
> > > in scientifically proving that Kemet was an African civilization.

> > > >

> > > >

> > > >

> > > >

> > > >

> > > >

> > > >

> > > > -----

> > > > Park yourself in front of a world of choices in alternative

> > > > vehicles.

> > > > Visit the Yahoo! Auto Green Center.

> > > >

> > > >

> > > >

> > > >

> > > >

> > > >

> > >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

>

| 23091|2007-09-09 16:50:11|kungfuhustle|Re: King Tut Not Black Enough, Protesters Say|

Thank you.

Meninarmer

On Sun, 2007-09-09 at 19:16 +0000, Djehuti Sundaka wrote:

> Yes.

>

> Apart from the settlement of Efrayim by Amaleq, YisraEl had not been > composed of different tribes as portrayed in the Bible.

> Such "tribal" designations had been derived from the names of the > geographical regions occupied by YisraEl (i.e. Efrayim, Binyamiyn, > Makiyr, Gilead/Gad, cf. Judges 5:14/17). Apart from "Lewiy" > ("Joined" i.e. the Shiloh refugees who had joined the people of > Binyamiyn), other designations had probably never existed until > coined by the J-writer. Such designations would include "Rewben" > (not known in either the song of Numbers 21:27-30 or in the Moabite > Stone), "Shimown", "Yehwdah" (an area probably extended from > Khebrown to Beersheba during the reign of King Yehowshafat), "Asher" > (corresponding to Fnix, a region never apart of YisraEl except > through alliance cf. 1Kings 16:29-32, Amos 1:9), "Yissakar" (part of > the YizreEl administrative division begun under the Omriy dynasty > cf. "The Bible Unearthed", p. 192), and "Yowsef" (the original > territory of YisraEl). However, the designation of "Menashsheh" had > been an E-document designation corresponding to the original Makiyr > highlands north of Shechem. The southern territory of Dan had been > a fictional creation of the DH-writer (cf. Joshua 19:40-46), not > known to the J-writer (cf. Judges 18:1-2, 18:11), while the northern > territory of Dan had been a single city that, along with the region > of Naftaliy, had never been apart of YisraEl until conquered under > the Omriy dynasty ("The Bible Unearthed", p. 203-205). In fact, the > entire region of Galilee had been apart of Aram prior to the Omriy > dynasty (1Kings 15:20) and seems to have only been known as Naftaliy > (2Kings 15:29 cf. Tiglath-pileser III's account) with the > name "Zebwlwn" pertaining to the sea area (cf. Genesis 49:13, > Deuteronomy 33:18-19, Isaiah 9:1, in contrast to the landlocked area > described in Joshua 19:10-15).

> Thus the name "Yehwdah" from which the term "Jews" ultimately > derives, had been a geopolitical term created to include non-YisraEl > ethnicities under the dominion of Yerwshalayim such as the western > lowland inhabitants of Lachish and the peoples south of Khebrown.
 > The term "Hebrew" has modernly been applied to what was otherwise > the indigenous language of Kna'an (i.e. "Canaanite").

> Djehuti Sundaka

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:

> > Based on your statement, wouldn't "Jew" be in the same boat? A > social > > construct versus racial ethnic based?
 > > Is/was the "Hebrew" designation related to the use of sematic > language?

> > On Sun, 2007-09-09 at 15:45 +0000, Djehuti Sundaka wrote:
 > > > "Hebrew" or actually "Ibriy" is a designation not found to > predate
 > > > the J-source i.e. c. 770 BCE. It may have been derived from the > > > word 'hapiru' which was a socioeconomic term, not an ethnic one.

>>> Nevertheless, as a socioeconomic entity, such people in Kna'an
 > were >>> composed of the predominate ethnicity of the land, that > ethnicity
 >>> being the Khurri (Hurrians) during the New Kingdom period. Such >>> people were rebellious individuals living on the fringes of > urban >>> society and often employed as mercenaries. YisraEl had probably >>> formed from a group centered around Shechem and originating from >>> rural hill country inhabitants between Shechem and Megidow. In >>> short, "Hebrew" is a fictitious ethnic designation.
 >>>
 >>> Djehuti Sundaka
 >>>
 >>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:
 >>>>
 >>>> SO, this would imply the Jews are recent relative to Egypt.
 >>>> What about the origins of the Hebrews?
 >>>> Is this, in your opinion, an Egyptian group that separated
 > from
 >>> Egypt,
 >>>> perhaps via Tell el Amarna?
 >>>>
 >>>> Meninarmer
 >>>>
 >>>> On Sat, 2007-09-08 at 17:35 +0000, Djehuti Sundaka wrote: >>>>> Indications imply that the original `Jews' (i.e. the > specific
 >>> ethnic >>>>> element to have designated themselves as `Yehwdah') had been
 > non->>>>> Semitic, Aryan influenced, anti-Semites. Confirmation of the > non-
 >>>>> Semitic element is provided by genetic studies showing
 >>> the "Cohen
 >>>>> modal haplotype" of Jewish priests to be of Northeast > Caucasian
 >>>>> extraction dating back to c. 1000 BCE (around the time of >>> Zadowq).
 >>>>> In contrast with the overall Arab (i.e. Semitic) population,
 > the >>>>> genes of both Palestinians and the global Jewish population
 > in >>>>> general also reveal that their greatest ethnic affiliation
 > is
 >>> with >>>> the non-Semitic people known as the Kurds. However, though a >>> strong

>>>> patrilineal affiliation with the Kurds is genetically
>>> established, a >>>> strong maternal affiliation found in the mtDNA of > Palestinians,
>>>> Shomeriym (Samaritans), and Iraqi Jews, indicates an ancient
>>> female
>>>> Jewish origin from the indigenous women of Kna'an (cf. Human >>>> Mutation 24:248-260, 2004). The people of YisraEl and > Yehwdah
>>> had >>>> therefore been a people descended from northern non-Semitic > men
>>> and >>>> indigenous Semitic women. The `original Jews' had been the >>> southern >>>> Kna'an highlanders of patrilineal Khurri descent. Such an >>> ancestry
>>>> had perhaps been implied by the J-writer's story of the sons
> of >>>> YisraEl leaving Kharran to dwell at Shechem only to end up
>>> killing
>>>> all the males of Shechem while taking possession of their > women
>>>> (Genesis 34:25-29, cf. Deuteronomy 21:10-13). This inference
> is >>>> even more explicit in the J-writer's obtrusive story of > Yehwdah
>>> only >>>> having sons by two Kna'aniy women (Genesis 38:2-6, 38:18).
>>>>>
>>>>> The Shechem centered hapiru to have eventually called >>>>> themselves "YisraEl" (i.e. El-Contends) had probably come > into
>>> being >>>>> in the rural highlands between Shechem and Megidow (during
> the
>>> reign
>>>>> of Amonemhat III cf. "Egypt, Canaan, And Israel In Ancient >>> Times"
>>>>> p. 269, 274) and had probably become "YisraEl" during the > great >>>>> rebellion in the fifth year of Riamasir II following the > Battle
>>> of

>>>> Qadesh. Like the people of Yerwshalayim, the people of > YisraEl
>>> had >>>> probably been of predominate Khurri descent. This > identification
>>> is >>>> supported by the fact that the Khurri had composed roughly > 40%
>>> of
>>>> the Kna'an population during the New Kingdom making it the >>> single >>>> largest ethnicity of the land. During the 18th Dynasty the >>> entire >>>> region had been named after them in becoming known as the > land
>>> of
>>>> the Kharw (Khurri) while at the beginning of the 22nd > Dynasty, a >>>> people living in an area conforming to the biblical borders
> of >>>> Yowsef had been specifically referred to as "Asiatics of the >>> army of >>>> Mitanni".
>>>>
>>>> Djehuti Sundaka
>>>>
>>>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, cristofori whitakara
>>>> wrote:
>>>>>
>>>>> could the denial be from the fact that is the ancient
>>> egyptians
>>>> were black and the jews lived in that country for over 400
> years
>>>> thus their being black which would cause settlement problems
> in >>>> israel by white europeans jews with no connection to jacob >>> (israel)
>>>> or joseph a governor of egypt?
>>>>>
>>>>> Manu Ampim wrote: Greetings Fatima,
>>>>>
>>>>> I fully agree with your comments. The denial of ancient
> Egypt
>>>> as a black African civilization is pathological. I too agree
>>> with
>>>> the four demands of the coalition. I advised that the

>>> coalition's
>>>> demand #1 should include that the fake 2005 image of "King > Tut"
>>> be >>>> removed from the exhibit altogether. I was informed that > this >>>> suggestion will be added.
>>>>>
>>>>> Advancing the work,
>>>>>
>>>>> Manu Ampim
>>>>>
>>>>> "Primary research is the greatest weapon against the
>>> distortion
>>>> of African culture & history." - MA
>>>>>
>>>>> -----
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>> I agree with their demands, I am not black but I think its
>>> time
>>>> to reveal the truth and use the common sense.
>>>>> I think some people, specially the ones that have been > making
>>>> movies about ancient Egypt in Hollywood scoffs at ancient >>> Egyptians
>>>> because they created this image of ancient Egyptians being >>>> blonde/brunette and blue eyed and it caused ignorance in
> people
>>> so >>>> they take it as a real fact instead of fiction because in
> the
>>> end
>>>> that's what they want us to believe because in the end they
> are >>>> racist because their stereotype of being beautiful is > someone
>>> white
>>>> not black.
>>>>>
>>>>> And now Arabs who occupied Egypt try to make us believe
> that >>>> ancient Egyptians were arabs and not blacks because they > want to

>>>> have all the credits about the building of the pyramids,
>>> monuments,
>>>> etc. I am not against arabs I have some arab friends but I > have
>>> to >>>> admit that they can have a big ego.
>>>>>
>>>>> But that's other story what I try to say is that we need
> to >>>>> study by ourselves the history and geography and if we use
> the >>>>> common sense we could know that Egypt is in the African >>> continent
>>>>> and in the pharaonic times the world was not globalized as
>>> today,
>>>>> now we can find a Japanese in Argentina, a Moroccan in > United
>>>>> Stated, etc. because now we can travel easily but in the > past it
>>> was >>>>> not easy so if Egypt is in Africa obviously the people in > Egypt
>>> was
>>>>> black!
>>>>>
>>>>>> I don't see something wrong with ancient Egyptians being
> black
>>>>> in the end they are more intelligent, clever, creatives than >>> anyone
>>>>> of other race.
>>>>>
>>>>>> Sorry for my english, but it is not my primary language.
>>>>>
>>>>>> Fatima
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>> -----
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>> The coalition has presented officials of the museum with a
>>> list
>>>>> of demands: 1) A public apology for not properly > representing

>>> King
>>>> Tut as an African and falsely representing Kemet (ancient > Egypt)
>>> as >>>> non-African; 2) Develop and display a historically, factual
> and
>>>>> scientific exhibit of the African foundation and identity of >>>>> dynastic Kemet; 3) Display the pioneering accomplishments of
>>> African >>>>> Nile Valley Civilization; and 4) Document and display the
>>> research
>>>>> and accomplishments of the renowned African scholar Cheikh
> Anta
>>> Diop
>>>>> in scientifically proving that Kemet was an African > civilization.
>>>>>>
>>>>>>
>>>>>>
>>>>>>
>>>>>>
>>>>>>
>>>>>>
>>>>>>
>>>>>> -----
>>>>>> Park yourself in front of a world of choices in > alternative
>>>>> vehicles.
>>>>>> Visit the Yahoo! Auto Green Center.
>>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>
>
>
>
>
>

| 23092|2007-09-10 00:58:08|Mahari Mengistu|Deeply Rooted reviving 'Nefertiti'|
Musical to be born anew
Deeply Rooted reviving 'Nefertiti'
By Sid Smith
Tribune arts critic

When the musical "Nefertiti" arrived here in the late '70s, Americans were delirious with Egyptian fever.

The first "King Tut" exhibit spawned headlines and long lines, so a musical about this unusual queen and her pharaoh, Akhenaten, seemed a natural. But, like so many stage musicals, "Nefertiti" stumbled. The Tribune dubbed the 1977 premiere at the old Blackstone Theatre here "one quarter top-notch old-fashioned musical comedy and the rest noble failure."

That's despite impressive pedigree. The book for the musical was written by Christopher Gore, who went on to earn an Oscar nomination for writing "Fame" -- a rare hit movie musical in its day.

But, like the mummies of horror legend, "Nefertiti" won't die. Three decades later, she's about to get a revamped, revised reincarnation, courtesy of Deeply Rooted Productions and its artistic director Kevin Iega Jeff -- one of the more tantalizing undertakings of the fall dance season.

"I've always been fascinated by ancient Egypt, and I studied Akhenaten," says Jeff, who's choreographing and directing "Nefertiti: A Concert of Music and Dance" with Deeply Rooted co-artistic director Gary Abbott, appearing Oct. 4-7 at the Athenaeum Theatre. "He was an advocate for one god, and, depending on which school of thought you reference, he either promoted the idea uniquely himself or brought back some earlier ideas. In any event, he was ahead of his time, and some of his ideas are still debated in Egypt today."

Nefertiti was Akhenaten's wife and mother-in-law to Tutankhamun, a.k.a. King Tut. Her surviving bust is one of the most famous works of ancient Egyptian art, and her reign with her husband oversaw a spiritual and artistic revolution.

Meanwhile, "Nefertiti," the 1977 musical, endured modern tragedy. Author Gore died of AIDS in 1988. The show's composer, David Spangler, kept the project alive and brought it to Jeff four years ago. Spangler and Gore's brother, Rick, teamed up to produce a revised book and some new lyrics.

"Part of our goal is to infuse the piece with an African sensibility," Jeff says of his participation. "That's one of the things missing from the original. Egypt's long history really begins in Africa." The new choreography is a key element to the Athenaeum revision.

Jeff founded Deeply Rooted just over a dozen years ago. He moved here from New York to run the late Joseph Holmes' troupe, but that organization disbanded. Rather than go back home, he created his own company, a contemporary dance troupe of 20 strikingly beautiful dancers.

A graduate of both the High School for the Performing Arts and the Juilliard School, Jeff was influenced by "Dreamgirls" choreographer Michael Peters, among others. His pluck and determination to work here have established Deeply Rooted as a Chicago institution. "New York can be jading," he says. "When I go back, friends tell me I'm lucky I got away. I'm not there copying everyone else, but spreading my wings. Being here enables me to work harder."

===

HTP,

Mahari

| 23093|2007-09-10 08:50:13|Paul Kekai Manansala|History of cannabis and its preparations in saga, science, and sobriquet.
Chem Biodivers. 2007 Aug;4(8):1614-48.

History of cannabis and its preparations in saga, science, and sobriquet.
Russo EB.

erusso@gwpharm.com

Cannabis sativa L. is possibly one of the oldest plants cultivated by man, but has remained a source of controversy throughout its history. Whether pariah or panacea, this most versatile botanical has provided a mirror to medicine and has pointed the way in the last two decades toward a host of medical challenges from analgesia to weight loss through the discovery of its myriad biochemical attributes and the endocannabinoid system wherein many of its components operate. This study surveys the history of cannabis, its genetics and preparations. A review of cannabis usage in Ancient Egypt will serve as an archetype, while examining first mentions from various Old World cultures and their pertinence for contemporary scientific investigation. Cannabis historians of the past have provided promising clues to potential treatments for a wide array of currently puzzling medical syndromes including chronic pain, spasticity, cancer, seizure disorders, nausea, anorexia, and infectious disease that remain challenges for 21st century medicine. Information gleaned from the history of cannabis administration in its various forms may provide useful points of departure for research into novel delivery techniques and standardization of cannabis-based medicines that will allow their prescription for treatment of these intractable medical conditions.

| 23094|2007-09-11 08:30:43|Freddie Thompson|Re: Deeply Rooted reviving 'Nefertiti'|

"Part of our goal is to infuse the piece with an African sensibility," Jeff says of his participation. "That's one of the things missing from the original. Egypt's long history really begins in Africa." The new choreography is a key element to the Athenaeum revision.

I'm sure many of us would argue that "Egypt's long history" remains in Africa as well. Any production that ignores Egypt's African heritage is a complete farce. That, I believe, should be a most central goal of any portrayal of Egyptian history in this day and age.
Fred

Mahari Mengistu wrote:

Musical to be born anew
Deeply Rooted reviving 'Nefertiti'
By Sid Smith
Tribune arts critic

When the musical "Nefertiti" arrived here in the late '70s, Americans were delirious with Egyptian fever.

The first "King Tut" exhibit spawned headlines and long lines, so a musical about this unusual queen and her pharaoh, Akhenaten, seemed a natural. But, like so many stage musicals, "Nefertiti" stumbled. The Tribune dubbed the 1977 premiere at the old Blackstone Theatre here "one quarter top-notch old-fashioned musical comedy and the rest noble failure."

That's despite impressive pedigree. The book for the musical was written by Christopher Gore, who went on to earn an Oscar nomination for writing "Fame" -- a rare hit movie musical in its day.

But, like the mummies of horror legend, "Nefertiti" won't die. Three decades later, she's about to get a revamped, revised reincarnation, courtesy of Deeply Rooted Productions and its artistic director Kevin Iega Jeff -- one of the more tantalizing undertakings of the fall dance season.

"I've always been fascinated by ancient Egypt, and I studied Akhenaten," says Jeff, who's choreographing and directing "Nefertiti: A Concert of Music and Dance" with Deeply Rooted co-artistic director Gary Abbott, appearing Oct. 4-7 at the Athenaeum Theatre. "He was an advocate for one god, and, depending on which school of thought you reference, he either promoted the idea uniquely himself or brought back some earlier ideas. In any event, he was ahead of his time, and some of his ideas are still debated in Egypt today."

Nefertiti was Akhenaten's wife and mother-in-law to Tutankhamun, a.k.a. King Tut. Her surviving bust is one of the most famous works of ancient Egyptian art, and her reign with her husband oversaw a spiritual and artistic revolution.

Meanwhile, "Nefertiti," the 1977 musical, endured modern tragedy. Author Gore died of AIDS in 1988. The show's composer, David Spangler, kept the project alive and brought it to Jeff four years ago. Spangler and Gore's brother, Rick, teamed up to produce a revised book and some new lyrics.

"Part of our goal is to infuse the piece with an African sensibility," Jeff says of his participation. "That's one of the things missing from the original. Egypt's long history really begins in Africa." The new choreography is a key element to the Athenaeum revision.

Jeff founded Deeply Rooted just over a dozen years ago. He moved here from New York to run the late Joseph Holmes' troupe, but that organization disbanded. Rather than go back home, he created his own company, a contemporary dance troupe of 20 strikingly beautiful dancers.

A graduate of both the High School for the Performing Arts and the Juilliard School, Jeff was influenced by "Dreamgirls" choreographer Michael Peters, among others. His pluck and determination to work here have established Deeply Rooted as a Chicago institution. "New York can be jading," he says. "When I go back, friends tell me I'm lucky I got away. I'm not there copying everyone else, but spreading my wings. Being here enables me to work harder."

===

HTP,
Mahari

---

Building a website is a piece of cake.

Yahoo! Small Business gives you all the tools to get online.

| 23095|2007-09-11 09:08:28|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Deeply Rooted reviving 'Nefertiti'|
Freddie,

You are absolutely right. But even such a benign comment is surprising in the public press. However, one reason that a statement as tepid as this is mentioned is because Deeply Rooted is a predominantly black company and the choreographer mentioned, Jeffrey Holmes, was black as well.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Freddie Thompson wrote:

>

> "Part of our goal is to infuse the piece with an African sensibility, " Jeff says of his participation. "That's one of the things missing from the original. Egypt's long history really begins > in Africa." The new choreography is a key element to the Athenaeum revision.

>

> I'm sure many of us would argue that "Egypt's long history" remains in Africa as well.

> Any production that ignores Egypt's African heritage is a complete farce. That, I believe, should be a most central goal of any portrayal of Egyptian history in this day and age.

>

> Fred

>

> Mahari Mengistu wrote:

> Musical to be born anew

> Deeply Rooted reviving 'Nefertiti'

> By Sid Smith

> Tribune arts critic

>

> When the musical "Nefertiti" arrived here in the late '70s, Americans > were delirious with Egyptian fever.

>

> The first "King Tut" exhibit spawned headlines and long lines, so a > musical about this unusual queen and her pharaoh, Akhenaten, seemed a > natural. But, like so many stage musicals, "Nefertiti" stumbled.

The

> Tribune dubbed the 1977 premiere at the old Blackstone Theatre

> here "one quarter top-notch old-fashioned musical comedy and the rest

> noble failure."

>

> That's despite impressive pedigree. The book for the musical was > written by Christopher Gore, who went on to earn an Oscar nomination > for writing "Fame" -- a rare hit movie musical in its day.

>

> But, like the mummies of horror legend, "Nefertiti" won't die.

Three

> decades later, she's about to get a revamped, revised

reincarnation,

> courtesy of Deeply Rooted Productions and its artistic director Kevin

> Iega Jeff -- one of the more tantalizing undertakings of the fall > dance season.

>

> "I've always been fascinated by ancient Egypt, and I studied

> Akhenaten," says Jeff, who's choreographing and

directing "Nefertiti:

> A Concert of Music and Dance" with Deeply Rooted co-artistic director

> Gary Abbott, appearing Oct. 4-7 at the Athenaeum Theatre. "He was an > advocate for one god, and, depending on which school of thought you > reference, he either promoted the idea uniquely himself or brought > back some earlier ideas. In any event, he was ahead of his time,

and > some of his ideas are still debated in Egypt today."

>

> Nefertiti was Akhenaten's wife and mother-in-law to Tutankhamun,

> a.k.a. King Tut. Her surviving bust is one of the most famous works > of ancient Egyptian art, and her reign with her husband oversaw a > spiritual and artistic revolution.

>

> Meanwhile, "Nefertiti," the 1977 musical, endured modern tragedy.

> Author Gore died of AIDS in 1988. The show's composer, David

> Spangler, kept the project alive and brought it to Jeff four years > ago. Spangler and Gore's brother, Rick, teamed up to produce a > revised book and some new lyrics.

>

> "Part of our goal is to infuse the piece with an African > sensibility," Jeff says of his participation. "That's one of the > things missing from the original. Egypt's long history really begins

> in Africa." The new choreography is a key element to the Athenaeum > revision.

 >
 > Jeff founded Deeply Rooted just over a dozen years ago. He moved here > from New York to run the late Joseph Holmes' troupe, but that > organization disbanded. Rather than go back home, he created his own > company, a contemporary dance troupe of 20 strikingly beautiful > dancers.
 >
 > A graduate of both the High School for the Performing Arts and the > Juilliard School, Jeff was influenced by "Dreamgirls" choreographer
 > Michael Peters, among others. His pluck and determination to work > here have established Deeply Rooted as a Chicago institution. "New > York can be jading," he says. "When I go back, friends tell me I'm > lucky I got away. I'm not there copying everyone else, but > spreading > my wings. Being here enables me to work harder."
 > ===
 > HTP, > Mahari
 >
 >
 >
 >
 >
 >
 >
 > -----
 > Building a website is a piece of cake.
 > Yahoo! Small Business gives you all the tools to get online.
 >
 | 23096|2007-09-11 23:52:43|asar_imhotep|Re: Deeply Rooted reviving 'Nefertiti'|
 My question is when did Ta-Merri leave Africa? His response implies that it had an African origin, but the development of the high culture in which most Egyptologists study today is the result of some exterior culture. His comments does little to show me progression in thought is being made by this production.

Asar Imhotep
<http://www.mochasuite.com>

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Freddie Thompson wrote:
 >
 > "Part of our goal is to infuse the piece with an African > sensibility, " Jeff says of his participation. "That's one of the > things missing from the original. Egypt's long history really begins > in Africa." The new choreography is a key element to the Athenaeum > revision.

>

> I'm sure many of us would argue that "Egypt's long history" remains in Africa as well.

> Any production that ignores Egypt's African heritage is a complete farce. That, I believe, should be a most central goal of any portrayal of Egyptian history in this day and age.

>

> Fred

>

> Mahari Mengistu wrote:

> Musical to be born anew

> Deeply Rooted reviving 'Nefertiti'

> By Sid Smith

> Tribune arts critic

>

> When the musical "Nefertiti" arrived here in the late '70s, Americans > were delirious with Egyptian fever.

>

> The first "King Tut" exhibit spawned headlines and long lines, so a > musical about this unusual queen and her pharaoh, Akhenaten, seemed a > natural. But, like so many stage musicals, "Nefertiti" stumbled. The > Tribune dubbed the 1977 premiere at the old Blackstone Theatre > here "one quarter top-notch old-fashioned musical comedy and the rest > noble failure."

>

> That's despite impressive pedigree. The book for the musical was > written by Christopher Gore, who went on to earn an Oscar nomination > for writing "Fame" -- a rare hit movie musical in its day.

>

> But, like the mummies of horror legend, "Nefertiti" won't die. Three > decades later, she's about to get a revamped, revised reincarnation, > courtesy of Deeply Rooted Productions and its artistic director Kevin > Iega Jeff -- one of the more tantalizing undertakings of the fall > dance season.

>

> "I've always been fascinated by ancient Egypt, and I studied > Akhenaten," says Jeff, who's choreographing and directing "Nefertiti:
> A Concert of Music and Dance" with Deeply Rooted co-artistic director > Gary Abbott, appearing Oct. 4-7 at the Athenaeum Theatre. "He was an > advocate for one god, and, depending on which school of thought you > reference, he either promoted the idea uniquely himself or brought > back some earlier ideas. In any event, he was ahead of his time, and > some of his ideas are still debated in Egypt today."

>
> Nefertiti was Akhenaten's wife and mother-in-law to Tutankhamun, > a.k.a. King Tut. Her surviving bust is one of the most famous works > of ancient Egyptian art, and her reign with her husband oversaw a > spiritual and artistic revolution.
>
> Meanwhile, "Nefertiti," the 1977 musical, endured modern tragedy.
> Author Gore died of AIDS in 1988. The show's composer, David > Spangler, kept the project alive and brought it to Jeff four years > ago. Spangler and Gore's brother, Rick, teamed up to produce a > revised book and some new lyrics.
>
> "Part of our goal is to infuse the piece with an African > sensibility," Jeff says of his participation. "That's one of the > things missing from the original. Egypt's long history really begins > in Africa." The new choreography is a key element to the Athenaeum > revision.
>
> Jeff founded Deeply Rooted just over a dozen years ago. He moved here > from New York to run the late Joseph Holmes' troupe, but that > organization disbanded. Rather than go back home, he created his own > company, a contemporary dance troupe of 20 strikingly beautiful > dancers.
>
> A graduate of both the High School for the Performing Arts and the > Juilliard School, Jeff was influenced by "Dreamgirls" choreographer
> Michael Peters, among others. His pluck and determination to work > here have established Deeply Rooted as a Chicago institution. "New > York can be jading," he says. "When I go back, friends tell me I'm > lucky I got away. I'm not there copying everyone else, but spreading > my wings. Being here enables me to work harder."
> ===
> HTP, > Mahari
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> -----
> Building a website is a piece of cake.
> Yahoo! Small Business gives you all the tools to get online.
>
> | 23097|2007-09-12 11:12:43|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Deeply Rooted reviving 'Nefertiti'|

Since I haven't seen the production or read in any great detail about it I couldn't comment on its level of "progression". But it would not surprise me if the "progression" is weak at best.

There is so much work to do to make blacks aware of their true history: its breadth, length and depth. I'm so happily surprised when I meet a black person who has a clue about our history - or should I say shocked. And they usually are such a different kind of black person.

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:

>
> My question is when did Ta-Merri leave Africa? His response implies > that it had an African origin, but the development of the high

culture

> in which most Egyptologists study today is the result of some exterior > culture. His comments does little to show me progression in thought

is > being made by this production.

>

> Asar Imhotep

> <http://www.mochasuite.com>

>

>

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Freddie Thompson wrote:

> >

> > "Part of our goal is to infuse the piece with an African

> > sensibility, " Jeff says of his participation. "That's one of the > > things missing from the original. Egypt's long history really

begins

> > in Africa." The new choreography is a key element to the Athenaeum

> > revision.

> >

> > I'm sure many of us would argue that "Egypt's long history"

remains

> in Africa as well.

> > Any production that ignores Egypt's African heritage is a complete

> farce. That, I believe, should be a most central goal of any > portrayal of Egyptian history in this day and age.

> >

> > Fred

> >

> > Mahari Mengistu wrote:

> > Musical to be born anew

> > Deeply Rooted reviving 'Nefertiti'

> > By Sid Smith

> > Tribune arts critic

> >

> > When the musical "Nefertiti" arrived here in the late '70s,

Americans

> > were delirious with Egyptian fever.

> >

> > The first "King Tut" exhibit spawned headlines and long lines, so

a > > musical about this unusual queen and her pharaoh, Akhenaten, seemed a > > natural. But, like so many stage musicals, "Nefertiti" stumbled.

The

> > Tribune dubbed the 1977 premiere at the old Blackstone Theatre

> > here "one quarter top-notch old-fashioned musical comedy and the rest

> > noble failure."

> >

> > That's despite impressive pedigree. The book for the musical was > > written by Christopher Gore, who went on to earn an Oscar nomination

> > for writing "Fame" -- a rare hit movie musical in its day.

> >

> > But, like the mummies of horror legend, "Nefertiti" won't die.

Three

> > decades later, she's about to get a revamped, revised

reincarnation,

> > courtesy of Deeply Rooted Productions and its artistic director

Kevin

> > Iega Jeff -- one of the more tantalizing undertakings of the fall > > dance season.

> >

> > "I've always been fascinated by ancient Egypt, and I studied

> > Akhenaten," says Jeff, who's choreographing and

directing "Nefertiti:

> > A Concert of Music and Dance" with Deeply Rooted co-artistic director

> > Gary Abbott, appearing Oct. 4-7 at the Athenaeum Theatre. "He was an > > advocate for one god, and, depending on which school of thought

you > > reference, he either promoted the idea uniquely himself or brought > > back some earlier ideas. In any event, he was ahead of his time,

and

> > some of his ideas are still debated in Egypt today."

> >

> > Nefertiti was Akhenaten's wife and mother-in-law to Tutankhamun, > > a.k.a. King Tut. Her surviving bust is one of the most famous works

> > of ancient Egyptian art, and her reign with her husband oversaw a > > spiritual and artistic revolution.

> >

> > Meanwhile, "Nefertiti," the 1977 musical, endured modern tragedy.

> > Author Gore died of AIDS in 1988. The show's composer, David

> > Spangler, kept the project alive and brought it to Jeff four years > > ago. Spangler and Gore's brother, Rick, teamed up to produce a > > revised book and some new lyrics.

> >

> > "Part of our goal is to infuse the piece with an African

> > sensibility," Jeff says of his participation. "That's one of the > > things missing from the original. Egypt's long history really

begins

> > in Africa." The new choreography is a key element to the Athenaeum

> > revision.

> >

> > Jeff founded Deeply Rooted just over a dozen years ago. He moved here

> > from New York to run the late Joseph Holmes' troupe, but that > > organization disbanded. Rather than go back home, he created his own

> > company, a contemporary dance troupe of 20 strikingly beautiful > > dancers.

> >

> > A graduate of both the High School for the Performing Arts and

the

> > Juilliard School, Jeff was influenced by "Dreamgirls" choreographer

> > Michael Peters, among others. His pluck and determination to work > > here have established Deeply Rooted as a Chicago institution. "New > > York can be jading," he says. "When I go back, friends tell me

I'm

> > lucky I got away. I'm not there copying everyone else, but spreading

> > my wings. Being here enables me to work harder."

> > ===

> > HTP,

> > Mahari

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> > -----

> > Building a website is a piece of cake.

> > Yahoo! Small Business gives you all the tools to get online.

> >

>

| 23098|2007-09-12 16:11:52|Mahari Mengistu|Major German show of art and history of the Scythian rider-nomads|

Major German show of art and history of the Scythian rider-nomads

BERLIN (AP) ? In ancient Greece, the Scythians were at first known as mysterious "milkers of mares." To Jeremiah, the Old Testament prophet, the Scythian mounted archers crossing Palestine to raid Egypt were "midnight people."

Detailed reports about the rider-nomads came only some 2,500 years ago from the widely travelled Greek historian Herodotus.

Now a major archeological exhibition offers an exhaustive overview of the life and history of the enigmatic tribes that ruled the steppes in Eastern Europe and Asia for more than 500 years B.C. and had a little-known but highly developed culture. Museums and institutes in eight European and Asian countries worked together in preparing the impressive show at Berlin's Martin Gropius building. Many objects on display have never been shown in the West, among them magnificent samples excavated only in recent years.

The show's title, "Under the Sign of the Golden Griffin: the Royal Graves of the Scythians," refers to Herodotus' claim that they originated in a "Land of the Gold-Guarding Griffins." The griffin, a mythological animal with the body of a lion and the head of an eagle, can be seen on many artifacts recovered by archeologists.

However, Herodotus made scarce mention of the enormous amounts of gold, silver, bronze and electrum (a gold and silver alloy) that the Scythians wore and used, and which are now fascinating exhibition visitors.

The show was triggered by a sensational find made by a German-Russian team between 2001 and 2003 on a southern Siberian plain popularly known as the Valley of the Kings. In one of untold burial mounds in the region, the team excavated the grave of a royal couple in a chamber three metres deep containing a vast amount of gold objects.

It was a unique discovery because grave robbers, known to have been active since antiquity, obviously abandoned search of this mound after uncovering other chambers that were empty.

Many of the artifacts from this find are on view at the exhibition.

They range from a neck ring weighing a little over three pounds to more than 5,000 tiny golden figurines of panthers decorating the capelike mantles of the prince and his wife.

The German Archeological Institute compared the importance of the find to the discovery of Tutankhamun's tomb in 1922 near Luxor, Egypt, in what is also known as the Valley of the Kings.

Research established that the prince died of prostate cancer in the 7th century B.C. The much younger and healthy wife showed no traces of violence. But given the Scythians' horrifying funerary ritual described by Herodotus, she hardly died of natural causes. That ritual demanded that the widow, aides and servants must immediately follow the prince or king into death. The same applied to the horses.

The skeletons of 41 slain men and women and the remains of 14 horses, all strangled or killed with battle axes, were found in other chambers of the burial mound. The funeral ceremony also included the smoking of marijuana, according to research verifying an observation already made by Herodotus.

Last year, a German-Russian-Mongolian team made another spectacular find in the permafrost of the Mongolian side of the Altai Mountains near the Russian border. In a stone-covered mound, the archeologists discovered the frozen remains of a Scythian warrior who died some 2,500 years ago. The partly mummified, completely clothed warrior is also displayed at the exhibition, his armament and other equipment well preserved.

The man wore a sable-rimmed fur coat and woolen trousers and his legs were stuck in boots made of felt similar to the grey blanket on which he was lying. His headdress, still to be restored, was decorated with wooden animal figurines originally covered with gold foil. The excellent preservation of the clothing permits detailed scientific research.

The "Golden Man of Issyk," discovered in the 1970s in Kazakhstan, is also a main attraction at the show. It is the life-size reconstruction of the clothing of a youth whose corpse was literally strewn with jewelry and thousands of plates and platelets of gold.

A golden pectoral of compelling beauty found in 1971 and lent by the Ukrainian National Museums is sure to be an eye-catcher, too. A photograph of it makes the cover the detailed exhibition catalogue.

The show gives proof of the fabulous wealth the Scythians amassed by controlling important east-west trade routes. But it leaves unanswered the question how such highly detailed golden masterpieces could be created with simple hand tools.

The Golden Comb from the fabled "Siberian Collection" of Peter the Great at St. Petersburg's Hermitage Museum is a dazzling example of such masterly goldsmithing.

The Russian Czar was the first among European Royalty to appreciate Scythian art and begin an important collection in the early 18th century. This started a bit of archeological research which was scientifically intensified only some 50 years ago.

The show will move to Munich next month and then to Hamburg in 2008. Several major items, including the famous golden comb, will return to the lenders at the end of the Berlin run.

===

HTP,

Mahari

| 23099|2007-09-13 12:01:21|Paul Kekai Manansala|Powerful x-ray to unravel fragile Dead Sea scrolls|

Ancient writings from the Dead Sea scrolls are to be read for the first time by British scientists using powerful x-rays.

The team will examine rare and unread fragments of the scrolls, which are believed to shed light on how the texts came to be written in caves along the north-west coast of the sea nearly 2,000 years ago.

The technique will give scientists from Cardiff University a first opportunity to read ancient texts considered too fragile to open.

They will look at the texts using x-rays produced at the 360m Diamond Light Source in Didcot, Oxfordshire. The machine works by propelling electrons at great speeds around a giant tunnel. As they corner they emit x-rays 100bn times brighter than a medical x-ray.

Researchers led by Tim Wess have developed computer software that can "unravel" x-ray images of rolled up parchment documents to reveal the writing, even if the parchment has text on either side.

The scientists have focused their efforts on reading parchments from the 18th century and found that they are able to read 80% of the words written on documents without unravelling them.

Tests have so far been conducted on legal documents called weedingings dating back to 1770 from the National Archives of Scotland. The team is also set to examine a series of unknown fire-damaged texts recovered from the UK's National Archives in Kew.

Many historical documents are recorded in iron gall ink, a mix of oak apple, iron sulphate and copper, on parchment made from the treated skin of cows, goats or sheep. With time the collagen that holds the parchment together degrades and turns into gelatin, damage that is accelerated by the corrosive nature of the ink. Using the x-ray machine scientists can examine sheets of parchment in such detail that they can decide how badly degraded they are over distances of one thousandth of a millimetre. If they are badly degraded the researchers will be able to use the new technique to read them without risk of destroying them.

The team's first goal is to read hidden texts from the scrolls and the Torah which is said to record the word of God as revealed to Moses.

"There are some parts of the Dead Sea scrolls that haven't been unrolled, and there are parts of the Torah that haven't been seen as well," Prof Wess said. "There are discoveries to be made in terms of trying to understand the whole picture of the history of the people who wrote the Dead Sea scrolls and why they moved into that area of the Dead Sea. Sometimes we don't know their value because we can't see inside them, and until we start looking, we don't know what's there."

<http://www.guardian.co.uk/science/2007/sep/13/4>

| 23100|2007-09-13 12:05:08|Paul Kekai Manansala|Ancient Egyptians Mummified Their Cats With Utmost Care|

Science Daily ? Examination of Egyptian mummies has shown that animals such as cats and crocodiles were given a far more careful and expensive trip to the afterlife than previously thought.

The mummification process, which was crucial to the ancient Egyptians so their bodies survived and they could become immortal, is being investigated by Dr Stephen Buckley at the University of York. He was speaking on September 11, 2007 at the BA Festival of Science.

His work uses modern chemistry techniques to look at exactly what was used to mummify humans and animals.

The technique involves taking a very small sample of the mummy and examining it for traces of chemicals using equipment commonly used in forensic studies.

The compounds that Dr Buckley finds act as the chemical fingerprints for the materials used by the Egyptian embalmers. These included animal fats, beeswax, plant oils and resins, and more exotic materials such as marjoram and cinnamon.

Following examination of over 100 samples it is clear that different animals were treated with different mummification materials. These "recipes" varied considerably, but it is believed that there is a symbolic association between the ingredients used for each animal and the god they represented.

"Mummification of animals has been thought of as cheap and cheerful, but this shows that a significant amount of effort, knowledge and expense was afforded to them," explained Dr Buckley.

"Cats in particular received special attention and this fits with the idea of cats having a special place in Egyptian life."

Cats were associated with the Egyptian goddess Bastet, who was particularly revered. To mummify a cat for its journey to the afterlife, the typical recipe would have been 80 per cent fat or oil, 10 per cent pistacia resin, 10 per cent conifer resin and a pinch of cinnamon.

"The Egyptian embalmers understood that there were things that caused the body to decay and they discovered that certain materials could help preserve the bodies. The resins they used on the inside of the bodies had anti-bacterial properties whilst those used on the outside acted as a barrier to moisture and fungus," said Dr Buckley.

This knowledge of the embalmers lives today on as some of those compounds used to preserve mummies are used in modern anti-bacterial products.

Dr Buckley's findings also shed light on the politics, religion and trade-routes of the Egyptians.

The black colouring of the mummy of the Priest of Min at Hull Museum is due to bitumen that was imported from Persia. This material was both practical and symbolic. Min was the Egyptian fertility god and the Egyptians used black silt to fertilise their fields so the mummy's colour represents the land and the god.

Note: This story has been adapted from a news release issued by British Association For The Advancement Of Science.

---

<http://www.sciencedaily.com/releases/2007/09/070912155750.htm>

| 23101|2007-09-14 07:32:55|cristofori whitakara|hassan hakmoun|

Hassan Hakmoun, from Marrakech, is a commanding figure in world music circles. From his early days as a street entertainer in Marrakech's legendary Jamaa el-Fna market square through appearances at Lincoln Center, BAM, and the Hollywood Bowl, Hassan Hakmoun has left an indelible imprint on audiences and critics alike. Well-known for his concerts of music from Gnawa trance ceremonies and his cross-cultural music, he has performed since the age of seven. In Morocco, he studied with master musicians, including Brahim el-Belkani and Amida Boussou, and worked as a m?allem (lead musician) in derbeba purification and trance ceremonies. Since making his US debut in 1987 at Lincoln Center as part of the Trio Gna, he has earned a following for spanning multiple genres with his spiritually charged vocals and sintir playing. He has collaborated with Richard Horowitz, Pharoah Sanders, Kronos Quartet, Peter Gabriel, and Don Cherry, among others; appeared at WOMAD, Woodstock '94, and the Tonight Show with Jay Leno; and recorded for Real World, Mina Records, and Triloka. His album, The Gift, won an AFIM Indie Award for Best Contemporary World Recording.

Hakmoun will perform music from the Gnawa brotherhood - a mystical black Islamic sect whose members trace their spiritual ancestry to Bilal, an Ethiopian who was Mohammed's first muezzin (prayer leader). Their rites have origins in sub-Saharan Africa and were brought to Morocco by slaves and mercenaries from the 17th century onward. The organization of the trance ceremony is reminiscent of the rites of West African hunting societies and of Haitian vodou. Gnawa musicians are entertainers on Jamaa el-Fna, the market square in Marrakech, but their most important function is to perform as intermediaries with the spirit world at purification rituals and trance ceremonies.

---

Boardwalk for $500? In 2007? Ha!

Play Monopoly Here and Now (it's updated for today's economy) at Yahoo! Games.

| 23102|2007-09-14 07:34:03|cristofori whitakara|Ziryab|

The Orchestra of Tangier is under the direction of Ahmed Zaitouni, the 76-year-old founder of the Conservatory of Tangier who is widely considered to be the last living legend of Moroccan Andalusian music. Zaitouni studied with many great masters of Andalusian music, including the revered Sheikh Moulay Ahmed Ouazzane. The orchestra, comprised of graduates of the Conservatory of Tangier, features virtuoso musicians on rebab (fiddle), oud (lute), violin, viola, tar (tambourine), darbouka (goblet drum), and vocals, along with guest artist Abderrahim Souiri, one of the most popular Andalusian vocalists in Morocco. Since its formation in 1981, the orchestra has performed at many prestigious music festivals and events in the Middle East and Europe and received international recognition for its recordings of traditional Andalusian music. Its performances feature excerpts from the classical nuba repertoire - vocal and instrumental suites which evolved over 1,000 years ago in Cordoba, Spain (which was ruled by the Moors) and are credited to the Baghdad musician Zyriab.

---

Pinpoint customers who are looking for what you sell.

Ancient Scots Mummified Their Dead

Jennifer Viegas, Discovery News

Submit to:

Sept. 14, 2007 ? The ancient Egyptians were not the only ones to mummify their dead, according to a study in this month's Antiquity Journal that claims prehistoric Scottish people created mummies too.

The researchers do not think the Egyptians influenced the Scots, but that mummification arose independently in the two regions.

Initial evidence for Scottish mummies was announced in 2005, when archaeologists unearthed three preserved bodies ? an adult female, an adult male and an infant ? buried underneath two Bronze Age roundhouses in South Uist, Hebrides, at a site called Cladh Hallan. The bodies dateto between 1300 and 1500 B.C.

"Distinctive microscopic and chemical changes in the bones showed that the bodies had not been placed in the ground immediately after death, but had been subject to conditions that may have enhanced their preservation," said Andrew Chamberlain, who worked on both the 2005 and the more recent investigations.

Chamberlain, a University of Sheffield archaeologist, told Discovery News that the new evidence relates to the female mummy's knee.

| 23104|2007-09-15 09:15:05|Paul Kekai Manansala|Sydney, Australia: First settlers go back 30,000 years|

The dig site on the corner of George and Charles Street, Parramatta, where a Meriton apartment block now stands.

Richard Macey
September 15, 2007

A CACHE of charcoal, stone tools and artefacts unearthed to make way for a high-rise apartment block has been found to be 30,000 years old, more than doubling the accepted age of Aboriginal settlement in Sydney.

The discovery, to be presented to an archaeological conference opening at the University of Sydney next weekend, was the result of a dig originally set up to search for signs of convict era occupation.

It is the oldest evidence yet found of humans occupying what is now metropolitan Sydney. Aboriginal burial sites at Lake Mungo, in south-western NSW, have been dated at 40,000 years. The archaeologist who led the dig, Jo McDonald, said the previous oldest evidence of human habitation around Sydney had been found in the Blue Mountains (14,700 years), at Kurnell (12,500), and near the old Tempe House on the Cooks River (10,700).

"We have always thought that humans arrived much earlier in Sydney, having made their way down the coast from northern Australia and moving inland up major rivers like the Hawkesbury and Parramatta rivers. But most of that earlier occupation evidence was drowned on the coastal plain when the sea level rose to its current height around 7000 years ago."

After some old factories were demolished in 2002 to make way for Parramatta's Meriton apartment block, archaeologists began digging for convict-era relics.

When they started finding Aboriginal relics as well, Dr McDonald was called in to help. The sandy site, on the corner of George and Charles streets, may have once been part of a crescent-shaped beach on the Parramatta River. Possibly 800 metres long and 100 metres wide, the sand body was deposited by the river when the sea level was higher around 120,000 years ago.

The archaeologists dug in three spots - the future Meriton apartments, a construction site across George Street, and the site of an old RTA office down the road.

"We found lots and lots of stone artefacts, around 20,000 of them," said Dr McDonald. "There were lots of spear points, axes, and quite a few anvils and grinding stones."

The finds indicate the Aboriginal inhabitants used some of these tools to crush water plants to make starch-based meal. There were also stones Aborigines had placed in their beach camp fires to retain the heat of the flames.

Rounded cobbles and pebbles made of yellow volcanic stone, not natural to the Parramatta area, were typical of tools used more than 5000 years ago.

"Most likely they were carried in from the Hawkesbury and Grose Rivers," said Dr McDonald. "People carried around large pieces of the stone because they had good flaking properties, and they could rely on these when they were in unfamiliar territory."

If a new tool was needed, the Aborigines simply fashioned it on the spot from one of the stones.

But the most extraordinary discovery was charcoal, possibly from ancient campfires, found about a metre beneath the surface, and very close to some artefacts. Radiocarbon dating showed that the tiny fragments, with a total volume equalling "about 10 pinheads" were 30,735 years old, give or take 400 years. Four other charcoal samples, recovered from shallower depths, gave increasingly younger ages, with the uppermost dated at 3270 years, plus or minus 35 years.

The age pattern suggested Aborigines had been routinely camping on the site for at least 300 centuries. "It's proof of the perseverance of Aboriginal culture."

| 23105|2007-09-15 09:52:28|Millennium Twain|Re: Who Will Profit from this Crash? Will Derivatives Wipe Out Some|
the end of the moldy-Volde-ThingY?

draft, as of 20:46 pm, 14 September 2007

for the benefit of the youth and students in our Ojai audience, those who will have been brought up in the Ojai Valley Newspeak -- without benefit of truth or sincerity on the part of their 'educators' -- I am going to attempt a full background on the economic crisis confronting the US, Europe, and the World at this time.

parts of this you will know, from reading previous OjaiPost reports, or following the increasingly emotional dialog in the media and amongst our families and friends -- as to the falling US Dollar, the 'Falling Treasuries', the rising Gold prices, the exponentially expanding Derivatives monster, the 'Sub-prime Loan Crisis', the China Gauntlet, and Private Banking and the Debt-Based Monetary System.

when I grew up in Ojai, in the fifties and sixties, it was still largely true that "money in the bank" came from gold and commodities, or at least was backed by cash, paper money. the tens of trillions of dollars of debt did not then exist, and a global military police state was not required to maintain the flow of wood and food and minerals and products to North America. [ten times our share of the world's products, mind you.]

the US had conquered the world with its automobile and aircraft factories, and the nuclear bomb, and demanded the lowest prices on food and oil, and everything, nearly worldwide. nations who did not agree, disappeared in intelligence wars, and then miraculously re-appeared as ally nations who signed away all their minerals and other valuables to US corporations, for pennies on the dollar.

as to banking or economic theory, in order to make its population happy, and voting, believing the newspeak, supporting the wars -- LOTS of money had to find its way into the hands of the US citizenry in order to pay for all of the world's product we 'needed' to buy, to keep us fat dumb and happy while we worked for the corporate machine killing Mother Earth and supporting the military-aerospace production lines keeping the world in servitude.

the result was Debt-Based Banking, what we have today.

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Debt-based\_monetary\_system

money was created out of thin air, by the loan contracts that the US public signed to buy their land and houses and cars. and for their college educations. banks were only required by the US government and the Federal Reserve to back their accounts with the loan statements from the borrowers. that is, a bank with only a million or a billion dollars actual gold or cash in the vault, could lend out ten million or ten billion dollars, by placing YOUR loan contract in the bank vault. thus when you borrowed ten thousand dollars for a car, or a hundred thousand dollars for a home, the bank simply added ten thousand dollars or a hundred thousand dollars to its bank account ledgers.

there actually was NO CASH or GOLD or other valuables in the vaults.

for the last several decades ALL the money put into circulation in the Western world has been simply materialized out of thin air, by the keystrokes on the computer creating the money in the bank computers. the money never existed.

as of day before yesterday:

"The US currency has now fallen more than 2 per cent against the euro in the last week, dropping to a low of $1.3910 against the single currency, breaching the previous record low of $1.3852 it hit on July 24. Meanwhile, the dollar index, which tracks its value against a basket of six leading currencies, fell to 79.404, its lowest level since September 1992."

"INVESTORS ALL OVER the world are collectively holding their breath, waiting to see if the Federal Reserve lowers interest rates at its September 18 meeting. They are also looking toward investment bank earnings, specifically Bear Stearns, Lehman Brothers and Goldman Sachs which will soon post quarterly results, to get a better sense of just how very bad the subprime crisis is. While they wait, many investors are taking advantage of the accelerating chaos by selling Derivatives calls and puts."

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Subprime\_mortgage\_financial\_crisis

enter Bush, Clinton, Gore, Cheney at al and Gold!

<http://www.google.com/search?hl=en&q=Al+Gore+Clinton+Federal+ReserveGold+Price+Antitrust+Reginald+Howe>

nearly twenty years ago the Financial powers that be -- centering around Washington DC but including London and all the European, Japanese and Israeli banking powers -- determined to use a well-known covert financial mechanism to keep this monetary elephant of the industrial-state afloat. That mechanism is known as gold price suppression. That is, if the world governments and media PRETEND that the market is free -- and PRETEND that gold and prices are free to rise and all, and PRETEND people actually make capital gains by putting their money and pensions into banks and mutual funds etc -- and then the price of gold is actually secretly suppressed, held down by the western banks and governments, then the OTHER currencies and economies of the world, as in China, Africa, Latin American, the Middle East, Eastern Europe will be depressed, crushed. Their currencies and economies will always drop, while the western computer-manipulated economies go up.

thus the monetary scam launched during the Clinton/Gore administration so long ago now, which evolved into the 9/11 StockPlay in 2001. the "Company's" 9/11 StockPlay ended the epic-making global antitrust suit by Reginald Howe:

<http://www.google.com/search?hl=en&q=Reginald+Howe+Gold+Adam+Hamilton+Derivatives+JP+Morgan>

by bringing down fifty floors of evidence, the offices of JP Morgan Chase which organized the 9/11 Derivatives Market Crash and Gold Price Fixing scams.

at that time, Gold which had been held down to about $275 an ounce, was now free to rise -- to the Wednesday, September 12, 2007 price of $706.00 !!

Millennium Twain

Paraphrased from "Gerald T. Agnew", In EnergyResources:

There are two schools of thought on the US money crisis. In a normal world, a country with a horrendous debt problem would crunch its economy (to stifle demand) and raise interest rates to get the capital to keep it afloat. The alternative would be to let its currency (the US Dollar) go to the devil and that would raise the price of imports to the point where purchasing would stop. At the same time, exports would become cheaper and more competitive and hence (yet again!) draw money (pennies on the dollar) into the US.

This wonderful, and naive, theory was the norm until a generation or so ago ... [Now money is generated on the bank ledgers in the forms of loans, and is no longer based on gold or cash or assets.]

We are at the Dollar-depreciation point today. Lowering the value of the USD would be done by lowering interest rates as the US CURRENTLY CONSUMES 80-100% OF THE WORLD'S SAVINGS just to cover its wanton spending, consumer consumption! If Europe were to garner maybe 10% of that amount (to develop Eastern Europe for example), then this tiny change would cause a mammoth hit on the USD. The Dollar would no longer attract the funds it needs in the tremendous volumes it requires. End of story! Classical theory, as outlined above, would seemingly demand this.

These days, this may not necessarily be so. In the age of planetwide servitude, citizen-victim obedience, anything goes. In other words, if the Fed lowers interest rates, then the drumbeat (newspeak, propaganda) will be that cash MUST continue to come to the US at any cost. Because if it does not, then the US will have a balance of payments crisis which will (thank you globalisation!) impact the rest of the world in the most frightening way. [Cause a global market crash.] Media propaganda to keep this fantasy daisychain going is that if one buys US Treasuries while the Fed's cutting interest rates, then the investor would make large capital gains on the bonds as their prices increase. Hear the laughter meter topping out?

The entire stock market will also be advertised as "on sale", claiming lower interest rates mean stronger equities. Companies that trade overseas in large volumes (ie Coca- Cola, Microsoft, IBM, John Deere etc.,) will have large earnings because of the weakened USD and thus must be a magnet for [compulsory] investments from overseas. [The meter just broke.]

Things are therefore not as clear as they once were - "Skim milk masquerades as cream".

To try and sum this up, a policy of lowering interest rates by the US Federal Reserve would be accompanied by a barrage of financial nonsense extolling the virtues of investing in the "new US economy" facade. The dollar would sink for many years ... not crash overnight, if we are lucky.

This is what Treasury Secretary Henry Paulson wants right now, a lower USD especially against the Yen and Chinese Renminbi/Yuan. The Treasury will claim it does not want a Stock Market Crash right now as that would stop the flow of funds to NY. The truth is, that either way, Stock Market Crash or no, the US economy will collapse without an more than impossible expansion of the current intelligence agency and military enforced global investment program.

Whether they stage another hard 9/11 Crash, or a 'soft' quarterly-earnings-report crash -- America's economic future AFTER this September 2007 will require an equally impossible increase in the global security state control of Eastern Europe, China, Asia, Latin America, Africa and the Middle East. The slaves would have to become MORE poor and numerous, and their countrysides MORE productive and liquid. The thought would never be entertained, as China is now the world's greatest economic power, and is committed to leveling the world economy, which means collapsing the US Mega-Bubble. Even if China WISHED to continue to work for pennies, it too is a physical impossibility -- with a majority of their work population now being prisoners and homeless migrants, and with 95 percent of the world's ecological/bio-resource base wiped out. The forests and rainforests, rivers and wetlands, oceans and life, no longer EXIST to be plundered.

And China, like the rest of the world, can no longer accept any predation from Europe and the US ... THEIR populations are now at the point of revolt too ... with no more room left to maneuver. No more food to eat, no more air to breath. No more love to share ...

...

see also the dialogs at:

http://www.ojaipost.com/2007/09/the\_last\_zuchini.shtml

http://www.ojaipost.com/2007/09/no\_flights\_available\_to\_new\_yo.shtml

..

.

| 23106|2007-09-16 07:29:35|Paul Kekai Manansala|Call for Papers: ALAMAT : 1st International Conference on Myths and Symbols

ALAMAT : 1st International Conference on Myths and Symbols

Theme: "Flood Stories, Lost Lands and Drowned Continents"

(Rediscovering the Contemporary Significance of Ancient Myths and Symbols for Healing the Earth)

<http://cas.upm.edu.ph/alamat>

CALL FOR PAPERS

In celebration of the University of the Philippines' Centennial this 2008, the Department of Arts and Communication of the College of Arts and Sciences, (University of the Philippines Manila) is pleased to announce its holding of ALAMAT : The 1st International Conference on Myths and Symbols, with the theme "Flood Stories, Lost Lands and Drowned Continents" to be held on November 25-28, 2008 at the Bulwagang Aurelio Tolentino (Little Theater), Cultural Center of the Philippines, Pasay City, Metro Manila, Philippines.

The University of the Philippines Manila, through the Alamat Conference and its theme, "Flood Stories, Lost Lands, and Drowned Continents" enters the international discussion on environmental and earth-healing to avert an impending repetition of a long past semi-mythical, semi-prehistorical event ? great floods, lost lands, drowned continents, causing massive dispersals and migrations of people around the world. This mythical event might likely become a reality, once again, given the human-caused global warming phenomenon, resulting climate. To answer this problem, a new myth has to be discovered, or an old one re-discovered and re-invented to heal the divided consciousness of the people of the earth that is causing this great peril to the world. A healed consciousness might lead to a healed earth. To this end, the University of the Philippines Manila, as a Health Sciences Campus, sees the need to extend the concept of healing to "Healing the Self" and "Healing the Earth". To this end ? the contemporary significance of ancient myths and symbols in healing might be re-discovered.

The Main Speaker for the Opening Program will be Dr. Stephen Oppenheimer, M.D. of Green College and School of Anthropology , Oxford University , England . His book, Eden in the East : The Drowned Continent of Southeast Asia , has inspired the organizers to explore his thesis in line with the need to heal the earth through myths and symbols as a part of addressing the international concern on the perils of global warming and climate change.

The Closing Speaker will be Mr. Paul Kekai Manansala, an independent researcher and journalist from Sacramento , California , USA . Mr. Manansala has written books on the history and pre-history of Southeast Asia and related regions, namely, The Naga Race (1994), Quests of the Dragon and Bird Clan (2006) and Sailing the Black Current (2007).

Selected panel discussants from other parts of the world, the ASEAN and Pacific regions, as well as the Philippines, will lead the framing the Conference resolutions by the participants, and gear them towards healing the earth in response to the perils posed by global warming and climate change.

In this connection, the Organizing Committee calls for papers from all interested parties in the local, national and international levels ? from the academic and educational sector; business and industry sector; media and communications sector; arts, culture and creative industries sector; religious sector; civil society groups, NGOs, POs ; military and police sector; environmentalists; and governmental organizations and units - to participate in this international conference , as paper presenters, poster exhibitors, art exhibitors, or participants.

Any person or group that has an unpublished research work or study on myths and symbols covering the Conference Theme (Flood Stories, Lost Lands and Drowned Continents), from the academe, independent researchers, and other sectors all over the world ? is invited to participate. Moreover, those who can relate their own disciplinary studies with the Conference Theme and objectives, especially social engineers, visionaries, philosophers, whose works lead toward healing the earth or eco-therapy ? are also welcome. Present-day narratives of mythical dimensions, from persons victimized by contemporary natural catastrophes, as well as from those concerned with environmental protection and safety by reporting on endangered sites and species - are most welcome to pass their abstracts. They just have to find their own appropriate panel session topics to write on, based on their on training, experience and orientation.

Abstracts of not more than 800 words must be submitted by November 30, 2007 , based on a chosen topic given below.
The topics covered by the conference are as follow:

? The Theme of Flood Stories, Lost Lands, and Drowned Continents in the Myths and Symbols of the World : State of the Art, Case Studies, Area Studies, Comparative Studies

? Survivals, Remnants and Vestiges of Probable Ante-Diluvian Myths, Symbols, and Artifacts in the Arts and Cultures of the World (Assumes that there are surviving myths, symbols and artifacts that may be traced from probable ante-diluvian "lost lands" revealed in the arts, myths, religion, etc. of the world)

? Science and Social Science-Related Investigations, Issues and Controversies Pertaining to the Myths and Symbols (evaluating scientific, historical, geological, linguistic, astronomical, archeological, genetics, anthropological evidence that serve as bases for the existence and survival of the myths and symbols - local, national, regional, international)

? Philippine-Based Myths and Symbols on 'Mu' , 'Lemuria' or Related 'Lost Lands' : Views, Visions, Prophecies, and Revelations from Traditional, Folk, or Urban-Based Groups (personal accounts and group narratives by folk religious leaders and members of esoteric, mystical, millenarian, "kapatiran" (brotherhood / sisterhood) popular movements in line with their interpretations of 'Mu' , Lemuria, etc.)

? Rediscovering the Ancient Myths and Symbols of the Flood, Lost Lands and Drowned Continents in the World for the New Millennium : Visions, Programs, Strategies, Projects, and Innovative Applications for Healing the Earth (Visions, programs, and applications of these mythical themes and motifs for individual , national, regional, and global renewal, transformation, empowerment, liberation for the new millennium)

? Contemporary Flood Stories, Lost Lands, and Endangered Sites / Species of the World : Reports and Personal Narratives

(Narratives of experiences by victims of contemporary natural catastrophes such of great floods, earthquakes, etc, as well as reports of endangered sites and species in the world caused by global warming and climate change)

The abstract must contain the following parts: Introduction (which indicates the thesis of the paper and the methodology of the study), Presentation of Data, Analysis and Interpretation , and Preliminary Conclusion of the Study / Paper.

A 20-member Review Committee representing several fields and disciplines of study, including some representatives from selected sectors will evaluate the submitted drafts. Please submit all abstracts as an e-mail attachment to the Coordinator of the Organizing Committee by November 30, 2007 :

Prof. Grace Odal-Devora
e-mail address : mutisalah@yahoo.com

For more information on this Conference, please log on at <http://cas.upm.edu.ph/alamat>.

There will be two screenings on the papers submitted. The first is the screening of the abstracts submitted based on the Call for Papers. The second is the screening of the completed paper sent based on the approved abstracts.

Abstracts will be screened based on their adherence to the theme of the conference, clarity of idea or thesis presented by the paper, and orderly presentation of the data.

The completed papers will be evaluated based on their adherence to the abstract approved by the Panel of Reviewers. Results of the abstract evaluation by the Review Committee will be sent through e-mail by November 30, 2007 . Upon notification of the Panel's acceptance of the abstract, the "Technical Guidelines in Paper-Writing" will be sent to the participant, who then writes the paper in full, following the technical guidelines set by the Panel of Reviewers. Deadline for the submission of the completed paper based on the approved abstract is January 30, 2008 .

Since all completed papers will be pre-printed in one volume in time for the Conference, approved papers by the Panel will be referred to the Editorial Committee for copy editing.

Please e-mail the abstract accompanied by a one-paged resume of the writer / scholar / researcher/ participant.

The accepted abstract (not over 800 words) must be completed as a full paper with a maximum of 5,000 words. For the completed paper, illustrations will be limited to a maximum of eight photos / pictures. The photos must be numbered and be provided with a caption and photo credits Each presenter will be given the maximum time of 30 minutes per presentation using powerpoint as a tool for communication. Hence, the presenter needs to bring a CD for his / her powerpoint presentation.

The Conference Program and further details on the conference will be released only after all the approved abstracts have been fully written, and the completed versions duly sent via e-mail to the Over-All Coordinator, for submission to the Editorial Committee - leading to their printing in one compiled volume which will be available during the conference.

Since only 24 speakers will be accommodated for oral presentation during the four-day conference, (inclusive of the Opening Program, the Poster Exhibit and the Closing program), all abstracts received will be ranked from 1-24. Those whose abstracts have been approved but did not make it to the group of 24 paper presenters, will be accommodated as Poster Exhibitors, instead. However, they will also be asked to submit their completed papers for inclusion in the pre-printed volume of papers approved and compiled for the conference. Once the approved abstracts are released, guidelines to the technical requirements to be followed in writing and submitting the completed paper will be e-mailed as " Technical Guidelines for Paper-Writing / Printing", or put in the website, together with a letter of consent to be signed by the writer to authorize the Organizers to have a pre-printed copy of the conference papers. Approval of the abstract for paper-reading does not necessarily make it a part of the pre-printed copy of papers. It merely becomes a candidate for publication. The quality of the completed papers will determine the final choice of papers for publication ? according to the criteria already given. The papers finally approved by the Panel of Reviewers will then be passed on to the Publication Committee for copy editing.

Because of the tight budget of the Conference, there shall be no financial assistance provided for the speakers or paper presenters. However, to help them make it to the conference, the Organizing Committee members have decided to waive off their registration or conference fees. Furthermore, each presenter and poster exhibitor will receive one free copy of the pre-printed volume of conference papers in their conference kits.

Regular conference kits will include the conference program, souvenir program, name tags, the abstracts of papers, a pen and sheets of blank paper.

There are available hotel accommodations within the area of Cultural Center of the Philippines Complex. These can be personally and directly arranged by the presenters by phone, e-mail, letter, etc., or can be arranged for them by the Organizing Committee, upon request. Details on these housing accommodations, with their corresponding cost per day shall be provided in April 2008.

Transport from the airport to the venue, and from the venue back, can also be arranged personally upon arrival at the Ninoy Aquino International Airport or the Centennial Airport, through the airport transport system. However, if the presenters so request, they can be picked up from the airport at their specific time of arrival and then driven back to it at their specific time of departure, by a private vehicle hired by the conference staff, at a cost regularly charged for such private pick-up arrangements.

Food preferences (vegetarian diet or not) must also be communicated to the Coordinator of the Conference.

Optional post-conference tour packages for the participants are also being arranged through the assistance of the Department of Tourism, at a certain cost. Details on these specific tour packages (connected and not connected to the conference theme) will be announced after the final list of speakers and poster exhibitors for the conference is released by April 2008.

Details on the Poster Exhibits shall also be given in April 2008.

For the local participants, endorsements from the Commission on Higher Education and the Department of Education will be provided to all participants upon request.

Please watch out for periodic Conference updates in the web.

NOTES:

1. The word "kapatiran" is a Philippine term from the lexeme "kapatid" (brother / sister) formed from the prefix "ka" (partner, double) and the root word "patid" (to cut off, as from a tie or cord; hence, literally, cut off from the same umbilical cord). This word applies to groups of mixed Christian and indigenous beliefs, operating based on the principle of brotherhood and sisterhood, whose members claim to be guardians of a secret ancestral wisdom revealed to chosen individuals. They claim to have a hidden revelation on the Philippines being once a part of an ancient civilization that vanished - that will one day arise and reveal its renewed former glory to the whole world)

| 23107|2007-09-16 13:22:58|Paul Kekai Manansala|In Sudan, Nubians worry that their region will be the next Darfur|

In villages along the Nile River in northern Sudan, tranquility has given way to unrest. Recent graffiti under a drawing of an AK-47 rifle tells it all: "Darfur 2."

First, southern Sudan erupted in a 20-year civil war, followed by the east, then the west -- Darfur. Now many fear that Sudan's northern territory of Nubia will be next to explode over the fight for resources and accusations of ethnic cleansing by an Arab-dominated government.

A recently formed Nubian rebel group is advocating armed resistance to overthrow the central government. Said one Western diplomat in Khartoum, who spoke on condition of anonymity: "That's the lesson of Darfur. The government will only listen to you when you pick up a gun."

With a separate language and culture, Nubians view themselves as a distinct ethnicity -- neither Arab nor strictly black African -- and they take pride in being one of Africa's oldest civilizations.

The spark for recent unrest was a government proposal to construct several hydroelectric dams along the Nile in the Nubian heartland, north of Khartoum and stretching toward the Egyptian border. Many of the region's 300,000 Nubians would be forced to relocate when rising river waters swallowed scores of villages. Also at risk are some of the world's richest archaeological ruins, which date back 8,000 years.

Sudanese officials defend the dams, contending they would provide Nubians with electricity and irrigation for farming. But some scientists and environmentalists note that the region's soil is mostly sand and granite. Farming is possible only along the Nile's silty banks.

Many Nubians say they have little to lose. Izzadin Idriss Mohammed, 71, described the tensions, using an old Nubian saying: "One who is sinking in the Nile will reach for any branch to survive."

LOS ANGELES TIMES

| 23108|2007-09-17 11:24:44|John Everette|It is the death of history|

It is the death of history

Special investigation by Robert Fisk

Published:17 September 2007

2,000-year-old Sumerian cities torn apart and plundered by robbers. The very walls of the mighty Ur of the Chaldees cracking under the strain of massive troop movements, the privatisation of looting as landlords buy up the remaining sites of ancient Mesopotamia to strip them of their artefacts and wealth. The near total destruction of Iraq's historic past ? the very cradle of human civilisation ? has emerged as one of the most shameful symbols of our disastrous occupation. Evidence amassed by archaeologists shows that even those Iraqis who trained as archaeological workers in Saddam Hussein's regime are now using their knowledge to join the looters in digging through the ancient cities, destroying thousands of priceless jars, bottles and other artefacts in their search for gold and other treasures.

In the aftermath of the 1991 Gulf War, armies of looters moved in on the desert cities of southern Iraq and at least 13 Iraqi museums were plundered. Today, almost every archaeological site in southern Iraq is under the control of looters.

In a long and devastating appraisal to be published in December, Lebanese archaeologist Joanne Farchakh says that armies of looters have not spared "one metre of these Sumerian capitals that have been buried under the sand for thousands of years.

"They systematically destroyed the remains of this civilisation in their tireless search for sellable artefacts: ancient cities, covering an estimated surface area of 20 square kilometres, which ? if properly excavated ? could have provided extensive new information concerning the development of the human race.

"Humankind is losing its past for a cuneiform tablet or a sculpture or piece of jewellery that the dealer buys and pays for in cash in a country devastated by war. Humankind is losing its history for the pleasure of private collectors living safely in their luxurious houses and ordering specific objects for their collection."

Ms Farchakh, who helped with the original investigation into stolen treasures from the Baghdad Archaeological Museum in the immediate aftermath of the invasion of Iraq, says Iraq may soon end up with no history.

"There are 10,000 archaeological sites in the country. In the Nassariyah area alone, there are about 840 Sumerian sites; they have all been systematically looted. Even when Alexander the Great destroyed a city, he would always build another. But now the robbers are destroying everything because they are going down to bedrock. What's new is that the looters are becoming more and more organised with, apparently, lots of money.

"Quite apart from this, military operations are damaging these sites forever. There's been a US base in Ur for five years and the walls are cracking because of the weight of military vehicles. It's like putting an archaeological site under a continuous earthquake."

Of all the ancient cities of present-day Iraq, Ur is regarded as the most important in the history of man-kind. Mentioned in the Old Testament ? and believed by many to be the home of the Prophet Abraham ? it also features in the works of Arab historians and geographers where its name is Qamirnah, The City of the Moon.

Founded in about 4,000 BC, its Sumerian people established the principles of irrigation, developed agriculture and metal-working. Fifteen hundred years later ? in what has become known as "the age of the deluge" ? Ur produced some of the first examples of writing, seal inscriptions and construction. In neighbouring Larsa, baked clay bricks were used as money orders ? the world's first cheques ? the depth of finger indentations in the clay marking the amount of money to be transferred. The royal tombs of Ur contained jewellery, daggers, gold, azurite cylindrical seals and sometimes the remains of slaves.

US officers have repeatedly said a large American base built at Babylon was to protect the site but Iraqi archaeologist Zainab Bah-rani, a professor of art history and archaeology at Columbia University, says this "beggars belief". In an analysis of the city, she says: "The damage done to Babylon is both extensive and irreparable, and even if US forces had wanted to protect it, placing guards round the site would have been far more sensible than bulldozing it and setting up the largest coalition military headquarters in the region."

Air strikes in 2003 left historical monuments undamaged, but Professor Bahrani, says: "The occupation has resulted in a tremendous destruction of history well beyond the museums and libraries looted and destroyed at the fall of Baghdad. At least seven historical sites have been used in this way by US and coalition forces since April 2003, one of them being the historical heart of Samarra, where the Askari shrine built by Nasr al Din Shah was bombed in 2006."

The use of heritage sites as military bases is a breach of the Hague Convention and Protocol of 1954 (chapter 1, article 5) which covers periods of occupation; although the US did not ratify the Convention, Italy, Poland, Australia and Holland, all of whom sent forces to Iraq, are contracting parties.

Ms Farchakh notes that as religious parties gain influence in all the Iraqi pro-vinces, archaeological sites are also falling under their control. She tells of Abdulamir Hamdani, the director of antiquities for Di Qar province in the south who desperately ? but vainly ? tried to prevent the destruction of the buried cities during the occupation. Dr Hamdani himself wrote that he can do little to prevent "the disaster we are all witnessing and observing".

In 2006, he says: "We recruited 200 police officers because we were trying to stop the looting by patrolling the sites as often as possible. Our equipment was not enough for this mission because we only had eight cars, some guns and other weapons and a few radio transmitters for the entire province where 800 archaeological sites have been inventoried.

"Of course, this is not enough but we were trying to establish some order until money restrictions within the government meant that we could no longer pay for the fuel to patrol the sites. So we ended up in our offices trying to fight the looting, but that was also before the religious parties took over southern Iraq."

Last year, Dr Hamdani's antiquities department received notice from the local authorities, approving the creation of mud-brick factories in areas surrounding Sumerian archaeological sites. But it quickly became apparent that the factory owners intended to buy the land from the Iraqi government because it covered several Sumerian capitals and other archaeological sites. The new landlord would "dig" the archaeological site, dissolve the "old mud brick" to form the new one for the market and sell the unearthed finds to antiquity traders.

Dr Hamdani bravely refused to sign the dossier. Ms Farchakh says: "His rejection had rapid consequences. The religious parties controlling Nassariyah sent the police to see him with orders to jail him on corruption charges. He was imprisoned for three months, awaiting trial. The State Board of Antiquities and Heritage defended him during his trial, as did his powerful tribe. He was released and regained his position. The mud-brick factories are 'frozen projects', but reports have surfaced of a similar strategy being employed in other cities and in nearby archaeological sites such as the Aqarakouf Ziggurat near Baghdad. For how long can Iraqi archaeologists maintain order? This is a question only Iraqi politicians affiliated to the different religious parties can answer, since they approve these projects."

Police efforts to break the power of the looters, now with a well-organised support structure helped by tribal leaders, have proved lethal. In 2005, the Iraqi customs arrested ? with the help of Western troops ? several antiquities dealers in the town of Al Fajr, near Nassariyah. They seized hundreds of artefacts and decided to take them to the museum in Baghdad. It was a fatal mistake. The convoy was stopped a few miles from Baghdad, eight of the customs agents were murdered, and their bodies burnt and left to rot in the desert. The artefacts disappeared. "It was a clear message from the antiquities dealers to the world," Ms Farchakh says.

The legions of antiquities looters work within a smooth mass-smuggling organisation. Trucks, cars, planes and boats take Iraq's historical plunder to Europe, the US, to the United Arab Emirates and to Japan. The archaeologists say an ever-growing number of internet websites offer Mesopotamian artefacts, objects anywhere up to 7,000 years old.

The farmers of southern Iraq are now professional looters, knowing how to outline the walls of buried buildings and able to break directly into rooms and tombs. The archaeologists' report says: "They have been trained in how to rob the world of its past and they have been making significant profit from it. They know the value of each object and it is difficult to see why they would stop looting."

After the 1991 Gulf War, archaeologists hired the previous looters as workers and promised them government salaries. This system worked as long as the archaeologists remained on the sites, but it was one of the main reasons for the later destruction; people now knew how to excavate and what they could find.

Ms Farchakh adds: "The longer Iraq finds itself in a state of war, the more the cradle of civilisation is threatened. It may not even last for our grandchildren to learn from."

A land with fields of ancient pottery

By Joanne Farchakh, archaeologist

Iraq's rural societies are very different to our own. Their concept of ancient civilisations and heritage does not match the standards set by our own scholars. History is limited to the stories and glories of your direct ancestors and your tribe. So for them, the "cradle of civilisation" is nothing more than desert land with "fields" of pottery that they have the right to take advantage of because, after all, they are the lords of the land and, as a result, the owners of its possessions. In the same way, if they had been able, these people would not have hesitated to take control of the oil fields, because this is "their land". Because life in the desert is hard and because they have been "forgotten" by all the governments, their "revenge" for this reality is to monitor, and take, every single money-making opportunity. A cylinder seal, a sculpture or a cuneiform tablet earns $50 (25) and that's half the monthly salary of an average government employee in Iraq. The looters have been told by the traders that if an object is worth anything at all, it must have an inscription on it. In Iraq, the farmers consider their "looting" activities to be part of a normal working day.

---

Be a better Globetrotter. Get better travel answers from someone who knows.

Yahoo! Answers - Check it out.

| 23109|2007-09-17 20:12:42|Paul Kekai Manansala|Two fossils found in Kenya raise evolutionary questions|

Science and Technology

Koobi Fora Research Project / L.N. Leakey

MOST POPULAR

Head Case

Two fossils found in Kenya raise evolutionary questions

ByRobin T. Reid

Related links

For anthropologist Fredrick Manthi, there could be no better birthday present than finding a piece of a Homo erectus skull.

That is precisely what he got on August 5, 2000, while searching for fossils near Lake Turkana in northern Kenya. A bit of bone poking through dirt at his feet turned out to be a 1.55 million-year-old calveria, or brain case. This fossil and another unearthed during the same dig are raising new questions about human evolution.

The calveria's comparatively diminutive size suggests that H. erectus wasn't as similar to Homo sapiens as has been believed, Manthi and several colleagues contend in the Aug. 9 issue of Nature. The second fossil, a 1.44 million-year-old jawbone from an early hominin called Homo habilis, indicates that H. erectus coexisted with H. habilis, rather than being its descendant. Habilis fossils found in the past were much older than the new one.

"This opens up more questions than it answers," says anthropologist Susan Ant of New York University, one of the study's coauthors. "It raises the value of the contextual framework: where they [H. erectus and H. habilis] were living, the climate, temperature, water sources, how they kept themselves differentiated."

Ant has worked with both fossils; the jawbone is about the size of a human hand, she says, while the brain case now the color of the sandstone that encased it for millennia is roughly similar to that of a modern human's.

Telling H. erectus and H. habilis apart starts with the teeth. H. habilis had larger molars, an indication that the species ate more vegetation. Ant speculates that the two species divided up their habitat based on food preferences, much as gorillas and chimpanzees do today.

The small size of the H. erectus brain case could also indicate greater sexual dimorphism a condition, found more often in primitive species, in which male and female body sizes differ dramatically.

Ant attributes this size-gap to reproductive reasons: females seek bigger, healthier mates, and bigger males have a competitive edge over smaller rivals. Since the difference in size fades as a species evolves, the calveria found in Kenya could put a lot more evolutionary distance between us similarly sized H. sapiens and our H. erectus ancestors.

That argument assumes the new fossil is indeed an H. erectus something anthropologist Eric Delton, chairman of City University of New York's anthropology department and research associate for the Museum of Natural History, is not willing to do. Previous research suggests that the brain case's shape isn't like others found in China, Indonesia and the Republic of Georgia, says Delton, who is not affiliated with the new study.

What's more, Delton says, the brain case and jawbone could be from an entirely new species.

"Sexual dimorphism has been talked about for years," he says. "I fear that what they're basing this on is not an erectus, and the base of the house of cards will collapse. Let's go slowly and not assume erectus or habilis and think about what else it might be."

Whatever the results may be, Manthi, from the National Museums of Kenya, still rates his 33rd birthday as one of the best he's had.

"I've worked in the lake basin for 20 years," the Kenyan native, now 40, says. "This was my first human fossil."

Robin T. Reid is a freelance writer and editor in Baltimore, Maryland.

| 23110|2007-09-17 20:13:14|Paul Kekai Manansala|I, Obelisk|

Written By Frank L. Holt

<http://www.saudiaramcoworld.com/issue/200705/i.obelisk.htm>

Send this article to your friend.

the obelisk of Seti I and of his son Ramses II, was born and raised a devoted Egyptian in spite of my current address. At birth, I weighed more than 250 tons, and I measured more than 24 meters' (78') in length. It took an army of chanting men with chisels and heavy hammers to labor me out of the granite quarries near Elephantine. Workers swarmed over me for months, midwives on a mission, as the parent rock was cut away, and I was delivered, cut by cut, blow by blow. Great levers then lifted me to an embankment, where thousands pulled at straining ropes, dragging me, gently despite my great bulk, to the Nile. There, cradled in a special barge and the focus of a mobile ceremony, I journeyed down through history, from Thebes and Abydos to Memphis and Anu.

My noisy procession came ashore at Holy Anu, City of the Sun. Seti I, beloved of Ptah, conceived me as a monumental shaft of the sun's pure light that would stand before the temple of Ra. Before Pharaoh's wish was accomplished, however, fate intervened: Suddenly (as we Egyptians say), old Seti became Osiris, ruler no longer of the living, but the dead.

I lay heartbroken and half-born until Seti's son, the long-lived Ramses II, took his place as Lord of the Two Lands, Upper and Lower Egypt?in 1279 BC, as I think you would say. Like a second father, Ramses set me towering over the sun-priests at Anu. In the hush that fell as I found my footing, everything finally made sense to me. At last I saw the world as it was intended to be?not that and near, but far below, stretching out in every direction with vistas of beauty and mystery. I marveled at the tiny upturned faces of the followers of Ra. I recognized nearby my brother obelisks, some already a thousand years older than I, arrayed across the city like a scattering family of tourists. Across the Nile, I glimpsed the pyramids that alone made me feel small among the monuments of men. What a wonderland in which to be raised! Holy Anu, now the suburbs of Matariya and `Ain Shams in Cairo ?a city I have never seen, by the way?bustled back then as a center of worship and learning. Anu's fame attracted visitors from foreign lands, and they marveled at me. On my polished sides, the priests pointed out the deep-cut symbols that expressed the pride and piety of my two fathers, Seti and Ramses. The Greeks, who came here often, gave to these signs the popular name hieroglyphs, which translates into your language as "priestly carvings." They also coined a playful word for my siblings and me ?obeliskos, meaning "a little souvlaki skewer." How envy makes men jest!

YANN ARTHUS-BERTRAND / CORBIS

Four times my weight and almost twice my height, the largest obelisk ever quarried in Egypt lies stillborn at Aswan, fatally cracked.

With tireless determination, great Ramses built and bred and smote until he, too, became Osiris. He left behind scores of human sons, as well as stone monuments of eternal fame like me, and his legacy of imperial grandeur. I never admired a pharaoh more than Ramses, nor loved one more than Seti. When Egyptians looked up at me, I know they were really looking up to them.

Neither of my two fathers could have foreseen the troubles that awaited me. When I was only about 630 years old, the Assyrians descended on Holy Anu. When I was 775, the Persians followed. I watched in horror the day that King Cambyses of Persia made my home a ruin. The temples of Anu burned, and the priests perished. Some of my sibling obelisks toppled to the ground, where they lay like sunbeams lost in shadow and dust, extinguished and massively frail. On their behalf I did all I could to uphold light and life in a city darkened by defeat.

Only 200 years later, a young Greek from Macedonia avenged us. Alexander overthrew the Persian Empire and liberated Egypt. I glimpsed the extraordinary lad myself when he marched through Anu, a city now called "Heliopolis" in his language, "Sun City." He knew the place from Homer, his favorite poet, whose Odyssey described how the souls of the dead passed by me on their way to the Underworld. It did not take long for Alexander to follow them on the same sad journey, and he was buried nearby in the magnificent city that still bears his name: Alexandria. The young man's ambitious general Ptolemy soon became our pharaoh, and his dynasty endured until one of the worst days of my life, for when the last of the Ptolemies departed from Egypt, so did I.

CARLITOS GUILLERMO LUNGHI /
EGIPTO.COM

A Roman ship, above, carried me off like so many others from Anu (Heliopolis), where but one survivor remains, below,
now surrounded by a suburb of Cairo.

LUIGI MAYER (1802)

Her name was Cleopatra, and she was goddess and queen. Her blood was Greek, but the heart that pumped it was surely Egyptian. She loved this land, knew its history, spoke its language and ruled its people as Ramses might have done?if not, that is, for Rome. That little Latin-speaking nation far to the west had grown powerful. As its legions gobbled up most of the Mediterranean world, we grew certain that Egypt would be next. Cleopatra did all she could to spare us the worst. Her charm and cunning captivated Caesar, but senatorial assassins struck him down. She tried again with Antony, but he was little help when Caesar's adopted son, Octavian, rallied the Egyptophobic Romans against them both. Antony committed suicide, as did Cleopatra?or so Octavian claimed. I was almost 1300 years old on the day the Romans added Egypt to their empire. In my still-young life I had withstood many such conquests, each one traumatic, but none so personally humbling as the victory of Octavian over Cleopatra. If stone could weep, I would have flooded the Nile.

Only a few priests remained in Heliopolis to keep alive the rites of Ra and to lead the Romans on guided tours among the ruins. I watched as these priests, each too eager to please, catered to the conquerors. "Just over there," they would say, "is where Plato stayed for 13 years while he studied Egyptian astronomy. Over here dwelled Potipherah's daughter, who married the Hebrew Joseph to please Pharaoh. Moses lived here, too, and set up some of these obelisks."

In the wide eyes of the Romans, I saw avarice as they stared up at me, calculating my height, my weight and my age as they would a prospective slave. And so it was that I became known to Octavian himself, who never met a monument he did not wish to make a servant of his regime. Initially, he wanted to carry off another obelisk, the largest one at Karnak, up the Nile, but that one proved too massive to move. Instead, I was chosen as the first of Egypt's many obelisks to be hauled away to Rome, that so-called "Eternal City" that was younger than me by centuries. Once again I was laid flat, and the river waters bore my weight to the Mediterranean, whence I sailed up the tiny Tiber as a trophy of war. I am a captive still to this day.

AMERICAN NUMISMATIC SOCIETY
I was commemorated by Trajan on this medal.

One of the worst things the Romans ever did, they at least did well. Taking me down, transporting me across the sea and setting me up again was a remarkable feat of engineering. By the time it was done, Octavian had taken the new name Augustus, and he had established himself as the first emperor of Rome. He had me hauled to the Circus Maximus, where I was raised on the infield of the racecourse. There, I bestowed fame on the emperor as I once had the pharaohs. The Romans could not read my hieroglyphs, but they busied themselves between races by mouthing the words inscribed in Latin on two sides of my base. Augustus listed there his numerous titles followed by the obvious boast: "Having brought Egypt under the dominion of the Roman people, I dedicated this gift to the Sun." Since the Circus Maximus was itself originally designed for solar worship, I was indeed a fitting adornment. My popularity was such that I set a trend that eventually brought many of my brother obelisks to Rome: There are now more of us here than in any other city in the world. Only one still stands in Heliopolis, a lonely sentinel of Ra, while a few more live solitary lives in a kind of obeliskoid diaspora in places like Paris, London, Istanbul and New York.

But as one accustomed to priestly solemnity and courtly ceremony, my new home bewildered me. Around me fidgeted up to 150,000 toga-clad fanatics screaming for entertainments. They cheered for the team-colored chariots revolving around me lap by lap, the speeds at each straightaway building hopes for spectacular crashes at the turns. They clamored at horse races, boxing competitions, wrestling matches and holiday spectacles. When they craved blood, their rulers obliged with beast hunts and grim-faced gladiators. Yes, I saw all of it, for the now-famous Colosseum was not yet built when I arrived in Rome, and its arena could fit a dozen times inside the Circus Maximus. It seemed as if the tons of sand and dust around me never settled unless dampened by sweat and gore. I peered down on the slaughter of men, bears, elephants, lions, hippopotami and even crocodiles when once Augustus turned the Circus into a swampy replica of an Egyptian landscape in which men hunted the uncaged beasts. For that moment I felt at home again, and I silently roared with the delighted crowd when a toothy croc made lunch of a careless Roman, although I had different reasons for my amusement.

During Nero's reign, I witnessed a far different spectacle?a conflagration of unprecedented scale. The catastrophe began here in the Circus Maximus, and it spread quickly through the adjoining shops and far beyond. For six days, roaring flames and acrid smoke cast shadows across my face, giving a ghostly aura to the perishing city. I survived the great fire, but many temples, parks and tenements did not. Within days, the Romans eased their suffering by returning to the Circus, where Nero himself raced a chariot?to cheer them up, he said. He considered himself quite the champion, even though no competitor could safely prove how deluded the man really was. Some years later, he laid at my feet all of the prizes he had won, numbering in the thousands, and not one of them legitimate. When Nero died?still deluded?just a few months afterward, the dynasty of Augustus expired with him.

Nero had yearned to be not only an athlete, but a singing sensation. Ironically, it was I who became what you might call Rome's greatest rock star. People came from every province of the empire to admire me. Soon, no monument matched my fame?not even the pyramids I had envied so much in my youth. Roman coins circulated far and wide with my image stamped upon them. Special medallions, called contorniates, pictured the Circus, chariots careening around its racecourse, with me at the center. There I was, a scion of Seti and Ramses, personifying the majesty of Rome! If images of the Eiffel Tower or the Washington Monument ever appear 1500 years from now on the currency of some alien civilization, you will have some idea of how important I, the Egyptian, had become to Rome. Still, I would never have willingly traded my home in Holy Anu for all the adulation I received in Rome.

GASPAR VAN WITTEL / CHRISTIE'S IMAGES / CORBIS

For the last half millennium, Piazza del Popolo has been my home. In the early 18th century, a Dutchman painted my portrait, showing behind me the Via Corso that leads to the old forum and the Circus Maximus.

Imperial dynasties pass like days in the long life of an obelisk. When I approached the age of 1860 years, however, something remarkable occurred in the Circus Maximus. Constantine II, a member of one of ancient Rome's last ruling families, brought to me a distinguished visitor from my fatherland. Older and taller than I, the obelisk of Thutmose III and of his grandson, Thutmose IV, joined me on the spina of the Roman Circus. My brother had stood unscathed at Karnak for 18 centuries, the very obelisk that Octavian had originally coveted but was unable to move. Finally, an emperor named Constantine the Great pulled him down and floated his bulk as far as Alexandria, where he intended to make this grandest of obelisks a souvenir for the city of Constantinople, "the new Rome." When death interrupted that plan, the emperor's grandson dragged my brother obelisk to my side. On these matters we commiserated a great deal amid the tumult of the arena, my brother sharing news of recent centuries in Egypt while I educated him about the habits and history of Rome.

Almost imperceptibly during our conversations, the world around us veered in new directions. The empire that had stolen us weakened, stumbled, and fell. Soon one of us, too, fell, when some evil men attacked my brother and toppled him into the now-idle arena. Alone among the ruins, I thought again of Holy Anu and could not bear the sorrow. On a day I no longer remember, I too reeled and thundered onto the ground. Earth and grass slowly smothered me, until the warmth of Ra was gone. Ashamed and shivering, shattered in three pieces, I could only dream of Egypt.

GUENTER ROSSENBACH / ZEFA /
CORBIS

Today, I am dizzied by all the motorized chariots but cheered by the people who gaze up at me and?I believe it is a new gesture of respect?raise a little box to their eye, wink at me, and pass on.

Nothing disturbed my dreams and solitude until I was nearly 2800 years old. Gardens had grown over me, tended by the clergy of a religion I did not recognize. Learned antiquaries knew, however, that I had once towered nearby, and some of them used long iron probes to search for me. Their success occasioned a solemn visit from Pope Sixtus V, who?like the emperors of old?thought me a suitable monument for yet one more "modern state." My pieces were strapped onto heavy sledges and pulled through the streets of Rome until we reached the place they called the Piazza del Popolo, the "Plaza of the People." To make way for my new home in the center of the square, one of ancient Rome's own monuments?the Septizodium?was destroyed and its fragments used to build for me a strong foundation. Workmen chiseled away part of my lower shaft to create a stable foothold so that, healed, I could stand up once more. Yet another Latin inscription commemorated my life, the Papal text complaining of the former abuses done to me: "Pope SIXTUS V ordered that this pitiable ruin, broken and fallen, should be exhumed, restored, moved and dedicated to the Invincible Cross: 1589." I was exorcised, purified and capped by a cross and the pontiff's insignia. I do not wear these strange clothes comfortably, but? "when in Rome?."

And so it is that for the last half millennium this Roman piazza has been my home. Here, I overlook an ancient gateway into the city associated with the Flaminian Way, and hence I am often referred to now as "the Flaminian Obelisk." For a while, I served as a starting post for horse races, as well as the setting for public executions?both disturbing reminders of my days in the Circus Maximus. Worse, though, have been the motorized chariots racing around me for no prizes whatever except a parking space. I cannot imagine what Nero might have done with them.

I, the obelisk of Seti I and his son Ramses II, have risen and fallen like the pendulum of history itself. Up I swung at Holy Anu when my fathers ruled all the lands. Down I pivoted and up again when the Romans took over the world. When their empire fell, I tilted, too. When the Middle Ages passed, I swept upright again to announce the dawn of Europe's Renaissance. Now I wait tirelessly for the next downbeat, for surely I must signal someday another age yet unimagined.

Frank L. Holt (fholt@uh.edu) is a professor of history at the University of Houston and most recently author of Into the Land of Bones: Alexander the Great in Afghanistan (2005) and Alexander the Great and the Mystery of the Elephant Medallions (2003), both published by the University of California Press.

This article appeared on pages 24-31 of the September/October 2007 print edition of Saudi Aramco World.

Check the Public Affairs Digital Image Archive for September/October 2007 images.
| 23111|2007-09-18 13:10:39|cristofori whitakara|Re: In Sudan, Nubians worry that their region will be the next Darf|
this makes me think that the ethnic divisions within the african continent along with foreign invasions allowed for the downfall of the Nile valley high cultures.

Paul Kekai Manansala wrote:

In villages along the Nile River in northern Sudan, tranquility has given way to unrest. Recent graffiti under a drawing of an AK-47 rifle tells it all: "Darfur 2."

First, southern Sudan erupted in a 20-year civil war, followed by the east, then the west -- Darfur. Now many fear that Sudan's northern territory of Nubia will be next to explode over the fight for resources and accusations of ethnic cleansing by an Arab-dominated government.

A recently formed Nubian rebel group is advocating armed resistance to overthrow the central government. Said one Western diplomat in Khartoum, who spoke on condition of anonymity: "That's the lesson of Darfur. The government will only listen to you when you pick up a gun."

With a separate language and culture, Nubians view themselves as a distinct ethnicity -- neither Arab nor strictly black African -- and they take pride in being one of Africa's oldest civilizations.

The spark for recent unrest was a government proposal to construct several hydroelectric dams along the Nile in the Nubian heartland, north of Khartoum and stretching toward the Egyptian border. Many of the region's 300,000 Nubians would be forced to relocate when rising river waters swallowed scores of villages. Also at risk are some of the world's richest archaeological ruins, which date back 8,000 years.

Sudanese officials defend the dams, contending they would provide Nubians with electricity and irrigation for farming. But some scientists and environmentalists note that the region's soil is mostly sand and granite. Farming is possible only along the Nile's silty banks.

Many Nubians say they have little to lose. Izzadin Idriss Mohammed, 71, described the tensions, using an old Nubian saying: "One who is sinking in the Nile will reach for any branch to survive."

LOS ANGELES TIMES

---

Moody friends. Drama queens. Your life? Nope! - their life, your story.

Play Sims Stories at Yahoo! Games.

| 23112|2007-09-18 13:49:07|cristofori whitakara|Re: Sydney, Australia: First settlers go back 30,000 years|

im pretty sure that the indigenous people of australia had their times of war, however the continuous practice of a culture 30, 40, or even 50, 000 years is quite a story and proves the point that if left alone indigenous people will continue to live in their own cultures for many years to come.

Paul Kekai Manansala wrote:

The dig site on the corner of George and Charles Street, Parramatta, where a Meriton apartment block now stands.

Richard Macey

September 15, 2007

A CACHE of charcoal, stone tools and artefacts unearthed to make way for a high-rise apartment block has been found to be 30,000 years old, more than doubling the accepted age of Aboriginal settlement in Sydney.

The discovery, to be presented to an archaeological conference opening at the University of Sydney next weekend, was the result of a dig originally set up to search for signs of convict era occupation.

It is the oldest evidence yet found of humans occupying what is now metropolitan Sydney. Aboriginal burial sites at Lake Mungo, in south-western NSW, have been dated at 40,000 years. The archaeologist who led the dig, Jo McDonald, said the previous oldest evidence of human habitation around Sydney had been found in the Blue Mountains (14,700 years), at Kurnell (12,500), and near the old Tempe House on the Cooks River (10,700).

"We have always thought that humans arrived much earlier in Sydney, having made their way down the coast from northern Australia and moving inland up major rivers like the Hawkesbury and Parramatta rivers. But most of that earlier occupation evidence was drowned on the coastal plain when the sea level rose to its current height around 7000 years ago."

After some old factories were demolished in 2002 to make way for Parramatta's Meriton apartment block, archaeologists began digging for convict-era relics.

When they started finding Aboriginal relics as well, Dr McDonald was called in to help. The sandy site, on the corner of George and Charles streets, may have once been part of a crescent-shaped beach on the Parramatta River. Possibly 800 metres long and 100 metres wide, the sand body was deposited by the river when the sea level was higher around 120,000 years ago.

The archaeologists dug in three spots - the future Meriton apartments, a construction site across George Street, and the site of an old RTA office down the road.

"We found lots and lots of stone artefacts, around 20,000 of them," said Dr McDonald.

"There were lots of spear points, axes, and quite a few anvils and grinding stones."

The finds indicate the Aboriginal inhabitants used some of these tools to crush water plants to make starch-based meal. There were also stones Aborigines had placed in their beach camp fires to retain the heat of the flames.

Rounded cobbles and pebbles made of yellow volcanic stone, not natural to the Parramatta area, were typical of tools used more than 5000 years ago.

"Most likely they were carried in from the Hawkesbury and Grose Rivers," said Dr McDonald. "People carried around large pieces of the stone because they had good flaking properties, and they could rely on these when they were in unfamiliar territory."

If a new tool was needed, the Aborigines simply fashioned it on the spot from one of the stones.

But the most extraordinary discovery was charcoal, possibly from ancient campfires, found about a metre beneath the surface, and very close to some artefacts. Radiocarbon dating showed that the tiny fragments, with a total volume equalling "about 10 pinheads" were 30,735 years old, give or take 400 years. Four other charcoal samples, recovered from shallower depths, gave increasingly younger ages, with the uppermost dated at 3270 years, plus or minus 35 years.

The age pattern suggested Aborigines had been routinely camping on the site for at least 300 centuries. "It's proof of the perseverance of Aboriginal culture."

---

Looking for a deal? Find great prices on flights and hotels with Yahoo! FareChase.

| 23113|2007-09-18 13:51:22|cristofori whitakara|Re: Ancient Scots mummified their Dead| is their any truth to the story that the name "Scot" came from a nubian princess named Scota?

Paul Kekai Manansala wrote:

Ancient Scots Mummified Their Dead

Jennifer Viegas, Discovery News

Submit to:

Sept. 14, 2007 ? The ancient Egyptians were not the only ones to mummify their dead, according to a study in this month's Antiquity Journal that claims prehistoric Scottish people created mummies too.

The researchers do not think the Egyptians influenced the Scots, but that mummification arose independently in the two regions. Initial evidence for Scottish mummies was announced in 2005, when archaeologists unearthed three preserved bodies ? an adult female, an adult male and an infant ? buried underneath two Bronze Age roundhouses in South Uist, Hebrides, at a site called Cladh Hallan. The bodies date to between 1300 and 1500 B.C.

"Distinctive microscopic and chemical changes in the bones showed that the bodies had not been placed in the ground immediately after death, but had been subject to conditions that may have enhanced their preservation, " said Andrew Chamberlain, who worked on both the 2005 and the more recent investigations.

Chamberlain, a University of Sheffield archaeologist, told Discovery News that the new evidence relates to the female mummy's knee.

---

Don't let your dream ride pass you by. Make it a reality with Yahoo! Autos.

| 23114|2007-09-18 14:15:13|cristofori whitakara|Re: King Tut Not Black Enough, Protesters Say|

i think that is very interesting that you say that the word is fictitious. The first people to call abram/abraham that term was the Canaanites. The word was used for him because of what he was doing. When he crossed the Jordan river from Iraq into the land where the Canaanites lived they said he was Ibriy or crossing over the river. I find it interesting also that in Spain there is a river called Ebro(Ibriy?) and it is written that the Phoenicians(Canaanites) were present there also. Are we saying that a verb became an ethnic group then?

Djehuti Sundaka wrote:

"Hebrew" or actually "Ibriy" is a designation not found to predate the J-source i.e. c. 770 BCE. It may have been derived from the word 'hapiru' which was a socioeconomic term, not an ethnic one. Nevertheless, as a socioeconomic entity, such people in Kna'an were composed of the predominate ethnicity of the land, that ethnicity being the Khurri (Hurrians) during the New Kingdom period. Such people were rebellious individuals living on the fringes of urban society and often employed as mercenaries. YisraEl had probably formed from a group centered around Shechem and originating from rural hill country inhabitants between Shechem and Megidow. In short, "Hebrew" is a fictitious ethnic designation.

Djehuti Sundaka

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, kungfuhustle wrote:

>

> SO, this would imply the Jews are recent relative to Egypt.

> What about the origins of the Hebrews?

> Is this, in your opinion, an Egyptian group that separated from Egypt,

> perhaps via Tell el Amarna?

>

> Meninarmer

>

> On Sat, 2007-09-08 at 17:35 +0000, Djehuti Sundaka wrote:

> > Indications imply that the original `Jews' (i.e. the specific ethnic > > element to have designated themselves as `Yehwdah') had been non-

> > Semitic, Aryan influenced, anti-Semites. Confirmation of the non-

> > Semitic element is provided by genetic studies showing the "Cohen

> > modal haplotype" of Jewish priests to be of Northeast Caucasian > > extraction dating back to c. 1000 BCE (around the time of Zadowq).

> > In contrast with the overall Arab (i.e. Semitic) population, the

> > genes of both Palestinians and the global Jewish population in > > general also reveal that their greatest ethnic affiliation is with > > the non-Semitic people known as the Kurds. However, though a strong

> > patrilineal affiliation with the Kurds is genetically established, a > > strong maternal affiliation found in the mtDNA of Palestinians,

> > Shomeriym (Samaritans) , and Iraqi Jews, indicates an ancient female

> > Jewish origin from the indigenous women of Kna'an (cf. Human > > Mutation 24:248-260, 2004). The people of YisraEl and Yehwdah had > > therefore been a people descended from northern non-Semitic men and > > indigenous Semitic women. The `original Jews' had been the southern

> > Kna'an highlanders of patrilineal Khurri descent. Such an ancestry

> > had perhaps been implied by the J-writer's story of the sons of > > YisraEl leaving Kharran to dwell at Shechem only to end up

killing

> > all the males of Shechem while taking possession of their women > > (Genesis 34:25-29, cf. Deuteronomy 21:10-13). This inference is > > even more explicit in the J-writer's obtrusive story of Yehwdah
only

> > having sons by two Kna'aniy women (Genesis 38:2-6, 38:18).

> >

> > The Shechem centered hapiru to have eventually called > > themselves "YisraEl" (i.e. El-Contends) had probably come into being

> > in the rural highlands between Shechem and Megidow (during the reign

> > of Amonhotep III cf. "Egypt, Canaan, And Israel In Ancient Times"

> > p. 269, 274) and had probably become "YisraEl" during the great > > rebellion in the fifth year of Ramesses II following the Battle
of

> > Qadesh. Like the people of Yerushalayim, the people of YisraEl
had > > probably been of predominate Hurri descent. This identification

is > > supported by the fact that the Hurri had composed roughly 40%

of

> > the Kna'an population during the New Kingdom making it the single > > largest ethnicity of the land. During the 18th Dynasty the entire > > region had been named after them in becoming known as the land

of > > the Hurri (Hurri) while at the beginning of the 22nd Dynasty, a > > people living in an area conforming to the biblical borders of > > Yosef had been specifically referred to as "Asiatics of the army of > > Mitanni".

> >

> > Djehuti Sundaka

> >

> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, cristofori whitakara

> > wrote:

> > >

> > > could the denial be from the fact that is the ancient
egyptians

> > were black and the jews lived in that country for over 400 years

> > thus their being black which would cause settlement problems in > > israel by white europeans jews with no connection to jacob

(israel)

> > or joseph a governor of egypt?
> > >
> > > Manu Ampim wrote: Greetings Fatima,
> > >
> > > I fully agree with your comments. The denial of ancient Egypt > > as a black African civilization is pathological. I too agree
with
> > the four demands of the coalition. I advised that the coalition's > > demand #1 should include that the fake 2005 image of "King Tut"
be > > removed from the exhibit altogether. I was informed that this > > suggestion will be added.
> > >
> > > Advancing the work,
> > >
> > > Manu Ampim
> > >
> > > "Primary research is the greatest weapon against the
distortion
> > of African culture & history." - MA
> > >
> > > -----
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > > I agree with their demands, I am not black but I think its
time
> > to reveal the truth and use the common sense.
> > > I think some people, specially the ones that have been making > > movies about ancient Egypt in Hollywood scoffs at ancient Egyptians
> > because they created this image of ancient Egyptians being > > blonde/brunette and blue eyed and it caused ignorance in people
so > > they take it as a real fact instead of fiction because in the end
> > that's what they want us to believe because in the end they are > > racist because their stereotype of being beautiful is someone
white
> > not black.
> > >
> > > And now Arabs who occupied Egypt try to make us believe that > > ancient Egyptians were arabs and not blacks because they want to > > have all the credits about the building of the pyramids,

monuments,

>> etc. I am not against arabs I have some arab friends but I have to >> admit that they can have a big ego.

>>>

>>> But that's other story what I try to say is that we need to >> study by ourselves the history and geography and if we use the >> common sense we could know that Egypt is in the African continent

>> and in the pharaonic times the world was not globalized as today,

>> now we can find a Japanese in Argentina, a Moroccan in United

>> Stated, etc. because now we can travel easily but in the past it was >> not easy so if Egypt is in Africa obviously the people in Egypt was

>> black!

>>>

>>> I don't see something wrong with ancient Egyptians being black

>> in the end they are more intelligent, clever, creatives than anyone

>> of other race.

>>>

>>> Sorry for my english, but it is not my primary language.

>>>

>>> Fatima

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>> -----

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>> The coalition has presented officials of the museum with a list >> of demands: 1) A public apology for not properly representing King

>> Tut as an African and falsely representing Kemet (ancient Egypt) as

>> non-African; 2) Develop and display a historically, factual and

>> scientific exhibit of the African foundation and identity of >> dynastic Kemet; 3) Display the pioneering accomplishments of African >> Nile Valley Civilization; and 4) Document and display the research > > and accomplishments of the renowned African scholar Cheikh Anta

Diop
> > in scientifically proving that Kemet was an African civilization.
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > > -----
> > > Park yourself in front of a world of choices in alternative
> > vehicles.
> > > Visit the Yahoo! Auto Green Center.
> > >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
>
>

---

Need a vacation? Get great deals to amazing places on Yahoo! Travel.

| 23115|2007-09-19 02:17:47|Djehuti Sundaka|Re: King Tut Not Black Enough, Protesters Say|

The first person to call the character Abraham by the term was the person who wrote the words of Genesis 14:13 dating to c. 770 BCE, not the indigenous people of Kna'an who never knew of any such person. An ethnic name was simply invented by this person just as "tribal" names such as 'Lewiy' and 'Yehwdah' had been invented/derived from the words 'join' and 'praise'.

Djehuti Sundaka

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, cristofori whitakara wrote:

>

> i think that is very interesting that you say that the word is fictitious. The first people to call abram/abraham that term was the Canaanites. The word was used for him because of what he was doing. When he crossed the Jordan river from Iraq into the land where the Canaanites lived they said he was Ibriy or crossing over the river. I find it interesting also that in Spain there is a river called Ebro(Ibriy?) and it is written that the Phoenicians (canaanites) were present there also. Are we saying that a verb became an ethnic group then?

>

> Djehuti Sundaka wrote: "Hebrew" or

actually "Ibriy" is a designation not found to predate

> the J-source i.e. c. 770 BCE. It may have been derived from the > word 'hapiru' which was a socioeconomic term, not an ethnic one.

> Nevertheless, as a socioeconomic entity, such people in Kna'an

were

> composed of the predominate ethnicity of the land, that ethnicity

> being the Khurri (Hurrians) during the New Kingdom period. Such > people were rebellious individuals living on the fringes of urban

> society and often employed as mercenaries. YisraEl had probably

> formed from a group centered around Shechem and originating from > rural hill country inhabitants between Shechem and Megidow. In > short, "Hebrew" is a fictitious ethnic designation.

>

> Djehuti Sundaka

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:

>>

>> SO, this would imply the Jews are recent relative to Egypt.

>> What about the origins of the Hebrews?

>> Is this, in your opinion, an Egyptian group that separated from

> Egypt,

>> perhaps via Tell el Amarna?

>>

>> Meninarmer

>>

>> On Sat, 2007-09-08 at 17:35 +0000, Djehuti Sundaka wrote:

>>> Indications imply that the original 'Jews' (i.e. the specific > ethnic >>> element to have designated themselves as 'Yehwdah') had been

non-

>>> Semitic, Aryan influenced, anti-Semites. Confirmation of the

non-

>>> Semitic element is provided by genetic studies showing

> the "Cohen

>>> modal haplotype" of Jewish priests to be of Northeast

Caucasian

>>> extraction dating back to c. 1000 BCE (around the time of > Zadowq).

>>> In contrast with the overall Arab (i.e. Semitic) population,

the

>>> genes of both Palestinians and the global Jewish population in >>> general also reveal that their greatest ethnic affiliation is

> with >>> the non-Semitic people known as the Kurds. However, though a > strong

>>> patrilineal affiliation with the Kurds is genetically

> established, a >>> strong maternal affiliation found in the mtDNA of

Palestinians,

>>> Shomeriym (Samaritans), and Iraqi Jews, indicates an ancient

> female

>>> Jewish origin from the indigenous women of Kna'an (cf. Human >>> Mutation 24:248-260, 2004). The people of YisraEl and Yehwdah

> had

>>> therefore been a people descended from northern non-Semitic

men

> and >>> indigenous Semitic women. The `original Jews' had been the > southern

>>> Kna'an highlanders of patrilineal Khurri descent. Such an

> ancestry

>>> had perhaps been implied by the J-writer's story of the sons

of

>>> YisraEl leaving Kharran to dwell at Shechem only to end up

> killing

>>> all the males of Shechem while taking possession of their

women

>>> (Genesis 34:25-29, cf. Deuteronomy 21:10-13). This inference

is >>> even more explicit in the J-writer's obtrusive story of

Yehwdah

> only

>>> having sons by two Kna'aniy women (Genesis 38:2-6, 38:18).

>>>

>>> The Shechem centered hapiru to have eventually called >>> themselves "YisraEl" (i.e. El-Contends) had probably come into > being >>> in the rural highlands between Shechem and Megidow (during the > reign

>>> of Amonhotep III cf. "Egypt, Canaan, And Israel In Ancient > Times"
>>> p. 269, 274) and had probably become "YisraEl" during the great

>>> rebellion in the fifth year of Ramesses II following the Battle

> of

>>> Qadesh. Like the people of Yerushalayim, the people of YisraEl

> had >>> probably been of predominate Khurri descent. This identification

> is >>> supported by the fact that the Khurri had composed roughly 40%

> of

>>> the Kna'an population during the New Kingdom making it the

> single >>> largest ethnicity of the land. During the 18th Dynasty the > entire >>> region had been named after them in becoming known as the land

> of >>> the Kharw (Khurri) while at the beginning of the 22nd Dynasty,

a

>>> people living in an area conforming to the biblical borders of >>> Yowsef had been specifically referred to as "Asiatics of the > army of >>> Mitanni".

>>>

>>> Djehuti Sundaka

>>>

>>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, cristofori whitakara

>>> wrote:

>>>>

>>>> could the denial be from the fact that is the ancient

> egyptians

>>> were black and the jews lived in that country for over 400

years

>>> thus their being black which would cause settlement problems

in

>>> israel by white europeans jews with no connection to jacob

> (israel)

>>> or joseph a governor of egypt?

>>>>

>>>> Manu Ampim wrote: Greetings Fatima,

>>>>

>>>> I fully agree with your comments. The denial of ancient

Egypt

>>> as a black African civilization is pathological. I too agree

> with

>>> the four demands of the coalition. I advised that the

> coalition's

>>> demand #1 should include that the fake 2005 image of "King

Tut"

> be >>> removed from the exhibit altogether. I was informed that this >>> suggestion will be added.

>>>>

>>>> Advancing the work,

>>>>

>>>> Manu Ampim

>>>>

>>>> "Primary research is the greatest weapon against the

> distortion

>>> of African culture & history." - MA

>>>>

>>>> -----

>>>>

>>>>

>>>>

>>>>

>>>> I agree with their demands, I am not black but I think its

> time

>>> to reveal the truth and use the common sense.

>>>> I think some people, specially the ones that have been making

>>> movies about ancient Egypt in Hollywood scoffs at ancient

> Egyptians

>>> because they created this image of ancient Egyptians being > > > blonde/brunette and blue eyed and it caused ignorance in

people

> so > > > they take it as a real fact instead of fiction because in the

> end

> > > that's what they want us to believe because in the end they

are > > > racist because their stereotype of being beautiful is someone

> white

> > > not black.

> > > >

> > > > And now Arabs who occupied Egypt try to make us believe that > > > ancient Egyptians were arabs and not blacks because they want

to

> > > have all the credits about the building of the pyramids,

> monuments,

> > > etc. I am not against arabs I have some arab friends but I have

> to > > > admit that they can have a big ego.

> > > >

> > > > But that's other story what I try to say is that we need to > > > study by ourselves the history and geography and if we use the > > > common sense we could know that Egypt is in the African

> continent

> > > and in the pharaonic times the world was not globalized as

> today,

> > > now we can find a Japanese in Argentina, a Moroccan in United > > > Stated, etc. because now we can travel easily but in the past

it

> was > > > not easy so if Egypt is in Africa obviously the people in

Egypt

> was

> > > black!

> > > >

> > > > I don't see something wrong with ancient Egyptians being

black

>>> in the end they are more intelligent, clever, creatives than > anyone
>>> of other race.

>>>>

>>>> Sorry for my english, but it is not my primary language.

>>>>

>>>> Fatima

>>>>

>>>>

>>>>

>>>>

>>>> -----

>>>>

>>>>

>>>>

>>>> The coalition has presented officials of the museum with a
> list

>>> of demands: 1) A public apology for not properly representing > King

>>> Tut as an African and falsely representing Kemet (ancient

Egypt)

> as

>>> non-African; 2) Develop and display a historically, factual

and

>>> scientific exhibit of the African foundation and identity of >>> dynastic Kemet; 3) Display the pioneering accomplishments of

> African

>>> Nile Valley Civilization; and 4) Document and display the
> research

>>> and accomplishments of the renowned African scholar Cheikh

Anta

> Diop

>>> in scientifically proving that Kemet was an African civilization.

>>>>

>>>>

>>>>

>>>>

>>>>

>>>>

>>>>

>>>> -----

>>>> Park yourself in front of a world of choices in alternative
>>> vehicles.

>>>> Visit the Yahoo! Auto Green Center.

>>>>

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>

>

>

>

>

>

>

> -----

> Need a vacation? Get great deals to amazing places on Yahoo!

Travel.

>

| 23116|2007-09-19 08:28:55|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: King Tut Not Black Enough, Protesters Say|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Djehuti Sundaka"

wrote:

>

> The first person to call the character Abraham by the term was the > person who wrote the words of Genesis 14:13 dating to c. 770 BCE, > not the indigenous people of Kna'an who never knew of any such > person.

How do you know the indigneous people of Canaan did not know of Abraham? Based on the epigraphic evidence?

It's possible to preserve the memory and history of people by oral tradition also. Not to mention that we have only fragments of the written history from this region as recovered in archaeological finds.

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23117|2007-09-19 19:10:20|Djehuti Sundaka|Re: King Tut Not Black Enough, Protesters Say|

People can't know of a character before the character is written into existence. There is nothing about the character Abraham that reflects an oral history. Such history is preserved in song and poems and no such oral expressions exist for Abraham prior to his literary existence. Abraham and Sarah are totally literary characters showing derivation from El-Elyown and Asherah.

Djehuti Sundaka

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala" wrote:

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Djehuti Sundaka"

> wrote:

> >

> > The first person to call the character Abraham by the term was

the > > person who wrote the words of Genesis 14:13 dating to c. 770

BCE,

> > not the indigenous people of Kna'an who never knew of any such > > person.

>

> How do you know the indigneous people of Canaan did not know of > Abraham? Based on the epigraphic evidence?

>

> It's possible to preserve the memory and history of people by oral > tradition also. Not to mention that we have only fragments of the > written history from this region as recovered in archaeological finds.

>

> Regards,

> Paul Kekai Manansala

>

| 23118|2007-09-19 20:35:29|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: King Tut Not Black Enough, Protesters Say|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Djehuti Sundaka"

wrote:

>

> People can't know of a character before the character is written > into existence. There is nothing about the character Abraham that > reflects an oral history. Such history is preserved in song and > poems and no such oral expressions exist for Abraham prior to his > literary existence. Abraham and Sarah are totally literary > characters showing derivation from El-Elyown and Asherah.

>

Oral tradition can be preserved in a variety of ways, genealogies, folktales, etc.

Genesis contains genealogy and cosmology that are often transmitted orally. Quite a lot has been written about poetic structure in Genesis, for example, Melchizedek's blessing of Abraham. Also, Genesis 49 -- in which Abraham blesses his sons is clearly written in poetic verse.

However, even if the Bible did not record the oral traditions, that does not mean that such traditions never existed.

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23119|2007-09-19 21:05:02|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: King Tut Not Black Enough, Protesters Say|

I should also add that I don't consider Abraham an historical personage either. There really is not enough evidence one way or another.

If some mythical elements exist with reference to Abraham that would not mean that he was not a historical person. The process of mythologizing real-life heroes, ancestors, etc. by adding older motifs to their legends has been studied extensively and there are even some documented examples, for example, from New Guinea.

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23120|2007-09-20 06:05:53|Ferg|Microsoft Word - Embedded Meroitic and Bantu Cognates part one.pdf|

Attachments :

Greetings All.

I hope this investigation will provoke some thought.

Part one consists of Claude Rilly's work on the Meroitic language.

Part two will consist of Dr C Winter's work on the Meroitic language

Somo

| 23121|2007-09-20 11:43:51|asar_imhotep|Ntr means "ancestors"?|

I am inquiring about a possible interpretation of the word /Ntr/ in ancient Ta_Merrian ontology. For the most part Egyptologists define the word as "gods" and the more enlightened define ntr as "the vital force behind animate and inanimate objects." I am posing here today another definition of the word Ntr.

In keeping consistent with traditional African thought, people who lived beyond the call of duty and was medicine for the community, when they die, they become part of the vital force that animates objects in the universe. This is true with Ntrw, Abosom and even

Orisas.

The late Dr. Afolabi A. Epega in his work Ifa: The Ancient Wisdom pg. 50 states:

"Yoruba deities are called either "Imales" or "Orisas." The term Imale means the knowledge of the secrets of this world or of heaven: knowledge of what the Creator has kept in store for the common good of mankind, or one who has done some good or mighty things with his knowledge or power is called Imale. Men of miraculous birth or who become deified after death are called Imale, e.g., Dada, Oke, Oke Talabi, Aina, Lisabi, Egbeji, etc. They are also called "Orisas."

This is quit common all throughout Africa and this leads me to believe that another definition of Ntr is "ancestor" or "deified ancestor." With this in mind, when we read the term "Ta Ntr" believed to be Pwanet (Punt), to me, it should be read as "land of the ancestors" instead of "land of the gods" as most Egyptologists posit. To me land of the "gods" doesn't makes sense since all of the earth is powered by "ntrw" (the vital force behind animate and inanimate objects). The land of our ancestors would point to a genetic and cultural origin. It is no different than African-Americans referring to Africa proper as the "mother land" (the land of our historical birth).

We know that persons of great stature in Ta-Merri were elevated to the status of deity: Imhotep and Amenhotep III. In other words, they became Ntrw after death and this is done all over Africa. What is your opinion?

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

| 23122|2007-09-20 13:23:05|cristofori whitakara|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|

this makes sense because the word ancestor's root is in the word ante-cessor. those who came before and this is far fetched for an anagram , however in the word ante one can see NT within its spelling, and being conscious of a spiritual side our physical existence the family deifies/spiritualizes the person who has gone on to another existence because of the deeds done on this plane.

asar_imhotep wrote:

I am inquiring about a possible interpretation of the word /Ntr/ in ancient Ta_Merrian ontology. For the most part Egyptologists define the word as "gods" and the more enlightened define ntr as "the vital force behind animate and inanimate objects." I am posing here today another definition of the word Ntr.

In keeping consistent with traditional African thought, people who lived beyond the call of duty and was medicine for the community, when they die, they become part of the vital force that animates objects in the universe. This is true with Ntrw, Abosom and even Orisas.

The late Dr. Afolabi A. Epega in his work Ifa: The Ancient Wisdom pg. 50 states:

"Yoruba deities are called either "Imales" or "Orisas." The term Imale means the knowledge of the secrets of this world or of heaven: knowledge of what the Creator has kept in store for the common good of mankind, or one who has done some good or mighty things with his knowledge or power is called Imale. Men of miraculous birth or who become deified after death are called Imale, e.g., Dada, Oke, Oke Talabi, Aina, Lisabi, Egbeji, etc. They are also called "Orisas."

This is quit common all throughout Africa and this leads me to believe that another definition of Ntr is "ancestor" or "deified ancestor." With this in mind, when we read the term "Ta Ntr" believed to be Pwanet (Punt), to me, it should be read as "land of the ancestors" instead of "land of the gods" as most Egyptologists posit. To me land of the "gods" doesn't makes sense since all of the earth is powered by "ntrw" (the vital force behind animate and inanimate objects). The land of our ancestors would point to a genetic and cultural origin. It is no different than African-Americans referring to Africa proper as the "mother land" (the land of our historical birth).

We know that persons of great stature in Ta-Merri were elevated to the status of deity: Imhotep and Amenhotep III. In other words, they became Ntrw after death and this is done all over Africa. What is your opinion?

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasui te.com>

---

Catch up on fall's hot new shows on Yahoo! TV. Watch previews, get listings, and more!

| 23123|2007-09-20 13:29:13|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|

I agree. This Punt was also probably the same or overlapping with Ta-aakhu, Land of the Ancestral Spirits to the south of Egypt, and to the Land of Yam about seven or eight months round-trip journey south of Egypt.

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:

>

> I am inquiring about a possible interpretation of the word /Ntr/ in > ancient Ta_Merrian ontology. For the most part Egyptologists define > the word as "gods" and the more enlightened define ntr as "the vital > force behind animate and inanimate objects." I am posing here today > another definition of the word Ntr.

>

> In keeping consistent with traditional African thought, people who > lived beyond the call of duty and was medicine for the community,
> when they die, they become part of the vital force that animates > objects in the universe. This is true with Ntrw, Abosom and even > Orisas.

>

> The late Dr. Afolabi A. Epega in his work Ifa: The Ancient Wisdom
> pg. 50 states:

>

> "Yoruba deities are called either "Imales" or "Orisas." The term
> Imale means the knowledge of the secrets of this world or of heaven:
> knowledge of what the Creator has kept in store for the common good
> of mankind, or one who has done some good or mighty things with his > knowledge or power is called Imale. Men of miraculous birth or who > become deified after death are called Imale, e.g., Dada, Oke, Oke > Talabi, Aina, Lisabi, Egbeji, etc. They are also called "Orisas."

>

>

> This is quit common all throughout Africa and this leads me to > believe that another definition of Ntr is "ancestor" or "deified
> ancestor." With this in mind, when we read the term "Ta Ntr" > believed to be Pwanet (Punt), to me, it should be read as "land of > the ancestors" instead of "land of the gods" as most Egyptologists > posit. To me land of the "gods" doesn't makes sense since all of the > earth is powered by "ntrw" (the vital force behind animate and > inanimate objects). The land of our ancestors would point to a > genetic and cultural origin. It is no different than African-> Americans referring to Africa proper as the "mother land" (the land > of our historical birth).

>

> We know that persons of great stature in Ta-Merri were elevated to > the status of deity: Imhotep and Amenhotep III. In other words, they > became Ntrw after death and this is done all over Africa. What is > your opinion?

>
> Asar Imhotep
> <http://www.mochasuite.com>
>
| 23124|2007-09-20 13:33:30|cristofori whitakara|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|
canTa-aakhu also mean Land of the enlightened souls?

Paul Kekai Manansala wrote:

I agree. This Punt was also probably the same or overlapping with Ta-aakhu, Land of the Ancestral Spirits to the south of Egypt, and to the Land of Yam about seven or eight months round-trip journey south of Egypt.

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:

>
> I am inquiring about a possible interpretation of the word /Ntr/ in > ancient Ta_Merrian ontology. For the most part Egyptologists define
> the word as "gods" and the more enlightened define ntr as "the vital > force behind animate and inanimate objects." I am posing here today
> another definition of the word Ntr.
>
> In keeping consistent with traditional African thought, people who > lived beyond the call of duty and was medicine for the community,
> when they die, they become part of the vital force that animates > objects in the universe. This is true with Ntrw, Abosom and even > Orisas.
>
> The late Dr. Afolabi A. Epega in his work Ifa: The Ancient Wisdom
> pg. 50 states:
>
> "Yoruba deities are called either "Imales" or "Orisas." The term
> Imale means the knowledge of the secrets of this world or of heaven:
> knowledge of what the Creator has kept in store for the common good
> of mankind, or one who has done some good or mighty things with his > knowledge or power is called Imale. Men of miraculous birth or who > become deified after death are called Imale, e.g., Dada, Oke, Oke > Talabi, Aina, Lisabi, Egbeji, etc. They are also called "Orisas."
>
>
> This is quit common all throughout Africa and this leads me to > believe that another definition of Ntr is "ancestor" or "deified
> ancestor." With this in mind, when we read the term "Ta Ntr"
> believed to be Pwanet (Punt), to me, it should be read as "land of

> the ancestors" instead of "land of the gods" as most Egyptologists > posit. To me land of the "gods" doesn't make sense since all of the > earth is powered by "ntrw" (the vital force behind animate and > inanimate objects). The land of our ancestors would point to a > genetic and cultural origin. It is no different than African-> Americans referring to Africa proper as the "mother land" (the land
> of our historical birth).
>
> We know that persons of great stature in Ta-Merri were elevated to > the status of deity: Imhotep and Amenhotep III. In other words, they > became Ntrw after death and this is done all over Africa. What is > your opinion?
>
> Asar Imhotep
> <http://www.mochasuite.com>
>

---

Luggage? GPS? Comic books?

Check out fitting gifts for grads at Yahoo! Search.

| 23125|2007-09-20 14:17:29|Kwesi Ra Nehem Akhan|AFURAKA/AFURAITKAIT Nanasom
Nhoma.:2nd Issue Now Available|

A 1-year ($27) eSubscription to AFURAKA/AFURAITKAIT Nanasom Nhoma is an awoda akyede (birthday gift) of substance which will benefit the recipient throughout the year. A single issue of the nhoma (journal) is an inexpensive ($3.00) akyede which will be of great benefit as well. The electronic version of the nhoma is e-mailed immediately upon receipt of payment --- usually on the same day. See details below. . .

AFURAKA AFURAITKAIT

NANASOM NHOMA

AFURAKANI/AFURAITKAITNIT ANCESTRAL RELIGION JOURNAL

$3.00

NHOMA BAAKO, AKWASIDAE NSCN

NHOMA 1, AKWASIDAE 7, 13007 (2007)

AFURAKA AFURAITKAIT

NANASOM NHOMA

AFURAKANI/AFURAITKAITNIT ANCESTRAL RELIGION JOURNAL

$5.00

NHOMA MANU, AKWASIDAE AWOTWE

NHOMA 2, AKWASIDAE 8, 13007 (2007)

Afurakani/Afuraitkaitnit Ancestral Religion Journal

AFURAKA/AFURAITKAIT Nanasom Nhoma is an nhoma (n'-hoh-mah), a journal, focused on Afurakani/Afuraitkaitnit (African) Ancestral Religion.

Our nhoma is divided into seven sections based on the Abosom (ah'-boh-sohm), the Deities, of the solar, lunar and planetary bodies which govern the Akan 7-day week. The themes governing each section are:

KRADIN

(Soul-Name; Spiritual Identity)

ABUSUAKUW and ABATUMM

(Ethnic group; Cultural identity; Trustory) and (Melanin; Physiological Identity)

MMARA NE KYI

(Law and Hate)

NHWEHWEMU

(Critical Examination)

NKRABEA

(Function)

AHOODEN and AHOOFE

(Health, Strength) and (Beauty)

AHODWIRA

(Ritual; Self-Purification)

AFURAKA/AFURAITKAIT Nanasom Nhoma is ultimately about Nyansa (Intelligence) as it relates to Amansesew (Nationbuilding/restoration). Nyansa is comprised of two complementary poles: Revolution and Resolution. As we have stated in the PTAH Sasetem:

"...When Earth moves around Sun and returns to its place of origin, It has made a complete revolution. Return to your Ancestral origin is complete revolution. When Earth, through revolution, transmits Its power through the seasons, It has brought about a complete resolution. Transmit power through the cycles of revolution brings about our complete resolution. Revolution and Resolution are two halves of one whole-Intelligence.

Revolution-Resolution as a tool of cultural reorientation is defined as the right of return and the right of reconstitution. In practice it is also the rite of return and the rite of reconstitution. The return is to our

Ancestral culture, our way of living, our normalcy. It is a return to the pact we made with Nyamewaa-Nyame before we came into the world, and a reconstitution of the cultural values and institutions rooted in those values which make our adhering to that Divine pact possible. We have a right to return to ourselves and to reconstitute ourselves. We must engage in the rites/ rituals in order to return to ourselves and to reconstitute ourselves in harmony with Divine Order. We have thus recognized disorder and moved to reject it, thus manifesting intelligence in the true sense..."

While our orientation is Akan, our nhoma includes other Afurakani/Afuraitkaitnit cultures as well. This information is relevant to all Afurakanu/Afuraitkaitnut wherever we are found in the world, for we are all connected.

AFURAKA/AFURAITKAIT Nanasom Nhoma is published nine times per year, in accordance with the traditional Akan calendar. An issue will be published for each Akwasidae cycle (every 42-days/six weeks).

Subscriptions:

$27 per year (9 issues) for the electronic journal
The electronic version of the journal will be e-mailed to subscribers immediately upon confirmation of payment.

$45 per year (9 issues) plus $27 shipping (Total of $72) for the hard copy (Installment-payment option available: 3 payments of $24.00--covers 3 issues). The hard copy will be mailed to subscribers immediately upon confirmation of payment.

Single Issues:

$5.00 per issue

For mail-orders: Include $3.00 shipping for first volume; $.50 for each additional volume

To order your subscription, please visit our webpage at:

www.odwirafo.com/nanasom.html

For additional information and income opportunities as a distributor, please contact us at:

nanasom@odwirafo.com or 312.371.0428.

Ma asomdwoee-Hetep,
Ra Nehem

AFURAKA/AFURAITKAIT Nanasom Nhoma is published by Kwesi Ra Nehem Ptah Akhan, Odwirafo, Aakhuamuman Amaruka Atifi mu(Odwirafo of the Akwamu Nation in North America).

Trustory [troo'-stoh-ree (true-story, trust(worthy)-ory)] trustoric; trustorically:

A true and accurate account of previous events.

Afurakanu/ Afuraitkaitnut:

Trustory is spiritual. Embrace your trustory. Restore your consciousness. Build your nation. Destroy your enemy.

.Bra nkwa mu.

Reader's feedback on first issue of Afuraka/Afuraitkait Nanasom Nhoma:

Kwesi Ra Nehem Ptah Akhan and Family have written a powerful journal focusing on the roots of Afrikan spirituality placing us Afrikans at the beginning of creation in ancient Kamit where we rightfully belong.

The Nanasom Nhoma is truly the missing link the separates truth from fallacy in regards to the trustory of the Afrikan.

I am very impressed with the first installment of the Nanasom Nhoma being that it was eloquently presented with a refreshing clarity stemming from the support of word pronunciations, definitions, illustrations, and explanations rendering it very easy to read and understand.

I was particularly very curious about the explanation of our creation as many questions were answered as I am sure many others will be with the continuing installments of the journal.

I found interesting the explanations of our original spiritual systems and how they came to be duplicated into pseudo religions through perverse alterations proving that Afrikan spirituality is the only true system that should be practice by Afrikan people around the world. I also learned how fundamentally Afrikan spiritual systems are the same around the world being that they stem from the same origin and it is only sometimes the renaming of the deities that differ.

KRADIN

(Soul-Name; Spiritual Identity)

The explanation of the origin of the term Africa was also eye opening being that I had taken in so much false information about it's original origin. The breakdown of the terms that makes up the original name Afuraka/ Afuraitkait was more than convincing to change my mind.

Learning how Kamit (the first land mass) was formed was en-lighting and assuring that everything came from it's origin. The story of how it came to life via the life energy of Ra and Rait was beautifully written. I enjoyed reading about all the different definitions for the term high land that has crossed ethnicities while still holding it's original meaning. The illustrations were great too.

ABUSUAKUW and ABATUMM

(Ethnic group; Cultural identity) and (Melanin; Physiological Identity)

The Abusuakuw prompted me to want to learn more about the origins of my own Ancestral clan. I think when I have found my rightful place communicating with my ancestors, and deities will be more spiritually fruitful.

The Abatumm opened my eyes to how powerful my melanin is in relation to nature. It was surprising to find out that this pigment in my skin helps me to fight disease, infections and heal myself. Even more wondrous is it's ability to convert sunlight into food and energy for the cells in my body.

MMARA NE KYI

(Law and Hate)

This particular information just back up everything that I have already felt for a long time. I have always judged people, loved, and hated and this is the very behavior that has allowed me to keep the right people in my life and reject everyone and thing that was detrimental. I enjoyed learning that hate is divine and actually spiritually sound. Hate is balance and without balance will come disorder.

I found many of the other articles in the journal to be very en-lighting and I look forward to the next installment of the Nanasom Nhoma and all those after.

Afua

WWW.ODWIRAFO.COM/NANASOM.HTML

WWW.ODWIRAFO.COM/NANASOM.HTML

WWW.ODWIRAFO.COM/NANASOM.HTML

Forward email

This email was sent to info@nkwainc.com, by ra\_nehem@odwirafo.com
Update Profile/Email Address | Instant removal with SafeUnsubscribe? | Privacy Policy.

--

Trustory [troo'-stoh-ree(true-story); trust(worthy)-ory]:

A true and accurate account of previous events

trustoric; trustorically

www.odwirafo.com

| 23126|2007-09-20 14:47:12|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|
Budge translated _aakhu_ as "soul-spirits." The aakhu were revered and I guess could be considered enlightened.

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

crisfori whitakara wrote:

canTa-aakhu also mean Land of the enlightened souls?

Paul Kekai Manansala wrote:

I agree. This Punt was also probably the same or overlapping with Ta-aakhu, Land of the Ancestral Spirits to the south of Egypt, and to the Land of Yam about seven or eight months round-trip journey south of Egypt.

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:

>

> I am inquiring about a possible interpretation of the word /Ntr/ in > ancient Ta_Merrian ontology. For the most part Egyptologists define
> the word as "gods" and the more enlightened define ntr as "the vital > force behind animate and inanimate objects." I am posing here today
> another definition of the word Ntr.
>
> In keeping consistent with traditional African thought, people who > lived beyond the call of duty and was medicine for the community,
> when they die, they become part of the vital force that animates > objects in the universe. This is true with Ntrw, Abosom and even > Orisas.
>
> The late Dr. Afolabi A. Epega in his work Ifa: The Ancient Wisdom
> pg. 50 states:
>
> "Yoruba deities are called either "Imales" or "Orisas." The term
> Imale means the knowledge of the secrets of this world or of heaven:
> knowledge of what the Creator has kept in store for the common good
> of mankind, or one who has done some good or mighty things with his > knowledge or power is called Imale. Men of miraculous birth or who > become deified after death are called Imale, e.g., Dada, Oke, Oke > Talabi, Aina, Lisabi, Egbeji, etc. They are also called "Orisas."
>
>
> This is quit common all throughout Africa and this leads me to > believe that another definition of Ntr is "ancestor" or "deified
> ancestor." With this in mind, when we read the term "Ta Ntr"
> believed to be Pwanet (Punt), to me, it should be read as "land of > the ancestors" instead of "land of the gods" as most Egyptologists > posit. To me land of the "gods" doesn't makes sense since all of the > earth is powered by "ntrw" (the vital force behind animate and > inanimate objects). The land of our ancestors would point to a > genetic and cultural origin. It is no different than African-> Americans referring to Africa proper as the "mother land" (the land
> of our historical birth).
>
> We know that persons of great stature in Ta-Merri were elevated to > the status of deity: Imhotep and Amenhotep III. In other words, they > became Ntrw after death and this is done all over Africa. What is > your opinion?
>
> Asar Imhotep
> <http://www.mochasuite.com>
>

---

Luggage? GPS? Comic books?
Check out fitting gifts for grads at Yahoo! Search.

| 23127|2007-09-20 18:46:29|RasKhalif@comcast.net|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|

Attachments :

Udjahee Asar Imhotep & Cristofori Whitakari,

i would like to add some thing else to this discussion I agree with your statement because of the fact that though the stories of the Neteru are considered allegories they also have historical significance. You are not the first person to assert this at another Website it was asserted as well as when I went through initiation this was stated emphatically that the Neteru were human personages given God status and deified upon their death. Even in the Orisha tradition one example of this is Shango who was a real king who deified after he died. I just wanted to add some more examples of where Egyptians practiced elevating human beings to the status of Neteru. To further explain my overstanding of the message you are conveying and why I agree with your thoughts.

Matter of fact when I went to Egypt in July this year I saw the Edfu text at the Temple of Edfu. The Egyptians state that their country was founded by a King called Heru (Horus) It also speaks of the battle of King Heru and the fact that Heru came from the south conquering all who stood in his way until he made his way to the Delta this is considered predynastic in times in terms of the time frame it speaks of. Their is a Great Article on this I will post below with a link to the Edfu Text.. We also know that the Pharoahs of Egypt were all equated with Heru while living and Ausar when deceased. All of these cultural habits further validate you idea.

Also Ausar is considered in some circles to be Peraa(Pharoah) Mena which I agree with since he was the founder of Egypt proper in terms of his ushering in the Pharoanic period. An excerpt from this website that deals with ATR states:

" Was Ausar a real living being?

To my knowledge the king that was most analogous to Ausar was named Menes. He was the king that united Upper and Lower ancient Egypt. We say it was Ausar because Ausar represents the power of God to bring unity, peace and prosperity to the earth."

Source(<http://members.tripod.com/sunbull/id18.htm>)

Ethiopians said by way of Herodotus that Ausar was an Ethiopian in his origins that founded Egypt by setting up a colony made up of Ethiopians that in time eventually distiguated themselves from their southern founding fathers.... though we know through finding of the Qustul incense burner there were predynastic Kings and they were all Nubian.

I consider the Edfu text a historical treatise on the ancestry of the Egyptians and the founder of their country in addition to it's allegorical elements.. So is the Battle between Mena and King Scorpion. Mena the Nubian from the south battled and killed King Scorpion for the throne seat of Tamerri. That is historically proven to be true. The Neteru themselves were ancestors, human beings who were deified because of their illustrious accomplishments or their contribution to the advancement of the society as Imhotep is a GREAT example. In the book The Destruction of Black Civilization by Dr Chancellor Williams he pointed out that by the time Mena took the throne he fought Scorpion who fought for the throne because Egypt by the time Mena came into the picture was already invaded by Asians. So with Mena it was a full blooded Nubian fighting for the throne of his ancestors usurped by an African-Asian Pharaoh that being Pharaoh Scorpion. So Heru (Peraa Mena) was fighting for the throne to regain it from Set (Ie: The African-Asiatic Peraa Scorpion). Just like the Story of Ausar, Aset and Heru.

Dr Ben also speaks in an article he wrote entitled Nile Valley Civilization and the Spread of African Culture referenced below. In the Papyrus of Hunefer it states and I quote" We(Meaning Egyptians) Came from the beginning of the Nile. At the foothills of the Mountain of the Moon were Neter(God) Hapi Dwells. The fact that Hapi is a hermaphrodite speaks volumes because it can be looked at as a combination of the male and female principle or a combination of the two sexes male and females indicating that the Source of the Hapi River was where the mothers and fathers of their Nation(IE: Ancestors came from) The God Hapi is seen in this case as a combination of the male & female progenitors of Egyptian society. We all know there are 2 Mountains of the Moon Kilimanjaro in Tanzania/ Kenya and Rwenzori in Uganda which is the source of the White Nile. The Source of the Blue Nile is in Ethiopia. Both Places were the oldest remnants of human origins was found. One of Egypt's oldest Neteru is Bes a Twa. From my studies Egypt gives special treatment to the Twa as being extremely powerful and they were the only people known to do the dance of the Neteru. They were treated with special care as the Pwanet expedition by Peraa Hatshepsut records. I believe Bes was a historical personage that was made a Neter after he died as well albeit that this was done from an extremely remote time period.. It doesn't mean that all Neteru were ancestors but it does indicate that some of the Neteru themselves are and can be called ancestors.. I think the above examples of I gave gives credence to your ideas.. Sorry for the long response but both of your posts were really profound and I felt I needed to add this info. What are your thoughts??? The articles I spoke about are below with links.

Eri Heru~
Ras

Here is the of an article speaking about the Egyptians Origins.....

[quote]Ancient Nubia
Now called Sudan

Geographers refer to northern Nubia as "Lower Nubia" and to southern Nubia as "Upper Nubia." The reason for this is because the Nile River in Nubia, unlike other rivers of the world, flows from the south to the north. So up the Nile is actually going south.

The Nubian section of the Nile contains six rock filled rapids called cataracts.

It was from the south that the original ancestors of the Egyptians, following the direction of the Nile River north, settled the land of Egypt. The Egyptians themselves recorded in their writings that their ancestors came from the south. The Edfu text is an inscription still found in the Temple of Horus at Edfu. It tells us that the origin of Egyptian civilization was taken from the south by a band of invaders led by King Horus.

The Nile River flows from Central Africa to the Mediterranean Sea some 4,000 miles."[/quote]

<http://www.homestead.com/wysinger/nubians10.html>

An Excerpt from the Article Dr Ben wrote about the Egyptians Origins as spoken of in the Papyrus of Hunefer.

"When we speak of the Nile Valley, of course we are talking about 4,100 miles of civilization, or the beginning of the birth of what is today called civilization. I can go to one case of literature in particular which will identify the Africans as the beginners of the civilization to which I refer. And since I am not foreign to the works of Africans in Egypt, otherwise called Egyptians, I think that should be satisfactory proof. This proof is housed in the London Museum that is holding artifacts of Egypt. In that museum you will find a document called the Papyrus of Hunifer. At least you should find it there. It was there when Sir E. A. Wallace Budge used it in his translation as part of the Egyptian Book of the Dead and the Papyrus of Hunifer.

It was there at that time, a copy of which is in the library of Syracuse University in New York, and I quote from the hieratic writing, "We came from the beginning of the Nile where God Hapi dwells, at the foothills of The Mountains of the Moon." "We," meaning the Egyptians, as stated, came from the beginning of the Nile. Where is "the beginning of the Nile?" The farthest point of the beginning of the Nile is in Uganda; this is the White Nile. Another point is in Ethiopia. The Blue Nile and White Nile meet in Khartoum; and the other side of Khartoum is the Omdurman Republic of Sudan. From there it flows from the south down north. And there it meets with the Atbara River in Atbara, Sudan. Then it flows completely through Sudan (Ta-Nehisi, Ta-Zeti or Ta-Seti, as it was called), part of that ancient empire which was one time adjacent to the nation called Meroe or Merowe. From that, into the southern part of what the Romans called "Nubia," and parallel on the Nile, part of which the Greeks called "Egypticus"; the English called it "Egypt" and the Jews in their mythology called it "Mizrain" which the current Arabs called Mizr/Mizrair. Thus it ends in the Sea of Sais, also called the Great Sea, today's Mediterranean Sea. When we say thus, we want to make certain that Hapi is still God of the Nile, shown as a hermaphrodite having the breasts of a woman and the penis of a man. God Hapi is always shown tying two symbols of the "Two Lands," Upper Egypt and Lower Egypt, during Dynastic Periods, or from the beginning of the Dynastic Periods. The lotus flower is the symbol of the south, and the papyrus plant, the symbol of the north."

http://www.africawithin.com/jochannan/drben\_nile\_valley\_civilization.htm

----- Original message -----

From: cristofori whitakara <boogie\_down\_black@yahoo.com>

> this makes sense because the word ancestor's root is in the word ante-cessor.

> those who came before and this is far fetched for an anagram , however in the > word ante one can see NT within its spelling, and being conscious of a spiritual > side our physical existence the family deifies/spiritualizes the person who has > gone on to another existence because of the deeds done on this plane.

>

> asar_imhotep <asar\_imhotep@yahoo.com> wrote: I am inquiring about a > possible interpretation of the word /Ntr/ in > ancient Ta_Merrian ontology. For the most part Egyptologists define

> the word as "gods" and the more enlightened define ntr as "the vital

> force behind animate and inanimate objects." I am posing here today

> another definition of the word Ntr.

>

> In keeping consistent with traditional African thought, people who > lived beyond the call of duty and was medicine for the community,

> when they die, they become part of the vital force that animates

> objects in the universe. This is true with Ntrw, Abosom and even > Orisas.

>

> The late Dr. Afolabi A. Epega in his work Ifa: The Ancient Wisdom

> pg. 50 states:

>

> "Yoruba deities are called either "Imales" or "Orisas." The term

> Imale means the knowledge of the secrets of this world or of heaven:

> knowledge of what the Creator has kept in store for the common good

> of mankind, or one who has done some good or mighty things with his > knowledge or power is called Imale. Men of miraculous birth or who > become deified after death are called Imale, e.g., Dada, Oke, Oke

> Talabi, Aina, Lisabi, Egbeji, etc. They are also called "Orisas."

>

> This is quit common all throughout Africa and this leads me to

> believe that another definition of Ntr is "ancestor" or "deified

> ancestor." With this in mind, when we read the term "Ta Ntr"

> believed to be Pwanet (Punt), to me, it should be read as "land of

> the ancestors" instead of "land of the gods" as most Egyptologists

> posit. To me land of the "gods" doesn't makes sense since all of the > earth is powered by "ntrw" (the vital force behind animate and > inanimate objects). The land of our ancestors would point to a > genetic and cultural origin. It is no different than African-

> Americans referring to Africa proper as the "mother land" (the land

> of our historical birth).

>

> We know that persons of great stature in Ta-Merri were elevated to

> the status of deity: Imhotep and Amenhotep III. In other words, they > became Ntrw after death and this is done all over Africa. What is > your opinion?

>
> Asar Imhotep
> <http://www.mochasuite.com>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> -----
> Catch up on fall's hot new shows on Yahoo! TV. Watch previews, get listings, and more!

| 23128|2007-09-20 21:01:51|Djehuti Sundaka|Re: King Tut Not Black Enough, Protesters Say|
--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala"

wrote:

>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Djehuti Sundaka"
> wrote:
>>
>> People can't know of a character before the character is written >> into existence. There is nothing about the character Abraham

that >> reflects an oral history. Such history is preserved in song and >> poems and no such oral expressions exist for Abraham prior to his >> literary existence. Abraham and Sarah are totally literary >> characters showing derivation from El-Elyown and Asherah.

>>
>
> Oral tradition can be preserved in a variety of ways, genealogies, > folktales, etc.
>
> Genesis contains genealogy and cosmology that are often transmitted > orally. Quite a lot has been written about poetic structure in > Genesis, for example, Melchizedek's blessing of Abraham. Also, > Genesis 49 -- in which Abraham blesses his sons is clearly written

in > poetic verse.

>
> However, even if the Bible did not record the oral traditions, that > does not mean that such traditions never existed.
>
> Regards,
> Paul Kekai Manansala

>

As indicated by the parallels with the Io and Danaos accounts, events from the stories of Abraham to the escape through the sea had been apart of a pre-biblical account. Although it is common to assume that separate oral traditions of historical Patriarchs and the Exodus had been remembered in YisraEl before being written down into a single account, nothing from these stories supports such a perspective. No ancient songs dating to the age of those to be found in Exodus 15:21, Numbers 10:35-36, 21:15, 21:18, 21:27-30, and Judges 5, exist for any of the Patriarchs or Mosheh. When the chronological frame that all of these characters have been presented in is removed, we find characters with no stories worth telling. Abraham simply becomes an ex-urban nomad who is not above prostituting his own wife to kings for great profit while the theme of leaving a northern land to dwell in Kna'an as a Hapiru (Hebrew) for the promise of a future kingdom strongly resembles the story of Idri-mi, a 16th century BCE king of Alalakh. Therefore, there's nothing to suggest that the tales of Abraham had ever been based upon a historical individual remembered through oral tradition. Neither the geneologies nor the cosmologies show evidence of an oral transmission. While the geneologies are simply invented, and poorly at that, the cosmology was the simple inheritance of the general region.

Djehuti Sundaka

| 23129|2007-09-21 07:36:04|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: King Tut Not Black Enough, Protesters Say|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Djehuti Sundaka"

wrote:

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala"

> wrote:

> >

> >

>

>

> As indicated by the parallels with the Io and Danaos accounts, events > from the stories of Abraham to the escape through the sea had been > apart of a pre-biblical account.

So, that's not that unusual. As I've noted already it's not uncommon for adstrata to be added to historical characters. We can find the same thing with Alexander the Great or Attila the Hun, for example.

Although it is common to assume

- > that separate oral traditions of historical Patriarchs and the Exodus
- > had been remembered in YisraEl before being written down into a
- > single account, nothing from these stories supports such a
- > perspective.

Actually, it's rather unlikely that an exilic writer could have introduced wholly fictitious stories into the Hebrew canon during the diaspora.

The evidence suggests that there already was a long-standing national identity at the time. It's far more likely that the writer was conveying traditions that the people were already familiar with and could readily accept. Had the people just formed an identity it would have been easier to make up an ancient fictitious ancestor.

As with most people in the region at that time, it's highly likely that the Jews already had traditions of a patriarchal ancestor. It could be that other traditions were pasted on to an existing tradition.

Therefore, there's nothing to suggest that the

- > tales of Abraham had ever been based upon a historical individual
- > remembered through oral tradition.

Well, your basis for saying this before was that there was no poetic/metric structure to the accounts of Abraham, which was wrong.

Even in the Genesis narrative, most bible scholars that I've encountered believe it incorporates facts from earlier traditions.

That's a common explanation for the mixed writing styles in Genesis i.e. -- narrative, dialogue, prose, parallelism, etc in different chapters of the book.

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23130|2007-09-21 07:40:00|zetter_74|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|

Divine kingship reminds me of a very common almost universal african cultural trait, proving that the Egyptian culture is really African.

The custom, in which former kings are deified, is very common in afrika. For example Laculstrine Bantu(e.g Haya,Nyankole)have a deity ,Ruhinda, founder of the Bahinda dynasty, he has a god/man status. One of his a shrines for example, in Nyankole, Uganda is kept alight by fire 24 hours a day, there is keeper of the shrine who makes sure the fire is not extinguished. Similar shrines exist in other east African kingdoms, for instance, Buganda..

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, RasKhalif@... wrote:

>

> Udjahee Asar Imhotep & Cristofori Whitakari,

>

> i would like to add some thing else to this discussion I agree with your statement because of the fact that though the stories of the Neteru are considered allegories they also have historical significance. You are not the first person to assert this at another Website it was asserted as well as when I went through initiation this was stated emphatically that the Neteru were human personages given God status and deified upon their death. Even in the Orisha tradition one example of this is Shango who was a real king who deified after he died. I just wanted to add some more examples of where Egyptians practiced elevating human beings to the status of Neteru. To further explain my overstanding of the message you are conveying and why I agree with your thoughts.

>

>

>

> Matter of fact when I went to Egypt in July this year I saw the Edfu text at the Temple of Edfu. The Egyptians state that their country was founded by a King called Heru (Horus) It also speaks of the battle of King Heru and the fact that Heru came from the south conquering all who stood in his way until he made his way to the Delta this is considered predynastic in times in terms of the time frame it speaks of. Their is a Great Article on this I will post below with a link to the Edfu Text.. We also know that the Pharoahs of Egypt were all equated with Heru while living and Ausar when deceased. All of these cultural habits further validate you idea.

>

> Also Ausar is considered in some circles to be Peraa(Pharoah) Mena which I agree with since he was the founder of Egypt proper in terms of his ushering in the Pharoanic period. An excerpt from this website that deals with ATR states:

>

> " Was Ausar a real living being?

> To my knowledge the king that was most analogous to Ausar was named Menes. He was the king that united Upper and Lower ancient Egypt. We say it was Ausar because Ausar represents the power of God to bring unity, peace and prosperity to the earth." Source

(<http://members.tripod.com/sunbull/id18.htm>)

>

> Ethiopians said by way of Herodotus that Ausar was an Ethiopian in his origins that founded Egypt by setting up a colony made up of Ethiopians that in time eventually distinguished themselves from their southern founding fathers.... though we know through finding of the Qustul incense burner there were predynastic Kings and they were all Nubian.

>

> I consider the Edfu text a historical treatise on the ancestry of the Egyptians and the founder of their country in addition to it's allegorical elements.. So is the Battle between Mena and King Scorpion. Mena the Nubian from the south battled and killed King Scorpion for the throne seat of Tamerri. That is historically proven to be true. The Neteru themselves were ancestors, human beings who were deified because of their illustrious accomplishments or their contribution to the advancement of the society as Imhotep is a GREAT example. In the book The Destruction of Black Civilization by Dr Chancellor Williams he pointed out that by the time Mena took the throne he fought Scorpion who fought for the throne because Egypt by the time Mena came into the picture was already invaded by Asians. So with Mena it was a full blooded Nubian fighting for the throne of his ancestors usurped by an African-Asian Pharoah that being Pharoah Scorpion. So Heru (Peraa Mena) was fighting for the throne to regain it from Set (Ie: The African-Asiatic Peraa Scorpion). Just like the Story of Ausar, Aset and Heru.

>

>

> Dr Ben also speaks in an article he wrote entitled Nile Valley Civilization and the Spread of African Culture referenced below. In the Papyrus of Hunefer it states and I quote" We(Meaning Egyptians) Came from the beginning of the Nile. At the foothills of the Mountain of the Moon were Neter(God) Hapi Dwells. The fact that Hapi is a hermaphrodite speaks volumes because it can be looked at as a combination of the male and female principle or a combination of the two sexes male and females indicating that the Source of the Hapi River was where the mothers and fathers of their Nation(IE: Ancestors came from) The God Hapi is seen in this case as a combination of the male & female progenitors of Egyptian society. We all know there are 2 Mountains of the Moon Kilimanjaro in Tanzania/ Kenya and Rwenzori in Uganda which is the source of the White Nile. The Source of the Blue Nile is in Ethiopia. Both Places were the oldest remnants of human origins was found. One of Egypt's oldest Neteru is

> Bes a Twa. From my studies Egypt gives special treatment to the Twa as being extremely powerful and they were the only people known to do the dance of the Neteru. They were treated with special care as the Pwanet expedition by Peraa Hatshepsut records. I believe Bes was a historical personage that was made a Neter after he died as well albeit that this was done from an extremely remote time period.. It doesn't mean that all Neteru were ancestors but it does indicate that some of the Neteru themselves are and can be called ancestors.. I think the above examples of I gave gives credence to your ideas.. Sorry for the long response but both of your posts were really profound and I felt I needed to add this info. What are your thoughts??? The articles I spoke about are below with links.

>

> Eri Heru~

> Ras

>

> Here is the of an article speaking about the Egyptians Origins.....

>

> [quote]Ancient Nubia

> Now called Sudan

>

> Geographers refer to northern Nubia as "Lower Nubia" and to southern Nubia as "Upper Nubia." The reason for this is because the Nile River in Nubia, unlike other rivers of the world, flows from the south to the north. So up the Nile is actually going south.

>

> The Nubian section of the Nile contains six rock filled rapids called cataracts.

>

> It was from the south that the original ancestors of the Egyptians, following the direction of the Nile River north, settled the land of Egypt. The Egyptians themselves recorded in their writings that their ancestors came from the south. The Edfu text is an inscription still found in the Temple of Horus at Edfu. It tells us that the origin of Egyptian civilization was taken from the south by a band of invaders led by King Horus.

>

> The Nile River flows from Central Africa to the Mediterranean Sea some 4,000 miles."[/quote]

>

> <http://www.homestead.com/wysinger/nubians10.html>

>

> An Excerpt from the Article Dr Ben wrote about the Egyptians Origins as spoken of in the Papyrus of Hunefer.

>

> "When we speak of the Nile Valley, of course we are talking about 4,100 miles of civilization, or the beginning of the birth of what is today called civilization. I can go to one case of literature in particular which will identify the Africans as the beginners of the civilization to which I refer. And since I am not foreign to the works of Africans in Egypt, otherwise called Egyptians, I think that should be satisfactory proof. This proof is housed in the London Museum that is holding artifacts of Egypt. In that museum you will find a document called the Papyrus of Hunifer. At least you should find it there. It was there when Sir E. A. Wallace Budge used it in his translation as part of the Egyptian Book of the Dead and the Papyrus of Hunifer.

>

> It was there at that time, a copy of which is in the library of Syracuse University in New York, and I quote from the hieratic writing, "We came from the beginning of the Nile where God Hapi dwells, at the foothills of The Mountains of the Moon." "We," meaning the Egyptians, as stated, came from the beginning of the Nile. Where is "the beginning of the Nile?" The farthest point of the beginning of the Nile is in Uganda; this is the White Nile. Another point is in Ethiopia. The Blue Nile and White Nile meet in Khartoum; and the other side of Khartoum is the Omdurman Republic of Sudan. From there it flows from the south down north. And there it meets with the Atbara River in Atbara, Sudan. Then it flows completely through Sudan (Ta-Nehisi, Ta-Zeti or Ta-Seti, as it was called), part of that ancient empire which was one time adjacent to the nation called Meroe or Merowe. From that, into the southern part of what the Romans called "Nubia," and parallel on the Nile, part of which the Gr > eeks called "Egypticus"; the English called it "Egypt" and the Jews in their mythology called it "Mizrain" which the current Arabs called Mizr/Mizrair. Thus it ends in the Sea of Sais, also called the Great Sea, today's Mediterranean Sea. When we say thus, we want to make certain that Hapi is still God of the Nile, shown as a hermaphrodite having the breasts of a woman and the penis of a man. God Hapi is always shown tying two symbols of the "Two Lands," Upper Egypt and Lower Egypt, during Dynastic Periods, or from the beginning of the Dynastic Periods. The lotus flower is the symbol of the south, and the papyrus plant, the symbol of the north."

>

http://www.africawithin.com/jochannan/drben\_nile\_valley\_civilization.htm

>

>

> ----- Original message -----

> From: cristofori whitakara

> > this makes sense because the word ancestor's root is in the word ante-cessor.

> > those who came before and this is far fetched for an anagram ,
however in the > > word ante one can see NT within its spelling, and being conscious of a spiritual > > side our physical existence the family deifies/spiritualizes the person who has > > gone on to another existence because of the deeds done on this plane.
> >
> > asar_imhotep wrote: I am inquiring about a > > possible interpretation of the word /Ntr/ in > > ancient Ta_Merrian ontology. For the most part Egyptologists define > > the word as "gods" and the more enlightened define ntr as "the vital > > force behind animate and inanimate objects." I am posing here today
> > another definition of the word Ntr.
> >
> > In keeping consistent with traditional African thought, people
who > > lived beyond the call of duty and was medicine for the community,
> > when they die, they become part of the vital force that animates
> > objects in the universe. This is true with Ntrw, Abosom and even > > Orisas.
> >
> > The late Dr. Afolabi A. Epega in his work Ifa: The Ancient Wisdom
> > pg. 50 states:
> >
> > "Yoruba deities are called either "Imales" or "Orisas." The term > > Imale means the knowledge of the secrets of this world or of heaven:
> > knowledge of what the Creator has kept in store for the common good > > of mankind, or one who has done some good or mighty things with
his > > knowledge or power is called Imale. Men of miraculous birth or
who > > become deified after death are called Imale, e.g., Dada, Oke, Oke > > Talabi, Aina, Lisabi, Egbeji, etc. They are also called "Orisas."
> >

> > This is quit common all throughout Africa and this leads me to > > believe that another definition of Ntr is "ancestor" or "deified
> > ancestor." With this in mind, when we read the term "Ta Ntr" > > believed to be Pwanet (Punt), to me, it should be read as "land
of
> > the ancestors" instead of "land of the gods" as most Egyptologists > > posit. To me land of the "gods" doesn't makes sense since all of
the
> > earth is powered by "ntrw" (the vital force behind animate and > > inanimate objects). The land of our ancestors would point to a > > genetic and cultural origin. It is no different than African-> > Americans referring to Africa proper as the "mother land" (the
land
> > of our historical birth).
> >
> > We know that persons of great stature in Ta-Merri were elevated
to > > the status of deity: Imhotep and Amenhotep III. In other words, they > > became Ntrw after death and this is done all over Africa. What is
> > your opinion?
> >
> > Asar Imhotep
> > <http://www.mochasuite.com>
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> > -----
> > Catch up on fall's hot new shows on Yahoo! TV. Watch previews, get listings,
> and more!
>
| 23131|2007-09-21 09:53:23|asar_imhotep|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|
I will formally address your comments at a later time as I am in transition, but I just wanted to state to be careful using Dr. Ben as a reference to that quote. We have debated this issue on this forum before and historians have not been able to substantiate that in the papyrus Hunefer.

I personally called Dr. Ben some years ago asking for the proof and he just pointed me to his book Black Man of the Nile; not to the reference in the actual papyrus. No one has been able to find that reference. I am not saying it doesn't exist as I have read Diop reference that statement as well. But he said it in passing and didn't reference the statement. I guess he assumed it was common knowledge.

But just wanted to point that out. You must be able to reference all claims that are alleged to be written with the primary source.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, RasKhalif@... wrote:

>

> Udjahee Asar Imhotep & Cristofori Whitakari,

>

> i would like to add some thing else to this discussion I agree with your statement because of the fact that though the stories of the Neteru are considered allegories they also have historical significance. You are not the first person to assert this at another Website it was asserted as well as when I went through initiation this was stated emphatically that the Neteru were human personages given God status and deified upon their death. Even in the Orisha tradition one example of this is Shango who was a real king who deified after he died. I just wanted to add some more examples of where Egyptians practiced elevating human beings to the status of Neteru. To further explain my overstanding of the message you are conveying and why I agree with your thoughts.

>

>

>

> Matter of fact when I went to Egypt in July this year I saw the Edfu text at the Temple of Edfu. The Egyptians state that their country was founded by a King called Heru (Horus) It also speaks of the battle of King Heru and the fact that Heru came from the south conquering all who stood in his way until he made his way to the Delta this is considered predynastic in times in terms of the time frame it speaks of. Their is a Great Article on this I will post below with a link to the Edfu Text.. We also know that the Pharoahs of Egypt were all equated with Heru while living and Ausar when deceased. All of these cultural habits further validate you idea.

>

> Also Ausar is considered in some circles to be Peraa(Pharoah) Mena which I agree with since he was the founder of Egypt proper in terms of his ushering in the Pharoanic period. An excerpt from this website that deals with ATR states:

>

> " Was Ausar a real living being?

> To my knowledge the king that was most analogous to Ausar was named Menes. He was the king that united Upper and Lower ancient Egypt. We say it was Ausar because Ausar represents the power of God to bring unity, peace and prosperity to the earth." Source

(<http://members.tripod.com/sunbull/id18.htm>)

>

> Ethiopians said by way of Herodotus that Ausar was an Ethiopian in his origins that founded Egypt by setting up a colony made up of Ethiopians that in time eventually distinguished themselves from their southern founding fathers.... though we know through finding of the Qustul incense burner there were predynastic Kings and they were all Nubian.

>

> I consider the Edfu text a historical treatise on the ancestry of the Egyptians and the founder of their country in addition to it's allegorical elements.. So is the Battle between Mena and King Scorpion. Mena the Nubian from the south battled and killed King Scorpion for the throne seat of Tamerri. That is historically proven to be true. The Neteru themselves were ancestors, human beings who were deified because of their illustrious accomplishments or their contribution to the advancement of the society as Imhotep is a GREAT example. In the book The Destruction of Black Civilization by Dr Chancellor Williams he pointed out that by the time Mena took the throne he fought Scorpion who fought for the throne because Egypt by the time Mena came into the picture was already invaded by Asians. So with Mena it was a full blooded Nubian fighting for the throne of his ancestors usurped by an African-Asian Pharoah that being Pharoah Scorpion. So Heru (Peraa Mena) was fighting for the throne to regain it from Set (Ie: The African-Asiatic Peraa Scorpion). Just like the Story of Ausar, Aset and Heru.

>

>

> Dr Ben also speaks in an article he wrote entitled Nile Valley Civilization and the Spread of African Culture referenced below. In the Papyrus of Hunefer it states and I quote" We(Meaning Egyptians) Came from the beginning of the Nile. At the foothills of the Mountain of the Moon were Neter(God) Hapi Dwells. The fact that Hapi is a hermaphrodite speaks volumes because it can be looked at as a combination of the male and female principle or a combination of the two sexes male and females indicating that the Source of the Hapi River was where the mothers and fathers of their Nation(IE: Ancestors came from) The God Hapi is seen in this case as a combination of the male & female progenitors of Egyptian society. We all know there are 2 Mountains of the Moon Kilimanjaro in Tanzania/ Kenya and Rwenzori in Uganda which is the source of the White Nile. The Source of the Blue Nile is in Ethiopia. Both Places were the oldest remnants of human origins was found. One of Egypts oldest Neteru is > Bes a Twa. From my studies Egypt gives special treatment to the Twa as being extremely powerful and they were the only people known to do the dance of the Neteru. They were treated with special care as the Pwanet expedition by Peraa Hatshepsut records. I believe Bes was a historical personage that was made a Neter after he died as well albeit that this was done from an extremely remote time period.. It doesn't mean that all Neteru were ancestors but it does indicate that some of the Neteru themselves are and can be called ancestors.. I think the above examples of I gave gives credence to your ideas.. Sorry for the long response but both of your posts were really profound and I felt I needed to add this info. What are your thoughts??? The articles I spoke about are below with links.

>

> Eri Heru~

> Ras

>

> Here is the of an article speaking about the Egyptians Origins.....

>

> [quote]Ancient Nubia

> Now called Sudan

>

> Geographers refer to northern Nubia as "Lower Nubia" and to southern Nubia as "Upper Nubia." The reason for this is because the Nile River in Nubia, unlike other rivers of the world, flows from the south to the north. So up the Nile is actually going south.

>

> The Nubian section of the Nile contains six rock filled rapids called cataracts.

>

> It was from the south that the original ancestors of the Egyptians, following the direction of the Nile River north, settled the land of Egypt. The Egyptians themselves recorded in their writings that their ancestors came from the south. The Edfu text is an inscription still found in the Temple of Horus at Edfu. It tells us that the origin of Egyptian civilization was taken from the south by a band of invaders led by King Horus.

>

> The Nile River flows from Central Africa to the Mediterranean Sea some 4,000 miles."[/quote]

>

> <http://www.homestead.com/wysinger/nubians10.html>

>

> An Excerpt from the Article Dr Ben wrote about the Egyptians Origins as spoken of in the Papyrus of Hunefer.

>

> "When we speak of the Nile Valley, of course we are talking about 4,100 miles of civilization, or the beginning of the birth of what is today called civilization. I can go to one case of literature in particular which will identify the Africans as the beginners of the civilization to which I refer. And since I am not foreign to the works of Africans in Egypt, otherwise called Egyptians, I think that should be satisfactory proof. This proof is housed in the London Museum that is holding artifacts of Egypt. In that museum you will find a document called the Papyrus of Hunifer. At least you should find it there. It was there when Sir E. A. Wallace Budge used it in his translation as part of the Egyptian Book of the Dead and the Papyrus of Hunifer.

>

> It was there at that time, a copy of which is in the library of Syracuse University in New York, and I quote from the hieratic writing, "We came from the beginning of the Nile where God Hapi dwells, at the foothills of The Mountains of the Moon." "We," meaning the Egyptians, as stated, came from the beginning of the Nile. Where is "the beginning of the Nile?" The farthest point of the beginning of the Nile is in Uganda; this is the White Nile. Another point is in Ethiopia. The Blue Nile and White Nile meet in Khartoum; and the other side of Khartoum is the Omdurman Republic of Sudan. From there it flows from the south down north. And there it meets with the Atbara River in Atbara, Sudan. Then it flows completely through Sudan (Ta-Nehisi, Ta-Zeti or Ta-Seti, as it was called), part of that ancient empire which was one time adjacent to the nation called Meroe or Merowe. From that, into the southern part of what the Romans called "Nubia," and parallel on the Nile, part of which the Gr > eeks called "Egypticus"; the English called it "Egypt" and the Jews in their mythology called it "Mizrain" which the current Arabs called Mizr/Mizrair. Thus it ends in the Sea of Sais, also called the Great Sea, today's Mediterranean Sea. When we say thus, we want to make certain that Hapi is still God of the Nile, shown as a hermaphrodite having the breasts of a woman and the penis of a man. God Hapi is always shown tying two symbols of the "Two Lands," Upper Egypt and Lower Egypt, during Dynastic Periods, or from the beginning of the Dynastic Periods. The lotus flower is the symbol of the south, and the papyrus plant, the symbol of the north."

>

http://www.africawithin.com/jochannan/drben\_nile\_valley\_civilization.htm

>
>
> ----- Original message -----
> From: cristofori whitakara
> > this makes sense because the word ancestor's root is in the word ante-cessor.
> > those who came before and this is far fetched for an anagram ,
however in the > > word ante one can see NT within its spelling, and being conscious of a spiritual > > side our physical existence the family deifies/spiritualizes the person who has > > gone on to another existence because of the deeds done on this plane.
> >
> > asar_imhotep wrote: I am inquiring
about a > > possible interpretation of the word /Ntr/ in > > ancient Ta_Merrian ontology. For the most part Egyptologists
define
> > the word as "gods" and the more enlightened define ntr as "the vital > > force behind animate and inanimate objects." I am posing here today
> > another definition of the word Ntr.
> >
> > In keeping consistent with traditional African thought, people
who > > lived beyond the call of duty and was medicine for the community,
> > when they die, they become part of the vital force that animates
> > objects in the universe. This is true with Ntrw, Abosom and even > > Orisas.
> >
> > The late Dr. Afolabi A. Epega in his work Ifa: The Ancient Wisdom
> > pg. 50 states:
> >
> > "Yoruba deities are called either "Imales" or "Orisas." The term > > Imale means the knowledge of the secrets of this world or of heaven:
> > knowledge of what the Creator has kept in store for the common good > > of mankind, or one who has done some good or mighty things with
his > > knowledge or power is called Imale. Men of miraculous birth or

who

>> become deified after death are called Imale, e.g., Dada, Oke, Oke

>> Talabi, Aina, Lisabi, Egbeji, etc. They are also called "Orisas."

>>

>> This is quit common all throughout Africa and this leads me to

>> believe that another definition of Ntr is "ancestor" or "deified

>> ancestor." With this in mind, when we read the term "Ta Ntr"

>> believed to be Pwanet (Punt), to me, it should be read as "land of

>> the ancestors" instead of "land of the gods" as most Egyptologists

>> posit. To me land of the "gods" doesn't makes sense since all of the >> earth is powered by "ntrw" (the vital force behind animate and >> inanimate objects). The land of our ancestors would point to a >> genetic and cultural origin. It is no different than African-

>> Americans referring to Africa proper as the "mother land" (the land

>> of our historical birth).

>>

>> We know that persons of great stature in Ta-Merri were elevated to

>> the status of deity: Imhotep and Amenhotep III. In other words, they >> became Ntrw after death and this is done all over Africa. What is >> your opinion?

>>

>> Asar Imhotep

>> <http://www.mochasuite.com>

>>

>>

>>

>>

>>

>>

>> -----

>> Catch up on fall's hot new shows on Yahoo! TV. Watch previews, get listings, > and more!

>

| 23132|2007-09-21 13:34:54|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|

It strikes me as a strong possibility that it could mean both in a generic sense. But it is also possible that there may be instances when the usage may rely on context. And what is that context and how important is it?

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep"
wrote:

>
> I am inquiring about a possible interpretation of the word /Ntr/ in > ancient Ta_Merrian ontology. For the most part Egyptologists define > the word as "gods" and the more enlightened define ntr as "the vital

> force behind animate and inanimate objects." I am posing here today
> another definition of the word Ntr.

>
> In keeping consistent with traditional African thought, people who > lived beyond the call of duty and was medicine for the community,
> when they die, they become part of the vital force that animates > objects in the universe. This is true with Ntrw, Abosom and even > Orisas.

>
> The late Dr. Afolabi A. Epega in his work Ifa: The Ancient Wisdom
> pg. 50 states:

>
> "Yoruba deities are called either "Imales" or "Orisas." The term > Imale means the knowledge of the secrets of this world or of heaven:

> knowledge of what the Creator has kept in store for the common good
> of mankind, or one who has done some good or mighty things with his > knowledge or power is called Imale. Men of miraculous birth or who > become deified after death are called Imale, e.g., Dada, Oke, Oke > Talabi, Aina, Lisabi, Egbeji, etc. They are also called "Orisas."

>
>
> This is quit common all throughout Africa and this leads me to > believe that another definition of Ntr is "ancestor" or "deified
> ancestor." With this in mind, when we read the term "Ta Ntr"
> believed to be Pwanet (Punt), to me, it should be read as "land of > the ancestors" instead of "land of the gods" as most Egyptologists > posit. To me land of the "gods" doesn't makes sense since all of

the

> earth is powered by "ntrw" (the vital force behind animate and > inanimate objects). The land of our ancestors would point to a > genetic and cultural origin. It is no different than African-> Americans referring to Africa proper as the "mother land" (the land > of our historical birth).

>
> We know that persons of great stature in Ta-Merri were elevated to > the status of deity: Imhotep and Amenhotep III. In other words,

they > became Ntrw after death and this is done all over Africa. What is > your opinion?

>
> Asar Imhotep
> <http://www.mochasuite.com>

>
| 23133|2007-09-21 16:04:03|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|

>>Land of Yam<<

I think I recall someone writing that "Yam" and "Kam" are not the same but aren't they phonetically too close to NOT be related, i.e., one and the same?

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala"
wrote:

>
> I agree. This Punt was also probably the same or overlapping with > Ta-aakhu, Land of the Ancestral Spirits to the south of Egypt, and

to > the Land of Yam about seven or eight months round-trip journey south > of Egypt.

>
> Regards,
> Paul Kekai Manansala

>
>
>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep"

wrote:

> >
> > I am inquiring about a possible interpretation of the word /Ntr/

in > > ancient Ta_Merrian ontology. For the most part Egyptologists

define

> > the word as "gods" and the more enlightened define ntr as "the vital

> > force behind animate and inanimate objects." I am posing here

today

> > another definition of the word Ntr.

> >

> > In keeping consistent with traditional African thought, people

who

> > lived beyond the call of duty and was medicine for the community,

> > when they die, they become part of the vital force that animates

> > objects in the universe. This is true with Ntrw, Abosom and even > > Orisas.

> >

> > The late Dr. Afolabi A. Epega in his work Ifa: The Ancient Wisdom

> > pg. 50 states:

> >

> > "Yoruba deities are called either "Imales" or "Orisas." The term

> > Imale means the knowledge of the secrets of this world or of

heaven:

> > knowledge of what the Creator has kept in store for the common good

> > of mankind, or one who has done some good or mighty things with

his > > knowledge or power is called Imale. Men of miraculous birth or

who

> > become deified after death are called Imale, e.g., Dada, Oke, Oke

> > Talabi, Aina, Lisabi, Egbeji, etc. They are also called "Orisas."

> >

> >

> > This is quit common all throughout Africa and this leads me to

> > believe that another definition of Ntr is "ancestor" or "deified

> > ancestor." With this in mind, when we read the term "Ta Ntr" > > believed to be Pwanet (Punt), to me, it should be read as "land

of

> > the ancestors" instead of "land of the gods" as most

Egyptologists

> > posit. To me land of the "gods" doesn't make sense since all of

the

> > earth is powered by "ntrw" (the vital force behind animate and > > inanimate objects). The land of our ancestors would point to a > > genetic and cultural origin. It is no different than African-> > Americans referring to Africa proper as the "mother land" (the

land

> > of our historical birth).

> >

> > We know that persons of great stature in Ta-Merri were elevated

to

> > the status of deity: Imhotep and Amenhotep III. In other words,

they > > became Ntrw after death and this is done all over Africa. What is > > your opinion?

> >

> > Asar Imhotep

> > <http://www.mochasuite.com>

> >

>

| 23134|2007-09-21 17:18:07|Freddie Thompson|One man's Emotional Diatribe against Diop|

A Book that shows its Age

By Sam A. Mustafa (Hawthorne, NJ USA)

This was a striking and influential book when it first appeared nearly half a century ago, but it is definitely showing its age nowadays. I was given the book as a present by a Senegalese student in one of my classes, who is a relative of Diop's. I had previously read and admired Diop's Pre-Colonial Black Africa. But I'm sorry to say that I was very disappointed with The African Origins of Civilization.

Diop is a scientist, not an historian, although he writes beautifully and makes a compelling narrative. But perhaps because he lacks a formal historical training, he seems to have no sense of objectivity. The most crucial commandment for an historian is to begin only with questions, to do research, and to be willing to accept any conclusions that the research reveals. (As a scientist, surely Diop should recognize that as the scientific method.) But he openly declares that he wants his books to serve as revolutionary polemical texts for a pan-African movement (remember, he's writing in the early 1950s, before Uhuru), and he even invites other historians, "to confirm the various ideas that I have advanced." That is not what historians do: we are not supposed to propose a theory, claim it as fact, and then demand that others do the hard work of proving it for us.

Few serious historians would object to Diop's basic assertion that the ancient Egyptians were dark-skinned people of African origin. Most people still agree with the Leakian thesis that all human life began in Africa, and that we are thus all "Africans," originally (although some archaeologists are now proposing an Asian origin.) And most important, I think everybody would agree with his idea that Africans should write African history free from any need to relate it to Europe, or measure their civilizations by European standards. I'm with Diop up to that point. But there are a lot of problems with this book.

First there are the obvious factual errors. For instance, Diop places the Koran [sic] 1700 years in the past, when in fact it is only 1400 years old. He mis-quotes the Bible and gets the number of Hebrew tribes wrong. He proposes a pre-Columbian African "discovery" of the Americas, which has been de-bunked by archaeologists for decades. (Where were the African harbors they sailed from? Where were the shipbuilding industries, the navigational instruments, the inevitable American products and people brought back home to Africa?)

Second, there are the bizarre stretches of interpretation. Diop is looking for anything, seemingly, close enough to prove his points. For instance, the name "Charlemagne" sounds very much like "Kaya Magan," the title of the Emperor of Ghana. Pretty soon Diop is claiming that "the French are Negroes." Over the next ten pages, he turns the Jews, the Phoenicians, the Greeks, and the Arabs into Negroes, too. Only the Germans (whom he associates with Hitler) are not "Black." He does this same sort of logical moonshot with pictures - lots and lots of pictures. A statue depicts a person wearing hair braided in a certain way, reminiscent of West Africa. Therefore that person is a Negro. He shows photographs of the hairstyles of Senegalese girls, and then an ancient statue, as "proof" of racial identity. (If hairstyle conferred identity, then I wonder what Diop would think of my students...!) There are many photographs of ancient busts, which Diop describes as "clearly" or "obviously" Negro faces.

Third - and this is the biggest problem of all - is what I call the "So What?" factor. In order to be impressed with Diop's theory that the ancient Egyptians were Negro, you have to believe that there is such a thing as a "Negro" in the first place. Here again this book is showing its age. Outside of the human imagination, there is no such thing as Race. Biologically, it simply doesn't exist. We are all the same animal, with an infinite variety of physical characteristics. Climate, and centuries of breeding only amongst certain groups, have each played a part in why people from Region A tend to have certain features or a certain skin-tone, different from Region B. But the bottom line is that "race" is whatever you want it to be. Diop was writing long before DNA mapping, so he can't be blamed for not knowing that each of us carries in our genes all the possible "races" of humanity, and then some.

So if it makes you feel good to call the Pharaohs "Black," fine - go ahead. You will first have to define what it means to be "black." And the process of defining that word will no doubt be done in such a way as to fit the people you want to fit, and exclude the people you want to exclude. (Are Puerto Ricans "blacks," for instance? How about Pakistanis? and so on.) That's exactly what Diop did in this book: he invented an idea of "race," then applied his invention to historical figures, and - what a surprise! - the historical figures fit his category.

That's neither good science nor good history.

http://www.amazon.com/African-Origin-Civilization-Myth-Reality/dp/1556520727/ref=pd\_sim\_b\_2\_img/102-1702661-7331323?ie=UTF8&qid=1002130429

---

Tonight's top picks. What will you watch tonight? Preview the hottest shows on Yahoo! TV.

| 23135|2007-09-21 17:21:17|Peter Gray|Re: AFURAKA/AFURAITKAIT Nanasom Nhoma...2nd Issue Now Available|

Sorry. I really don't think that a forum like this one should be used to peddle one's wares, no matter how profound/original you think they may be. No offense.

Peter Gray

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

From: ra_nehem@sbcglobal.net

Date: Thu, 20 Sep 2007 21:17:24 +0000

Subject: [Ta_Seti] AFURAKA/AFURAITKAIT Nanasom Nhoma...2nd Issue Now Available

A 1-year ($27) eSubscription to AFURAKA/AFURAITKAIT Nanasom Nhoma is an awoda akyede (birthday gift) of substance which will benefit the recipient throughout the year. A single issue of the nhoma (journal) is an inexpensive ($3.00) akyede which will be of great benefit as well. The electronic version of the nhoma is e-mailed immediately upon receipt of payment --- usually on the same day. See details below. . .

AFURAKA AFURAITKAIT

NANASOM NHOMA

AFURAKANI/AFURAITKAITNIT ANCESTRAL RELIGION JOURNAL

$3.00

NHOMA BAAKO, AKWASIDAE NSCN

NHOMA 1, AKWASIDAE 7, 13007 (2007)

AFURAKA AFURAITKAIT

NANASOM NHOMA

AFURAKANI/AFURAITKAITNIT ANCESTRAL RELIGION JOURNAL

$5.00

NHOMA MANU, AKWASIDAE AWOTWE

NHOMA 2, AKWASIDAE 8, 13007 (2007)

Afurakani/Afuraitka itnit Ancestral Religion Journal

AFURAKA/AFURAITKAIT Nanasom Nhoma is an nhoma (n'-hoh-mah), a journal, focused on Afurakani/Afuraitka itnit (African) Ancestral Religion.

Our nhoma is divided into seven sections based on the Abosom (ah'-boh-sohm), the Deities, of the solar, lunar and planetary bodies which govern the Akan 7-day week. The themes governing each section are:

KRADIN

(Soul-Name; Spiritual Identity)

ABUSUAKUW and ABATUMM

(Ethnic group; Cultural identity; Trustory) and (Melanin; Physiological Identity)

MMARA NE KYI

(Law and Hate)

NHWEHWEMU

(Critical Examination)

NKRABEA

(Function)

AHOODEN and AHOOFE

(Health, Strength) and (Beauty)

AHODWIRA

(Ritual; Self-Purification)

AFURAKA/AFURAITKAIT Nanasom Nhoma is ultimately about Nyansa (Intelligence) as it relates to Amansew (Nationbuilding/ restoration). Nyansa is comprised of two complementary poles: Revolution and Resolution. As we have stated in the PTAH Sasetem:

"...When Earth moves around Sun and returns to its place of origin, It has made a complete revolution. Return to your Ancestral origin is complete revolution. When Earth, through revolution, transmits Its power through the seasons, It has brought about a complete resolution. Transmit power through the cycles of revolution brings about our complete resolution. Revolution and Resolution are two halves of one whole-Intelligence.

Revolution-Resolution as a tool of cultural reorientation is defined as the right of return and the right of reconstitution. In practice it is also the rite of return and the rite of reconstitution. The return is to our

Ancestral culture, our way of living, our normalcy. It is a return to the pact we made with Nyamewaa-Nyame before we came into the world, and a reconstitution of the cultural values and institutions rooted in those values which make our adhering to that Divine pact possible. We have a right to return to ourselves and to reconstitute ourselves. We must engage in the rites/ rituals in order to return to ourselves and to reconstitute ourselves in harmony with Divine Order. We have thus recognized disorder and moved to reject it, thus manifesting intelligence in the true sense..."

While our orientation is Akan, our nhoma includes other Afurakani/Afuraitka itnit cultures as well. This information is relevant to all Afurakanu/Afuraitka itnut wherever we are found in the world, for we are all connected.

AFURAKA/AFURAITKAIT Nanasom Nhoma is published nine times per year, in accordance with the traditional Akan calendar. An issue will be published for each Akwasidae cycle (every 42-days/six weeks).

Subscriptions:

$27 per year (9 issues) for the electronic journal
The electronic version of the journal will be e-mailed to subscribers immediately upon confirmation of payment.

$45 per year (9 issues) plus $27 shipping (Total of $72) for the hard copy (Installment- payment option available: 3 payments of $24.00--covers 3 issues). The hard copy will be mailed to subscribers immediately upon confirmation of payment.

Single Issues:

$5.00 per issue

For mail-orders: Include $3.00 shipping for first volume; $.50 for each additional volume

To order your subscription, please visit our webpage at:

www.odwirafo.com/nanasom.html

For additional information and income opportunities as a distributor, please contact us at:

nanasom@odwirafo. com or 312.371.0428.

Ma asomdwoee-Hetep,
Ra Nehem

AFURAKA/AFURAITKAIT Nanasom Nhoma is published by Kwesi Ra Nehem Ptah Akhan, Odwirafo, Aakhuamuman Amaruka Atifi mu(Odwirafo of the Akwamu Nation in North America).

Trustory [troo'-stoh- ree (true-story, trust(worthy) -ory)] trustoric; trustorically:

A true and accurate account of previous events.

Afurakanu/Afuraitka itnut:

Trustory is spiritual. Embrace your trustory. Restore your consciousness. Build your nation. Destroy your enemy.

.Bra nkwa mu.

Reader's feedback on first issue of Afuraka/Afuraitkait Nanasom Nhoma:

Kwesi Ra Nehem Ptah Akhan and Family have written a powerful journal focusing on the roots of Afrikan spirituality placing us Afrikans at the beginning of creation in ancient Kamit where we rightfully belong.

The Nanasom Nhoma is truly the missing link the separates truth from fallacy in regards to the trustory of the Afrikan.

I am very impressed with the first installment of the Nanasom Nhoma being that it was eloquently presented with a refreshing clarity stemming from the support of word pronunciations, definitions, illustrations, and explanations rendering it very easy to read and understand.

I was particularly very curious about the explanation of our creation as many questions were answered as I am sure many others will be with the continuing installments of the journal.

I found interesting the explanations of our original spiritual systems and how they came to be duplicated into pseudo religions through perverse alterations proving that Afrikan spirituality is the only true system that should be practice by Afrikan people around the world. I also learned how fundamentally Afrikan spiritual systems are the same around the world being that they stem from the same origin and it is only sometimes the renaming of the deities that differ.

KRADIN

(Soul-Name; Spiritual Identity)

The explanation of the origin of the term Africa was also eye opening being that I had taken in so much false information about it's original origin. The breakdown of the terms that makes up the original name Afuraka/ Afuraitkait was more than convincing to change my mind.

Learning how Kamit (the first land mass) was formed was en-lighting and assuring that everything came from it's origin. The story of how it came to life via the life energy of Ra and Rait was beautifully written. I enjoyed reading about all the different definitions for the term high land that has crossed ethnicities while still holding it's original meaning. The illustrations were great too.

ABUSUAKUW and ABATUMM

(Ethnic group; Cultural identity) and (Melanin; Physiological Identity)

The Abusuakuw prompted me to want to learn more about the origins of my own Ancestral clan. I think when I have found my rightful place communicating with my ancestors, and deities will be more spiritually fruitful.

The Abatumm opened my eyes to how powerful my melanin is in relation to nature. It was surprising to find out that this pigment in my skin helps me to fight disease, infections and heal myself. Even more wondrous is it's ability to convert sunlight into food and energy for the cells in my body.

MMARA NE KYI

(Law and Hate)

This particular information just back up everything that I have already felt for a long time. I have always judged people, loved, and hated and this is the very behavior that has allowed me to keep the right people in my life and reject everyone and thing that was detrimental. I enjoyed learning that hate is divine and actually spiritually sound. Hate is balance and without balance will come disorder.

I found many of the other articles in the journal to be very en-lighting and I look forward to the next installment of the Nanasom Nhoma and all those after.

Afua

WWW.ODWIRAFO.COM/NANASOM.HTML

WWW.ODWIRAFO.COM/NANASOM.HTML

WWW.ODWIRAFO.COM/NANASOM.HTML

Forward email

This email was sent to info@nkwainc. com, by ra\_nehem@odwirafo.com
Update Profile/Email Address | Instant removal with SafeUnsubscribe | Privacy Policy.

--

Trustory [troo'-stoh- ree(true- story); trust(worthy) -ory]:

A true and accurate account of previous events

trustoric; trustorically

www.odwirafo.com

---

Make your little one a shining star! Shine on!

| 23136|2007-09-21 17:58:17|Djehuti Sundaka|Re: King Tut Not Black Enough, Protesters Say|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala"

wrote:

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Djehuti Sundaka"

> wrote:

> >

> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala"

> > wrote:

> > >

> > >

>

> >

> >

> > As indicated by the parallels with the Io and Danaos accounts, events

> > from the stories of Abraham to the escape through the sea had been > > apart of a pre-biblical account.

>

>

> So, that's not that unusual. As I've noted already it's not uncommon > for adstrata to be added to historical characters. We can find the > same thing with Alexander the Great or Attila the Hun, for example.

Unless you consider El-Elyown and Asherah to have been historical characters, Abraham and Sarah, the derivatives of such characters, couldn't have been historical.

>

> Although it is common to assume > > that separate oral traditions of historical Patriarchs and the

Exodus

> > had been remembered in YisraEl before being written down into a > > single account, nothing from these stories supports such a > > perspective.

>

> Actually, it's rather unlikely that an exilic writer could have > introduced wholly fictitious stories into the Hebrew canon during

the > diaspora.

The Exile didn't occur until 587 BCE. The first biblical stories had already been written nearly 200 years earlier c. 770 BCE and even then had been adopted from a line of previous accounts ranging from Shomer (Samaria) to Zur (Tyre).

>

> The evidence suggests that there already was a long-standing

national

- > identity at the time. It's far more likely that the writer was
- > conveying traditions that the people were already familiar with and
- > could readily accept. Had the people just formed an identity it would

- > have been easier to make up an ancient fictitious ancestor.
- >
- > As with most people in the region at that time, it's highly likely
- > that the Jews already had traditions of a patriarchal ancestor. It - > could be that other traditions were pasted on to an existing tradition.

Actually, it's not highly likely at all. Considering the hapiru origins of YisraEl, there's no reason for them to have had such a tradition until one had been invented in a time in which it was politically desirable (i.e. the 8th century BCE). EthBaal of Zur had probably been the first to identify himself as being of Hika Khaswt descent to justify his own rule, making Yaaqob-Har his ancestor and El-Elyown Yaaqob-Har's father. Yarobaam II a hundred years later had probably been the second to do so by identifying Yaaqob with the name YisraEl. Thus, the J-writer had already possessed a template to adapt for her own national origin story.

>

>

- > Therefore, there's nothing to suggest that the
- >> tales of Abraham had ever been based upon a historical individual
- >> remembered through oral tradition.
- >
- > Well, your basis for saying this before was that there was no
- > poetic/metric structure to the accounts of Abraham, which was wrong.

No, it's not. As pointed out before, there is no "Song of Abraham" or any other evidence of an oral tradition of him that had been written down. You pointed out Genesis 49 which has nothing to do with Abraham as it applies to Yaaqob (Jacob) and is dated no earlier than the J-source which presents it (i.e. c. 770 BCE). The earliest songs that had been written down and incorporated into the text had also been pointed out and as pointed out none of those songs reveal any knowledge of an Abraham or even a Mosheh.

>
> Even in the Genesis narrative, most bible scholars that I've > encountered believe it incorporates facts from earlier traditions.
> That's a common explanation for the mixed writing styles in Genesis > i.e. -- narrative, dialogue, prose, parallelism, etc in different > chapters of the book.
>
> Regards,
> Paul Kekai Manansala
>

A scholar's beliefs beyond the evidence are irrelevant. Scholars such as Friedman, Finkelstein, and Redford all have different beliefs on certain parts of the material that goes beyond their expertise in some areas and beyond the evidence itself in others. And depending upon what the particular belief may be, their beliefs can be found to conflict with one another. They all differ on as to exactly what had been a pre-biblical tradition and what had been purely invented and when. What's relevant is the evidence scholars present for everyone else to examine for themselves to arrive at their own conclusions while digging up further evidence to either support, modify, or depart from previous perspectives.

Djehuti Sundaka

| 23137|2007-09-22 09:16:47|cristofori whitakara|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|

thank you. i was making a distinction between spirit and soul because i think of spirit as relating to the earthly material existence i.e. the "skin" of the soul thru which blood and water flow thru forming the existence of spirit thru which physical desires, wants and needs come from and the khu(soul) a representation of the celestial plane. is the term (p)sa-khu in the kemet language meaning "her-soul" related to the greek term psyche who is represented as a "goddess"?

Paul Kekai Manansala wrote:

Budge translated _aakhu_ as "soul-spirits." The aakhu were revered and I guess could be considered enlightened.

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

crisofori whitakara wrote:

canTa-aakhu also mean Land of the enlightened souls?

Paul Kekai Manansala wrote:

I agree. This Punt was also probably the same or overlapping with Ta-aakhu, Land of the Ancestral Spirits to the south of Egypt, and to the Land of Yam about seven or eight months round-trip journey south of Egypt.

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:

>
> I am inquiring about a possible interpretation of the word /Ntr/ in > ancient Ta_Merrian ontology. For the most part Egyptologists define
> the word as "gods" and the more enlightened define ntr as "the vital > force behind animate and inanimate objects." I am posing here today
> another definition of the word Ntr.

>
> In keeping consistent with traditional African thought, people who > lived beyond the call of duty and was medicine for the community,
> when they die, they become part of the vital force that animates > objects in the universe. This is true with Ntrw, Abosom and even > Orisas.

>
> The late Dr. Afolabi A. Epega in his work Ifa: The Ancient Wisdom
> pg. 50 states:

>
> "Yoruba deities are called either "Imales" or "Orisas." The term
> Imale means the knowledge of the secrets of this world or of heaven:
> knowledge of what the Creator has kept in store for the common good
> of mankind, or one who has done some good or mighty things with his > knowledge or power is called Imale. Men of miraculous birth or who > become deified after death are called Imale, e.g., Dada, Oke, Oke > Talabi, Aina, Lisabi, Egbeji, etc. They are also called "Orisas."

>
>
> This is quit common all throughout Africa and this leads me to > believe that another definition of Ntr is "ancestor" or "deified
> ancestor." With this in mind, when we read the term "Ta Ntr"
> believed to be Pwanet (Punt), to me, it should be read as "land of > the ancestors" instead of "land of the gods" as most Egyptologists > posit. To me land of the "gods" doesn't makes sense since all of the > earth is powered by "ntrw" (the vital force behind animate and > inanimate objects). The land of our ancestors would point to a > genetic and cultural origin. It is no different than African-> Americans referring to Africa proper as the "mother land" (the land

> of our historical birth).
>
> We know that persons of great stature in Ta-Merri were elevated to > the status of deity: Imhotep and Amenhotep III. In other words, they > became Ntrw after death and this is done all over Africa. What is > your opinion?
>
> Asar Imhotep
> <http://www.mochasuite.com>
>

---

Luggage? GPS? Comic books?
Check out fitting gifts for grads at Yahoo! Search.

---

Luggage? GPS? Comic books?
Check out fitting gifts for grads at Yahoo! Search.
| 23138|2007-09-22 11:08:49|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: King Tut Not Black Enough, Protesters Say|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Djehuti Sundaka"
wrote:

>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala"
> wrote:
> >
> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Djehuti Sundaka"
> > wrote:
> > >
> > > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala"
> > > wrote:

>
> Unless you consider El-Elyown and Asherah to have been historical > characters, Abraham and Sarah, the derivatives of such characters, > couldn't have been historical.
>

You're not understanding my point.

The examples I give show evidence of earlier mythical themes and motifs that are attached to historical persons through the course of time.

This has been discussed in mythological literature, for example, the critiques of Raglan's hypothesis on the hero theme.

So, regardless of whether El or Asherah were historical, and they could also possibly have some connection with historical characters, it has no bearing on Abraham and Sarah. These themes could have been attached to them as part of a natural process seen in many cultures.

>

> No, it's not. As pointed out before, there is no "Song of Abraham" > or any other evidence of an oral tradition of him that had been > written down. You pointed out Genesis 49 which has nothing to do > with Abraham as it applies to Yaaqob (Jacob) and is dated no earlier > than the J-source which presents it (i.e. c. 770 BCE).

You stated that there are no poetry or songs related to Abraham which is simply wrong. For example I also have the example of Melchizedek's blessing.

And how can Jacob have "nothing to do with Abraham?" Genesis is our source for Abraham and it shows evidence of poetic structure in various places along with mixed literary types, usually considered evidence of compilation from different sources. As I recall you consider Jacob and even most of the Hebrew tribes also as new fiction created during the writing phase of the Old Testament.

And why are you referring to "J-source," which is one of the scholarly suppositions on the layering of Genesis.

This layering itself suggests derivation from previous traditions according to those who came up with the theories. If there were long-standing previous traditions it seems unlikely that someone is going to suggest an ancestral patriarch out of the blue.

You have not actually pointed out what type of "evidence" would be required to suggest a previous oral tradition other than song or poetry form. Genesis in fact shows evidence of poetic structure, so its narrative can be seen as taken from oral traditions without necessarily copying those traditions in all cases (the standard view).

You now suggest that the poetic structure does not indicate any date older than the source that "presents it" [in written form] so it seems you really don't consider this "evidence" at all.

The fact of the matter is that you're really expressing an opinion, which can't be established with the available evidence. We can't say that Abraham is historical nor can we say that he is fictional with any confidence. Your suggestion that there is "no evidence" that Abraham could have come from previous oral traditions because there is no poetry or song connected with his account is simply not correct.

First of all, there doesn't have to be any "evidence" since the narrator can take facts from oral traditions without reproducing the literary style. So it's an impossible task to say there were no previous poems, chants, genealogies, etc.

Secondly, there is actual evidence of poetic form in the Genesis account which positively suggests the possibility of previous oral tradition.

Here is another example of poetic structure including parallelism in Genesis 16 regarding Sarah, Hagar and the birth of Ishmael.

16:11 The angel of the Lord said to her further, "Behold, you are with child, And you will bear a son; And you shall call his name Ishmael, Because the Lord has given heed to your affliction.

16:12 "He will be a wild donkey of a man, His hand will be against everyone, And everyone's hand will be against him; And he will live to the east of all his brothers."

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23139|2007-09-22 11:09:27|Franklin Jones|TODAY'S sophisticated face of modern white racism|

Today, for the most part, the manner in which African Americans confront White racism is very outdated. The most detrimental system of white racism now adversely afflicting African Americans avoid the blatant now socially unacceptable means as those used in the past. Moreover today's system is for more sophisticated, elaborated and proficient than any system of racism previously faced by African Americans--yes even slavery.

Today's modern method of white racism in the United States is now secretly applied through the government's proven method of Covert Counterintelligence Program [COINTELPRO: A misnomer for Domestic Covert Actions.] Although the formal COINTELPRO covert operations employed by the FBI directed against African Americans during the period of 1956-1971 was discontinued [upon the surface]. However, in truth--because the nineteen sixties were a period of massive black rebellion and unrest that caused the U.S. Government to fear the uprising of a violent revolution-- the FBI did not actually cease its formal domestic counterintelligence programs against African Americans, but instead actually advanced it by targeting it more broadly and secretly. Today there is a far more sophisticated and massive counterintelligence program being implemented against the entire African American population.

Because the U.S. Government's socialist and psychologists were well aware of the fact that those who make peaceful revolution impossible will make violent revolution inevitable, it became necessary to create a more sophisticated system of white racism that deliberately wears only the appearance, if any, of being totally self-inflicted by African Americans themselves. A system of white governmental racism that is implemented through the American educational, judicial and prison systems-- that prevails and is concealed through the usage of Psychological Warfare implemented through the national media that fosters a consensual environment for its unethical undertaking. By doing so, the United States Government acquired a far more insidious and covert method of ensuring that its white dominance is maintained that exists behind a clever shroud of secrecy and deceit ? for it is in this way that the evils of racism thrive best -- when its victims do not recognize the evil.

While although this modern method of governmental white racism covertly uses the American educational system to mortifyingly mis-educate and disesteem black students and the judicial and prison systems to severely reduce black growth and upward mobility by reducing black America's ability to procreate and to vote thus to maintain its white dominance. However the most significant and detrimental aspect of this modern system of white governmental racism used today in America is its aspect of using psychological warfare against African Americans. Governmental Psychological warfare is the art of directing masses and individual towards governmental objectives by means of cleverly manipulating theory and misinformation. Today the United States Government uses mis-education, false statistics and negative propaganda media reports that equates a psychological warfare that conspires to corrupt blacks of unity, reason, and common sense, thus deliberately soliciting the disparity that has now become modern Black America as a mean of meeting its objective of maintaining white dominance in the United States .

Here is a simplified analogy of the psychological aspect of this modern system of racism that is now being implemented against America 's Black population. Let us say, for example, that a group of people was aboard their own massive ship and that their ship was being shadowed by another neighboring ship, a neighboring ship that was constantly broadcasting derogatory messages to the first group that their ship was lesser, smaller, not seaworthy or perhaps slowly sinking or that their crew was incompetent or was planning a mutiny. With time, the group receiving the negative messages, being unable to refute or to confirm these derogatory messages and deficiencies will grow weary and paranoid of the negative messages and will eventually come to accept these negative assessments of themselves. The perception created by the taunting now unconsciously influences how the taunted group perceives themselves, subsequently causing them to become distrustful of themselves, doubting themselves, hating themselves and, eventually, fighting among themselves. The taunted group may even become so besieged by deep feelings of inadequacy that they may even jump into the sea and attempt to swim towards the taunting ship now believing it to be superior to their own boat even if their own ship was in fact better.

This concept of warfare uses psychology as the decisive factor in the outcome. The basis of the concept is that the human being's most critical aspect is the mind. This science of psychology works by affecting the unconscious mind through deception. Its weapon is the message that it carries and the way this message affects the recipients in terms of their behavior. Within a real world setting, this is implemented against African Americans through U.S. governmental agencies that leak false derogatory press releases, documentaries, and media information concerning its Black population that are designed to perpetuate and frame the myth of Whites' racial, moral, and ethical superiority over its Black population. Its collaborators in the news media, which either knowingly or unknowingly carry the false information or create their own false information through news releases in magazine articles, radio, and television, work to demoralize, discourage, berate, subjugate, and or dismantle the Black population. The weapon is not the way it is sent, but the messages that it carries and how the messages affect the recipient and influence society.

This perversion of reality insinuates that America would be a better society as a whole if African Americans were gone, thus psychologically changing the root problem of racism in America to be due to Black's behavior rather than White's proclivity for racism. This shift of victimization that the problem of racism in America is due to the fault of African Americans, is perpetuated unrelentingly everywhere through the media. This campaign engenders distorted perceptions and increasingly prejudiced and acrimonious beliefs about its African American population that creates a consensual environment that facilitates the easier exploitation and suppression of Black America. [For when contempt of Blacks appears to be justifiable, it is the fiercest and most effective type of racism because its witnesses, bystanders, and jurors will sit by idly allowing African Americans to be brutally mistreated under the belief that it is justified.]

Although this may sound a bit like bad science fiction, Psychological Warfare is a real and well-proven technology that exceeds the territorial limits of conventional warfare to penetrate the proposed target. This type of psychological warfare has been used by the military since World War II. The British Special Operation Executives (SOE) was pioneering this form of propaganda during the Second World War. The British Government, between 1930-1940, conducted psychological warfare against Germany, by putting together a massive department staffed by many former journalists that conducted secret journalism and planted favorable stories in the world's press. Generally using friendly newspapers editors, but also using bribery to get pro-allied stories in print, British pilots also dropped propaganda leaflets and spread rumors concerning Germany's relations with France and other aspects of the war.

The ability to influence the nation in mass using psychological operations through the national media is highly effective because the media itself is very powerful in terms of its influence. For the media helps shape our views of the world, what we consider to be good or bad, and also forges our deepest values, identities, and our sense of what it means, for example, to be male or female. These facts, combined with those studies showing that the average American watches 18 hundred hours of television each year, affirm that there is a great inclination for Americans to be affected by psychological operations conducted through the national media.

The reason psychological warfare is so unknown to most Americans is because its very nature is to be covert, and because it is not the stuff of adventure and the excitement of war that films or novels portray. However, psychological warfare is a real, sound, and proven governmental technology that has been used by the U.S. Government for many decades, and its usage is ongoing even now. For as recently as July 2004, a story was reported by the New York Times that the Defense Department had paid the Rendon Group, a Washington-based international consulting firm, $100,000 per month to help the Office of Strategic Information (OSI) with a broad campaign that would include negative propaganda or disinformation. The report stated that the OSI was established to spread positive messages about the war on terrorism, but it would also use disinformation and misinformation to mislead friends and foe alike. The report went on to say that the office of Strategic Influence had been set up to disseminate truthful information openly but also to spread what senior pentagon officials called "the Blackest of Black programs." The organization works on ways to influence and mislead the media abroad and also domestically in America, such as spreading positive messages about the war on terrorism or perpetuating disinformation through its frequent collusion with news media personnel to publish false and distorted material at the government's behest.

The U.S. Government's methods for implementing domestic psychological warfare also include the ability to suppress particular targeted groups. [ This is when governmental agencies leak false, derogatory press releases, documentaries, and media information to its collaborators in the news media which the media knowingly or unknowingly carry as its own and submit the false information through news releases and in magazine articles, radio, and television to demoralize, discourage, subjugate, and or dismantle the targeted groups.] This method of psychological operation is disseminated through face-to-face communication or television, audio media, newspaper, books, and magazine. The weapon is not in the media used, but the message that it carries and how the messages affect the recipient. Sound familiar doesn't it Black people? This method of psychological operation works by, first, simply learning everything about the targeted group, their beliefs, likes, dislikes, strengths, and vulnerabilities. Once you know what motivates your target, you are ready to begin psychological operations against them.

We have completed a review of the U.S. government's history and methods of applying psychological operations of influence, most particularly its method of utilizing the national media to disseminate domestic psychological operations to suppress targeted groups. The intention is to now show in a constructive manner rather than an accusatory manner that, since the means of economic and political control used in the past under the pretext of national interest are no longer morally and socially acceptable, the U.S. governmental and societal capitalist elites have modified their methods of exploiting and suppressing its Black population into a form more socially acceptable with contemporary times through the usage of psychological warfare operations.

The uses to which psychological warfare can be applied are virtually unlimited. For the U.S. Government also uses psychological operations to assist in the sales of arms and weaponry. The United States Government is the world's largest arms dealer, and to ensure that these sales continue, it often resorts to the unethical usage of psychological operations. Here is an example of how such an implementation may be done. Let us say, for example, that an African kingdom that has purchased arms in the past from the U.S. Government has now decided that there no longer exists any threat from its neighboring kingdoms and therefore elects to discontinue their spending of millions of dollars on unneeded weaponry. The U.S. Government may respond to this refusal to continue buying their arms by themselves creating a threat of imminent war between the targeted kingdom and its neighboring African kingdoms. This would be done by employing Special Forces and other types of espionage specialist to plant lies and rumors of war thus igniting conflict and distrust between the targeted African kingdom and its neighboring kingdoms which often results in both empires now buying arms from the U.S. Government.

Although the usage of psychological warfare began within a military setting, it was eventually realized by governmental and societal elites that this method of psychological warfare could be useful for totally controlling society. Therefore, psychological warfare technology evolved from its military usage against foreign enemies to being used to control society domestically. Today, the U.S. government, like many other developed nations, conducts planned campaigns of extensive strategic psychological operations through the national media to influence the perception and climate of the nation towards the attainment of its governmental objectives.

Participating federal agencies may include the National Security Council, The Office of Strategic Council, The Central Intelligence Agency, and The Federal Bureau of Investigations. However, when it is executed domestically it is more often commonly referred to by governmental and military officials as psychological operations [PSYOPs] rather than Psychological Warfare.

Psychological warfare can also be used to create a brazen deception in order to create a pretext for war with the true intent of achieving global geo-political objectives. This is where governmental agents secretly create or allow terrorism in the United States for the purpose of mobilizing public opinion in favor of the government's objectives. Many people have compared this example to those actions taken by the U.S. government after the September 11, 2001 attack on America wherein several terrorists high-jacked four American commercial air liners and crashed them into strategic targets in Washington , D.C. and New York , NY . For although all ties to the terrorist attack pointed towards Afghanistan and Saudi Arabia and given that all the historic evidence showed that Saddam Hussein was a vigorous arch enemy of Al Qaeda, President Bush, in his official speech to the nation responding to the atrocious attack, redirected the nation's attentions towards Iraq as a means of fighting the terrorism of Al Qaeda. This strategic operation of influence gained the U.S Government the support of the nation that it needed to send thousands of its service members to war under the pretext of being a war on terrorism, while in fact it successfully met the U.S. objective of what appears to have been more about securing its interest in the Iraq oil wells. The targets, then, were the minds of the entire American population, our military troops and the civilian population. [For those readers that find this premise too difficult to accept, I strongly suggest that you read a 1962 governmental document now unclassified and provided under the freedom of information act entitled "Operation North Woods" documenting a governmental plan to take a civilian aircraft, replace it with an automatic unmanned aircraft, then shoot it down and blame the incident on Cuba in order to go to war.]

The preceding example of U.S. government usage of psychological warfare to influence the nation is only a single act among a long list of many conducted by the U.S. Government. Every act of the government has a psychological impact, and it is ongoing from President Bush's media coverage stunt where he landed upon a U.S. Naval battle carrier dressed as a pilot, to the U.S. soldiers pulling down the statue of Saddam Hussein in Iraq, to the staged rescue of Jessica Lynch. These strategies are all part of the sophisticated system of psychological warfare, and they are on-going, all around us, all of the time. To learn more or to get a copy of this book "the Black Matrix please to www.divineblack truth.org

---

Check out the hottest 2008 models today at Yahoo! Autos.

| 23140|2007-09-22 11:38:41|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: King Tut Not Black Enough, Protesters Say|

Another thing: oral tradition can also be preserved well in non-poetic form especially when bound together with ritual.

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23141|2007-09-22 11:53:35|cristofori whitakara|Re: King Tut Not Black Enough, Protesters Say|

and there is no connection between the Ebro river of the Canaanite sailors to Spain and the word Ibriy being used to tell of an action seen by those in Canaan when a person was crossing over the Jordan river?

Djehuti Sundaka wrote:

The first person to call the character Abraham by the term was the person who wrote the words of Genesis 14:13 dating to c. 770 BCE, not the indigenous people of Kna'an who never knew of any such person. An ethnic name was simply invented by this person just as "tribal" names such as 'Lewiy' and 'Yehwdah' had been invented/derived from the words 'join' and 'praise'.

Djehuti Sundaka

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, cristofori whitakara wrote:

>

> I think that is very interesting that you say that the word is fictitious. The first people to call Abram/Abraham that term was the Canaanites. The word was used for him because of what he was doing. When he crossed the Jordan river from Iraq into the land where the Canaanites lived they said he was Ibriy or crossing over the river. I find it interesting also that in Spain there is a river called Ebro(Ibriy?) and it is written that the Phoenicians (Canaanites) were present there also. Are we saying that a verb became an ethnic group then?

>

> Djehuti Sundaka wrote: "Hebrew" or actually "Ibriy" is a designation not found to predate > the J-source i.e. c. 770 BCE. It may have been derived from the > word 'hapiru' which was a socioeconomic term, not an ethnic one.
> Nevertheless, as a socioeconomic entity, such people in Kna'an were > composed of the predominate ethnicity of the land, that ethnicity
> being the Khurri (Hurrians) during the New Kingdom period. Such > people were rebellious individuals living on the fringes of urban > society and often employed as mercenaries. YisraEl had probably > formed from a group centered around Shechem and originating from > rural hill country inhabitants between Shechem and Megidow. In > short, "Hebrew" is a fictitious ethnic designation.
>

> Djehuti Sundaka

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:

>>

>> SO, this would imply the Jews are recent relative to Egypt.

>> What about the origins of the Hebrews?

>> Is this, in your opinion, an Egyptian group that separated from

> Egypt,

>> perhaps via Tell el Amarna?

>>

>> Meninarmer

>>

>> On Sat, 2007-09-08 at 17:35 +0000, Djehuti Sundaka wrote:

>>> Indications imply that the original `Jews' (i.e. the specific

> ethnic

>>> element to have designated themselves as `Yehwdah') had been non-

>>> Semitic, Aryan influenced, anti-Semites. Confirmation of the non-

>>> Semitic element is provided by genetic studies showing > the "Cohen

>>> modal haplotype" of Jewish priests to be of Northeast Caucasian >>> extraction dating back to c. 1000 BCE (around the time of > Zadowq).

>>> In contrast with the overall Arab (i.e. Semitic) population, the

>>> genes of both Palestinians and the global Jewish population in >>> general also reveal that their greatest ethnic affiliation is

> with

>>> the non-Semitic people known as the Kurds. However, though a > strong

>>> patrilineal affiliation with the Kurds is genetically

> established, a >>> strong maternal affiliation found in the mtDNA of Palestinians,

>>> Shomeriym (Samaritans) , and Iraqi Jews, indicates an ancient > female

>>> Jewish origin from the indigenous women of Kna'an (cf. Human >>> Mutation 24:248-260, 2004). The people of YisraEl and Yehwdah

> had

>>> therefore been a people descended from northern non-Semitic men

> and >>> indigenous Semitic women. The `original Jews' had been the > southern

> > > Kna'an highlanders of patrilineal Khurri descent. Such an > ancestry
> > > had perhaps been implied by the J-writer's story of the sons
of > > > YisraEl leaving Kharran to dwell at Shechem only to end up
> killing
> > > all the males of Shechem while taking possession of their women > > > (Genesis 34:25-29, cf. Deuteronomy 21:10-13). This inference
is > > > even more explicit in the J-writer's obtrusive story of Yehwdah
> only > > > having sons by two Kna'aniy women (Genesis 38:2-6, 38:18).
> > >
> > > The Shechem centered hapiru to have eventually called > > > themselves "YisraEl" (i.e. El-Contends) had probably come into > being > > > in the rural highlands between Shechem and Megidow (during the > reign
> > > of Amonemhat III cf. "Egypt, Canaan, And Israel In Ancient > Times"
> > > p. 269, 274) and had probably become "YisraEl" during the great > > > rebellion in the fifth year of Ramesses II following the Battle
> of > > > Qadesh. Like the people of Yerushalayim, the people of YisraEl
> had > > > probably been of predominate Khurri descent. This identification
> is > > > supported by the fact that the Khurri had composed roughly 40%
> of
> > > the Kna'an population during the New Kingdom making it the > single > > > largest ethnicity of the land. During the 18th Dynasty the > entire > > > region had been named after them in becoming known as the land
> of > > > the Kharw (Khurri) while at the beginning of the 22nd Dynasty,
a > > > people living in an area conforming to the biblical borders of > > > Yosef had been specifically referred to as "Asiatics of the > army of > > > Mitanni".

>>>
>>> Djehuti Sundaka
>>>
>>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, cristofori whitakara
>>> wrote:
>>>>
>>>> could the denial be from the fact that is the ancient
> egyptians >>> were black and the jews lived in that country for over 400
years
>>> thus their being black which would cause settlement problems
in >>> israel by white europeans jews with no connection to jacob > (israel)
>>> or joseph a governor of egypt?
>>>>
>>>> Manu Ampim wrote: Greetings Fatima,
>>>>
>>>> I fully agree with your comments. The denial of ancient
Egypt
>>> as a black African civilization is pathological. I too agree
> with
>>> the four demands of the coalition. I advised that the > coalition's
>>> demand #1 should include that the fake 2005 image of "King Tut"
> be >>> removed from the exhibit altogether. I was informed that this >>> suggestion will be added.
>>>>
>>>> Advancing the work,
>>>>
>>>> Manu Ampim
>>>>
>>>> "Primary research is the greatest weapon against the
> distortion
>>> of African culture & history." - MA
>>>>
>>>> -----
>>>>
>>>>
>>>>
>>>>
>>>>
>>>> I agree with their demands, I am not black but I think its
> time
>>> to reveal the truth and use the common sense.

>>>> I think some people, specially the ones that have been making >>> movies about ancient Egypt in Hollywood scoffs at ancient Egyptians >>> because they created this image of ancient Egyptians being blonde/brunette and blue eyed and it caused ignorance in people
> so
>>> they take it as a real fact instead of fiction because in the end >>> that's what they want us to believe because in the end they are racist because their stereotype of being beautiful is someone white
>>> not black.
>>>>
>>>> And now Arabs who occupied Egypt try to make us believe that ancient Egyptians were arabs and not blacks because they want to >>> have all the credits about the building of the pyramids, monuments, >>> etc. I am not against arabs I have some arab friends but I have
> to >>> admit that they can have a big ego.
>>>>
>>>> But that's other story what I try to say is that we need to study by ourselves the history and geography and if we use the common sense we could know that Egypt is in the African continent
>>> and in the pharaonic times the world was not globalized as today, >>> now we can find a Japanese in Argentina, a Moroccan in United Stated, etc. because now we can travel easily but in the past it
> was >>> not easy so if Egypt is in Africa obviously the people in Egypt
> was
>>> black!
>>>>
>>>> I don't see something wrong with ancient Egyptians being black >>> in the end they are more intelligent, clever, creatives than anyone >>> of other race.

>>>>
>>>> Sorry for my english, but it is not my primary language.
>>>>
>>>> Fatima
>>>>
>>>>
>>>>
>>>>
>>>> -----
>>>>
>>>>
>>>>
>>>> The coalition has presented officials of the museum with a
> list
>>> of demands: 1) A public apology for not properly representing > King
>>> Tut as an African and falsely representing Kemet (ancient Egypt)
> as >>> non-African; 2) Develop and display a historically, factual
and
>>> scientific exhibit of the African foundation and identity of >>> dynastic Kemet; 3) Display the pioneering accomplishments of
> African >>> Nile Valley Civilization; and 4) Document and display the
> research
>>> and accomplishments of the renowned African scholar Cheikh Anta
> Diop
>>> in scientifically proving that Kemet was an African civilization.
>>>>
>>>>
>>>>
>>>>
>>>>
>>>>
>>>>
>>>> -----
>>>> Park yourself in front of a world of choices in alternative
>>> vehicles.
>>>> Visit the Yahoo! Auto Green Center.
>>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>

>>>

>>>

>>

>

>

>

>

>

>

> -----

> Need a vacation? Get great deals to amazing places on Yahoo!

Travel.

>

---

Shape Yahoo! in your own image. Join our Network Research Panel today!

| 23142|2007-09-22 17:55:09|Djehuti Sundaka|Re: King Tut Not Black Enough, Protesters Say|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala"

wrote:

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Djehuti Sundaka"

> wrote:

>>

>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala"

>> wrote:

>>>

>>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Djehuti Sundaka"

>>> wrote:

>>>>

>>>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala"

>>>> wrote:

>

>

>>

>> Unless you consider El-Elyown and Asherah to have been historical >> characters, Abraham and Sarah, the derivatives of such characters,

>> couldn't have been historical.

>>

>

> You're not understanding my point.

>

> The examples I give show evidence of earlier mythical themes and > motifs that are attached to historical persons through the course of > time.

>
> This has been discussed in mythological literature, for example, the > critiques of Raglan's hypothesis on the hero theme.
>
> So, regardless of whether El or Asherah were historical, and they > could also possibly have some connection with historical characters, > it has no bearing on Abraham and Sarah. These themes could have been > attached to them as part of a natural process seen in many cultures.

If you're trying to argue that mythical themes can be attached to characters, I have no argument against that. Such was done with characters such as Melkart and Herakles who, like El-Elyown/Abraham and Asherah/Sarah, are mythical characters in mythical stories.

>
>
>
> >
> > No, it's not. As pointed out before, there is no "Song of Abraham"

> > or any other evidence of an oral tradition of him that had been > > written down. You pointed out Genesis 49 which has nothing to do > > with Abraham as it applies to Yaaqob (Jacob) and is dated no

earlier > > than the J-source which presents it (i.e. c. 770 BCE).
>
> You stated that there are no poetry or songs related to Abraham

which > is simply wrong. For example I also have the example of Melchizedek's > blessing.

No, as can be plainly read, I said

"there is no "Song of Abraham" or any other evidence of an oral tradition of him that had been written down."

Show me "The Song of Abraham" that recounts his deeds and/or life.
Show me the modern scholar who dates the words of Genesis 14:18-20 to before the J-writer or even before the Redactor for that matter.

>

> And how can Jacob have "nothing to do with Abraham?" Genesis is our > source for Abraham and it shows evidence of poetic structure in > various places along with mixed literary types, usually considered > evidence of compilation from different sources. As I recall you > consider Jacob and even most of the Hebrew tribes also as new fiction

> created during the writing phase of the Old Testament.

I didn't say "Jacob" had "nothing to do with Abraham". I said

"...Genesis 49 which has nothing to do with Abraham as it applies to Yaaqob (Jacob)..."

That is a simple fact of the text.

>

> And why are you referring to "J-source," which is one of the scholarly > suppositions on the layering of Genesis.

>

> This layering itself suggests derivation from previous traditions > according to those who came up with the theories. If there were > long-standing previous traditions it seems unlikely that someone is > going to suggest an ancestral patriarch out of the blue.

No, the layering itself only shows the development of a literary tradition, not previous unknown oral ones. Creating ancestors out of the blue is what eponymous ancestors is all about. Genesis 10 is full of such creations just as the Io/Danaos myth is. Thus, creating ancestors out of the blue was quite widespread and not at all unlikely.

>
> You have not actually pointed out what type of "evidence" would be > required to suggest a previous oral tradition other than song or > poetry form. Genesis in fact shows evidence of poetic structure, so > its narrative can be seen as taken from oral traditions without > necessarily copying those traditions in all cases (the standard view).

Literature, be it poetry or prose, can be dated by the language used in it. That's how verses, such as Exodus 15:21, Numbers 10:35-36, 21:15, 21:18, 21:27-30, and most of Judges 5, can be declared to have come from sources originating c. 1080 BCE and the literature it's incorporated into can be declared to have come from a much later time. In contrast, no poetic structure to be found in Genesis can be shown to have predated the prose it was created in. Nothing of the narrative can be shown to have been taken from any oral traditions. So, if the findings of linguistic analysis pertaining to a period within the past 5000 years are mere opinion, it's a very consistent and widespread scholarly "opinion".

>
> You now suggest that the poetic structure does not indicate any date > older than the source that "presents it" [in written form] so it seems

> you really don't consider this "evidence" at all.
>
> The fact of the matter is that you're really expressing an opinion, > which can't be established with the available evidence. We can't say > that Abraham is historical nor can we say that he is fictional with > any confidence. Your suggestion that there is "no evidence" that > Abraham could have come from previous oral traditions because there

is > no poetry or song connected with his account is simply not correct.

>

> First of all, there doesn't have to be any "evidence" since the > narrator can take facts from oral traditions without reproducing the > literary style. So it's an impossible task to say there were no > previous poems, chants, genealogies, etc.

It's an impossible task to make claims for oral traditions of which there is no evidence. Without evidence, all there can be is presumption and baseless supposition.

>

> Secondly, there is actual evidence of poetic form in the Genesis > account which positively suggests the possibility of previous oral > tradition.

Now, that's an opinion.

>

>

> Here is another example of poetic structure including parallelism in > Genesis 16 regarding Sarah, Hagar and the birth of Ishmael.

>

> 16:11 The angel of the Lord said to her further, "Behold, you are > with child, And you will bear a son; And you shall call his name > Ishmael, Because the Lord has given heed to your affliction.

>

> 16:12 "He will be a wild donkey of a man, His hand will be against > everyone, And everyone's hand will be against him; And he will live > to the east of all his brothers."

Now let's see something in Genesis dated before the 8th century BCE.

Djehuti Sundaka

>

> Regards,

> Paul Kekai Manansala

>

| 23143|2007-09-22 18:18:54|Djehuti Sundaka|Re: King Tut Not Black Enough, Protesters Say|
I haven't come across anything suggesting that the name 'Ebro' is of Kna'aniy derivation. The pre-Indo-European indigenous term for 'river' is speculated to be similar to 'ibar' based upon the Euskara (Basque) word, rendered as 'Iber' by the Hellenes and 'Iberus' by the Latins.

Djehuti Sundaka

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, cristofori whitakara
wrote:

>

> and there is no connection between the Ebro river of the Canaanite sailors to Spain and the word Ibriy being used to tell of an action seen by those in Canaan when a person was crossing over the Jordan river?

>

> Djehuti Sundaka wrote: The first person to call the character Abraham by the term was the > person who wrote the words of Genesis 14:13 dating to c. 770 BCE,

> not the indigenous people of Kna'an who never knew of any such > person. An ethnic name was simply invented by this person just > as "tribal" names such as 'Lewiy' and 'Yehwdah' had been > invented/derived from the words 'join' and 'praise'.

>

> Djehuti Sundaka

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, cristofori whitakara

> wrote:

>>

>> i think that is very interesting that you say that the word is > fictitious. The first people to call abram/abraham that term was > the Canaanites. The word was used for him because of what he was > doing. When he crossed the Jordan river from Iraq into the land > where the Canaanites lived they said he was Ibriy or crossing over > the river. I find it interesting also that in Spain there is a river

> called Ebro(Ibriy?) and it is written that the Phoenicians > (Canaanites) were present there also. Are we saying that a verb > became an ethnic group then?

>>

>> Djehuti Sundaka wrote: "Hebrew" or > actually "Ibriy" is a designation not found to predate
>> the J-source i.e. c. 770 BCE. It may have been derived from the >> word 'hapiru' which was a socioeconomic term, not an ethnic one.
>> Nevertheless, as a socioeconomic entity, such people in Kna'an
> were >> composed of the predominate ethnicity of the land, that ethnicity
>> being the Khurri (Hurrians) during the New Kingdom period. Such >> people were rebellious individuals living on the fringes of urban >> society and often employed as mercenaries. YisraEl had probably >> formed from a group centered around Shechem and originating from >> rural hill country inhabitants between Shechem and Megiddo. In >> short, "Hebrew" is a fictitious ethnic designation.

>>

>> Djehuti Sundaka

>>

>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:

>>>

>>> SO, this would imply the Jews are recent relative to Egypt.

>>> What about the origins of the Hebrews?

>>> Is this, in your opinion, an Egyptian group that separated from >> Egypt,

>>> perhaps via Tell el Amarna?

>>>

>>> Meninarmar

>>>

>>> On Sat, 2007-09-08 at 17:35 +0000, Djehuti Sundaka wrote:

>>>> Indications imply that the original 'Jews' (i.e. the specific >> ethnic >>>> element to have designated themselves as 'Yehwdah') had been

> non-

>>>> Semitic, Aryan influenced, anti-Semites. Confirmation of the > non-

>>>> Semitic element is provided by genetic studies showing
>> the "Cohen

>>>> modal haplotype" of Jewish priests to be of Northeast

> Caucasian

>>>> extraction dating back to c. 1000 BCE (around the time of > > Zadowq).

 > > > In contrast with the overall Arab (i.e. Semitic) population,
 > the > > > genes of both Palestinians and the global Jewish population

 in > > > general also reveal that their greatest ethnic affiliation is
 > > with > > > the non-Semitic people known as the Kurds. However, though a > > strong
 > > > patrilineal affiliation with the Kurds is genetically
 > > established, a > > > strong maternal affiliation found in the mtDNA of > Palestinians,
 > > > Shomeriym (Samaritans), and Iraqi Jews, indicates an ancient
 > > female
 > > > Jewish origin from the indigenous women of Kna'an (cf. Human > > > Mutation 24:248-260, 2004). The people of YisraEl and Yehwdah
 > > had > > > therefore been a people descended from northern non-Semitic > men
 > > and > > > indigenous Semitic women. The `original Jews' had been the > > southern > > > Kna'an highlanders of patrilineal Khurri descent. Such an > > ancestry
 > > > had perhaps been implied by the J-writer's story of the sons
 > of > > > YisraEl leaving Kharran to dwell at Shechem only to end up
 > > killing
 > > > all the males of Shechem while taking possession of their > women
 > > > (Genesis 34:25-29, cf. Deuteronomy 21:10-13). This inference
 > is > > > even more explicit in the J-writer's obtrusive story of > Yehwdah
 > > only > > > having sons by two Kna'aniy women (Genesis 38:2-6, 38:18).
 > > >
 > > > The Shechem centered hapiru to have eventually called > > > themselves "YisraEl" (i.e. El-Contends) had probably come

 into
 > > being > > > in the rural highlands between Shechem and Megidow (during

the

> > reign

> > > of Amonhotep III cf. "Egypt, Canaan, And Israel In Ancient Times"

> > > > p. 269, 274) and had probably become "YisraEl" during the great > > > > rebellion in the fifth year of Ramesses II following the Battle

> > of

> > > > Qadesh. Like the people of Yerushalayim, the people of

YisraEl

> > had > > > > probably been of predominate Hurri descent. This identification

> > is > > > > supported by the fact that the Hurri had composed roughly 40%

> > of

> > > > the Kna'an population during the New Kingdom making it the single > > > > largest ethnicity of the land. During the 18th Dynasty the entire > > > > region had been named after them in becoming known as the land

> > of

> > > > the Kharw (Hurri) while at the beginning of the 22nd

Dynasty,

> a > > > > people living in an area conforming to the biblical borders

of > > > > Yowsef had been specifically referred to as "Asiatics of the army of > > > > Mitanni".

> > > >

> > > > Djehuti Sundaka

> > > >

> > > > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, cristofori whitakara

> > > > wrote:

> > > > >

> > > > > could the denial be from the fact that is the ancient

> > egyptians

>>>> were black and the jews lived in that country for over 400
> years
>>>> thus their being black which would cause settlement problems
> in >>>> israel by white europeans jews with no connection to jacob >> (israel)
>>>> or joseph a governor of egypt?
>>>>>
>>>>> Manu Ampim wrote: Greetings Fatima,
>>>>>
>>>>> I fully agree with your comments. The denial of ancient
> Egypt
>>>> as a black African civilization is pathological. I too agree
>> with
>>>> the four demands of the coalition. I advised that the >> coalition's
>>>> demand #1 should include that the fake 2005 image of "King > Tut"
>> be >>>> removed from the exhibit altogether. I was informed that this >>>> suggestion will be added.
>>>>>
>>>>> Advancing the work,
>>>>>
>>>>> Manu Ampim
>>>>>
>>>>> "Primary research is the greatest weapon against the
>> distortion
>>>> of African culture & history." - MA
>>>>>
>>>>> -----
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>> I agree with their demands, I am not black but I think its
>> time
>>>> to reveal the truth and use the common sense.
>>>>> I think some people, specially the ones that have been > making
>>>> movies about ancient Egypt in Hollywood scoffs at ancient >> Egyptians
>>>> because they created this image of ancient Egyptians being >>>> blonde/brunette and blue eyed and it caused ignorance in > people
>> so >>>> they take it as a real fact instead of fiction because in the >> end

>>>> that's what they want us to believe because in the end they
> are >>>> racist because their stereotype of being beautiful is someone
>> white
>>>> not black.
>>>>>
>>>>> And now Arabs who occupied Egypt try to make us believe

that >>>> ancient Egyptians were arabs and not blacks because they want

> to >>>> have all the credits about the building of the pyramids,
>> monuments,
>>>> etc. I am not against arabs I have some arab friends but I > have
>> to >>>> admit that they can have a big ego.
>>>>>
>>>>> But that's other story what I try to say is that we need to >>>> study by ourselves the history and geography and if we use

the

>>>> common sense we could know that Egypt is in the African >> continent
>>>> and in the pharaonic times the world was not globalized as
>> today,
>>>> now we can find a Japanese in Argentina, a Moroccan in United >>>> States, etc. because now we can travel easily but in the past > it
>> was >>>> not easy so if Egypt is in Africa obviously the people in > Egypt
>> was
>>>> black!
>>>>>
>>>>> I don't see something wrong with ancient Egyptians being
> black
>>>> in the end they are more intelligent, clever, creatives than >> anyone
>>>> of other race.
>>>>>
>>>>> Sorry for my english, but it is not my primary language.
>>>>>
>>>>> Fatima

[illegible]

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> > -----

> > Need a vacation? Get great deals to amazing places on Yahoo!

> Travel.

> >

>

>

>

>

>

>

> -----

> Shape Yahoo! in your own image. Join our Network Research Panel

today!

>

| 23144|2007-09-22 21:36:57|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: King Tut Not Black Enough, Protesters Say|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Djehuti Sundaka"

wrote:

>

>

> No, as can be plainly read, I said

>

> "there is no "Song of Abraham" or any other evidence of an oral > tradition of him that had been written down."

>

That's what you said in your last message. In a previous message you said:

"There is nothing about the character Abraham that reflects an oral history. Such history is preserved in song and poems and no such oral expressions exist for Abraham prior to his literary existence."

> Show me "The Song of Abraham" that recounts his deeds and/or life.

>

You just came up with the "Song of Abraham" stuff after I showed you were wrong on poetry or "oral expressions" regarding Abraham.

- > Show me the modern scholar who dates the words of Genesis 14:18-20 to
- > before the J-writer or even before the Redactor for that matter.
- >
- >

Again, you're just coming up with new stuff to defend your thesis. Why should I have to come up with a "modern scholar" for my views?

Argument by authority?

The fact is the vast majority of modern scholars know that Genesis incorporates all kinds of earlier material. Even you believe that as shown by your earlier statements.

- > >
- > > You have not actually pointed out what type of "evidence" would be
- > > required to suggest a previous oral tradition other than song or
- > > poetry form. Genesis in fact shows evidence of poetic structure, so
- > > its narrative can be seen as taken from oral traditions without
- > > necessarily copying those traditions in all cases (the standard
- > view).
- >
- >
- >
- > Literature, be it poetry or prose, can be dated by the language used
- > in it. That's how verses, such as Exodus 15:21, Numbers 10:35-36,
- > 21:15, 21:18, 21:27-30, and most of Judges 5, can be declared to have
- > come from sources originating c. 1080 BCE and the literature it's
- > incorporated into can be declared to have come from a much later
- > time.

Generally only the latter parts of the Old Testament are dated using language and then only rarely.

You cannot date using language when there are no examples of earlier types of literature!

Also, the dates given for sources are compilation dates not the dates of the earliest material in those sources. They represent the latest date in which that source was "fixed" or written down.

Almost every modern scholar believes the different sources used by the supposed "Redactor" were taken from earlier traditions.

> In contrast, no poetic structure to be found in Genesis can be > shown to have predated the prose it was created in. Nothing of the > narrative can be shown to have been taken from any oral traditions.
> So, if the findings of linguistic analysis pertaining to a period > within the past 5000 years are mere opinion, it's a very consistent > and widespread scholarly "opinion".
>

You have no Hebrew literary analysis that goes back "5000 years."

There are no dates for the prose or other literary styles used in Genesis that are meaningful.

The dating of these works is mainly accomplished by the *content* in relation to the known cultural context. Mostly the dates are widely estimated from certain cultural practices described in those texts.

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23145|2007-09-22 22:15:16|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: King Tut Not Black Enough, Protesters Say|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Djehuti Sundaka"

wrote:

>
>

>

> It's an impossible task to make claims for oral traditions of which > there is no evidence. Without evidence, all there can be is > presumption and baseless supposition.
>

Also, I should say that is exactly what I am saying. There could have been oral traditions or maybe not.

It's your supposition that there were definitely no oral traditions that is baseless.

There is not even any proof that there was a "J-writer" at all.

That's why they call it the "Documentary Hypothesis!"

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23146|2007-09-23 11:48:22|Djehuti Sundaka|Re: King Tut Not Black Enough, Protesters Say|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala"

wrote:

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Djehuti Sundaka"

> wrote:

>>

>>

>> No, as can be plainly read, I said

>>

>> "there is no "Song of Abraham" or any other evidence of an oral >> tradition of him that had been written down."

>>

>

> That's what you said in your last message. In a previous message

you

> said:

>

> "There is nothing about the character Abraham that > reflects an oral history. Such history is preserved in song and

> poems and no such oral expressions exist for Abraham prior to his > literary existence."

>

>

>> Show me "The Song of Abraham" that recounts his deeds and/or life.

>>

>

> You just came up with the "Song of Abraham" stuff after I showed you > were wrong on poetry or "oral expressions" regarding Abraham.

Did you even read what you quoted of me? As you clearly presented, I said

"...no such oral expressions exist for Abraham PRIOR TO HIS LITERARY EXISTENCE."

So at what point have you shown me to be wrong on that?

>

> > Show me the modern scholar who dates the words of Genesis 14:18-

20 to > > before the J-writer or even before the Redactor for that matter.

> >

> >

>

> Again, you're just coming up with new stuff to defend your thesis.

Why > should I have to come up with a "modern scholar" for my views?

>

> Argument by authority?

>

> The fact is the vast majority of modern scholars know that Genesis > incorporates all kinds of earlier material. Even you believe that as > shown by your earlier statements.

Why should you have to come up with a "modern scholar" for your views? Precisely because of the statement you've just made.

Unsubstantiated claims of what a majority of scholars believes.

Either you have the ability to date the material in question to a time that substantiates your claims or you know of scholars who can do so or you have nothing but your opinion.

Ironically, there just happens to be a discussion on the "Biblical-Studies" list with scholars exposing the outdated view of pre-literary biblical oral sources that are mainly being claimed by theologians who try to insist upon historicity for biblical stories.

You should really check it out if you have the time. It's moderated by Jim West who himself is a theologian but also has actual scholars on it.

>
> > >
> > > You have not actually pointed out what type of "evidence" would

be > > > required to suggest a previous oral tradition other than song or > > > poetry form. Genesis in fact shows evidence of poetic structure, so

> > > its narrative can be seen as taken from oral traditions without > > > necessarily copying those traditions in all cases (the standard > > view).

> >

> >

> >

> > Literature, be it poetry or prose, can be dated by the language used > > in it. That's how verses, such as Exodus 15:21, Numbers 10:35-

36,

> > 21:15, 21:18, 21:27-30, and most of Judges 5, can be declared to have > > come from sources originating c. 1080 BCE and the literature it's > > incorporated into can be declared to have come from a much later > > time.

>

>

>

> Generally only the latter parts of the Old Testament are dated using > language and then only rarely.

Simply not true.

>

> You cannot date using language when there are no examples of earlier > types of literature!

Who said there weren't earlier examples?

>

> Also, the dates given for sources are compilation dates not the dates > of the earliest material in those sources. They represent the latest

> date in which that source was "fixed" or written down.

>

> Almost every modern scholar believes the different sources used by

the > supposed "Redactor" were taken from earlier traditions.

And yet the Genesis material in question neither shows up in any of the earlier traditions nor can be linguistically dated to before the Redactor.

>

> > In contrast, no poetic structure to be found in Genesis can be > > shown to have predated the prose it was created in. Nothing of

the > > narrative can be shown to have been taken from any oral traditions.

> > So, if the findings of linguistic analysis pertaining to a period > > within the past 5000 years are mere opinion, it's a very consistent > > and widespread scholarly "opinion".

> >

>

>

> You have no Hebrew literary analysis that goes back "5000 years."

Again, you don't seem to be reading what I'm saying. I clearly said

"...WITHIN the past 5000 years..."

which clearly covers any range of time in which there had been such writings.

- >
- > There are no dates for the prose or other literary styles used in
- > Genesis that are meaningful.
- >
- > The dating of these works is mainly accomplished by the *content* in
- > relation to the known cultural context. Mostly the dates are widely
- > estimated from certain cultural practices described in those texts.
- >
- > Regards,
- > Paul Kekai Manansala
- >

Your opinion on the matter differs from those who actually do the work on the subject. If it were true, scholars would never have been able to date the poetic material I've already pointed out as being far older than the rest of the material in the Bible. Mere content in relation to the known cultural context doesn't distinguish that literature from its surrounding literature.

Also see "The Evidence of Language in Dating the Priestly Code" by Avi Hurvitz.

Djehuti Sundaka

| 23147|2007-09-23 12:33:48|Djehuti Sundaka|Re: King Tut Not Black Enough, Protesters Say|
--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala"
wrote:

- >
- > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Djehuti Sundaka"
- > wrote:
- >>
- >>
- >
- >

>

> >

> > It's an impossible task to make claims for oral traditions of

which

> > there is no evidence. Without evidence, all there can be is > > presumption and baseless supposition.

> >

>

>

> Also, I should say that is exactly what I am saying. There could have > been oral traditions or maybe not.

Oral traditions of what? What was a supposed person being remembered for? Prostituting his wife to foreign kings by pretending to be her brother? Attempting to murder his own son? What would have historically merited an oral memorial for such a person (especially since the oral memorials of this person's deeds weren't recited in the stories about him)?

And whose ancestor was he? He certainly wasn't the ancestor of the people of YisraEl. The Jews and Palestinians are genetically shown to have been descended from the men of the Mitanni invasion to have taken place at the beginning of the New Kingdom and the indigenous women of Kna'an. No single man had fathered those people so just who (i.e. what people) is Abraham supposed to have really been the father of?

>

> It's your supposition that there were definitely no oral traditions > that is baseless.

Baseless would imply no evidence to the contrary. But as I've shown, there are intercultural literary correspondances that reveal a previous common literary source.

- >
- > There is not even any proof that there was a "J-writer" at all.
- >
- > That's why they call it the "Documentary Hypothesis!"

There's no proof of the identity of the J-writer or of many ancient writers for that matter, that certainly doesn't mean they didn't exist nor has one has anyone ever come up with a reasonable explanation as to why literary events in the narrative are repeated and even inconsistently presented within the same text if it were written by a single hand.

Story A

When they saw him from a distance and before he came close to them, they plotted against him to put him to death. But Rewben heard and rescued him out of their hands and said, "Let us not take his life." Rewben further said to them, "Shed no blood. Throw him into this pit that is in the wilderness, but do not lay hands upon him" (that he might rescue him out of their hands and restore him to his father). And they took him and threw him into the pit. Now the pit was empty, without any water in it. Then they sat down to eat a meal. Then some Midyaniy traders passed by, so they pulled him up and lifted Yowsef out of the pit. Now Rewben returned to the pit, and behold, Yowsef was not in the pit; so he tore his garments. And he returned to his brothers and said, "The boy is not; as for me, where am I to go?" Meanwhile, the Midyaniym sold him in Egypt to Powtiyfar, Pharaoh's officer, the captain of the bodyguard.

Story B

And they said to one another, "Here comes this dreamer! Now then, come and let us kill him and throw him into one of the pits; and we will say, 'A wild beast devoured him.' Then let us see what will become of his dreams!" So it came about, when Yowsef reached his brothers, that they stripped Yowsef of his tunic, the varicolored tunic that was on him:

And as they raised their eyes and looked, behold, a caravan of YishmaEliym was coming from Gilead with their camels bearing aromatic gum and balm and myrrh on their way to bring them down to Egypt. And Yehwdah said to his brothers, "What profit is it for us to kill our brother and cover up his blood? Come and let us sell him to the YishmaEliym and not lay our hands on him; for he is our brother, our flesh." And his brothers listened to him and sold him to the YishmaEliym for twenty shekels of silver. Thus they brought Yowsef into Egypt.

So they took Yowsef's tunic, and slaughtered a male goat, and dipped the tunic in the blood; and they sent the varicolored tunic and brought it to their father and said, "We found this; please examine to see whether it is your son's tunic or not." Then he examined it and said, "It is my son's tunic. A wild beast has devoured him; Yowsef has surely been torn to pieces!" So Yaaqob tore his clothes, and put sackcloth on his loins, and mourned for his son many days. Then all his sons and all his daughters arose to comfort him, but he refused to be comforted. And he said, "Surely I will go down to Sheowl in mourning for my son." So his father wept for him. Now Yowsef had been taken down to Egypt; and Powtiyfar, an Egyptian officer of Pharaoh, the captain of the bodyguard, bought him from the YishmaEliym who had taken him down there.

Story C

When they saw him from a distance and before he came close to them, they plotted against him to put him to death.

And they said to one another, "Here comes this dreamer! Now then, come and let us kill him and throw him into one of the pits; and we will say, 'A wild beast devoured him.' Then let us see what will become of his dreams!"

But Rewben heard and rescued him out of their hands and said, "Let us not take his life."

Rewben further said to them, "Shed no blood. Throw him into this pit that is in the wilderness, but do not lay hands upon him" (that he might rescue him out of their hands and restore him to his father).

So it came about, when Yowsef reached his brothers, that they stripped Yowsef of his tunic, the varicolored tunic that was on him:

And they took him and threw him into the pit. Now the pit was empty, without any water in it. Then they sat down to eat a meal.

And as they raised their eyes and looked, behold, a caravan of YishmaEliym was coming from Gilead with their camels bearing aromatic gum and balm and myrrh on their way to bring them down to Egypt. And Yehwdah said to his brothers, "What profit is it for us to kill our brother and cover up his blood? Come and let us sell him to the YishmaEliym and not lay our hands on him; for he is our brother, our flesh." And his brothers listened to him.

Then some Midyaniy traders passed by, so they pulled him up and lifted Yowsef out of the pit and sold him to the YishmaEliym for twenty shekels of silver. Thus they brought Yowsef into Egypt. Now Rewben returned to the pit, and behold, Yowsef was not in the pit; so he tore his garments. And he returned to his brothers and said, "The boy is not; as for me, where am I to go?" So they took Yowsef's tunic, and slaughtered a male goat, and dipped the tunic in the blood; and they sent the varicolored tunic and brought it to their father and said, "We found this; please examine to see whether it is your son's tunic or not." Then he examined it and said, "It is my son's tunic. A wild beast has devoured him; Yowsef has surely been torn to pieces!" So Yaaqob tore his clothes, and put sackcloth on his loins, and mourned for his son many days. Then all his sons and all his daughters arose to comfort him, but he refused to be comforted. And he said, "Surely I will go down to Sheowl in mourning for my son." So his father wept for him. Meanwhile, the Midyaniym sold him in Egypt to Powtiyfar, Pharaoh's officer, the captain of the bodyguard.

Now Yowsef had been taken down to Egypt; and Powtiyfar, an Egyptian officer of Pharaoh, the captain of the bodyguard, bought him from the YishmaEliym who had taken him down there.

It can be called a hypothesis, but when you can literally see the evidence of different writers with your own eyes, translated into any language, and not even having to be an expert to see it, I think it to be more than just a hypothesis regardless of what it's continued to be called. I for one, trust what I can consistently see with my own eyes regardless of anyone else's objections.

Djehuti Sundaka

>

> Regards,

> Paul Kekai Manansala

>

| 23148|2007-09-23 15:01:15|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: King Tut Not Black Enough, Protesters Say|

I can see this is going no where. You obviously don't know how to admit when you're wrong.

So I'll conclude from my part to show how your representation of modern Western biblical scholarship on the outdated JEPD documentary hypothesis is also wrong.

* First of all the documentary hypothesis was not dated using the age of the language or writing style. It was dated using cultural context.

"D document" is dated based on the completely hypothetical view that it was the document found by Josiah mentioned in 2 Kings 22:8-20.

J and E sources are associated with the early monarchy or the fall of the Northern Kingdom originally on the idea that the sacrifice and other rituals/practices described in these portions would have been connected with the rise of the early monarchy. There are other content-based datings.

Wellhausen dated P based on the increased centrality of the Aaronic priesthood.

In order to date texts using language you must have a good idea of the progressive evolution of the language and literary style. There are only limited fragments of Hebrew text, most of it not of a literary nature, prior to the Qumrum scrolls.

* There are many scholars who have or do believe that the Old Testament and specifically the Torah sources were taken from earlier oral traditions. Hermann Gunkel was one of the first to strongly support this position. Present-day scholars who support the orality of the Old Testament include Werner Kelber, Walter Ong, Eric Havelock, A.B. Lord and B. Gerhardsson.

There are many scholars who believe the JEPD "documents" were oral and not written themselves. Even Julius Wellhausen who formulated the Documentary Hypothesis believed the JEPD sources were based on earlier oral tradition:

"In fact it can be shown that throughout the whole of the older period the Torah was no finished legislative code, but consisted entirely of the oral decisions and instructions of the priests, as a whole it was potential only; what actually existed were the individual sentences given by the priesthood as they were asked for."

-- Julius Wellhausen, Prolegomena to the History of Israel, p. 295-6.

The Jews themselves had a long history of maintaining that their oral traditions linked with the Torah known as the "Oral Torah."

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

CAIRO, Sept 24 (Reuters) - Egyptian archaeologists working in the tomb of the boy pharaoh Tutankhamun have found baskets and intact clay pots apparently overlooked when the tomb was cleared out in the 1920s, the government said on Monday.

The 20 clay pots, sealed with Tutankhamun's name, probably contain seeds and the remains of drinks, a government statement said, quoting chief government archaeologist Zahi Hawass.

One of the baskets contains dried fruit and eight others hold almost 60 small limestone plaques also inscribed with Tutankhamun's name in the traditional cartouche format.

They were found in the treasure room next to the burial chamber where British archaeologist Howard Carter found Tutankhamun's mummy wrapped in its golden covers in 1922.

"Carter didn't mention these things in his report but it looks as though his people put them aside and left them in the treasury room," an official at the Supreme Council for Antiquities said, asking not to be named.

Tutankhamun ruled Egypt between about 1361 and 1352 BC. He was buried along with many other pharaohs of the period in the Valley of the Kings near the modern town of Luxor.

© Reuters 2007. All Rights Reserved.

| 23150|2007-09-25 00:11:35|Djehuti Sundaka|Re: King Tut Not Black Enough, Protesters Say|
--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala"
wrote:

>

> I can see this is going no where. You obviously don't know how to admit

> when you're wrong.

I obviously know how to ask where I've been shown to be wrong, quoting the very statement I was claimed to be wrong in, even when the person claiming the error never shows it.

>
> So I'll conclude from my part to show how your representation of modern

> Western biblical scholarship on the outdated JEPD documentary hypothesis > is also wrong.

>

> * First of all the documentary hypothesis was not dated using the age of > the language or writing style.

First of all, no one stated that the Documentary Hypothesis was dated using the age of the language or writing style. The hypothesis itself preceded recent findings in dating the language of the P-document as well as the findings dating different sections of Amos (cf. "Amos Among The Prophets").

It was dated using cultural context.

>

> "D document" is dated based on the completely hypothetical view that it > was the document found by Josiah mentioned in 2 Kings 22:8-20.

>

> J and E sources are associated with the early monarchy or the fall

of > the Northern Kingdom originally on the idea that the sacrifice and other > rituals/practices described in these portions would have been connected > with the rise of the early monarchy. There are other content-based > datings.

>

> Wellhausen dated P based on the increased centrality of the Aaronic > priesthood.

- >
- >
- >
- >
- > In order to date texts using language you must have a good idea of the
- > progressive evolution of the language and literary style. There are
- > only limited fragments of Hebrew text, most of it not of a literary
- > nature, prior to the Qumrum scrolls.

"Hebrew text" is written in the language of Kna'an of which there are examples ranging from Sinatic script to latter forms. Dating the language of the texts isn't confined to the physical texts themselves.

- >
- >
- > * There are many scholars who have or do believe that the Old Testament

- > and specifically the Torah sources were taken from earlier oral
- > traditions. Hermann Gunkel was one of the first to strongly support
- > this position. Present-day scholars who support the orality of the Old

- > Testament include Werner Kelber, Walter Ong, Eric Havelock, A.B.

Lord

- > and B. Gerhardsson.

None of the remaining "Present-day scholars" you cite are/were scholars of the Bible. You reference theologians dealing with Xristian scriptures and classicists dealing with Hellenic poetry and literature. No one dealing with any real knowledge on the subject in question.

>

> There are many scholars who believe the JEPD "documents" were oral

and > not written themselves.

That is simply untrue. No matter what they may have believed the origins to have been, no one believed the documents themselves to have been oral as they are quite plainly literary, not oral, in nature (cf. Deuteronomy 17:18, Jeremiah 8:8, Hosea 8:12).

Even Julius Wellhausen who formulated the > Documentary Hypothesis believed the JEPD sources were based on earlier

> oral tradition:

>

> "In fact it can be shown that throughout the whole of the older period

> the Torah was no finished legislative code, but consisted entirely

of > the oral decisions and instructions of the priests, as a whole it

was > potential only; what actually existed were the individual sentences > given by the priesthood as they were asked for."

>

> -- Julius Wellhausen, Prolegomena to the History of Israel, p. 295-

6.

It's pretty much redundant to quote the beliefs of a person from nearly a century ago when it's already been mentioned that the "oral source" perspective is fast becoming outdated among non-theologian scholars.

>

> The Jews themselves had a long history of maintaining that there oral > traditions linked with the Torah known as the "Oral Torah."

The Halakhic tradition actually began with Shimown ha-Zaddiq (c. 167 BCE) and was never actually "oral".

Djehutti Sundaka

>

> Regards,

> Paul Kekai Manansala

>

| 23151|2007-09-25 08:35:59|Manu Ampim|KEMET (ANCIENT EGYPT) TOUR
ORIENTATION - September 30th|

CLASSICAL AFRICA EDUCATIONAL TOUR IX

ANCIENT EGYPT (KEMET) - 2008

Personally escorted by

PROF. MANU AMPIM

(experienced tour guide & historian of Africana Studies)

---

*FREE TOUR INFORMATION SESSION - 1 hour

DATE:Sunday, September 30, 2007

PLACE: 580 Grand Avenue , Oakland , CA

(across from Lake Merritt )

TIME: 2:45 pm (sharp)

*Must call to reserve seat - space is limited.

510.482.5791 or Profmanu@acninc.net

Tour itinerary

http://manuampim.com/kmt\_08.doc

Tour schedule: May 31 - June 14, 2008 - $3299 (all inclusive)

---

CLASSICAL AFRICA EDUCATIONAL TOUR IX

ANCIENT EGYPT (KEMET)

TRIP INCLUDES:

- All tips, taxes, and domestic travel in Egypt
- Deluxe hotel accommodations& two meals per day
- Entrance fees to over 40 sites & monuments
- CD on "Documenting Your Travel Experiences"

-On-site and evening presentations by Prof. Ampim

-Optional 5 units college credit

TOUR HIGHLIGHTS (LAND OF THE PHARAOHS):

We will visit...

-The great pyramids of Giza & the Great Sphinx (Heru-em-akhet), which is the most well-known statue in the world.

-The ancient capital city of Memphis and the extensive monuments of Sakkara, including the Tomb of Ptah-Hotep, author of the oldest surviving book in the world.

-The massive Dahshur & Meidum pyramids, and the Mastaba of Ra-Hotep & Nofret, whose famous statues in the Cairo Museum are forgeries according to Prof. Ampim in his book, Modern Fraud.

-The Egyptian Museum with its renowned collection of well-preserved Pharaonic antiquities.

-The temples of Luxor and Karnak, which constitute one of the largest open-air museums in the world.

-The famous Valley of the Kings/Queens and Noble Tombs, including the Tomb of King Tutankhamen & the Temple of Queen Hatshepsut.

-The ancient city of the tomb builders, Deir el-Medina.

-The Luxor Museum & the Nubian Museum in Aswan.

-The Dendera, Edfu, and Abydos temples

-The Noble Tombs in Aswan & the temples of Pharaoh Ramses II / Queen Nefertari at Abu Simbel.

-The ancient Workmen's Village of Deir el Medina

-The Nubian village tour

-and much more...

-----
Prof. Manu Ampim is a leading primary researcher and historian on African & African American history and culture. He has written two books, conducted pioneering first-hand research in 18 countries, and has taken eight educational tours to Egypt and Central America. Ampim is currently an professor of history and Africana Studies at Contra Costa College and Merritt College in northern CA, and host of the popular internet radio program, "Africana Studies" on www.BlakeRadio.com

=====

FULL TRIP ITINERARY & REGISTRATION FORM

http://manuampim.com/kmt\_08.doc

FOR MORE INFO:

Prof. Manu Ampim

Director, Advancing the Research

510-482-5791

www.ManuAmpim.com

profmanu@acninc.net

TOUR REGISTRATION & PAYMENT:

Consolidated Tours Organization, Inc.

1675 Virginia Avenue, Suite 200

Atlanta, GA 30337

Tel. 404-767-2727

Fax. 404-766-4520

Email: ctoinc@aol.com

| 23152|2007-09-25 18:20:44|Paul Kekai Manansala|Snake-bird gods fascinated both Aztecs and pharaohs|

Mon 24 Sep 2007, 17:05 GMT

By Robin Emmott

MONTERREY, Mexico, Sept 24 (Reuters Life!) - Ancient Mexicans and Egyptians who never met and lived centuries and thousands of miles apart both worshiped feathered-serpent deities, built pyramids and developed a 365-day calendar, a new exhibition shows.

Billed as the world's largest temporary archeological showcase, Mexican archeologists have brought treasures from ancient Egypt to display alongside the great indigenous civilizations of Mexico for the first time.

The exhibition, which boasts a five-tonne, 3,000-year-old sculpture of Egyptian pharaoh Ramses II and stone carvings from Mexican pyramid Chichen Itza, aims to show many of the similarities of two complex worlds both conquered by Europeans in invasions 1,500 years apart.

"There are huge cultural parallels between ancient Egypt and Mexico in religion, astronomy, architecture and the arts. They deserve to be appreciated together," said exhibition organizer Gina Ulloa, who spent almost three years preparing the 35,520 square-feet (3,300 meter-square) display.

The exhibition, which opened at the weekend in the northern Mexican city of Monterrey, shows how Mexican civilizations worshiped the feathered snake god Quetzalcoatl from about 1,200 BC to 1521, when the Spanish conquered the Aztecs.

From 3,000 BC onward Egyptians often portrayed their gods, including the goddess of the pharaohs Isis, in art and sculpture as serpents with wings or feathers.

"The feathered serpent and the serpent alongside a deity signifies the duality of human existence, at once in touch with water and earth, the serpent, and the heavens, the feathers of a bird," said Ulloa.

Egyptian sculptures at the exhibition -- flown to Mexico from ancient temples along the Nile and from museums in Cairo, Luxor and Alexandria -- show how Isis' son Horus was often represented with winged arms and accompanied by serpents.

Cleopatra, the last Egyptian queen before the Roman conquest of Egypt in 30 BC, saw herself as Isis and wore a gold serpent in her headpiece, Ulloa added.

UNCANNY SIMILARITIES

In the arts, Mexico's earliest civilization, the Olmecs, echo Egypt's finest sculptures. Olmec artists carved large man-jaguar warriors that are similar to the Egyptian sphinxes on display showing lions with the heads of gods or kings.

The seated statue of an Egyptian scribe carved between 2465 and 2323 BC shows stonework and attention to detail that parallels a seated stone sculpture of an Olmec lord.

There is no evidence the Olmecs and Egyptians ever met.

Shared traits run to architecture, with Egyptians building pyramids as royal tombs and the Mayans and Aztecs following suit with pyramids as places of sacrifice to the gods.

While there is no room for pyramids at the exhibition -- part of the Universal Forum of Cultures, an international cultural festival held in Barcelona in 2004 -- organizers say it is the first time many of pieces have left Egypt.

They include entire archways from Nile temples, a bracelet worn by Ramses II and sarcophagi used by the pharaohs.

Mexico has also brought together Aztec, Mayan and Olmec pieces from across the country.

"Any visitor to Egypt and Mexico might be disappointed by the gaps in the museums. The only thing Egypt declined to loan were the mummies," Ulloa said.

© Reuters 2007. All Rights Reserved.

| 23153|2007-09-25 19:41:50|Alex van Deelen|Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief (Hawass)|

http://fe25.news.re3.yahoo.com/s/afp/20070925/wl\_africa\_afp/egyptarchaeologytutankhamunrace

Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief
Tue Sep 25, 12:18 PM ET

CAIRO (AFP) - Egyptian antiquities supremo Zahi Hawass insisted Tuesday that Tutankhamun was not black despite calls by US black activists to recognise the boy king's dark skin colour.

"Tutankhamun was not black, and the portrayal of ancient Egyptian civilisation as black has no element of truth to it," Hawass told reporters.

"Egyptians are not Arabs and are not Africans despite the fact that Egypt is in Africa," he said, quoted by the official MENA news agency.

Hawass said he was responding to several demonstrations in Philadelphia after a lecture he gave there on September 6 where he defended his theory.

Protestors also claimed images of King Tut were altered to show him with lighter skin at the "Tutankhamun and the Golden Age of the Pharaohs" exhibit which leaves Philadelphia for London on September 30.

The exhibition sparked an uproar when it kicked off in Los Angeles in June 2005 when black activists demanded that a bust of the boy king be removed because the statue portrays him as white.

The face of the legendary pharaoh, who died around 3,300 years ago at the age of just 19, was reconstructed in 2005 through images collected through CAT scans of his mummy.

The boy king's intact tomb caused an international sensation when it was discovered by Briton Howard Carter in 1922 near Luxor in southern Egypt.

| 23154|2007-09-25 22:32:45|elliottandelliottmtg|Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief (Hawass)|
Blatant Racism

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Alex van Deelen"
wrote:

>
>

http://fe25.news.re3.yahoo.com/s/afp/20070925/wl\_africa\_afp/egyptarchaeologytutankhamunrace

>
> Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief
> Tue Sep 25, 12:18 PM ET
>
> CAIRO (AFP) - Egyptian antiquities supremo Zahi Hawass insisted
> Tuesday that Tutankhamun was not black despite calls by US black > activists to recognise the boy king's dark skin colour.
>
> "Tutankhamun was not black, and the portrayal of ancient Egyptian > civilisation as black has no element of truth to it," Hawass told reporters.

>
> "Egyptians are not Arabs and are not Africans despite the fact that > Egypt is in Africa," he said, quoted by the official MENA news agency.

>
> Hawass said he was responding to several demonstrations in > Philadelphia after a lecture he gave there on September 6 > where he defended his theory.
>
> Protestors also claimed images of King Tut were altered to show > him with lighter skin at the "Tutankhamun and the Golden Age of > the Pharaohs" exhibit which leaves Philadelphia for London on > September 30.
>
> The exhibition sparked an uproar when it kicked off in Los Angeles > in June 2005 when black activists demanded that a bust of the boy > king be removed because the statue portrays him as white.
>
> The face of the legendary pharaoh, who died around 3,300 years > ago at the age of just 19, was reconstructed in 2005 through images > collected through CAT scans of his mummy.
>
> The boy king's intact tomb caused an international sensation
> when it was discovered by Briton Howard Carter in 1922
> near Luxor in southern Egypt.

>
| 23155|2007-09-25 22:32:47|aerin walker|Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities
chief (Hawass)|

How is it possible for Egypt to be in Africa and yet the indigenous Egyptians not be African?
Thats akin to saying, Although China is in Asia the Chinese are not Asians.

Alex van Deelen wrote:

http://fe25.news.re3.yahoo.com/s/afp/20070925/wl\_africa\_afp/egyptarchaeologytutankhamunr\_ace

Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief
Tue Sep 25, 12:18 PM ET

CAIRO (AFP) - Egyptian antiquities supremo Zahi Hawass insisted Tuesday that Tutankhamun was not black despite calls by US black activists to recognise the boy king's dark skin colour.

"Tutankhamun was not black, and the portrayal of ancient Egyptian civilisation as black has no element of truth to it," Hawass told reporters.

"Egyptians are not Arabs and are not Africans despite the fact that Egypt is in Africa," he said, quoted by the official MENA news agency.

Hawass said he was responding to several demonstrations in Philadelphia after a lecture he gave there on September 6 where he defended his theory.

Protestors also claimed images of King Tut were altered to show him with lighter skin at the "Tutankhamun and the Golden Age of the Pharaohs" exhibit which leaves Philadelphia for London on September 30.

The exhibition sparked an uproar when it kicked off in Los Angeles in June 2005 when black activists demanded that a bust of the boy king be removed because the statue portrays him as white.

The face of the legendary pharaoh, who died around 3,300 years ago at the age of just 19, was reconstructed in 2005 through images collected through CAT scans of his mummy.

The boy king's intact tomb caused an international sensation when it was discovered by Briton Howard Carter in 1922 near Luxor in southern Egypt.

---

Be a better Globetrotter. Get better travel answers from someone who knows.

Yahoo! Answers - Check it out.

| 23156|2007-09-26 04:51:57|Wayne Owens|Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief (Hawass)|

Of course in Hawass' "guesstimation" they cannot be Afrikan. This would of course hinder the Aryan theoretical framework that has been historically presented. Secondly this would contradict the erroneous idea that Afrikans could not have built nor contribute in any shape form nor fashion to the genius of Nile Valley Civilizations. Another issue would be the political expedience of the issue; the existence of Hawass as a legitimate "scientist" would be called into question, further more at what point should we expect anything other than this absurd answer? Note: He agreed they were not Arabs, but then said neither are they Afrikans, what the hell were they? Venusians? Lastly Are we not arguing theory? Our understanding is just as relevant as Hawass' let him have this, we must simply work smarter to prove our theoretical frameworks. More work, more work, more work and subsequently rear children who take on the works of Anthropology, Archaeology, Linguistics, Botany, etc.,.

aerin walker wrote:

How is it possible for Egypt to be in Africa and yet the indigenous Egyptians not be African? Thats akin to saying, Although China is in Asia the Chinese are not Asians.

Alex van Deelen wrote:

http://fe25.news.re3.yahoo.com/s/afp/20070925/wl\_africa\_afp/egyptarchaeologytutankhamunr\_ace

Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief
Tue Sep 25, 12:18 PM ET

CAIRO (AFP) - Egyptian antiquities supremo Zahi Hawass insisted Tuesday that Tutankhamun was not black despite calls by US black activists to recognise the boy king's dark skin colour.

"Tutankhamun was not black, and the portrayal of ancient Egyptian civilisation as black has no element of truth to it," Hawass told reporters.

"Egyptians are not Arabs and are not Africans despite the fact that Egypt is in Africa," he said, quoted by the official MENA news agency.

Hawass said he was responding to several demonstrations in Philadelphia after a lecture he gave there on September 6 where he defended his theory.

Protestors also claimed images of King Tut were altered to show him with lighter skin at the "Tutankhamun and the Golden Age of the Pharaohs" exhibit which leaves Philadelphia for London on September 30.

The exhibition sparked an uproar when it kicked off in Los Angeles in June 2005 when black activists demanded that a bust of the boy king be removed because the statue portrays him as white.

The face of the legendary pharaoh, who died around 3,300 years ago at the age of just 19, was reconstructed in 2005 through images collected through CAT scans of his mummy.

The boy king's intact tomb caused an international sensation when it was discovered by Briton Howard Carter in 1922 near Luxor in southern Egypt.

---

Be a better Globetrotter. Get better travel answers from someone who knows.
Yahoo! Answers - Check it out.

---

Take the Internet to Go: Yahoo!Go puts the Internet in your pocket: mail, news, photos & more.
| 23157|2007-09-26 07:19:34|Fatima Horta|Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief (Hawass)|

I am really surprised by the ignorance of Zahi Hawass, I get more and more and more disappointed about him.

Alex van Deelen wrote:

http://fe25.news.re3.yahoo.com/s/afp/20070925/wl\_africa\_afp/egyptarchaeo\_logytutankhamunr\_ace

Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief
Tue Sep 25, 12:18 PM ET

CAIRO (AFP) - Egyptian antiquities supremo Zahi Hawass insisted Tuesday that Tutankhamun was not black despite calls by US black activists to recognise the boy king's dark skin colour.

"Tutankhamun was not black, and the portrayal of ancient Egyptian civilisation as black has no element of truth to it," Hawass told reporters.

"Egyptians are not Arabs and are not Africans despite the fact that Egypt is in Africa," he said, quoted by the official MENA news agency.

Hawass said he was responding to several demonstrations in Philadelphia after a lecture he gave there on September 6 where he defended his theory.

Protestors also claimed images of King Tut were altered to show him with lighter skin at the "Tutankhamun and the Golden Age of the Pharaohs" exhibit which leaves Philadelphia for London on September 30.

The exhibition sparked an uproar when it kicked off in Los Angeles in June 2005 when black activists demanded that a bust of the boy king be removed because the statue portrays him as white.

The face of the legendary pharaoh, who died around 3,300 years ago at the age of just 19, was reconstructed in 2005 through images collected through CAT scans of his mummy.

The boy king's intact tomb caused an international sensation when it was discovered by Briton Howard Carter in 1922 near Luxor in southern Egypt.

---

Catch up on fall's hot new shows on Yahoo! TV. Watch previews, get listings, and more!

| 23158|2007-09-26 07:20:49|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief (Hawass)|

Here is Hawass' email in case anyone wants to send him a note:

Hawass@sca.gov.eg

I'm not sure who Hawass reports to. Hope it's not Hosni Mubarak as I'm unable to find his contact info.

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

-- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "elliottandelliottmtg" wrote:

>

> Blatant Racism

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Alex van Deelen"

> wrote:

>>

>>

> http://fe25.news.re3.yahoo.com/s/afp/20070925/wl\_africa\_afp/egyptarch

> aeologytutankhamunrace

>>

>> Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief

>> Tue Sep 25, 12:18 PM ET

>>

>> CAIRO (AFP) - Egyptian antiquities supremo Zahi Hawass insisted

>> Tuesday that Tutankhamun was not black despite calls by US black >> activists to recognise the boy king's dark skin colour.

> >
> > "Tutankhamun was not black, and the portrayal of ancient Egyptian > > civilisation as black has no element of truth to it," Hawass told > reporters.
> >
> > "Egyptians are not Arabs and are not Africans despite the fact that > > Egypt is in Africa," he said, quoted by the official MENA news > agency.
> >
> > Hawass said he was responding to several demonstrations in > > Philadelphia after a lecture he gave there on September 6 > > where he defended his theory.
> >
> > Protestors also claimed images of King Tut were altered to show > > him with lighter skin at the "Tutankhamun and the Golden Age of > > the Pharaohs" exhibit which leaves Philadelphia for London on > > September 30.
> >
> > The exhibition sparked an uproar when it kicked off in Los Angeles > > in June 2005 when black activists demanded that a bust of the boy > > king be removed because the statue portrays him as white.
> >
> > The face of the legendary pharaoh, who died around 3,300 years > > ago at the age of just 19, was reconstructed in 2005 through images > > collected through CAT scans of his mummy.
> >
> > The boy king's intact tomb caused an international sensation
> > when it was discovered by Briton Howard Carter in 1922
> > near Luxor in southern Egypt.
> >
>
> | 23159|2007-09-26 12:26:21|cristofori whitakara|Re: Snake-bird gods fascinated both Aztecs and pharaohs| from reading the very first sentence i can tell the writer didnt read dr. winters and company's work on the connection

Paul Kekai Manansala wrote:

Mon 24 Sep 2007, 17:05 GMT

By Robin Emmott

MONTERREY, Mexico, Sept 24 (Reuters Life!) - Ancient Mexicans and Egyptians who never met and lived centuries and thousands of miles apart both worshiped feathered-serpent deities, built pyramids and developed a 365-day calendar, a new exhibition shows.

Billed as the world's largest temporary archeological showcase, Mexican archeologists have brought treasures from ancient Egypt to display alongside the great indigenous civilizations of Mexico for the first time.

The exhibition, which boasts a five-tonne, 3,000-year-old sculpture of Egyptian pharaoh Ramses II and stone carvings from Mexican pyramid Chichen Itza, aims to show many of the similarities of two complex worlds both conquered by Europeans in invasions 1,500 years apart.

"There are huge cultural parallels between ancient Egypt and Mexico in religion, astronomy, architecture and the arts. They deserve to be appreciated together," said exhibition organizer Gina Ulloa, who spent almost three years preparing the 35,520 square-feet (3,300 meter-square) display.

The exhibition, which opened at the weekend in the northern Mexican city of Monterrey, shows how Mexican civilizations worshiped the feathered snake god Quetzalcoatl from about 1,200 BC to 1521, when the Spanish conquered the Aztecs.

From 3,000 BC onward Egyptians often portrayed their gods, including the goddess of the pharaohs Isis, in art and sculpture as serpents with wings or feathers.

"The feathered serpent and the serpent alongside a deity signifies the duality of human existence, at once in touch with water and earth, the serpent, and the heavens, the feathers of a bird," said Ulloa.

Egyptian sculptures at the exhibition -- flown to Mexico from ancient temples along the Nile and from museums in Cairo, Luxor and Alexandria -- show how Isis' son Horus was often represented with winged arms and accompanied by serpents.

Cleopatra, the last Egyptian queen before the Roman conquest of Egypt in 30 BC, saw herself as Isis and wore a gold serpent in her headpiece, Ulloa added.

UNCANNY SIMILARITIES

In the arts, Mexico's earliest civilization, the Olmecs, echo Egypt's finest sculptures. Olmec artists carved large man-jaguar warriors that are similar to the Egyptian sphinxes on display showing lions with the heads of gods or kings.

The seated statue of an Egyptian scribe carved between 2465 and 2323

BC shows stonework and attention to detail that parallels a seated stone sculpture of an Olmec lord.

There is no evidence the Olmecs and Egyptians ever met.

Shared traits run to architecture, with Egyptians building pyramids as royal tombs and the Mayans and Aztecs following suit with pyramids as places of sacrifice to the gods.

While there is no room for pyramids at the exhibition -- part of the Universal Forum of Cultures, an international cultural festival held in Barcelona in 2004 -- organizers say it is the first time many of pieces have left Egypt.

They include entire archways from Nile temples, a bracelet worn by Ramses II and sarcophagi used by the pharaohs.

Mexico has also brought together Aztec, Mayan and Olmec pieces from across the country.

"Any visitor to Egypt and Mexico might be disappointed by the gaps in the museums. The only thing Egypt declined to loan were the mummies," Ulloa said.

© Reuters 2007. All Rights Reserved.

---

Shape Yahoo! in your own image. Join our Network Research Panel today!
| 23160|2007-09-26 13:10:26|Alex van Deelen|Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt
antiquities chief (Hawass)|

> Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief (Hawass)
> Posted by: "Wayne Owens" majadi9@yahoo.com majadi9
> Wed Sep 26, 2007 4:51 am (PST)

> Of course in Hawass' "guesstimation" they cannot be Afrikan.
> This would of course hinder the Aryan theoretical framework
> that has been historically presented. Secondly this would > contradict the erroneous idea that Afrikans could not have > built nor contribute in any shape form nor fashion to the
> genius of Nile Valley Civilizations.

What troubles me, is that an individual like that is allowed to handle Egyptian antiquities.

Can we really trust him not to destroy or mislabel items that show the Egyptians were Black?

Will he re-label such items as 'Nubian', or make them disappear?

When is Egyptology going to be regulated in a modern and transparent manner?

There have been several complaints about Hawass, but usually people are too scared to even go on the record.

Alex

| 23161|2007-09-26 13:43:49|asar_imhotep|A new symposium proposal - Tutankhamun was not black|

This is what I propose, and I am so serious about this. We need to have another UNESCO like symposium of the peopling of Ancient Ta-Merri.

The problem today is that we are a visual society and these arguments Diop and Obenga have made have not been made public (at large) where the people could see the debates. If we can get a symposium just like the one for UNESCO, and have it covered by C-Span and other media, here in the United States, with more scholars contributing, I think we can settle this once and for all.

I think since 1973 there has been more evidence that supports Diop's and Obenga's claims. This can be introduced with more rigor and we can review the tapes as would football players after a game. I haven't heard of Hawass agreeing to be on any panel to debate this issue and I think he needs to be there. There needs to be a final confrontation, bringing all of the available evidence. It can have 4 aspects to the debate: Archeology, Linguistics, Philosophy, and overall cultural connections.

I think Bro. Manu Ampim can lead this charge and gather the other scholars, in the States, Europe and the Africa, to participate. We can organize it to happen anywhere from 6 months to a year.

What say ye?

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Alex van Deelen" wrote:

>

> > Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief (Hawass)

> > Posted by: "Wayne Owens" majadi9@... majadi9

> > Wed Sep 26, 2007 4:51 am (PST)

>

> > Of course in Hawass' "guesstimation" they cannot be Afrikan.

> > This would of course hinder the Aryan theoretical framework

> > that has been historically presented. Secondly this would

> > contradict the erroneous idea that Afrikans could not have

> > built nor contribute in any shape form nor fashion to the

> > genius of Nile Valley Civilizations.

>

> > What troubles me, is that an individual like that is allowed > > to handle Egyptian antiquities.

>

> > Can we really trust him not to destroy or mislabel items

> > that show the Egyptians were Black?

>

> > Will he re-label such items as 'Nubian', or make them

> > disappear?

>

> > When is egyptology going to be regulated in a modern > > and transparent manner?

>

> > There have been several complaints about Hawass,

> > but usually people are too scared to even go on the > > record.

>

> > Alex

>

| 23162|2007-09-26 14:10:43|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: A new symposium proposal -
Tutankhamun was not black|

Sounds like a great idea Asar. In fact, UNESCO would be a great neutral and international agency to arbitrate the event.

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

asar_imhotep wrote:

This is what I propose, and I am so serious about this. We need to have another UNESCO like symposium of the peopling of Ancient Ta-Merri.

The problem today is that we are a visual society and these arguments
Diop and Obenga have made have not been made public (at large) where the people could see the debates. If we can get a symposium just like the one for UNESCO, and have it covered by C-Span and other media, here in the United States, with more scholars contributing, I think we can settle this once and for all.

I think since 1973 there has been more evidence that supports Diop's and Obenga's claims. This can be introduced with more rigor and we can review the tapes as would football players after a game. I haven't heard of Hawass agreeing to be on any panel to debate this issue and I think he needs to be there. There needs to be a final confrontation, bringing all of the available evidence. It can have 4 aspects to the debate: Archeology, Linguistics, Philosophy, and overall cultural connections.

I think Bro. Manu Ampim can lead this charge and gather the other scholars, in the States, Europe and the Africa, to participate. We can organize it to happen anywhere from 6 months to a year.

What say ye?

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Alex van Deelen" wrote:

>
>> Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief (Hawass)
>> Posted by: "Wayne Owens" majadi9@... majadi9
>> Wed Sep 26, 2007 4:51 am (PST)
>
>> Of course in Hawass' "guesstimation" they cannot be Afrikan.
>> This would of course hinder the Aryan theoretical framework
>> that has been historically presented. Secondly this would
>> contradict the erroneous idea that Afrikans could not have
>> built nor contribute in any shape form nor fashion to the
>> genius of Nile Valley Civilizations.
>
> What troubles me, is that an individual like that is allowed
> to handle Egyptian antiquities.
>
> Can we really trust him not to destroy or mislabel items
> that show the Egyptians were Black?
>
> Will he re-label such items as 'Nubian', or make them
> disappear?
>
> When is Egyptology going to be regulated in a modern

> and transparant manner?
>
> There have been several complaints about Hawass,
> but usually people are too scared to even go on the
> record.
>
> Alex
>

| 23163|2007-09-26 19:40:37|Djehuti Sundaka|Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief (Hawass)|

People say and do things because they have the power to say and do things. Things only change with either a threat or a change in power.

Djehuti Sundaka

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Alex van Deelen" wrote:

>
> > Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief (Hawass)
> > Posted by: "Wayne Owens" majadi9@... majadi9
> > Wed Sep 26, 2007 4:51 am (PST)
>
> > Of course in Hawass' "guesstimation" they cannot be Afrikan.
> > This would of course hinder the Aryan theoretical framework
> > that has been historically presented. Secondly this would
> > contradict the erroneous idea that Afrikans could not have
> > built nor contribute in any shape form nor fashion to the
> > genius of Nile Valley Civilizations.
>
> > What troubles me, is that an individual like that is allowed
> > to handle Egyptian antiquities.
>
> > Can we really trust him not to destroy or mislabel items > > that show the Egytpians were Black?
>
> > Will he re-label such items as 'Nubian', or make them
> > disappear?
>
> > When is egyptology going to be regulated in a modern
> > and transparant manner?
>
> > There have been several complaints about Hawass,

> but usually people are too scared to even go on the > record.

>

> Alex

>

| 23164|2007-09-26 20:10:07|Wayne Owens|Re: A new symposium proposal - Tutankhamun was not black|

I am game what do we need to do to bring this together, My mom used to say if you see a "good" fight get in it! She of course means a fight for righteousness, so let's get it on!

asar_imhotep wrote:

This is what I propose, and I am so serious about this. We need to have another UNESCO like symposium of the peopling of Ancient Ta-Merri.

The problem today is that we are a visual society and these arguments Diop and Obenga have made have not been made public (at large) where the people could see the debates. If we can get a symposium just like the one for UNESCO, and have it covered by C-Span and other media, here in the United States, with more scholars contributing, I think we can settle this once and for all.

I think since 1973 there has been more evidence that supports Diop's and Obenga's claims. This can be introduced with more rigor and we can review the tapes as would football players after a game. I haven't heard of Hawass agreeing to be on any panel to debate this issue and I think he needs to be there. There needs to be a final confrontation, bringing all of the available evidence. It can have 4 aspects to the debate: Archeology, Linguistics, Philosophy, and overall cultural connections.

I think Bro. Manu Ampim can lead this charge and gather the other scholars, in the States, Europe and the Africa, to participate. We can organize it to happen anywhere from 6 months to a year.

What say ye?

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Alex van Deelen" wrote:

>

>> Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief (Hawass)

>> Posted by: "Wayne Owens" majadi9@... majadi9

>> Wed Sep 26, 2007 4:51 am (PST)

>

>> Of course in Hawass' "guesstimation" they cannot be Afrikan.

> > This would of course hinder the Aryan theoretical framework
> > that has been historically presented. Secondly this would
> > contradict the erroneous idea that Afrikans could not have
> > built nor contribute in any shape form nor fashion to the
> > genius of Nile Valley Civilizations.
>
> What troubles me, is that an individual like that is allowed
> to handle Egyptian antiquities.
>
> Can we really trust him not to destroy or mislabel items
> that show the Egyptians were Black?
>
> Will he re-label such items as 'Nubian', or make them
> disappear?
>
> When is egyptology going to be regulated in a modern
> and transparent manner?
>
> There have been several complaints about Hawass,
> but usually people are too scared to even go on the
> record.
>
> Alex
>

---

Check out the hottest 2008 models today at Yahoo! Autos.

| 23165|2007-09-26 20:11:57|Wayne Owens|Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities
chief (Hawass)|
Sundaka you and I are of like minds!

Djehuti Sundaka wrote:

People say and do things because they have the power to say and do things. Things only change with either a threat or a change in power.

Djehuti Sundaka

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, "Alex van Deelen"
wrote:

>
> > Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief (Hawass)
> > Posted by: "Wayne Owens" majadi9@... majadi9
> > Wed Sep 26, 2007 4:51 am (PST)
>

> > Of course in Hawass' "guesstimation" they cannot be Afrikan.
> > This would of course hinder the Aryan theoretical framework
> > that has been historically presented. Secondly this would
> > contradict the erroneous idea that Afrikans could not have
> > built nor contribute in any shape form nor fashion to the
> > genius of Nile Valley Civilizations.
>
> What troubles me, is that an individual like that is allowed
> to handle Egyptian antiquities.
>
> Can we really trust him not to destroy or mislabel items
> that show the Egyptians were Black?
>
> Will he re-label such items as 'Nubian', or make them
> disappear?
>
> When is egyptology going to be regulated in a modern
> and transparant manner?
>
> There have been several complaints about Hawass,
> but usually people are too scared to even go on the
> record.
>
> Alex
>

---

Pinpoint customers who are looking for what you sell.

| 23166|2007-09-26 21:10:13|elliottandelliottmtg|Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt
antiquities chief (Hawass)|

If he does not recognize the truth found in in Kemetian tombs and historical documentation, in modern Egypt, where he lives, then what words can be expressed in an email that will force him to stop his vehement and diabolical assaults against African history?

I wonder if he would accept an invitation to debate our top Kemetologist? The Iranian President was lambasted for his ridiculous assertion that the Holocaust never occurred and in the same fashion
we should give Hawass an opportunity to demonstrate his racist views and outright historical distortions.

A few years ago he allowed for a DNA test to be performed on one of the African kings of Kemet and said unequivocally that the ancient Kemetians were in fact Arabs but in this article he contradicted his own "scientific research". He said that the "Egyptians are not Arabs and are not Africans despite the fact that Egypt is in Africa," but doesn't attribute an ethnicity to the people of Kemet. If they were not Asiatic, Persians, Arabs, Greeks, or Romans then the only other documented race would be Africans.

How can he be a "Doctor of Egyptology" and not have read Herodotus who clearly states that the people of Kemet were Ethiopian in origin? Did he not enter the tomb of Ramses III, which has an undeniable pictorial representation of the people of Kemet as dark-skinned Africans and identical to their Nubian neighbors? Did he skip over the tomb paintings of Ausuar who is depicted as a dark skinned African? And that's another point of contention, African people come in a wide variety of hues and a diverse background of physical characteristics, therefore you cannot say that you must have a certain percentage of dark pigmentation to be identified as an African. In other words, African people range from yellow-brown to black.

It does not matter what Hawass thinks about the origins of African civilization. Eurocentrics, for that is who supports, finances and bolsters Hawass's "scholarly credentials", have taken deliberate actions to erase the African origins of western civilization for centuries. The problem arises when African people and honest scholars cease to teach the truth to those who seek it.

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala" wrote:

>
> Here is Hawass' email in case anyone wants to send him a note:
>
> Hawass@...
>
> I'm not sure who Hawass reports to. Hope it's not Hosni Mubarak as

I'm
> unable to find his contact info.
>
> Regards,

> Paul Kekai Manansala

>

>

>

>

> -- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "elliottandelliottmtg"

> wrote:

>>

>> Blatant Racism

>>

>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Alex van Deelen"

>> wrote:

>>>

>>>

>>

http://fe25.news.re3.yahoo.com/s/afp/20070925/wl\_africa\_afp/egyptarch

>> aeologytutankhamunrace

>>>

>>> Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief

>>> Tue Sep 25, 12:18 PM ET

>>>

>>> CAIRO (AFP) - Egyptian antiquities supremo Zahi Hawass insisted

>>> Tuesday that Tutankhamun was not black despite calls by US

black

>>> activists to recognise the boy king's dark skin colour.

>>>

>>> "Tutankhamun was not black, and the portrayal of ancient

Egyptian

>>> civilisation as black has no element of truth to it," Hawass

told >> reporters.

>>>

>>> "Egyptians are not Arabs and are not Africans despite the fact

that

>>> Egypt is in Africa," he said, quoted by the official MENA news >> agency.

>>>

>>> Hawass said he was responding to several demonstrations in

>>> Philadelphia after a lecture he gave there on September 6

>>> where he defended his theory.

>>>

>>> Protestors also claimed images of King Tut were altered to show >>> him with lighter skin at the "Tutankhamun and the Golden Age of >>> the Pharaohs" exhibit which leaves Philadelphia for London on >>> September 30.

>>>

>>> The exhibition sparked an uproar when it kicked off in Los Angeles

>>> in June 2005 when black activists demanded that a bust of the boy

>>> king be removed because the statue portrays him as white.

>>>

>>> The face of the legendary pharaoh, who died around 3,300 years >>> ago at the age of just 19, was reconstructed in 2005 through

images

>>> collected through CAT scans of his mummy.

>>>

>>> The boy king's intact tomb caused an international sensation

>>> when it was discovered by Briton Howard Carter in 1922

>>> near Luxor in southern Egypt.

>>>

>>

>

| 23167|2007-09-26 21:10:13|Emmanuel Lokoka|Re: A new symposium proposal - Tutankhamun
was not black|

this might be off topic a bit, but i've been searching for that Cheikh Anta Diop's UNESCO presentation for years...does anyone have that and would be kind enough to upload it maybe to video google because a lot of people i know would be interested in watching that....because i heard that he basically dismantled all those racist egyptologists claims.

asar_imhotep wrote:

This is what I propose, and I am so serious about this. We need to have another UNESCO like symposium of the peopling of Ancient Ta-Merri.

The problem today is that we are a visual society and these arguments
Diop and Obenga have made have not been made public (at large) where the people could see the debates. If we can get a symposium just like the one for UNESCO, and have it covered by C-Span and other media, here in the United States, with more scholars contributing, I think we can settle this once and for all.

I think since 1973 there has been more evidence that supports Diop's and Obenga's claims. This can be introduced with more rigor and we can review the tapes as would football players after a game. I haven't heard of Hawass agreeing to be on any panel to debate this issue and I think he needs to be there. There needs to be a final confrontation, bringing all of the available evidence. It can have 4 aspects to the debate: Archeology, Linguistics, Philosophy, and overall cultural connections.

I think Bro. Manu Ampim can lead this charge and gather the other scholars, in the States, Europe and the Africa, to participate. We can organize it to happen anywhere from 6 months to a year.

What say ye?

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, "Alex van Deelen" wrote:

>
>> Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief (Hawass)
>> Posted by: "Wayne Owens" majadi9@... majadi9
>> Wed Sep 26, 2007 4:51 am (PST)
>
>> Of course in Hawass' "guesstimation" they cannot be Afrikan.
>> This would of course hinder the Aryan theoretical framework
>> that has been historically presented. Secondly this would
>> contradict the erroneous idea that Afrikans could not have
>> built nor contribute in any shape form nor fashion to the
>> genius of Nile Valley Civilizations.
>
> What troubles me, is that an individual like that is allowed
> to handle Egyptian antiquities.
>
> Can we really trust him not to destroy or mislabel items
> that show the Egyptians were Black?
>
> Will he re-label such items as 'Nubian', or make them
> disappear?
>
> When is egyptology going to be regulated in a modern
> and transparant manner?
>
> There have been several complaints about Hawass,
> but usually people are too scared to even go on the
> record.
>

> Alex

>

---

Be smarter than spam. See how smart SpamGuard is at giving junk email the boot with the All-new Yahoo! Mail

| 23168|2007-09-26 21:10:13|Freddie Thompson|Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief (Hawass)|

Hawass understands the climate (the Western mindset) regarding ideas concerning history and Black people's role in it. He has obviously taken his cues from the trends that stem from modern racist traditions. He takes shelter in this away from the objective scrutiny of responsible Afrocentric historians and the evidences they have re-introduced to the world.
Fred

Fatima Horta wrote:

I am really surprised by the ignorance of Zahi Hawass, I get more and more and more disappointed about him.

Alex van Deelen wrote:

http://fe25.news.re3.yahoo.com/s/afp/20070925/wl\_africa\_afp/egyptarchaeologytutankhamunrace

Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief
Tue Sep 25, 12:18 PM ET

CAIRO (AFP) - Egyptian antiquities supremo Zahi Hawass insisted Tuesday that Tutankhamun was not black despite calls by US black activists to recognise the boy king's dark skin colour.

"Tutankhamun was not black, and the portrayal of ancient Egyptian civilisation as black has no element of truth to it," Hawass told reporters.

"Egyptians are not Arabs and are not Africans despite the fact that Egypt is in Africa," he said, quoted by the official MENA news agency.

Hawass said he was responding to several demonstrations in Philadelphia after a lecture he gave there on September 6

where he defended his theory.

Protestors also claimed images of King Tut were altered to show him with lighter skin at the "Tutankhamun and the Golden Age of the Pharaohs" exhibit which leaves Philadelphia for London on September 30.

The exhibition sparked an uproar when it kicked off in Los Angeles in June 2005 when black activists demanded that a bust of the boy king be removed because the statue portrays him as white.

The face of the legendary pharaoh, who died around 3,300 years ago at the age of just 19, was reconstructed in 2005 through images collected through CAT scans of his mummy.

The boy king's intact tomb caused an international sensation when it was discovered by Briton Howard Carter in 1922 near Luxor in southern Egypt.

---

Catch up on fall's hot new shows on Yahoo! TV. Watch previews, get listings, and more!

---

Tonight's top picks. What will you watch tonight? Preview the hottest shows on Yahoo! TV.

| 23169|2007-09-26 21:10:13|bonotchim@aol.com|Re: A new symposium proposal - Tutankhamun was not black|

Some years ago, I believe when Dr. Obenga was at Temple, Molefi Asante tried to organize a symposium like you suggest and no white scholar would commit. Because of what Dr. Diop and Obengadid in Cairo another symposium is unlikely.

Bro. Asar did you hear about or attend the African Nationalist Mdw Ntr conference in New York? It was in June or July.

Bro.B.

-----Original Message-----

From: asar_imhotep

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Sent: Wed, 26 Sep 2007 3:43 pm
Subject: [Ta_Seti] A new symposium proposal - Tutankhamun was not black

This is what I propose, and I am so serious about this. We need to have another UNESCO like symposium of the peopling of Ancient Ta-Merri.

The problem today is that we are a visual society and these arguments Diop and Obenga have made have not been made public (at large) where the people could see the debates. If we can get a symposium just like the one for UNESCO, and have it covered by C-Span and other media, here in the United States, with more scholars contributing, I think we can settle this once and for all.

I think since 1973 there has been more evidence that supports Diop's and Obenga's claims. This can be introduced with more rigor and we can review the tapes as would football players after a game. I haven't heard of Hawass agreeing to be on any panel to debate this issue and I think he needs to be there. There needs to be a final confrontation, bringing all of the available evidence. It can have 4 aspects to the debate: Archeology, Linguistics, Philosophy, and overall cultural connections.

I think Bro. Manu Ampim can lead this charge and gather the other scholars, in the States, Europe and the Africa, to participate. We can organize it to happen anywhere from 6 months to a year.

What say ye?

Asar Imhotep
<http://www.mochasui te.com>

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, "Alex van Deelen" wrote:

>

> > Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief (Hawass)

> > Posted by: "Wayne Owens" majadi9@... majadi9

> > Wed Sep 26, 2007 4:51 am (PST)

>

> > Of course in Hawass' "guesstimation" they cannot be Afrikan.

> > This would of course hinder the Aryan theoretical framework

> > that has been historically presented. Secondly this would

> > contradict the erroneous idea that Afrikans could not have

> > built nor contribute in any shape form nor fashion to the

> > genius of Nile Valley Civilizations.

>

> > What troubles me, is that an individual like that is allowed

> > to handle Egyptian antiquities.

>
> Can we really trust him not to destroy or mislabel items
> that show the Egyptians were Black?
>
> Will he re-label such items as 'Nubian', or make them
> disappear?
>
> When is Egyptology going to be regulated in a modern
> and transparent manner?
>
> There have been several complaints about Hawass,
> but usually people are too scared to even go on the
> record.
>
> Alex
>

---

Email and AIM finally together. You've gotta check out free AOL Mail!

| 23170|2007-09-26 21:17:23|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt
antiquities chief (Hawass)|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "elliottandelliottmtg"
wrote:

>
> If he does not recognize the truth found in in Kemetian tombs and > historical documentation, in modern Egypt, where he lives, then what > words can be expressed in an email that will force him to stop his > vehement and diabolical assaults against African history?
>
>

From my experience in politics these actions work -- not all the time
-- but they work.

When you express your displeasure, Hawass has to start thinking about repercussions including the bottom line. The more this happens, the more pressure Hawass will feel.

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23171|2007-09-26 21:24:14|asar_imhotep|Re: A new symposium proposal - Tutankhamun was not black|

I heard about it and I think I asked if it was taped somehow and available for purchase. But anyway, I think that it can be done. The climate is right and if we put enough pressure on the likes of Discovery, The History Channel, Hawass and others who continually perpetuate this false sense of history, I think it can come to fruition. They won't deal with the culture of ancient ta-merri because they know it can easily be shown to compare with the rest of Africa, and to an extent, its remnants in African culture to date.

I think if we organized with the same sincerity and energy as we did for the Jena 6 in Louisiana, then we can make this happen. Too many Egyptologists make statements on emails and paper, and it is time we discuss this in person where a rebuttal can be done in a timely fashion.

I say we make it happen. Our ancestors fought for us, it is time we fought for them.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, bonotchim@... wrote:

>

> Some years ago,? I?believe when? Dr. Obenga was at Temple, Molefi Asante tried to organize?a?s symposium like you suggest and?no white scholar would?commit. Because of what?Dr. Diop and Obenga?did in?Cairo?another?s symposium is unlikely.

> Bro. Asar did you hear about or attend the African Nationalist? Mdw Ntr conference in New York? It was in June or July.

> Bro.B.

>

> -----Original Message-----

> From: asar_imhotep

> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> Sent: Wed, 26 Sep 2007 3:43 pm

> Subject: [Ta_Seti] A new symposium proposal - Tutankhamun was not black

>

>

>

>

>

>

> This is what I propose, and I am so serious about this. We need to > have another UNESCO like symposium of the peopling of Ancient Ta-Merri.
 >
 > The problem today is that we are a visual society and these arguments
 > Diop and Obenga have made have not been made public (at large) where > the people could see the debates. If we can get a symposium just like > the one for UNESCO, and have it covered by C-Span and other media, > here in the United States, with more scholars contributing, I think we > can settle this once and for all.
 >
 > I think since 1973 there has been more evidence that supports Diop's > and Obenga's claims. This can be introduced with more rigor and we can > review the tapes as would football players after a game. I haven't > heard of Hawass agreeing to be on any panel to debate this issue and I > think he needs to be there. There needs to be a final confrontation, > bringing all of the available evidence. It can have 4 aspects to the > debate: Archeology, Linguistics, Philosophy, and overall cultural > connections.
 >
 > I think Bro. Manu Ampim can lead this charge and gather the other > scholars, in the States, Europe and the Africa, to participate. We can > organize it to happen anywhere from 6 months to a year.
 >
 > What say ye?
 >
 > Asar Imhotep
 > <http://www.mochasuite.com>
 >
 > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Alex van Deelen" wrote:
 > >
 > > > Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief (Hawass)
 > > > Posted by: "Wayne Owens" majadi9@ majadi9
 > > > Wed Sep 26, 2007 4:51 am (PST)
 > >
 > > > Of course in Hawass' "guesstimation" they cannot be Afrikan.
 > > > This would of course hinder the Aryan theoretical framework
 > > > that has been historically presented. Secondly this would > > > contradict the erroneous idea that Afrikans could not have
 > > > built nor contribute in any shape form nor fashion to the > > > genius of Nile Valley Civilizations.
 > >
 > > What troubles me, is that an individual like that is allowed
 > > to handle Egyptian antiquities.
 > >
 > > Can we really trust him not to destroy or mislabel items
 > > that show the Egyptians were Black?

> >
> > Will he re-label such items as 'Nubian', or make them
> > disappear?

> >
> > When is egyptology going to be regulated in a modern
> > and transparant manner?

> >
> > There have been several complaints about Hawass,
> > but usually people are too scared to even go on the
> > record.

> >
> > Alex

> >

>

>

>

>

>

>

---

> Email and AIM finally together. You've gotta check out free AOL
Mail! - <http://mail.aol.com>

>

| 23172|2007-09-26 21:58:52|elliottandelliottmtg|Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt
antiquities chief (Hawass)|

Good point and I appreciate the proactive suggestion. This could work in conjunction with a protest/boycott of the exhibition. I am writing my letter challenging his racist statement ASAP.

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala"
wrote:

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "elliottandelliottmtg"
> wrote:

> >

> > If he does not recognize the truth found in in Kemetian tombs

and > > historical documentation, in modern Egypt, where he lives, then

what

> > words can be expressed in an email that will force him to stop

his

> > vehement and diabolical assaults against African history?

> >

> >

>

> From my experience in politics these actions work -- not all the time

> -- but they work.

>

> When you express your displeasure, Hawass has to start thinking

about

> repercussions including the bottom line. The more this happens, the > more pressure Hawass will feel.

>

> Regards,

> Paul Kekai Manansala

>

| 23173|2007-09-26 22:26:30|elliottandelliottmtg|Re: A new symposium proposal - Tutankhamun was not black|

I absolutely agree! The only problem would be generating the same level of outrage on this topic, in comparison to the "Jena6" situation, because judicial injustice is an issue that resonates more clearly in the African American community than the theft, denial and destruction of African history. I am sure you understand how both issues are connected but the miseducated masses will find it hard to grapple with the relevance. Many African Americans do not consider themselves African at all.

I think if Afrocentric scholars, and those who seek historical truths, formed some sort of African Historical Restoration Society and in an organized assault, confronted Eurocentric Egyptologist and the television channels that promote and profit from their lies with undeniable historical documentation and archeological evidence then the changes we desire will begin to manifest.

But more importantly we need to promote our African history in the form of art, music and movies. We need a "Roots" for this generation but instead of the scourge of slavery the glory of Kemet will be the topic and will lead this generation into a higher understanding of self.

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:

- >
- > I heard about it and I think I asked if it was taped somehow and
- > available for purchase. But anyway, I think that it can be done.

The

- > climate is right and if we put enough pressure on the likes of
- > Discovery, The History Channel, Hawass and others who continually
- > perpetuate this false sense of history, I think it can come to
- > fruition. They won't deal with the culture of ancient ta-merri

because

- > they know it can easily be shown to compare with the rest of

Africa,

- > and to an extent, its remnants in African culture to date.
- >
- > I think if we organized with the same sincerity and energy as we

did

- > for the Jena 6 in Louisiana, then we can make this happen. Too many
- > Egyptologists make statements on emails and paper, and it is time

we

- > discuss this in person where a rebuttal can be done in a timely fashion.

- >
- > I say we make it happen. Our ancestors fought for us, it is time we
- > fought for them.
- >
- > Asar Imhotep
- > <http://www.mochasuite.com>
- >
- >

>
>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, bonotchim@ wrote:
>>
>> Some years ago, I believe when Dr. Obenga was at Temple, Molefi
> Asante tried to organize a symposium like you suggest and no white > scholar would commit. Because of what Dr. Diop and Obenga did > in Cairo another symposium is unlikely.
>> Bro. Asar did you hear about or attend the African Nationalist?

Mdw

> Ntr conference in New York? It was in June or July.
>> Bro.B.
>>
>> -----Original Message-----
>> From: asar_imhotep
>> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
>> Sent: Wed, 26 Sep 2007 3:43 pm
>> Subject: [Ta_Seti] A new symposium proposal - Tutankhamun was not black

>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>> This is what I propose, and I am so serious about this. We need

to >> have another UNESCO like symposium of the peopling of Ancient Ta-

Merri.

>>
>> The problem today is that we are a visual society and these

arguments

>> Diop and Obenga have made have not been made public (at large)

where > > the people could see the debates. If we can get a symposium just like > > the one for UNESCO, and have it covered by C-Span and other

media,

> > here in the United States, with more scholars contributing, I think we > > can settle this once and for all.

> >

> > I think since 1973 there has been more evidence that supports

Diop's

> > and Obenga's claims. This can be introduced with more rigor and we can > > review the tapes as would football players after a game. I haven't > > heard of Hawass agreeing to be on any panel to debate this issue

and I > > think he needs to be there. There needs to be a final

confrontation, > > bringing all of the available evidence. It can have 4 aspects to

the

> > debate: Archeology, Linguistics, Philosophy, and overall cultural > > connections.

> >

> > I think Bro. Manu Ampim can lead this charge and gather the other > > scholars, in the States, Europe and the Africa, to participate.

We can

> > organize it to happen anywhere from 6 months to a year.
> >
> > What say ye?
> >
> > Asar Imhotep
> > <http://www.mochasuite.com>
> >
> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Alex van Deelen"

wrote:

> > >
> > > > Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief

(Hawass)

> > > > Posted by: "Wayne Owens" majadi9@ majadi9
> > > > Wed Sep 26, 2007 4:51 am (PST)
> > > >
> > > > Of course in Hawass' "guesstimation" they cannot be Afrikan.
> > > > This would of course hinder the Aryan theoretical framework
> > > > that has been historically presented. Secondly this would > > > > contradict the erroneous idea that Afrikans could not have
> > > > built nor contribute in any shape form nor fashion to the > > > > genius of Nile Valley Civilizations.
> > > >
> > > > What troubles me, is that an individual like that is allowed
> > > > to handle Egyptian antiquities.
> > > >
> > > > Can we really trust him not to destroy or mislabel items
> > > > that show the Egyptians were Black?
> > > >
> > > > Will he re-label such items as 'Nubian', or make them
> > > > disappear?
> > > >
> > > > When is egyptology going to be regulated in a modern
> > > > and transparant manner?
> > > >
> > > > There have been several complaints about Hawass,
> > > > but usually people are too scared to even go on the
> > > > record.
> > > >
> > > > Alex
> > > >
> >
> >

> >
> >
> >
> >

---

> > Email and AIM finally together. You've gotta check out free AOL
> Mail! - <http://mail.aol.com>
> >
>

| 23174|2007-09-26 22:49:08|asar_imhotep|Re: A new symposium proposal - Tutankhamun was not black|

I agree wholeheartedly. But for those who know me, I am an idealists at times. Our forefathers have told us, "that whatever humans have done, humans can do." If we built massive stone monuments in Africa, China and the Americas, then we can sure as hell put together a "coalition of the willing" in this day and age.

The key is organization. I think some web commercials and small booklets need to be made on why this is important. I know there is a connection on "knowing thyself" and academic achievement. We need to exploit that as well. We need to compile a list of all African-American owned and run radio stations (physical and internet based)and prepare programs and interviews on these stations leading up to the "big event."

I mean the Don Imus fiasco got BET (finally) to talk about negative images and stereotypes and its affects on human beings (specifically African people). If this can happen, I know we can get this thing going.

To your later point of promotion, I would like to think that I am beginning that process and aiding in that front. By no means am I using this as self promotion, but I am currently working on a documentary film called "Poet-Trees & Grass-Roots: The unSpoken Word in Poetry." It is a chronicalization of Africa's oral tradition as a method for transferring historical information, to the many branches in the contemporary art forms. I plan to bridge the gap and educate, while entertaining, about the history, culture and expansive effects of African indigenous thought through spoken word poetry, hip hop, jazz and other art forms.

I also plan to do a film on African philosophy and quantum mechanics. Something along the lines of "What the bleep do we know," but of course from our historic and philosophical perspectives. But what we really need are our Lord of the Rings, our Matrixes and our Star Wars type films.

I do a lecture on college campuses called "African Spirituality and the Matrix" that speaks about this very need for our story to be presented in popular media (film, song, web and television). The combination of our spirituality, pop culture and technology will yield greater results on the masses of our people than any symposium will ever do. I want the laymen to go research our history just like a lot of my colleagues and friends did the weekend the movie 300 came out. They did the same with the Matrix films. What was the last Black movie you have seen that made you want to research who we are and what we've done?

This is why I praise books like the "Shadow of Memnon" by Brother G. (although I have my reservations on writing style and Ausar Auset Society teachings in the book). If more of our academics would express their knowledge aesthetically, then I think we could turn the tables around.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "elliottandelliottmtg" wrote:

>

> I absolutely agree! The only problem would be generating the same > level of outrage on this topic, in comparison to the "Jena6" > situation, because judicial injustice is an issue that resonates > more clearly in the African American community than the theft, > denial and destruction of African history. I am sure you understand > how both issues are connected but the miseducated masses will find > it hard to grapple with the relevance. Many African Americans do not > consider themselves African at all.

>

> I think if Afrocentric scholars, and those who seek historical > truths, formed some sort of African Historical Restoration Society
> and in an organized assault, confronted Eurocentric Egyptologist and > the television channels that promote and profit from their lies with > undeniable historical documentation and archeological evidence then > the changes we desire will begin to manifest.

>
> But more importantly we need to promote our African history in the > form of art, music and movies. We need a "Roots" for this generation > but instead of the scourge of slavery the glory of Kemet will be the > topic and will lead this generation into a higher understanding of > self.
>
>

| 23175|2007-09-26 23:42:35|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt
antiquities chief (Hawass)|

With all due respect to the members of this forum but it appears that most of you are naive regarding other groups attitude and interpretation of ancient Kemetan history.

Some may dismiss me as extreme but I think we should face the fact that we are dealing with people who have such a deepseated interest in perceiving us as unequal and particularly unequal to the Kemetans who they are quite frankly awed by. Their feelings, I believe, verge at a minimum on psychotic.

Someone mentioned "work, research, work" and present the evidence,
KEEP it out there and let it take care of itself. These people are silly - but dangerous.

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "elliottandelliottmtg"
wrote:

>
> If he does not recognize the truth found in in Kemetian tombs and > historical documentation, in modern Egypt, where he lives, then

what

> words can be expressed in an email that will force him to stop his
> vehement and diabolical assaults against African history?
>
> I wonder if he would accept an invitation to debate our top > Kemetologist? The Iranian President was lambasted for his

ridiculous

> assertion that the Holocaust never occurred and in the same fashion
> we should give Hawass an opportunity to demonstrate his racist

views

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala"
> wrote:
> >
> > Here is Hawass' email in case anyone wants to send him a note:
> >
> > Hawass@
> >
> > I'm not sure who Hawass reports to. Hope it's not Hosni Mubarak

as

> I'm
> > unable to find his contact info.
> >
> > Regards,
> > Paul Kekai Manansala
> >
> >
> >
> >
> > -- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "elliottandelliottmtg"
> > wrote:
> > >
> > > Blatant Racism
> > >
> > > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Alex van Deelen"
> > > wrote:
> > > >
> > > >
> > > >
>

http://fe25.news.re3.yahoo.com/s/afp/20070925/wl\_africa\_afp/egyptarch

> > > aeologytutankhamunrace
> > > >
> > > > Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief
> > > > Tue Sep 25, 12:18 PM ET
> > > >
> > > > CAIRO (AFP) - Egyptian antiquities supremo Zahi Hawass

insisted

> > > > Tuesday that Tutankhamun was not black despite calls by US
> > > > black > > > > activists to recognise the boy king's dark skin colour.

>>>>
>>>> "Tutankhamun was not black, and the portrayal of ancient > Egyptian
>>>> civilisation as black has no element of truth to it," Hawass
> told >>> reporters.
>>>>
>>>> "Egyptians are not Arabs and are not Africans despite the fact

> that >>>> Egypt is in Africa," he said, quoted by the official MENA

news

>>> agency.
>>>>
>>>> Hawass said he was responding to several demonstrations in >>>> Philadelphia after a lecture he gave there on September 6 >>>> where he defended his theory.
>>>>
>>>> Protestors also claimed images of King Tut were altered to show

>>>> him with lighter skin at the "Tutankhamun and the Golden Age

of

>>>> the Pharaohs" exhibit which leaves Philadelphia for London on >>>> September 30.
>>>>
>>>> The exhibition sparked an uproar when it kicked off in Los > Angeles
>>>> in June 2005 when black activists demanded that a bust of the > boy
>>>> king be removed because the statue portrays him as white.
>>>>
>>>> The face of the legendary pharaoh, who died around 3,300 years >>>> ago at the age of just 19, was reconstructed in 2005 through > images
>>>> collected through CAT scans of his mummy.
>>>>
>>>> The boy king's intact tomb caused an international sensation
>>>> when it was discovered by Briton Howard Carter in 1922

>>>> near Luxor in southern Egypt.

>>>>

>>>

>>

>

| 23176|2007-09-27 00:00:28|Mahari Mengistu|Re: A new symposium proposal - Tutankhamun was not black|

>>Some years ago, I believe when Dr. Obenga was at Temple, Molefi

Asante tried to organize a symposium like you suggest and no white scholar would commit.<<

This, to me, is exactly like what is occurring in the upcoming Republican debate geared to the black community hosted by Tavis Smiley where all of the top four(?) presidential candidates have refused to appear. And why? Because it is a debate they will inevitably lose to the black audience. And why? Because they are wrong and racist and it will become indubitably clear; so they don't show up and they lose a little but they can make up for a lot of the loss through their lies and spin. Their winning tactic is in making statements using words and social attitudes that set off racist/survival emotions and they can't do that in a question and answer debate. Their success at "spinning" is assured by an essentially racist population who are eager to believe them.

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, bonotchim@... wrote:

>

> Some years ago,? I?believe when? Dr. Obenga was at Temple, Molefi Asante tried to organize?a?symposium like you suggest and?no white scholar would?commit. Because of what?Dr. Diop and Obenga?did in? Cairo?another?symposium is unlikely.

> Bro. Asar did you hear about or attend the African Nationalist? Mdw Ntr conference in New York? It was in June or July.

> Bro.B.

>

> -----Original Message-----

> From: asar_imhotep

> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> Sent: Wed, 26 Sep 2007 3:43 pm

> Subject: [Ta_Seti] A new symposium proposal - Tutankhamun was not black

>

>

>
>
>
>
> This is what I propose, and I am so serious about this. We need to > have another UNESCO like symposium of the peopling of Ancient Ta-Merri.
>
> The problem today is that we are a visual society and these
arguments
> Diop and Obenga have made have not been made public (at large) where > the people could see the debates. If we can get a symposium just like
> the one for UNESCO, and have it covered by C-Span and other media, > here in the United States, with more scholars contributing, I think
we
> can settle this once and for all.
>
> I think since 1973 there has been more evidence that supports Diop's > and Obenga's claims. This can be introduced with more rigor and we can > review the tapes as would football players after a game. I haven't > heard of Hawass agreeing to be on any panel to debate this issue
and I > think he needs to be there. There needs to be a final confrontation, > bringing all of the available evidence. It can have 4 aspects to the > debate: Archeology, Linguistics, Philosophy, and overall cultural > connections.
>
> I think Bro. Manu Ampim can lead this charge and gather the other > scholars, in the States, Europe and the Africa, to participate. We can > organize it to happen anywhere from 6 months to a year.
>
> What say ye?
>
> Asar Imhotep
> <http://www.mochasuite.com>
>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Alex van Deelen" wrote:
>
>
>>> Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief (Hawass)
>>> Posted by: "Wayne Owens" majadi9@ majadi9
>>> Wed Sep 26, 2007 4:51 am (PST)
>
>
>>> Of course in Hawass' "guesstimation" they cannot be Afrikan.

>>> This would of course hinder the Aryan theoretical framework
>>> that has been historically presented. Secondly this would
>>> contradict the erroneous idea that Afrikans could not have
>>> built nor contribute in any shape form nor fashion to the >>> genius of Nile Valley Civilizations.

>>

>> What troubles me, is that an individual like that is allowed
>> to handle Egyptian antiquities.

>>

>> Can we really trust him not to destroy or mislabel items >> that show the Egytpians were Black?

>>

>> Will he re-label such items as 'Nubian', or make them
>> disappear?

>>

>> When is egyptology going to be regulated in a modern
>> and transparant manner?

>>

>> There have been several complaints about Hawass,
>> but usually people are too scared to even go on the >> record.

>>

>> Alex

>>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

---

> Email and AIM finally together. You've gotta check out free AOL
Mail! - <http://mail.aol.com>

>

| 23177|2007-09-27 00:13:54|Mahari Mengistu|Re: A new symposium proposal - Tutankhamun
was not black|

>>population who are eager<<

"population who IS eager...". Sorry.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:

>

> >>Some years ago, I believe when Dr. Obenga was at Temple, Molefi

> Asante tried to organize a symposium like you suggest and no white > scholar would commit.<<

>

> This, to me, is exactly like what is occurring in the upcoming

> Republican debate geared to the black community hosted by Tavis

> Smiley where all of the top four(?) presidential candidates have > refused to appear. And why? Because it is a debate they will > inevitably lose to the black audience. And why? Because they are > wrong and racist and it will become indubitably clear; so they don't > show up and they lose a little but they can make up for a lot of

the > loss through their lies and spin. Their winning tactic is in making

> statements using words and social attitudes that set off > racist/survival emotions and they can't do that in a question and > answer debate. Their success at "spinning" is assured by an > essentially racist population who are eager to believe them.

> HTP,

> Mahari

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, bonotchim@ wrote:

> >

> > Some years ago, I believe when Dr. Obenga was at Temple, Molefi

> Asante tried to organize a symposium like you suggest and no white > scholar would commit. Because of what Dr. Diop and Obenga did in?

> Cairo another symposium is unlikely.

> > Bro. Asar did you hear about or attend the African Nationalist?

Mdw

> Ntr conference in New York? It was in June or July.

> > Bro.B.

> >

> > -----Original Message-----

> > From: asar_imhotep

> > To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> > Sent: Wed, 26 Sep 2007 3:43 pm

> > Subject: [Ta_Seti] A new symposium proposal - Tutankhamun was not

> black

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >
> > This is what I propose, and I am so serious about this. We need to > > have another UNESCO like symposium of the peopling of Ancient Ta-> Merri.
> >
> > The problem today is that we are a visual society and these
> arguments
> > Diop and Obenga have made have not been made public (at large)
where > > the people could see the debates. If we can get a symposium just > like
> > the one for UNESCO, and have it covered by C-Span and other media, > > here in the United States, with more scholars contributing, I think
> we > > can settle this once and for all.
> >
> > I think since 1973 there has been more evidence that supports
Diop's
> > and Obenga's claims. This can be introduced with more rigor and we
> can > > review the tapes as would football players after a game. I haven't > > heard of Hawass agreeing to be on any panel to debate this issue
> and I > > think he needs to be there. There needs to be a final
confrontation, > > bringing all of the available evidence. It can have 4 aspects to
the > > debate: Archeology, Linguistics, Philosophy, and overall cultural > > connections.
> >
> > I think Bro. Manu Ampim can lead this charge and gather the other > > scholars, in the States, Europe and the Africa, to participate.
We
> can > > organize it to happen anywhere from 6 months to a year.
> >
> > What say ye?
> >
> > Asar Imhotep
> > <http://www.mochasuite.com>
> >
> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Alex van Deelen"
wrote:
> > >

>>>> Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief
(Hawass)

>>>> Posted by: "Wayne Owens" majadi9@ majadi9

>>>> Wed Sep 26, 2007 4:51 am (PST)

>>>

>>>> Of course in Hawass' "guesstimation" they cannot be Afrikan.

>>>> This would of course hinder the Aryan theoretical framework

>>>> that has been historically presented. Secondly this would

>>>> contradict the erroneous idea that Afrikans could not have

>>>> built nor contribute in any shape form nor fashion to the

>>>> genius of Nile Valley Civilizations.

>>>

>>> What troubles me, is that an individual like that is allowed

>>> to handle Egyptian antiquities.

>>>

>>> Can we really trust him not to destroy or mislabel items

>>> that show the Egyptians were Black?

>>>

>>> Will he re-label such items as 'Nubian', or make them

>>> disappear?

>>>

>>> When is egyptology going to be regulated in a modern

>>> and transparant manner?

>>>

>>> There have been several complaints about Hawass,

>>> but usually people are too scared to even go on the

>>> record.

>>>

>>> Alex

>>>

>>

>>

>>

>>

>>

>>

>>

>

---

> __

>> Email and AIM finally together. You've gotta check out free AOL

> Mail! - <http://mail.aol.com>

>>

>

| 23178|2007-09-27 06:18:36|Wayne Owens|Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities
chief (Hawass)|

I agree Mengistu with the "at a minimum on psychotic" concept, The work has to be advanced and taught to the masses in a practical manner in order that our young can feel that they too can produce practical solutions to our current issues. My wife and I are of the mind that we for too long have not applied our historical research to questions of poverty, famine and genocide against Afrikan people. A symposium of the sort could have widespread affects if it supplies answers to some of these questions as well. Tutankhamen was of a people whose understanding of mathematics astounded and confounded the Greeks and subsequent Aryan invaders! With this in mind our young would know there own sense of worth. The Afrikans of the Nile Valley had to have a sense of their own divine nature in order to produce such monumental work in numerous fields. My thoughts are always on how can this information help us to feed, clothe and house ourselves.

Mahari Mengistu wrote:

With all due respect to the members of this forum but it appears that most of you are naive regarding other groups attitude and interpretation of ancient Kemetan history.

Some may dismiss me as extreme but I think we should face the fact that we are dealing with people who have such a deepseated interest in perceiving us as unequal and particularly unequal to the Kemetans who they are quite frankly awed by. Their feelings, I believe, verge at a minimum on psychotic.

Someone mentioned "work, research, work" and present the evidence, KEEP it out there and let it take care of itself. These people are silly - but dangerous.

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, "elliottandelliottm tg" wrote:

>

> If he does not recognize the truth found in in Kemetian tombs and > historical documentation, in modern Egypt, where he lives, then
what

> words can be expressed in an email that will force him to stop his
> vehement and diabolical assaults against African history?

>

> I wonder if he would accept an invitation to debate our top > Kemetologist? The Iranian President was lambasted for his
ridiculous

> assertion that the Holocaust never occurred and in the same fashion
> we should give Hawass an opportunity to demonstrate his racist
views

> and outright historical distortions.

>

>

> A few years ago he allowed for a DNA test to be performed on one of > the African kings of Kemet and said unequivocally that the ancient > Kemetians were in fact Arabs but in this article he contradicted

his > own "scientific research". He said that the "Egyptians are not Arabs
> and are not Africans despite the fact that Egypt is in Africa," but > doesn't attribute an ethnicity to the people of Kemet. If they were > not Asiatic, Persians, Arabs, Greeks, or Romans then the only other > documented race would be Africans.
>
> How can he be a "Doctor of Egyptology" and not have read Herodotus > who clearly states that the people of Kemet were Ethiopian in > origin? Did he not enter the tomb of Ramses III, which has an > undeniable pictorial representation of the people of Kemet as dark> skinned Africans and identical to their Nubian neighbors? Did he > skip over the tomb paintings of Ankhnesneferibre who is depicted as a dark > skinned African? And that's another point of contention, African > people come in a wide variety of hues and a diverse background of > physical characteristics, therefore you cannot say that you must > have a certain percentage of dark pigmentation to be identified as > an African. In other words, African people range from yellow-brown > to black.
>
> It does not matter what Hawass thinks about the origins of African > civilization. Eurocentricists, for that is who supports, finances and > bolsters Hawass's "scholarly credentials" , have taken deliberate > actions to erase the African origins of western civilization for > centuries. The problem arises when African people and honest > scholars cease to teach the truth to those who seek it.
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala"
> wrote:
>
>
> > Here is Hawass' email in case anyone wants to send him a note:
> >
> > Hawass@
> >
> > I'm not sure who Hawass reports to. Hope it's not Hosni Mubarak

as

> I'm

> > unable to find his contact info.

> >

> > Regards,

> > Paul Kekai Manansala

> >

> >

> >

> >

> > -- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "elliottandelliottm tg"

> > wrote:

> > >

> > > Blatant Racism

> > >

> > > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Alex van Deelen"

> > > wrote:

> > > >

> > > >

> > >

>

http://fe25.news.re3.yahoo.com/s/afp/20070925/wl\_africa\_afp/egyptarch

> > > aeologytutankhamunr ace

> > > >

> > > > Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief

> > > > Tue Sep 25, 12:18 PM ET

> > > >

> > > > CAIRO (AFP) - Egyptian antiquities supremo Zahi Hawass insisted

> > > > Tuesday that Tutankhamun was not black despite calls by US

> > > > black

> > > > activists to recognise the boy king's dark skin colour.

> > > >

> > > > "Tutankhamun was not black, and the portrayal of ancient

> > > > Egyptian

> > > > civilisation as black has no element of truth to it," Hawass

> > > > told > > > > reporters.

> > > >

> > > > "Egyptians are not Arabs and are not Africans despite the fact

> > > > that

> > > > Egypt is in Africa," he said, quoted by the official MENA news > > > > agency.

> > > >

>>>> Hawass said he was responding to several demonstrations in >>>> Philadelphia after a lecture he gave there on September 6 >>>> where he defended his theory.
>>>>
>>>> Protestors also claimed images of King Tut were altered to
show >>>> him with lighter skin at the "Tutankhamun and the Golden Age
of
>>>> the Pharaohs" exhibit which leaves Philadelphia for London on >>>> September 30.
>>>>
>>>> The exhibition sparked an uproar when it kicked off in Los > Angeles
>>>> in June 2005 when black activists demanded that a bust of the > boy
>>>> king be removed because the statue portrays him as white.
>>>>
>>>> The face of the legendary pharaoh, who died around 3,300 years >>>> ago at the age of just 19, was reconstructed in 2005 through > images
>>>> collected through CAT scans of his mummy.
>>>>
>>>> The boy king's intact tomb caused an international sensation
>>>> when it was discovered by Briton Howard Carter in 1922
>>>> near Luxor in southern Egypt.
>>>>
>>>
>>
>
>

---

Take the Internet to Go: Yahoo!Go puts the Internet in your pocket: mail, news, photos & more.
| 23179|2007-09-27 07:25:55|clyde winters|Re: Africans Don't believe they Are Africans|
I agree with your post. But you made a mistake.

You said that African Americans don't know they, re
African. I believe you should have wrote most Africans don't believe they are Africans.

This results from the fact that most Blacks in Africa base their identity on tribe and maybe "nation", but not generically Africans. The failure to identify one self as a monolithic group keeps people in Africa from progressing.

Granted, Europeans see themselves in terms of tribes and nationalities but--they believe they are all Westerners and therefore unite against non-Western people. This disadvantages African people in the U.S. and Africa, because they seek to deal with people based on a color-blind global world, but they are confronted by a world where ethnicity and cultural identity (Western vs non-Western) dictate interpersonal and intrapersonal interactions of nations and states.

It is this sense of "non-Africaness" that make Afrocentric scholars appear as freaks to many people within and outside their own community. Afrocentric scholars are often considered freaks because the audience they are seeking to address, and would appear to be the most receptive of their message have little if any interest in their history and civilization. They have little interest because they feel, wrongly, that history has nothing to do with them--money and the pursuit of wealth--they believe make their life better. Granted, money can improve one's position in society, but it does not address one's need for self-confidence and psychological well-being. This well-being comes from recognizing one is respected, confident, capable of being all they can do.

The failure of Africans to know and understand that history situates a people within the context of their heritage and the psychological sense of well being and self-esteem all people need to effect efficacy which is constructive and relevant to their cognitive reality.

Subliminally, Africans are taught they are ignorant, barbaric and absent any history but the Medieval African Kingdoms and Slave trade. At the same time they are taught that whites built all the great civilizations Egypt, Babylon and the Greco-Roman empires. Knowledge of this false history of Blacks, lead many Blacks to feel inferior to Europeans, feelings of learned helplessness and lack of self-esteem. Europeans feel, due to this false history, that they are entitled to rule the world because it was their people--white people--who created civilization and culture. Blacks who are conditioned to trace their history back to the Medieval Kingdoms, feel that this civilization was invented by Arabs. Add this to learning about the slave trade makes most Blacks feel subconsciously they have contributed nothing to world history as shapers of history. This type of history makse African people feel inferior to all the other races who have long histories.

To many of these Blacks who may attain a high or Middle class lifestyle--they create this false notion that race does not exist, eventhough they are bombared by race every minute of every day- in the media and the schools.

The absence of a world view of "Africaness", by African people in Africa and abroad is the reason we don't have funded research positions in Afrocentric studies at university and private foundations. Most Africans just can't believe we have a history that was not guided by white Europeans and white Arabs. Granted this is all false--but failure to know ones history ALLOWS ONE TO LOSE THEIR SENSE OF WHO THEY ARE.

Clyde

--- elliottandelliottmtg
<elliottandelliottmtg@yahoo.com> wrote:

- > I absolutely agree! The only problem would be
- > generating the same
- > level of outrage on this topic, in comparison to the
- > "Jena6"
- > situation, because judicial injustice is an issue
- > that resonates
- > more clearly in the African American community then
- > the theft,
- > denial and destruction of African history. I am sure
- > you understand
- > how both issues are connected but the miseducated
- > masses will find
- > it hard to grapple with the relevance. Many African
- > Americans do not
- > consider themselves African at all.
- >
- > I think if Afrocentric scholars, and those who seek

> historical > truths, formed some sort of African Historical > Restoration Society
> and in an organized assault, confronted Eurocentric > Egyptologist and
> the television channels that promote and profit from > their lies with > undeniable historical documentation and > archeological evidence then
> the changes we desire will begin to manifest.
>
> But more importantly we need to promote our African > history in the > form of art, music and movies. We need a "Roots" for > this generation
> but instead of the scourge of slavery the glory of > Kemet will be the > topic and will lead this generation into a higher > understanding of > self.
>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep"
>
> wrote:
>
>> I heard about it and I think I asked if it was > taped somehow and >> available for purchase. But anyway, I think that > it can be done.
> The
>> climate is right and if we put enough pressure on > the likes of >> Discovery, The History Channel, Hawass and others
> who continually >> perpetuate this false sense of history, I think it > can come to >> fruition. They won't deal with the culture of > ancient ta-merri
> because >> they know it can easily be shown to compare with > the rest of
> Africa,
>> and to an extent, its remnants in African culture
> to date.
>>
>> I think if we organized with the same sincerity

> and energy as we > did > > for the Jena 6 in Louisiana, then we can make this > happen. Too many > > Egyptologists make statements on emails and paper,
> and it is time
> we > > discuss this in person where a rebuttal can be > done in a timely > fashion.
> >
> > I say we make it happen. Our ancestors fought for > us, it is time we > > fought for them.
> >
> > Asar Imhotep
> > <http://www.mochasuite.com>
> >
> >
> >
> >
> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, bonotchim@ wrote:
> > >
> > > Some years ago,? I?believe when? Dr. Obenga was > > at Temple, Molefi
> > Asante tried to organize?a?symposium like you > > suggest and?no white > > scholar would?commit. Because of what?Dr. Diop and > > Obenga?did
> > in?Cairo?another?symposium is unlikely.
> > > Bro. Asar did you hear about or attend the > > African Nationalist?
> > Mdw
> > Ntr conference in New York? It was in June or > > July.
> > > Bro.B.
> > >
> > > -----Original Message-----
> > > From: asar_imhotep
> > > To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> > > Sent: Wed, 26 Sep 2007 3:43 pm
> > > Subject: [Ta_Seti] A new symposium proposal - > > Tutankhamun was
> > not black
> > >
> > >

>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>> This is what I propose, and I am so serious > about this. We need
> to >>> have another UNESCO like symposium of the > peopling of Ancient Ta-> Merri.
>>>
>>> The problem today is that we are a visual > society and these
> arguments
>>> Diop and Obenga have made have not been made > public (at large)
> where >>> the people could see the debates. If we can get > a symposium just
> like
>>> the one for UNESCO, and have it covered by > C-Span and other
> media,
>>> here in the United States, with more scholars > contributing, I
> think we
>>> can settle this once and for all.
>>>
>>> I think since 1973 there has been more evidence > that supports
> Diop's
>>> and Obenga's claims. This can be introduced with > more rigor and
> we can >>> review the tapes as would football players after > a game. I > haven't >>> heard of Hawass agreeing to be on any panel to > debate this issue
> and I >>> think he needs to be there. There needs to be a > final
> confrontation, >>> bringing all of the available evidence. It can > have 4 aspects to
> the >>> debate: Archeology, Linguistics, Philosophy, and > overall cultural >>> connections.

>>>
>>> I think Bro. Manu Ampim can lead this charge and > gather the other >>> scholars, in the States, Europe and the Africa,
> to participate.
> We can >>> organize it to happen anywhere from 6 months to > a year.
>>>
>>> What say ye?
>>>
>>> Asar Imhotep
>>> <http://www.mochasuite.com>
>>>
>>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Alex van > Deelen"
> wrote:
>>>>
>>>>> Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt
> antiquities chief
> (Hawass)
>>>>> Posted by: "Wayne Owens" majadi9@ majadi9
>>>>> Wed Sep 26, 2007 4:51 am (PST)
>>>>
>>>>> Of course in Hawass' "guesstimation" they > cannot be Afrikan.
>>>>> This would of course hinder the Aryan > theoretical framework
>>>>> that has been historically presented.
> Secondly this would >>>>> contradict the erroneous idea that Afrikans
> could not have >>>>> built nor contribute in any shape form nor > fashion to the
>>>>> genius of Nile Valley Civilizations.
>>>>
>>>>> What troubles me, is that an individual like
> that is allowed
>>>>> to handle Egyptian antiquities.
>>>>
>>>>> Can we really trust him not to destroy or > mislabel items
>>>>> that show the Egytpians were Black?

>

=== message truncated ===

---

Building a website is a piece of cake. Yahoo! Small Business gives you all the tools to get online.

<http://smallbusiness.yahoo.com/webhosting>

| 23180|2007-09-27 08:54:55|asar_imhotep|Re: A new symposium proposal - Tutankhamun was not black|

I just sent an email to UNESCO inquiring about what are the necessary steps to get a part II to the first symposium. Hopefully someone will respond back. I will keep you all updated and I will try other avenues to find the information as well.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:

>

> I agree wholeheartedly. But for those who know me, I am an idealists > at times. Our forefathers have told us, "that whatever humans have > done, humans can do." If we built massive stone monuments in Africa, > China and the Americas, then we can sure as hell put together a > "coalition of the willing" in this day and age.

>

> The key is organization. I think some web commercials and small > booklets need to be made on why this is important. I know there is a > connection on "knowing thyself" and academic achievement. We need to > exploit that as well. We need to compile a list of all > African-American owned and run radio stations (physical and internet > based)and prepare programs and interviews on these stations leading up > to the "big event."

>

> I mean the Don Imus fiasco got BET (finally) to talk about negative > images and stereotypes and its affects on human beings (specifically > African people). If this can happen, I know we can get this thing going.

>

> To your later point of promotion, I would like to think that I am > beginning that process and aiding in that front. By no means am I > using this as self promotion, but I am currently working on a > documentary film called "Poet-Trees & Grass-Roots: The unSpoken Word > in Poetry." It is a chronicalization of Africa's oral tradition as a > method for transferring historical information, to the many branches > in the contemporary art forms. I plan to bridge the gap and educate, > while entertaining, about the history, culture and expansive effects > of African indigenous thought through spoken word poetry, hip hop, > jazz and other art forms.

>

> I also plan to do a film on African philosophy and quantum mechanics.
> Something along the lines of "What the bleep do we know," but of > course from our historic and philosophical perspectives. But what we > really need are our Lord of the Rings, our Matrixes and our Star Wars > type films.

>

> I do a lecture on college campuses called "African Spirituality and > the Matrix" that speaks about this very need for our story to be > presented in popular media (film, song, web and television). The > combination of our spirituality, pop culture and technology will yield > greater results on the masses of our people than any symposium will > ever do. I want the laymen to go research our history just like a lot > of my colleagues and friends did the weekend the movie 300 came out.
> They did the same with the Matrix films. What was the last Black movie > you have seen that made you want to research who we are and what we've > done?

>

> This is why I praise books like the "Shadow of Memnon" by Brother G.
> (although I have my reservations on writing style and Ausar Auset > Society teachings in the book). If more of our academics would express > their knowledge aesthetically, then I think we could turn the tables > around.

>

> Asar Imhotep

> <http://www.mochasuite.com>

>

>

>

>

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "elliottandelliottmtg"

> wrote:

>>

>> I absolutely agree! The only problem would be generating the same >> level of outrage on this topic, in comparison to the "Jena6"
>> situation, because judicial injustice is an issue that resonates
>> more clearly in the African American community than the theft, > > denial and destruction of African history. I am sure you understand > > how both issues are connected but the miseducated masses will find > > it hard to grapple with the relevance. Many African Americans do not > > consider themselves African at all.

> >
> > I think if Afrocentric scholars, and those who seek historical > > truths, formed some sort of African Historical Restoration Society
> > and in an organized assault, confronted Eurocentric Egyptologist and
> > the television channels that promote and profit from their lies with > > undeniable historical documentation and archeological evidence then > > the changes we desire will begin to manifest.

> >
> > But more importantly we need to promote our African history in the > > form of art, music and movies. We need a "Roots" for this generation > > but instead of the scourge of slavery the glory of Kemet will be the > > topic and will lead this generation into a higher understanding of > > self.

> >

> >

>

| 23181|2007-09-27 08:59:22|asar_imhotep|UNESCO - Social and Human Sciences - Guide to Partnerships|

Social and Human Sciences - Guide to Partnerships

| This guide to partnerships sets out how UNESCO Social and Human Sciences works and could work with partners.

|

Documents 2 of 5

It describes proposals for eight different types of partnerships to potential partners: providing advice, hosting events, assisting research, coordinating networks, providing experts, funding activities, funding fellowships, and assisting in communication.

The names of contacts are indicated for all proposals.

We hope that potential partners will discover within these pages ideas that are close to their own, to which they would readily contribute.

Click here to download the guide in PDF format.

An overall view of UNESCO's work in the field of Social and Human Sciences is available in the brochure on SHS's strategies and action.

Document Type

Brochure

Author(s)

UNESCO

Website (URL)

<http://unesdoc.unesco.org/images/0013/001375/137513e.pdf>

Publisher UNESCO
Publication Location Paris
Publication Year 17-10-2004

Number of Pages 68 p.
Editor(s) UNESCO

Format application/pdf
Type Text
Related UNESCO Themes Social and Human Sciences, Bioethics, Human Rights, Foresight, Democracy, Ethics, Social Transformations, International Migration, Human Security, Urban Development, Philosophy, Racism, Discrimination, Gender Equality
Keywords social sciences, human sciences, partners, partnership

| 23182|2007-09-27 09:28:06|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: A new symposium proposal - Tutankhamun was not black|
asar_imhotep wrote:

I just sent an email to UNESCO inquiring about what are the necessary steps to get a part II to the first symposium. Hopefully someone will respond back. I will keep you all updated and I will try other avenues to find the information as well.

>

A neutral organizer will help in getting "mainstream" participants just as was the case with the first UNESCO symposium.

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23183|2007-09-27 10:07:02|asar_imhotep|Re: A new symposium proposal - Tutankhamun was not black|
Who do you recommend?

Asar Imhotep
<http://www.mochasuite.com>

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Paul Kekai Manansala wrote:

>

>

>

> asar_imhotep wrote:

I just sent an email to UNESCO inquiring about what are the necessary > steps to get a part II to the first symposium. Hopefully someone will > respond back. I will keep you all updated and I will try other avenues > to find the information as well.

>
> >
> A neutral organizer will help in getting "mainstream" participants

just as was the case with the first UNESCO symposium.

>
> Regards,
> Paul Kekai Manansala
>

| 23184|2007-09-27 10:24:17|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: A new symposium proposal -
Tutankhamun was not black|

I was just agreeing with your contacting UNESCO. They would be the perfect organizers, and they should have the funds to do a first-rate job.

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

asar_imhotep wrote:

Who do you recommend?

Asar Imhotep
<http://www.mochasuite.com>

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Paul Kekai Manansala
wrote:

>
>
>
> asar_imhotep wrote:
I just sent an email to UNESCO inquiring about what are the necessary > steps to get a part II to the first symposium. Hopefully someone will > respond back. I will keep you all updated and I will try other avenues > to find the information as well.
>
> >
> A neutral organizer will help in getting "mainstream" participants
just as was the case with the first UNESCO symposium.
>
> Regards,
> Paul Kekai Manansala
>

| 23185|2007-09-27 10:27:02|Fatima Horta|Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief (Hawass)|

That is not a reason to stop our "ideas" like I said before its time to reveal the TRUTH, and leave behind the ignorance of others like Hollywood, Arabs, etc. Egypt is in Africa, so all its greatness was made by Africans, (black people) and if others have a problem with it then they don't love Egypt, they don't know Egypt.

Fatima

Mahari Mengistu wrote:

With all due respect to the members of this forum but it appears that most of you are naive regarding other groups attitude and interpretation of ancient Kemetan history.

Some may dismiss me as extreme but I think we should face the fact that we are dealing with people who have such a deepseated interest in perceiving us as unequal and particularly unequal to the Kemetans who they are quite frankly awed by. Their feelings, I believe, verge at a minimum on psychotic.

Someone mentioned "work, research, work" and present the evidence, KEEP it out there and let it take care of itself. These people are silly - but dangerous.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, "elliottandelliottm tg" wrote:

>

> If he does not recognize the truth found in in Kemetian tombs and > historical documentation, in modern Egypt, where he lives, then
what

> words can be expressed in an email that will force him to stop his
> vehement and diabolical assaults against African history?

>

> I wonder if he would accept an invitation to debate our top > Kemetologist? The Iranian President was lambasted for his
ridiculous

> assertion that the Holocaust never occurred and in the same fashion
> we should give Hawass an opportunity to demonstrate his racist
views

> and outright historical distortions.

>

>

> A few years ago he allowed for a DNA test to be performed on one of > the African kings of Kemet and said unequivocally that the ancient > Kemetians were in fact Arabs but in this article he contradicted

his > own "scientific research". He said that the "Egyptians are not Arabs

> and are not Africans despite the fact that Egypt is in Africa," but > doesn't attribute an ethnicity to the people of Kemet. If they were > not Asiatic, Persians, Arabs, Greeks, or Romans then the only other > documented race would be Africans.

>

> How can he be a "Doctor of Egyptology" and not have read Herodotus

> who clearly states that the people of Kemet were Ethiopian in > origin? Did he not enter the tomb of Ramses III, which has an > undeniable pictorial representation of the people of Kemet as dark> skinned Africans and identical to their Nubian neighbors? Did he > skip over the tomb paintings of Ausuar who is depicted as a dark > skinned African? And that's another point of contention, African > people come in a wide variety of hues and a diverse background of > physical characteristics, therefore you cannot say that you must > have a certain percentage of dark pigmentation to be identified as > an African. In other words, African people range from yellow-brown > to black.

>

> It does not matter what Hawass thinks about the origins of African > civilization. Eurocentrics, for that is who supports, finances and > bolsters Hawass's "scholarly credentials", have taken deliberate

> actions to erase the African origins of western civilization for > centuries. The problem arises when African people and honest > scholars cease to teach the truth to those who seek it.

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahooogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala"

> wrote:

> >

> > Here is Hawass' email in case anyone wants to send him a note:

> >

> > Hawass@

> >

> > I'm not sure who Hawass reports to. Hope it's not Hosni Mubarak

as

> I'm

> > unable to find his contact info.

> >

> > Regards,

> > Paul Kekai Manansala

> >

> >

> >

> >

> > -- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "elliottandelliottm tg"

> > wrote:

> > >

> > > Blatant Racism

> > >

> > > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Alex van Deelen"

> > > wrote:

> > > >

> > > >

> > >

>

[http://fe25.news.re3.yahoo.com/s/afp/20070925/wl\_africa
afp/egyptarch](http://fe25.news.re3.yahoo.com/s/afp/20070925/wl_africa_afp/egyptarch)

> > > aeologytutankhamunr ace

> > > >

> > > > Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief

> > > > Tue Sep 25, 12:18 PM ET

> > > >

> > > > CAIRO (AFP) - Egyptian antiquities supremo Zahi Hawass
insisted

> > > > Tuesday that Tutankhamun was not black despite calls by US
> black

> > > > activists to recognise the boy king's dark skin colour.

> > > >

> > > > "Tutankhamun was not black, and the portrayal of ancient > Egyptian

> > > > civilisation as black has no element of truth to it," Hawass
> told > > > reporters.

> > > >

> > > > "Egyptians are not Arabs and are not Africans despite the fact

> that

> > > > Egypt is in Africa," he said, quoted by the official MENA
news

> > > agency.

> > > >

> > > > Hawass said he was responding to several demonstrations in

>>>> Philadelphia after a lecture he gave there on September 6 >>>> where he defended his theory.
>>>>
>>>> Protestors also claimed images of King Tut were altered to
show >>>> him with lighter skin at the "Tutankhamun and the Golden Age
of
>>>> the Pharaohs" exhibit which leaves Philadelphia for London on >>>> September 30.
>>>>
>>>> The exhibition sparked an uproar when it kicked off in Los > Angeles
>>>> in June 2005 when black activists demanded that a bust of the > boy
>>>> king be removed because the statue portrays him as white.
>>>>
>>>> The face of the legendary pharaoh, who died around 3,300 years >>>> ago at the age of just 19, was reconstructed in 2005 through > images
>>>> collected through CAT scans of his mummy.
>>>>
>>>> The boy king's intact tomb caused an international sensation
>>>> when it was discovered by Briton Howard Carter in 1922
>>>> near Luxor in southern Egypt.
>>>>
>>>
>>
>
>

---

Got a little couch potato?

Check out fun summer activities for kids.

| 23186|2007-09-27 10:27:24|Franklin Jones|WHY ARE BLACKS SO NEGATIVELY
PORTRAYED|

One morning , about a week ago, while driving in Atlanta, a radio announcement came on saying that almost one in every African American now have herpes and most don't even know it. My immediate response was to feel anger of always hearing these negativelies that are being deliberately perpetuated about us, but my feelings of anger was overtaken by the feeling of sadness. The sadness that I felt for those blacks that believe these many negative statistics to be true about themselves.

Sadly today most African Americans are unaware that they are ongoing victims of false mis-information that are deliberately designed to meet the U.S. government's racist objective of maintaining its white dominance. You see although the U.S. Government openly professes equality for all of its citizens, its secret unrelenting commitment towards maintaining its white dominance has always resulted in it reincarnating newer methods of institutionalized racism against the advancement of its black population. Such as seen where after the abolishment of slavery Jim crow laws were then implemented.

Today, since the means of maintaining its white economic and political control used in the past are no longer morally and socially acceptable, and because the U.S. Government's sociologist and psychologist were well aware of the fact that those who make peaceful revolution impossible will make violent revolution inevitable, it became necessary to modify their methods of exploiting and suppressing its Black population into a form more socially acceptable with contemporary times; thus creating a more sophisticated system of white racism that deliberately wears only the appearance, if any, of being totally self afflicted by African Americans themselves.

[A sophisticated system of covert white racism of which blacks are made to believe that the playing fields are now even and that their failures are all totally their own.]

Today's modern method of white racism in the United States is far more sophisticated, elaborated and proficient than any system of racism previously faced by African Americans--yes even slavery. It is now implemented through the American educational, judicial and prison systems-- and prevails and is concealed through the usage of Psychological Warfare implemented through the national media that fosters a consensual environment for its unethical undertaking. It is now secretly applied through the government's proven method of Covert Counterintelligence Program. Although the formal COINTELPRO covert operations employed by the FBI directed against African Americans during the period of 1956-1971 was discontinued [upon the surface]. However, in truth--because the nineteen sixties were a period of massive black rebellion and unrest that caused the U.S. Government to feared the uprising of a violent revolution-- the FBI did not actually cease its formal domestic counterintelligence programs against African Americans, but instead actually advanced it more broadly and secretively. Today there is a far more sophisticated and massive counterintelligence program being implemented against the entire African American population.

Today the United States Government uses mis-education, false statistics and negative propaganda media reports that equates a psychological warfare that conspires to corrupt blacks of unity, reason, and common sense, thus deliberately soliciting the disparity that has now become modern Black America as a mean of meeting its objective of maintaining white dominance in the United States .Here is a simplified analogy of the psychological aspect of this modern system of racism that is now being implemented against America 's Black population. Let us say, for example, that a group of people was aboard their own massive ship and that their ship was being shadowed by another neighboring ship, a neighboring ship that was constantly broadcasting derogatory messages to the first group that their ship was lesser, smaller, not seaworthy or perhaps slowly sinking or that their crew was incompetent or was planning a mutiny. With time, the group receiving the negative messages, being unable to refute or to confirm these derogatory messages and deficiencies will grow weary and paranoid of the negative messages and will eventually comes to accept these negative assessments of themselves. The perception created by the taunting now unconsciously influences how the taunted group perceives themselves, subsequently causing them to become distrustful of themselves, doubting themselves, hating themselves and, eventually, fighting among themselves. The taunted group may even become so besieged by deep feelings of inadequacy that they may even jump into the sea and attempt to swim towards the taunting ship now believing it to be superior to their own boat even if their own ship was in fact better.

This concept of warfare uses psychology to affect the unconscious mind through deception. Its weapon is the message that it carries and the way this message affects the recipients in terms of their behavior. Within a real world setting, this is implemented against African Americans through U.S. governmental agencies that leak false derogatory press releases, documentaries, and media information concerning its Black population that are designed to perpetuate and frame the myth of Whites' racial, moral, and ethical superiority over its Black population. Its collaborators in the news media, which either knowingly or unknowingly carry the false information or create their own false information through news releases in magazine articles, radio, and television, work to demoralize, discourage, berate, subjugate, and or dismantle the Black population. The weapon is not the way it is sent, but the messages that it carries and how the messages affect the recipient and influence society.

This perversion of reality insinuates that America would be a better society as a whole if African Americans were gone, thus psychologically changing the root problem of racism in America to be due to Black's behavior rather than White's proclivity for racism. This shift of victimization that the problem of racism in America is due to the fault of African Americans, is perpetuated unrelentingly everywhere through the media. This campaign engenders distorted perceptions and increasingly prejudiced and acrimonious beliefs about its African American population that creates a consensual environment that facilitates the easier exploitation and suppression of Black America through the government's unfair justice system. Today because of this campaign of negative psychological warfare no one else questions the fact of why blacks are so disproportionately incarcerated. [For when contempt of Blacks appears to be justifiable, it is the fiercest and most effective type of racism because its witnesses, bystanders, and jurors will sit by idly allowing African Americans to be brutally mistreated under the belief that it is justified.]

This is a monumental disclosure that the U.S. Government does not ever want realized by its African American population. Today Blacks in America are victims of a more prevalent and detrimental system of covert white racism. In 1968 [after the assassination of Dr. King] when the earlier more blatant system of white racism used in the past to maintain white dominance had run its course, thus became no longer moral and socially acceptable, the United States Government secretly reincarnated its method of suppressing and exploiting its black population.

Although this modern method of governmental white racism covertly also uses the American educational system to mortifyingly mis-educate and disesteem black students and the judicial and prison systems to severely reduce black growth and upward mobility by reducing black America's ability to procreate and to vote thus to maintain its white dominance. However the most significant and detrimental aspect of this modern system of white governmental racism used today in America is its aspect of using psychological warfare against African Americans.

The worst aspect of this psychological warfare is not how it adversely affects race relations in America, but instead how it causes many blacks to perceive themselves and their community as a whole. It produces self hatred and division, pulverizes black unity thus reducing black upward mobility. Through the national media--at the behest of the Government--African Americans are being deliberately bombarded by false negative derogatory misinformation and statistics that are designed to divide, confuse and produce internalized racism and self hatred among its African American population and to produce a consensual environment for Black suppression .

The negative derogatory information and statistics that falsely perpetuates white moral and intellectual superiority over its black population, are being deliberately disseminated through the national media to create a consensual environment -before the world audience- that allows the U.S. government to disproportionately mistreat its Black population through its judicial and prison systems. [It justifies the disproportioned incarceration of its black populous] Moreover, it also meets the government's objective of maintaining its white dominance by producing psychological feelings among its Black population that pulverizes Black unity thus reducing black upward mobility. Moreover, it is this ongoing secret governmental operation that is the core factor of the now unprecedented profound division, confused outlook, and many disparities now afflicting modern Black America.

The Black psyche has been so bombarded by negative misinformation of themselves that many will disregard this monumental disclosure as being pure nonsense. In fact because of the success of this Governmental psychological warfare it has become literally easier, for many blacks to actually accept the belief that the problem of Black America has more to do with themselves than that of white racism. This campaign has been so successful that today many blacks may even attack another black person for making this claim that white racism is still the core problem in America.

Although this may sound a bit like bad science fiction, Psychological Warfare is a real and well-proven technology that exceeds the territorial limits of conventional warfare to penetrate the proposed target. This type of psychological warfare has been used by the military since World War II. The British Special Operation Executives (SOE) was pioneering this form of propaganda during the Second World War. The British Government, between 1930-1940, conducted psychological warfare against Germany, by putting together a massive department staffed by many former journalists that conducted secret journalism and planted favorable stories in the world's press. Generally using friendly newspapers editors, but also using bribery to get pro-allied stories in print, British pilots also dropped propaganda leaflets and spread rumors concerning Germany's relations with France and other aspects of the war. Although the usage of psychological warfare began within a military setting, it was eventually realized by governmental and societal elites that this method of psychological warfare could be useful for totally controlling society. Therefore, psychological warfare technology evolved from its military usage against foreign enemies to being used to control society domestically. Today, the U.S. government, like many other developed nations, conducts planned campaigns of extensive strategic psychological operations through the national media to influence the perception and climate of the nation towards the attainment of its governmental objectives. Participating federal agencies may include the National Security Council, The Office of Strategic Council, The Central Intelligence Agency, and The Federal Bureau of Investigations. However, when it is executed domestically it is more often commonly referred to by governmental and military officials as psychological operations [PSYOPs] rather than Psychological Warfare.

The ability to influence the nation in mass using psychological operations through the national media is highly effective because the media itself is very powerful in terms of its influence. For the media helps shape our views of the world, what we consider to be good or bad, and also forges our deepest values, identities, and our sense of what it means, for example, to be male or female. These facts, combined with those studies showing that the average American watches 18 hundred hours of television each year, affirm that there is a great inclination for Americans to be affected by psychological operations conducted through the national media.

The reason psychological warfare is so unknown to most Americans is because its very nature is to be covert, and because it is not the stuff of adventure and the excitement of war that films or novels portray. However, psychological warfare is a real, sound, and proven governmental technology that has been used by the U.S. Government for many decades, and its usage is ongoing even now. For as recently as July 2004, a story was reported by the New York Times that the Defense Department had paid the Rendon Group, a Washington-based international consulting firm, $100,000 per month to help the Office of Strategic Information (OSI) with a broad campaign that would include negative propaganda or disinformation.

The report stated that the OSI was established to spread positive messages about the war on terrorism, but it would also use disinformation and misinformation to mislead friends and foe alike. The report went on to say that the office of Strategic Influence had been set up to disseminate truthful information openly but also to spread what senior pentagon officials called "the Blackest of Black programs." The organization works on ways to influence and mislead the media abroad and also domestically in America, such as spreading positive messages about the war on terrorism or perpetuating disinformation through its frequent collusion with news media personnel to publish false and distorted material at the government's behest.

This is not some conspiracy theory premise that perpetuates Black defeatism. Nor is this a case of one peddling victim-hood in a frivolous attempt to absolve our race of our own responsibilities. This is the truth! The truth that we have been trained not to see-- trained by the false world that has been pulled over our eyes. When ever white our allowed to run the score board, thus being allowed to be the score keepers, they will used psychological warfare that perpetuates their superiority over others groups. Have history not already shown us this? By doing so, the United States Government acquired a far more insidious and covert method of ensuring that its white dominance is maintained that exists behind a clever shroud of secrecy and deceit ? for it is in this way that the evils of racism thrive best -- when its victims do not recognize the evil.

To learn more or to get a copy of this book "the Black Matrix please to www.divineblack\_truth.org

---

Got a little couch potato?

Check out fun summer activities for kids.

| 23187|2007-09-27 10:27:43|elliottandelliottmtg|Re: Africans Don't believe they Are Africans|

I also agree with everything in your post except the fact that I said "Many African Americans do not consider themselves African at all." I have been told, on several occasions, from numerous African Americans, that they do not consider themselves as African and would rather be identified as Black.

You have very eloquently explained the some of the reasons why this occurs within the African American community.

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, clyde winters wrote:

>

> I agree with your post. But you made a mistake.

>

> You said that African Americans don't know they're

> African. I believe you should have wrote most Africans > don't believe they are Africans.

>

> This results from the fact that most Blacks in Africa

> base their identity on tribe and maybe "nation", but > not generically Africans. The failure to identify one

> self as a monolithic group keeps people in Africa from > progressing.

>

> Granted, Europeans see themselves in terms of tribes

> and nationalities but--they believe they are all

> Westerners and therefore unite against non-Western > people. This disadvantages African people in the U.S.

> and Africa, because they seek to deal with people > based on a color-blind global world, but they are > confronted by a world where ethnicity and cultural > identity (Western vs non-Western) dictate > interpersonal and intrapersonal interactions of > nations and states.

>

> It is this sense of "non-Africaness" that make

> Afrocentric scholars appear as freaks to many people > within and outside their own community. Afrocentric

- > scholars are often considered freaks because the
- > audience they are seeking to address, and would appear
- > to be the most receptive of their message have little
- > if any interest in their history and civilization. They
- > have little interest because they feel, wrongly, that
- > history has nothing to do with them--money and the - > pursuit of wealth--they believe make there life
- > better. Granted, money can i mprove one's position in
- > society, but it does not address one's need for
- > self-confidence and psychological well-being. This
- > well-being comes from recognizing one is
- > respected,confident, capable of being all they can do.
- >
- > The failure of Africans to know and understand that
- > history situates a people within the context of their
- > heritage and the psychological sense of well being and
- > self-esteem all people need to effect efficacy which
- > is contructive and relevant to their cognitive
- > reality.
- >
- > Subliminally, Africans are taught they are ignorant,
- > barbaric and absent any history but the Medieval
- > African Kingdoms and Slave trade. At the same time
- > they are taught that whites built all the great
- > civilizations Egypt, Babylon and the Greco-Roman
- > empires. Knowledge of this false history of Blacks,
- > lead many Blacks to feel inferior to
- > Europeans,feelings of learned helplessness and lack of
- > self-esteem. Europeans feel, due to this false
- > history, that they are entitled to rule the world
- > because it was their people--white people--who created
- > civilization and culture. Blacks who are conditioned
- > to trace their history back to the Miedeval Kingdoms,
- > feel that this civilization was invented by Arabs. Add
- > this to learning about the slave trade makes most
- > Blacks feel subconsiously they have contributed
- > nothing to world history as shapers of history. This
- > type of history makse African people feel inferior to
- > all the other races who have long histories.
- >
- > To many of these Blacks who may attain a high or
- > Middle class lifestyle--they create this false notion
- > that race does not exist, eventhough they are bombared
- > by race every minute of every day- in the media and
- > the schools.
- >

>
> The absence of a world view of "Africaness", by > African people in Africa and abroad is the reason we > don't have funded research positions in Afrocentric > studies at university and private foundations. Most > Africans just can't believe we have a history that was > not guided by white Europeans and white Arabs. Granted > this is all false--but failure to know ones history > ALLOWS ONE TO LOSE THEIR SENSE OF WHO THEY ARE.

>
> Clyde

>
>
>
>
> --- elliottdelliotmtg
> wrote:

>
> > I absolutely agree! The only problem would be > > generating the same > > level of outrage on this topic, in comparison to the
> > "Jena6"
> > situation, because judicial injustice is an issue
> > that resonates
> > more clearly in the African American community then
> > the theft,
> > denial and destruction of African history. I am sure
> > you understand
> > how both issues are connected but the miseducated
> > masses will find > > it hard to grapple with the relevance. Many African > > Americans do not > > consider themselves African at all.

> >
> > I think if Afrocentric scholars, and those who seek
> > historical > > truths, formed some sort of African Historical > > Restoration Society
> > and in an organized assault, confronted Eurocentric > > Egyptologist and
> > the television channels that promote and profit from
> > their lies with > > undeniable historical documentation and > > archeological evidence then
> > the changes we desire will begin to manifest.
> >
> > But more importantly we need to promote our African

> > history in the > > form of art, music and movies. We need a "Roots" for > > this generation
> > but instead of the scourge of slavery the glory of > > Kemet will be the > > topic and will lead this generation into a higher > > understanding of > > self.
> >
> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep"
> >
> > wrote:
> > >
> > > I heard about it and I think I asked if it was > > taped somehow and > > > available for purchase. But anyway, I think that > > it can be done.
> > The
> > > climate is right and if we put enough pressure on
> > the likes of
> > > Discovery, The History Channel, Hawass and others
> > who continually
> > > perpetuate this false sense of history, I think it
> > can come to > > > fruition. They won't deal with the culture of > > ancient ta-merri
> > because > > > they know it can easily be shown to compare with > > the rest of
> > Africa,
> > > and to an extent, its remnants in African culture
> > to date.
> > >
> > > I think if we organized with the same sincerity
> > and energy as we
> > did
> > > for the Jena 6 in Louisiana, then we can make this > > happen. Too many > > > Egyptologists make statements on emails and paper,
> > and it is time
> > we > > > discuss this in person where a rebuttal can be > > done in a timely > > fashion.
> > >
> > > I say we make it happen. Our ancestors fought for > > us, it is time we > > > fought for them.

> > >
> > > Asar Imhotep
> > > <http://www.mochasuite.com>
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, bonotchim@ wrote:
> > > >
> > > > Some years ago,? I?believe when? Dr. Obenga was
> > at Temple, Molefi
> > > Asante tried to organize?a?s symposium like you > > suggest and?no white > > > scholar would?commit. Because of what?Dr. Diop and > > Obenga?did
> > > in?Cairo?another?s symposium is unlikely.
> > > > Bro. Asar did you hear about or attend the > > African Nationalist?
> > Mdw
> > > Ntr conference in New York? It was in June or > > July.
> > > > Bro.B.
> > > >
> > > > -----Original Message-----
> > > > From: asar_imhotep
> > > > To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> > > > Sent: Wed, 26 Sep 2007 3:43 pm
> > > > Subject: [Ta_Seti] A new symposium proposal - > > Tutankhamun was
> > not black
> > > >
> > > >
> > > >
> > > >
> > > >
> > > >
> > > >
> > > > This is what I propose, and I am so serious > > about this. We need
> > to > > > > have another UNESCO like symposium of the > > peopling of Ancient Ta-> > Merri.
> > > >
> > > > The problem today is that we are a visual

> > society and these
> > arguments
> > > Diop and Obenga have made have not been made > > public (at large)
> > where
> > > the people could see the debates. If we can get > > a symposium just
> > like
> > > the one for UNESCO, and have it covered by > > C-Span and other
> > media,
> > > here in the United States, with more scholars
> > contributing, I
> > think we
> > > can settle this once and for all.
> > >
> > > I think since 1973 there has been more evidence > > that supports
> > Diop's
> > > and Obenga's claims. This can be introduced with > > more rigor and
> > we can > > > review the tapes as would football players after > > a game. I > > haven't > > > heard of Hawass agreeing to be on any panel to > > debate this issue
> > and I > > > think he needs to be there. There needs to be a > > final
> > confrontation,
> > > bringing all of the available evidence. It can > > have 4 aspects to
> > the > > > debate: Archeology, Linguistics, Philosophy, and > > overall cultural > > > connections.
> > >
> > > I think Bro. Manu Ampim can lead this charge and > > gather the other > > > scholars, in the States, Europe and the Africa,
> > to participate.
> > We can > > > organize it to happen anywhere from 6 months to > > a year.
> > >

>>>> What say ye?
>>>>
>>>> Asar Imhotep
>>>> <http://www.mochasuite.com>
>>>>
>>>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Alex van >> Deelen"
>> wrote:
>>>>>
>>>>>> Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt
>> antiquities chief
>> (Hawass)
>>>>>> Posted by: "Wayne Owens" majadi9@ majadi9
>>>>>> Wed Sep 26, 2007 4:51 am (PST)
>>>>>
>>>>>> Of course in Hawass' "guesstimation" they
>> cannot be Afrikan.
>>>>>> This would of course hinder the Aryan
>> theoretical framework
>>>>>> that has been historically presented.
>> Secondly this would >>>>>> contradict the erroneous idea that Afrikans
>> could not have >>>>>> built nor contribute in any shape form nor >> fashion to the
>>>>>> genius of Nile Valley Civilizations.
>>>>>
>>>>>> What troubles me, is that an individual like
>> that is allowed
>>>>>> to handle Egyptian antiquities.
>>>>>
>>>>>> Can we really trust him not to destroy or
>> mislabel items
>>>>>> that show the Egyptians were Black?
>>
> === message truncated ===
>
>
>
>
>

---

> Building a website is a piece of cake. Yahoo! Small Business gives you all the tools to get online.

> <http://smallbusiness.yahoo.com/webhosting>

>

| 23188|2007-09-27 10:30:25|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: A new symposium proposal - Tutankhamun was not black|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Paul Kekai Manansala wrote:

>

> I was just agreeing with your contacting UNESCO. They would be the perfect organizers, and they should have the funds to do a first-rate job.>

Or they should be able to cobble up sponsors for the conference.

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23189|2007-09-27 11:21:50|kungfuhustle|Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief (Hawass)|

Why not collaborate on a "History Of The World" movie script, and hawk it to Spike Lee, or John Singleton as their "EPIC" classic to secure their Hollywood legacies?

Possibly, such a vehicle could be utilized to stimulate worldwide black investment to finance, produce, and distribute it.

It seems obvious that whites not only "borrow" the history, but also enhance the illusion using media vehicles such EPIC "classics" such as, The Bible, The Greatest Story Ever Told, The King And I, Story Of Mose, along with science fictions like, Star Gate, The Mummy, Indian Jones, ect. to force mass opinion to their worldview.

To my knowledge, no alternative black documentary tracing from Africa, to ancient Egypt, to the bible has never been done. It's just my opinion, but blacks clearly have the knowledge and resources to successfully accomplish such a task. It could be started with a shared outline on a Groove site.

I have to ask, why don't we?

On release, what would be the estimated demand, and potential sale of such a fact based documentary? More importantly, what would be the impact on world opinion following it's release? If Martin Bernal received such attention from black Athena, this vehicle could possibly create enough debate to last decades.

Why not?

Meninarmer

On Thu, 2007-09-27 at 09:01 -0700, Fatima Horta wrote:

- > That is not a reason to stop our "ideas" like I said before its time
- > to reveal the TRUTH, and leave behind the ignorance of others like
- > Hollywood, Arabs, etc. Egypt is in Africa, so all its greatness was
- > made by Africans, (black people) and if others have a problem with it
- > then they don't love Egypt, they don't know Egypt.

>

> Fatima

>

> Mahari Mengistu <mahari@myway.com> wrote:

- > With all due respect to the members of this forum but it
- > appears that
- > most of you are naive regarding other groups attitude and
- > interpretation of ancient Kemetan history.
- > Some may dismiss me as extreme but I think we should face the
- > fact
- > that we are dealing with people who have such a deepseated
- > interest
- > in perceiving us as unequal and particularly unequal to the
- > Kemetans
- > who they are quite frankly awed by. Their feelings, I believe,
- > verge
- > at a minimum on psychotic.
- > Someone mentioned "work, research, work" and present the
- > evidence,
- > KEEP it out there and let it take care of itself. These people
- > are
- > silly - but dangerous.
- > HTP,
- > Mahari

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "elliottandelliottmtg"

> wrote:

>>

- >> If he does not recognize the truth found in in Kemetian
- > tombs and
- >> historical documentation, in modern Egypt, where he lives,
- > then
- > what
- >> words can be expressed in an email that will force him to
- > stop his
- >> vehement and diabolical assaults against African history?
- >>
- >> I wonder if he would accept an invitation to debate our top
- >> Kemetologist? The Iranian President was lambasted for his
- > ridiculous

> > assertion that the Holocaust never occurred and in the same
> fashion
> > we should give Hawass an opportunity to demonstrate his > racist
> views
> > and outright historical distortions.
> >
> >
> > A few years ago he allowed for a DNA test to be performed on > one of > > the African kings of Kemet and said unequivocally that the > ancient > > Kemetians were in fact Arabs but in this article he > contradicted
> his > > own "scientific research". He said that the "Egyptians are > not
> Arabs
> > and are not Africans despite the fact that Egypt is in > Africa," but > > doesn't attribute an ethnicity to the people of Kemet. If > they were > > not Asiatic, Persians, Arabs, Greeks, or Romans then the > only other > > documented race would be Africans.
> >
> > How can he be a "Doctor of Egyptology" and not have read
> Herodotus
> > who clearly states that the people of Kemet were Ethiopian
> in > > origin? Did he not enter the tomb of Ramses III, which has > an > > undeniable pictorial representation of the people of Kemet > as dark> > skinned Africans and identical to their Nubian neighbors?
> Did he > > skip over the tomb paintings of Ankhnesneferibre who is depicted as a > dark > > skinned African? And that's another point of contention, > African
> > people come in a wide variety of hues and a diverse > background of > > physical characteristics, therefore you cannot say that you > must > > have a certain percentage of dark pigmentation to be > identified as > > an African. In other words, African people range from > yellow-brown

> > to black.
> >
> > It does not matter what Hawass thinks about the origins of > African
> > civilization. Eurocentrics, for that is who supports, > finances and > > bolsters Hawass's "scholarly credentials", have taken > deliberate > > actions to erase the African origins of western civilization
> for > > centuries. The problem arises when African people and > honest
> > scholars cease to teach the truth to those who seek it.
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala"
> > wrote:
> > >
> > > Here is Hawass' email in case anyone wants to send him a > note:
> > >
> > > Hawass@
> > >
> > > I'm not sure who Hawass reports to. Hope it's not Hosni > Mubarak
> as
> > I'm
> > > unable to find his contact info.
> > >
> > > Regards,
> > > Paul Kekai Manansala
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > > -- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "elliottandelliottmtg"
> > > wrote:

>>>>
>>>> Blatant Racism
>>>>
>>>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoo.com, "Alex van Deelen"
>
>>>> wrote:
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>
>>
> http://fe25.news.re3.yahoo.com/s/afp/20070925/wl\_africa\_afp/egyptarch
>>>> aeologytutankhamunrace
>>>>>
>>>>> Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief
>>>>> Tue Sep 25, 12:18 PM ET
>>>>>
>>>>> CAIRO (AFP) - Egyptian antiquities supremo Zahi
> Hawass
> insisted >>>>> Tuesday that Tutankhamun was not black despite calls > by US
>> black >>>>> activists to recognise the boy king's dark skin > colour.
>>>>>
>>>>> "Tutankhamun was not black, and the portrayal of
> ancient >> Egyptian
>>>>> civilisation as black has no element of truth to it,"
> Hawass
>> told >>>>> reporters.
>>>>>
>>>>> "Egyptians are not Arabs and are not Africans despite
> the > fact
>> that >>>>> Egypt is in Africa," he said, quoted by the official > MENA
> news
>>>>> agency.
>>>>>
>>>>> Hawass said he was responding to several > demonstrations in >>>>> Philadelphia after a lecture he gave there on > September 6

>>>> where he defended his theory.
>>>>
>>>> Protestors also claimed images of King Tut were > altered to
> show
>>>> him with lighter skin at the "Tutankhamun and the > Golden Age
> of >>>> the Pharaohs" exhibit which leaves Philadelphia for > London on >>>> September 30.
>>>>
>>>> The exhibition sparked an uproar when it kicked off in > Los > Angeles
>>>> in June 2005 when black activists demanded that a bust > of the > boy
>>>> king be removed because the statue portrays him as > white.
>>>>
>>>> The face of the legendary pharaoh, who died around > 3,300 years
>>>> ago at the age of just 19, was reconstructed in 2005 > through
> images >>>> collected through CAT scans of his mummy.
>>>>
>>>> The boy king's intact tomb caused an international > sensation
>>>> when it was discovered by Briton Howard Carter in 1922
>>>> near Luxor in southern Egypt.
>>>>
>>>>
>>>
>>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
_____
> Got a little couch potato?
> Check out fun summer activities for kids.
>

>

>

| 23190|2007-09-27 11:35:47|Alex van Deelen|Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief (Hawass)|

Posted by: "elliottandelliottmtg" elliottandelliottmtg@yahoo.com

elliottandelliottmtg

Wed Sep 26, 2007 10:26 pm (PST)

> But more importantly we need to promote our African history in the > form of art, music and movies. We need a "Roots" for this generation > but instead of the scourge of slavery the glory of Kemet will be the > topic and will lead this generation into a higher understanding of > self.

Danny Glover is doing a lot of Afrocentric (for want of a different word) projects.

This is oeuvre as a producer (from the IMDB):

1. Toussaint (2007) (pre-production) (producer)
2. The Harimaya Bridge (2007) (pre-production) (executive producer)
3. Salt of This Sea (2008) (post-production) (producer)
4. Africa Unite (2007) (post-production) (executive producer)
5. Bamako (2006) (executive producer)
6. The Law and Mr. Lee (2003) (TV) (producer)
7. Good Fences (2003) (TV) (producer)
8. 3 A.M. (2001) (executive producer)
9. Freedom Song (2000) (TV) (executive producer)
10. "Courage" (2000) TV Series (executive producer) (unknown episodes)
11. Buffalo Soldiers (1997) (TV) (executive producer)

<http://former.imdb.com/name/nm0000418/>

Maybe he would be interested, or would know people who are interested in such a project.

Alex

| 23191|2007-09-27 11:45:50|Alex van Deelen|Re: A new symposium proposal - Tutankhamun was not black|

> I think Bro. Manu Ampim can lead this charge and gather the other > scholars, in the States, Europe and the Africa, to participate. We can > organize it to happen anywhere from 6 months to a year.
>
> What say ye?
>

- > Asar Imhotep
- > <http://www.mochasuite.com>

I am all for it. I have no experience with the mechanics of how this has been done before.

| 23192|2007-09-27 11:45:50|Alex van Deelen|A new symposium proposal - Tutankhamun was not black|

- > I think Bro. Manu Ampim can lead this charge and gather the other
- > scholars, in the States, Europe and the Africa, to participate. We can
- > organize it to happen anywhere from 6 months to a year.
- >
- > What say ye?
- >
- > Asar Imhotep
- > <http://www.mochasuite.com>

Asar, I am all for it. I don't know the exact mechanics of making it happen, but I would support it with anything I can do.

Alex

| 23193|2007-09-27 11:51:05|Alex van Deelen|Re: A new symposium proposal - Tutankhamun was not black|

Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief (Hawass)

Posted by: "Freddie Thompson" arumese@yahoo.com arumese

Wed Sep 26, 2007 9:10 pm (PST)

- > Hawass understands the climate (the Western mindset) regarding
- > ideas concerning history and Black people's role in it. He has
- > obviously taken his cues from the trends that stem from modern
- > racist traditions. He takes shelter in this away from the objective
- > scrutiny of responsible Afrocentric historians and the evidences
- > they have re-introduced to the world.
- >
- > Fred

Maybe a signed letter would do something. A mission statement for modern egyptology and an Afrocentric point of view where Ancient Egypt is concerned.

There is an online petition forum that could also be used.
www.petitiononline.com/

Alex

| 23194|2007-09-27 12:16:25|Everett Prewitt|Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquitieschief (Hawass)|

I'm a quiet participant in this group, but I'd like to offer that we don't omit fictional writing. A fictional novel with believable history and setting can often sway opinion as effectively as non-fiction. I'm always asked if my novel was a true story even though it was marketed as fiction. You need look no further than the DaVinci Code as an example of a fictional book that religious authorities felt they had to respond to.

J. Everett Prewitt

-----Original Message-----

From: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com mailto:[Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com] On Behalf Of kungfuhustle

Sent: Thursday, September 27, 2007 1:55 PM

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquitieschief (Hawass)

Why not collaborate on a "History Of The World" movie script, and hawk it to Spike Lee, or John Singleton as their "EPIC" classic to secure their Hollywood legacies?

Possibly, such a vehicle could be utilized to stimulate worldwide black investment to finance, produce, and distribute it.

It seems obvious that whites not only "borrow" the history, but also enhance the illusion using media vehicles such EPIC "classics" such as, The Bible, The Greatest Story Ever Told, The King And I, Story Of Mose, along with science fictions like, Star Gate, The Mummy, Indian Jones, ect. to force mass opinion to their worldview.

To my knowledge, no alternative black documentary tracing from Africa, to ancient Egypt, to the bible has never been done. It's just my opinion, but blacks clearly have the knowledge and resources to successfully accomplish such a task. It could be started with a shared outline on a Groove site.

I have to ask, why don't we?

On release, what would be the estimated demand, and potential sale of such a fact based documentary? More importantly, what would be the impact on world opinion following it's release? If Martin Bernal received such attention from black Athena, this vehicle could possibly create enough debate to last decades.

Why not?

Meninarmer

On Thu, 2007-09-27 at 09:01 -0700, Fatima Horta wrote:

- > That is not a reason to stop our "ideas" like I said before its time
- > to reveal the TRUTH, and leave behind the ignorance of others like
- > Hollywood, Arabs, etc. Egypt is in Africa, so all its greatness was
- > made by Africans, (black people) and if others have a problem with it
- > then they don't love Egypt, they don't know Egypt.

>

> Fatima

>

> Mahari Mengistu <mahari@myway.com> wrote:

- > With all due respect to the members of this forum but it
- > appears that
- > most of you are naive regarding other groups attitude and
- > interpretation of ancient Kemetan history.
- > Some may dismiss me as extreme but I think we should face the
- > fact
- > that we are dealing with people who have such a deepseated
- > interest
- > in perceiving us as unequal and particularly unequal to the
- > Kemetans
- > who they are quite frankly awed by. Their feelings, I believe,
- > verge
- > at a minimum on psychotic.
- > Someone mentioned "work, research, work" and present the
- > evidence,
- > KEEP it out there and let it take care of itself. These people
- > are
- > silly - but dangerous.
- > HTP,
- > Mahari

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "elliottandelliottmtg"

> wrote:

>>

- >> If he does not recognize the truth found in in Kemetian
- > tombs and
- >> historical documentation, in modern Egypt, where he lives,
- > then
- > what
- >> words can be expressed in an email that will force him to
- > stop his
- >> vehement and diabolical assaults against African history?
- >>
- >> I wonder if he would accept an invitation to debate our top

> > Kemetologist? The Iranian President was lambasted for his
> ridiculous
> > assertion that the Holocaust never occurred and in the same
> fashion
> > we should give Hawass an opportunity to demonstrate his > racist
> views
> > and outright historical distortions.
> >
> >
> > A few years ago he allowed for a DNA test to be performed on > one of > > the African kings of Kemet and said unequivocally that the > ancient > > Kemetians were in fact Arabs but in this article he > contradicted
> his > > own "scientific research". He said that the "Egyptians are > not
> Arabs
> > and are not Africans despite the fact that Egypt is in > Africa," but > > doesn't attribute an ethnicity to the people of Kemet. If > they were > > not Asiatic, Persians, Arabs, Greeks, or Romans then the > only other > > documented race would be Africans.
> >
> > How can he be a "Doctor of Egyptology" and not have read
> Herodotus
> > who clearly states that the people of Kemet were Ethiopian
> in > > origin? Did he not enter the tomb of Ramses III, which has > an > > undeniable pictorial representation of the people of Kemet
> as dark-
> > skinned Africans and identical to their Nubian neighbors?
> Did he > > skip over the tomb paintings of Ankhnesneferibre who is depicted as a > dark
> > skinned African? And that's another point of contention, > African
> > people come in a wide variety of hues and a diverse > background of > > physical characteristics, therefore you cannot say that you > must > > have a certain percentage of dark pigmentation to be > identified as > > an African. In other words, African people range from > yellow-brown

> > to black.
> >
> > It does not matter what Hawass thinks about the origins of > African
> > civilization. Eurocentrics, for that is who supports,
> finances and > > bolsters Hawass's "scholarly credentials", have taken > deliberate
> > actions to erase the African origins of western civilization
> for > > centuries. The problem arises when African people and > honest
> > scholars cease to teach the truth to those who seek it.
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> > --- In Ta.Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala"
> > wrote:
> > >
> > > Here is Hawass' email in case anyone wants to send him a > > note:
> > >
> > > Hawass@
> > >
> > > I'm not sure who Hawass reports to. Hope it's not Hosni > > Mubarak
> > as
> > I'm
> > > unable to find his contact info.
> > >
> > > Regards,
> > > Paul Kekai Manansala
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >

>>> -- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "elliottandelliottmtg"
>>> wrote:
>>>>
>>>> Blatant Racism
>>>>
>>>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Alex van Deelen"
>
>>>> wrote:
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>
>
http://fe25.news.re3.yahoo.com/s/afp/20070925/wl\_africa\_afp/egyptarch
>>>> aeologytutankhamunrace
>>>>>
>>>>> Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief
>>>>> Tue Sep 25, 12:18 PM ET
>>>>>
>>>>> CAIRO (AFP) - Egyptian antiquities supremo Zahi
> Hawass
> insisted >>>>> Tuesday that Tutankhamun was not black despite calls
> by US
>> black >>>>> activists to recognise the boy king's dark skin
> colour.
>>>>>
>>>>> "Tutankhamun was not black, and the portrayal of
> ancient >> Egyptian
>>>>> civilisation as black has no element of truth to it,"
> Hawass
>> told >>>> reporters.
>>>>>
>>>>> "Egyptians are not Arabs and are not Africans despite
> the > fact
>> that >>>>> Egypt is in Africa," he said, quoted by the official > MENA
> news
>>>> agency.
>>>>>
>>>>> Hawass said he was responding to several

> demonstrations in >>>>> Philadelphia after a lecture he gave there on > September 6
>>>>> where he defended his theory.
>>>>>
>>>>> Protestors also claimed images of King Tut were > altered to
> show
>>>>> him with lighter skin at the "Tutankhamun and the > Golden Age
> of
>>>>> the Pharaohs" exhibit which leaves Philadelphia for > London on
>>>>> September 30.
>>>>>
>>>>> The exhibition sparked an uproar when it kicked off in > Los >> Angeles
>>>>> in June 2005 when black activists demanded that a bust
> of the >> boy
>>>>> king be removed because the statue portrays him as > white.
>>>>>
>>>>> The face of the legendary pharaoh, who died around > 3,300 years
>>>>> ago at the age of just 19, was reconstructed in 2005
> through
>> images >>>>> collected through CAT scans of his mummy.
>>>>>
>>>>> The boy king's intact tomb caused an international > sensation
>>>>> when it was discovered by Briton Howard Carter in 1922
>>>>> near Luxor in southern Egypt.
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>
>>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

- > Got a little couch potato?
- > Check out fun summer activities for kids.
- >
- >
- >

Ta_Seti Repository

http://groups.yahoo.com/group/ta\_seti2

Yahoo! Groups Links

| 23195|2007-09-27 12:40:50|asar_imhotep|Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt
antiquitieschief (Hawass)|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Everett Prewitt" wrote:

- >
- >
- > I'm a quiet participant in this group, but I'd like to offer that we don't

- > omit fictional writing. A fictional novel with believable history and
- > setting can often sway opinion as effectively as non-fiction. I'm always

- > asked if my novel was a true story even though it was marketed as

fiction.

- > You need look no further than the DaVinci Code as an example of a fictional

- > book that religious authorities felt they had to respond to.

>

- > J. Everett Prewitt

>

>

Like I said in a previous post, pop culture reaffirms the ideology of a people and unless the information is presented in a manner that is creative and expands the imagination, all of the information we teach means nothing.

The people need to be inspired to use the information to expand their horizons and create circumstances that allow them to reach their full human potential.

In my lectures I breakdown our needs in a manner of an assembly line. The order of operations is: sound information (education), cultivation of creative faculties and finally economic stability and growth. We have the formula all wrong when we teach in most Universities. We think that by giving them the information that that alone will make way for economic empowerment and self-determination on all fronts. We skip the most vital step and that is the cultivation and expansion of our creative faculties. That's the basis of culture. We aren't creating "culture."

Albert Einstein is quoted as saying, "Imagination is more important than knowledge!" If you can't dream up possibilities, then you can't possibly progress and expand. That's what slavery did: it killed our creative genius. So we must create the "culture" (the environment) that inspires creative thought and execution. This is why fictional books, music, action and philosophical films, video games and the like are important to this struggle.

It's ashame we study Egypt for the rest of our adult lives and miss the most fundamental aspect which made their society great and so fruitful for research: their creative capacities and expression in art. Until we start thinking like, and more importantly, expressing ourselves like ancient people, then we will forever recycle a model that does not work for our spirit and will ultimately stagnate the culture. All that to say brother, I agree.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

| 23196|2007-09-27 13:08:34|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief (Hawass)|

Please don't misunderstand my position. I am ALL in favor of groups, organizations, individuals, and communities gathering research and extensive information to archive and present to blacks, the general public and particularly to our young people. What I indicate as naجمي is the belief that these people will say "O I concede, I see and I agree with you, I was wrong and you are right" when this information is presented to them. This seems extremely unlikely since a great deal of the information about blacks contribution to history has been readily available for 2500 years and "they", it seems, intentionally decided to present "their" version of history that placed them in a position of pre-eminence. And as I said this attitude seems to be a psychotic one and psychoses are extremely difficult to correct.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Wayne Owens wrote:

>

> I agree Mengistu with the "at a minimum on psychotic" concept, The work has to be advanced and taught to the masses in a practical manner in order that our young can feel that they too can produce practical solutions to our current issues. My wife and I are of the mind that we for too long have not applied our historical research to questions of poverty, famine and genocide against Afrikan people. A symposium of the sort could have widespread affects if it supplies answers to some of these questions as well. Tutankhamen was of a people whose understanding of mathematics astounded and confounded the Greeks and subsequent Aryan invaders! With this in mind our young would know there own sense of worth. The Afrikans of the Nile Valley had to have a sense of their own divine nature in order to produce such monumental work in numerous fields. My thoughts are always on how can this information help us to feed, clothe and house ourselves.

>

> Mahari Mengistu wrote: With all due respect to the members of this forum but it appears that > most of you are naive regarding other groups attitude and

> interpretation of ancient Kemetan history.

> Some may dismiss me as extreme but I think we should face the fact > that we are dealing with people who have such a deepseated interest

> in perceiving us as unequal and particularly unequal to the Kemetans

> who they are quite frankly awed by. Their feelings, I believe, verge

> at a minimum on psychotic.

> Someone mentioned "work, research, work" and present the evidence,

> KEEP it out there and let it take care of itself. These people are > silly - but dangerous.

> HTP,

> Mahari

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "elliottandelliottmtg"

> wrote:

>>

>> If he does not recognize the truth found in in Kemetian tombs and >> historical documentation, in modern Egypt, where he lives, then

> what

>> words can be expressed in an email that will force him to stop his

>> vehement and diabolical assaults against African history?

>>

>> I wonder if he would accept an invitation to debate our top

>> Kemetologist? The Iranian President was lambasted for his

> ridiculous
> > assertion that the Holocaust never occurred and in the same
fashion
> > we should give Hawass an opportunity to demonstrate his racist
> views
> > and outright historical distortions.
> >
> >
> > A few years ago he allowed for a DNA test to be performed on one
of > > the African kings of Kemet and said unequivocally that the ancient > > Kemetians were in fact Arabs but in this article he contradicted
> his > > own "scientific research". He said that the "Egyptians are not > Arabs
> > and are not Africans despite the fact that Egypt is in Africa," but > > doesn't attribute an ethnicity to the people of Kemet. If they were > > not Asiatic, Persians, Arabs, Greeks, or Romans then the only other > > documented race would be Africans.
> >
> > How can he be a "Doctor of Egyptology" and not have read
Herodotus
> > who clearly states that the people of Kemet were Ethiopian in > > origin? Did he not enter the tomb of Ramses III, which has an > > undeniable pictorial representation of the people of Kemet as dark> > skinned Africans and identical to their Nubian neighbors? Did he > > skip over the tomb paintings of Ausar who is depicted as a dark > > skinned African? And that's another point of contention, African > > people come in a wide variety of hues and a diverse background of > > physical characteristics, therefore you cannot say that you must > > have a certain percentage of dark pigmentation to be identified
as > > an African. In other words, African people range from yellow-brown
> > to black.
> >
> > It does not matter what Hawass thinks about the origins of African
> > civilization. Eurocentrics, for that is who supports, finances
and > > bolsters Hawass's "scholarly credentials", have taken deliberate

> > actions to erase the African origins of western civilization for > > centuries. The problem arises when African people and honest > > scholars cease to teach the truth to those who seek it.

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala"

> > wrote:

> > >

> > > Here is Hawass' email in case anyone wants to send him a note:

> > >

> > > Hawass@

> > >

> > > I'm not sure who Hawass reports to. Hope it's not Hosni Mubarak

> > as

> > I'm

> > > unable to find his contact info.

> > >

> > > Regards,

> > > Paul Kekai Manansala

> > >

> > >

> > >

> > >

> > > -- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "elliottandelliottmtg"

> > > wrote:

> > > >

> > > > Blatant Racism

> > > >

> > > > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Alex van Deelen"

> > > > wrote:

> > > > >

> > > > >

> > > >

> >

>

http://fe25.news.re3.yahoo.com/s/afp/20070925/wl\_africa\_afp/egyptarch

> > > > aeologytutankhamunrace

> > > >

> > > > > Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief

>>>>> Tue Sep 25, 12:18 PM ET
>>>>>
>>>>> CAIRO (AFP) - Egyptian antiquities supremo Zahi Hawass
> insisted
>>>>> Tuesday that Tutankhamun was not black despite calls by US
>> black
>>>>> activists to recognise the boy king's dark skin colour.
>>>>>
>>>>> "Tutankhamun was not black, and the portrayal of ancient >> Egyptian
>>>>> civilisation as black has no element of truth to it,"
Hawass
>> told >>>>> reporters.
>>>>>
>>>>> "Egyptians are not Arabs and are not Africans despite the > fact
>> that >>>>> Egypt is in Africa," he said, quoted by the official MENA
> news
>>>>> agency.
>>>>>
>>>>> Hawass said he was responding to several demonstrations in >>>>> Philadelphia after a lecture he gave there on September 6 >>>>> where he defended his theory.
>>>>>
>>>>> Protestors also claimed images of King Tut were altered to
> show
>>>>> him with lighter skin at the "Tutankhamun and the Golden Age
> of >>>>> the Pharaohs" exhibit which leaves Philadelphia for London
on >>>>> September 30.
>>>>>
>>>>> The exhibition sparked an uproar when it kicked off in Los >> Angeles
>>>>> in June 2005 when black activists demanded that a bust of
the
>> boy
>>>>> king be removed because the statue portrays him as white.
>>>>>
>>>>> The face of the legendary pharaoh, who died around 3,300
years >>>>> ago at the age of just 19, was reconstructed in 2005 through

> > images > > > > collected through CAT scans of his mummy.
> > > >
> > > > The boy king's intact tomb caused an international sensation
> > > > when it was discovered by Briton Howard Carter in 1922
> > > > near Luxor in southern Egypt.

> > > >

> > > >

> > >

> >

>

>

>

>

>

>

> -----

> Take the Internet to Go: Yahoo!Go puts the Internet in your pocket:
mail, news, photos & more.

>

| 23197|2007-09-27 17:02:57|Peter Kaiza|Re: Africans Don't believe they Are Africans|
Agree with you clyde.I studied secondary school in africa around ten years agoandwe never studied egypt in detail,we only touched Meroe and kush .So mighty is the edifice of lies built by eurocentrism that I never considered egypt as specifically Black(I just thought it was a norace culture)till I read diopa year ago and since then I have been very much interested in Egypt.I agree that africans somehow lack the general african identity and tend to associate themselves with tribe but revert to the black identity only when living in europe were colour consciousness matters .But there are many exceptions for example, many african countries supported each other fighting against apartheid particularly Tanzanians. I applaud black americans becausefor the past 30 years American blacks have done great research especially in relation to egypt and many now love their motherland and don't consider it as 'primitive'. I urge african Americans to invest more in africa especially in technological fields, schools etc. I remember Julius nyerereof Tanzania once wanted to chatliberation issueswith an african american intellectual,and the American govermentsent Mohammed Ali(the boxer),Nyerere refused to speak with him. Intellectuals are a thorn to eurocentrism, and I think mind wars against racism and injustice against africans are the only way out.

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

From: olmec982000@yahoo.com

Date: Thu, 27 Sep 2007 07:25:41 -0700

Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Africans Don't believe they Are Africans

I agree with your post. But you made a mistake.

You said that African Americans don't know they,re
African. I believe you should have wrote most Africans

don't believe they are Africans.

This results from the fact that most Blacks in Africa base their identity on tribe and maybe "nation", but not generically Africans. The failure to identify one self as a monolithic group keeps people in Africa from progressing.

Granted, Europeans see themselves in terms of tribes and nationalities but--they believe they are all Westerners and therefore unite against non-Western people. This disadvantages African people in the U.S. and Africa, because they seek to deal with people based on a color-blind global world, but they are confronted by a world where ethnicity and cultural identity (Western vs non-Western) dictate interpersonal and intrapersonal interactions of nations and states.

It is this sense of "non-Africaness" that make Afrocentric scholars appear as freaks to many people within and outside their own community. Afrocentric scholars are often considered freaks because the audience they are seeking to address, and would appear to be the most receptive of their message have little if any interest in their history and civilization. They have little interest because they feel, wrongly, that history has nothing to do with them--money and the pursuit of wealth--they believe make there life better. Granted, money can i mprove one's position in society, but it does not address one's need for self-confidence and psychological well-being. This well-being comes from recognizing one is respected,confident , capable of being all they can do.

The failure of Africans to know and understand that history situates a people within the context of their heritage and the psychological sense of well being and self-esteem all people need to effect efficacy which is contructive and relevant to their cognitive reality.

Subliminally, Africans are taught they are ignorant, barbaric and absent any history but the Medieval African Kingdoms and Slave trade. At the same time they are taught that whites built all the great civilizations Egypt, Babylon and the Greco-Roman empires. Knowledge of this false history of Blacks, lead many Blacks to feel inferior to Europeans, feelings of learned helplessness and lack of self-esteem. Europeans feel, due to this false history, that they are entitled to rule the world because it was their people--white people--who created civilization and culture. Blacks who are conditioned to trace their history back to the Medieval Kingdoms, feel that this civilization was invented by Arabs. Add this to learning about the slave trade makes most Blacks feel subconsciously they have contributed nothing to world history as shapers of history. This type of history makse African people feel inferior to all the other races who have long histories.

To many of these Blacks who may attain a high or Middle class lifestyle--they create this false notion that race does not exist, eventhough they are bombared by race every minute of every day- in the media and the schools.

The absence of a world view of "Africaness" , by African people in Africa and abroad is the reason we don't have funded research positions in Afrocentric studies at university and private foundations. Most Africans just can't believe we have a history that was not guided by white Europeans and white Arabs. Granted this is all false--but failure to know ones history ALLOWS ONE TO LOSE THEIR SENSE OF WHO THEY ARE.

Clyde

--- elliottandelliottmt g
<elliottandelliottmt g@yahoo.com> wrote:

> I absolutely agree! The only problem would be > generating the same > level of outrage on this topic, in comparison to the
> "Jena6"
> situation, because judical injustice is an issue
> that resonates
> more clearly in the African American community then
> the theft,
> denial and destruction of African history. I am sure
> you understand

> how both issues are connected but the miseducated
> masses will find > it hard to grapple with the relevance. Many African > Americans do not > consider themselves African at all.
>
> I think if Afrocentric scholars, and those who seek
> historical > truths, formed some sort of African Historical > Restoration Society
> and in an organized assault, confronted Eurocentric > Egyptologist and
> the television channels that promote and profit from
> their lies with > undeniable historical documentation and > archeological evidence then
> the changes we desire will begin to manifest.
>
> But more importantly we need to promote our African > history in the > form of art, music and movies. We need a "Roots" for > this generation
> but instead of the scourge of slavery the glory of > Kemet will be the > topic and will lead this generation into a higher > understanding of > self.
>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, "asar_imhotep"
>
> wrote:
> >
> > I heard about it and I think I asked if it was > > taped somehow and > > available for purchase. But anyway, I think that > > it can be done.
> The
> > climate is right and if we put enough pressure on
> the likes of > > Discovery, The History Channel, Hawass and others
> who continually
> > perpetuate this false sense of history, I think it
> can come to > > fruition. They won't deal with the culture of > ancient ta-merri
> because

> > they know it can easily be shown to compare with > the rest of
 > Africa,
 > > and to an extent, its remnants in African culture
 > to date.
 > >
 > > I think if we organized with the same sincerity
 > and energy as we
 > did > > for the Jena 6 in Louisiana, then we can make this > happen. Too many > > Egyptologists make statements on emails and paper,
 > and it is time
 > we > > discuss this in person where a rebuttal can be > done in a timely > fashion.
 > >
 > > I say we make it happen. Our ancestors fought for > us, it is time we > > fought for them.
 > >
 > > Asar Imhotep
 > > <http://www.mochasuite.com>
 > >
 > >
 > >
 > >
 > >
 > > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, bonotchim@ wrote:
 > > >
 > > > Some years ago, I believe when Dr. Obenga was
 > > at Temple, Molefi
 > > Asante tried to organize a symposium like you
 > suggest and no white > > scholar would commit. Because of what Dr. Diop and > Obenga did
 > > in Cairo another symposium is unlikely.
 > > > Bro. Asar did you hear about or attend the > > African Nationalist?
 > > Mdw
 > > Ntr conference in New York? It was in June or > > July.
 > > > Bro.B.
 > > >
 > > > -----Original Message-----
 > > > From: asar_imhotep

>>> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
>>> Sent: Wed, 26 Sep 2007 3:43 pm
>>> Subject: [Ta_Seti] A new symposium proposal - > Tutankhamun was
> not black
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>> This is what I propose, and I am so serious > about this. We need
> to >>> have another UNESCO like symposium of the > peopling of Ancient Ta-> Merri.
>>>
>>> The problem today is that we are a visual > society and these
> arguments
>>> Diop and Obenga have made have not been made > public (at large)
> where
>>> the people could see the debates. If we can get > a symposium just
> like
>>> the one for UNESCO, and have it covered by > C-Span and other
> media,
>>> here in the United States, with more scholars > contributing, I
> think we
>>> can settle this once and for all.
>>>
>>> I think since 1973 there has been more evidence > that supports
> Diop's
>>> and Obenga's claims. This can be introduced with > more rigor and
> we can >>> review the tapes as would football players after > a game. I > haven't >>> heard of Hawass agreeing to be on any panel to > debate this issue

> and I >>> think he needs to be there. There needs to be a > final
 > confrontation,
 >>> bringing all of the available evidence. It can > have 4 aspects to
 > the >>> debate: Archeology, Linguistics, Philosophy, and > overall cultural >>> connections.
 >>>
 >>> I think Bro. Manu Ampim can lead this charge and
 > gather the other >>> scholars, in the States, Europe and the Africa,
 > to participate.
 > We can >>> organize it to happen anywhere from 6 months to > a year.
 >>>
 >>> What say ye?
 >>>
 >>> Asar Imhotep
 >>> <http://www.mochasuite.com>
 >>>
 >>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Alex van > Deelen"
 > wrote:
 >>>>
 >>>>> Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt
 > antiquities chief
 > (Hawass)
 >>>>> Posted by: "Wayne Owens" majadi9@ majadi9
 >>>>> Wed Sep 26, 2007 4:51 am (PST)
 >>>>
 >>>>> Of course in Hawass' "guesstimation" they
 > cannot be Afrikan.
 >>>>> This would of course hinder the Aryan
 > theoretical framework
 >>>>> that has been historically presented.
 > Secondly this would >>>>> contradict the erroneous idea that Afrikans
 > could not have >>>>> built nor contribute in any shape form nor > fashion to the
 >>>>> genius of Nile Valley Civilizations.
 >>>>

> > > > What troubles me, is that an individual like
> that is allowed
> > > > to handle Egyptian antiquities.
> > > >
> > > > Can we really trust him not to destroy or
> mislabel items
> > > > that show the Egyptians were Black?
>
=== message truncated ===

---

Building a website is a piece of cake. Yahoo! Small Business gives you all the tools to get online.
<http://smallbusiness.yahoo.com/webhosting>

---

Get free emoticon packs and customisation from Windows Live. Pimp My Live!
| 23198|2007-09-27 17:03:42|kungfuhustle|Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief (Hawass)|

Thanks.

I hadn't heard of these projects. I'm sure there are possibly more in the works.

I'll be especially interested in seeing this one.

Toussaint (2007) (pre-production) (producer)

Meninarmer

On Thu, 2007-09-27 at 20:34 +0200, Alex van Deelen wrote:

> Toussaint (2007) (pre-production) (producer)

| 23199|2007-09-27 18:54:05|Fatima Horta|Re: WHY ARE BLACKS SO NEGATIVELY PORTRAYED|

Whites always want to discredit the good qualities of black people and credit them with a lot of bad and fake flaws. Unfortunately the media is one of the ways to make them think that they are not beautiful or that they are criminals, or they are not good enough to be successful in life, but worst is when some of them assume it like a truth so two things might happen, one: they act like whites (dyeing their hair, straighten it, etc.) or two: they assume it and leave behind their dreams and goals.

Dyeing your hair or straighten it may be just great if you do it because you want to look like that but if you do it because you don't want to look black or because the media is always telling you that blondes, or just whites are the most beautiful then it's wrong. You should be proud to be black and keep your own beauty and traditions.

I am not black, I am Latin from Mexico but I feel a deep respect for black people I think you have been walking on a way of unfair experiences and the worst thing black people can do is deny their own identity, culture and self respect. Maybe slavery is over but now you should know that the fight is not over, now you have to show the world that you are very intelligent, beautiful, and capable to do amazing things.

Fatima

Franklin Jones wrote:

One morning , about a week ago, while driving in Atlanta, a radio announcement came on saying that almost one in every African American now have herpes and most don't even know it. My immediate response was to feel anger of always hearing these negative lies that are being deliberately perpetuated about us, but my feelings of anger was overtaken by the feeling of sadness. The sadness that I felt for those blacks that believe these many negative statistics to be true about themselves.

Sadly today most African Americans are unaware that they are ongoing victims of false mis-information that are deliberately designed to meet the U.S. government's racist objective of maintaining its white dominance. You see although the U.S. Government openly professes equality for all of its citizens, its secret unrelenting commitment towards maintaining its white dominance has always resulted in it reincarnating newer methods of institutionalized racism against the advancement of its black population. Such as seen where after the abolishment of slavery Jim crow laws were then implemented.

Today, since the means of maintaining its white economic and political control used in the past are no longer morally and socially acceptable, and because the U.S. Government's sociologist and psychologist were well aware of the fact that those who make peaceful revolution impossible will make violent revolution inevitable, it became necessary to modify their methods of exploiting and suppressing its Black population into a form more socially acceptable with contemporary times; thus creating a more sophisticated system of white racism that deliberately wears only the appearance, if any, of being totally self afflicted by African Americans themselves.

[A sophisticated system of covert white racism of where blacks are made to believe that the playing fields are now even and that their failures are all totally their own.] Today's modern method of white racism in the United States is for more sophisticated, elaborated and proficient than any system of racism previously faced by African Americans-yes even slavery. It is now implemented through the American educational, judicial and prison systems-- and prevails and is concealed through the usage of Psychological Warfare implemented through the national media that fosters a consensual environment for its unethical undertaking. It is now secretly applied through the government's proven method of Covert Counterintelligence Program. Although the formal

COINTELPRO covert operations employed by the FBI directed against African Americans during the period of 1956-1971 was discontinued [upon the surface]. However, in truth--because the nineteen sixties were a period of massive black rebellion and unrest that caused the U.S. Government to feared the uprising of a violent revolution-- the FBI did not actually cease its formal domestic counterintelligence programs against African Americans, but instead actually advanced it more broadly and secretively. Today there is a far more sophisticated and massive counterintelligence program being implemented against the entire African American population.

Today the United States Government uses mis-education, false statistics and negative propaganda media reports that equates a psychological warfare that conspires to corrupt blacks of unity, reason, and common sense, thus deliberately soliciting the disparity that has now become modern Black America as a mean of meeting its objective of maintaining white dominance in the United States .Here is a simplified analogy of the psychological aspect of this modern system of racism that is now being implemented against America 's Black population. Let us say, for example, that a group of people was aboard their own massive ship and that their ship was being shadowed by another neighboring ship, a neighboring ship that was constantly broadcasting derogatory messages to the first group that their ship was lesser, smaller, not seaworthy or perhaps slowly sinking or that their crew was incompetent or was planning a mutiny. With time, the group receiving the negative messages, being unable to refute or to confirm these derogatory messages and deficiencies will grow weary and paranoid of the negative messages and will eventually comes to accept these negative assessments of themselves. The perception created by the taunting now unconsciously influences how the taunted group perceives themselves, subsequently causing them to become distrustful of themselves, doubting themselves, hating themselves and, eventually, fighting among themselves. The taunted group may even become so besieged by deep feelings of inadequacy that they may even jump into the sea and attempt to swim towards the taunting ship now believing it to be superior to their own boat even if their own ship was in fact better.

This concept of warfare uses psychology to affect the unconscious mind through deception. Its weapon is the message that it carries and the way this message affects the recipients in terms of their behavior. Within a real world setting, this is implemented against African Americans through U.S. governmental agencies that leak false derogatory press releases, documentaries, and media information concerning its Black population that are designed to perpetuate and frame the myth of Whites? racial, moral, and ethical superiority over its Black population. Its collaborators in the news media, which either knowingly or unknowingly carry the false information or create their own false information through news releases in magazine articles, radio, and television, work to demoralize, discourage, berate, subjugate, and or dismantle the Black population. The weapon is not the way it is sent, but the messages that it carries and how the messages affect the recipient and influence society.

This perversion of reality insinuates that America would be a better society as a whole if African Americans were gone, thus psychologically changing the root problem of racism in America to be due to Black?s behavior rather than White?s proclivity for racism. This shift of victimization that the problem of racism in America is due to the fault of African Americans, is perpetuated unrelentingly everywhere through the media. This campaign engenders distorted perceptions and increasingly prejudiced and acrimonious beliefs about its African American population that creates a consensual environment that facilitates the easier exploitation and suppression of Black America through the governments unfair justice system. Today because of this campaign of negative psychological warfare no one else questions the fact of why blacks are so disproportionately incarcerated. [For when contempt of Blacks appears to be justifiable, it is the fiercest and most effective type of racism because its witnesses, bystanders, and jurors will sit by idly allowing African Americans to be brutally mistreated under the belief that it is justified.]

This is a monumental disclosure that the U.S. Government does not ever want realized by its African American population. Today Blacks in America are victims of a more prevalent and detrimental system of covert white racism. In 1968 [after the assassination of Dr. King] when the earlier more blatant system of white racism used in the past to maintain white dominance had ran its course, thus became no longer moral and socially acceptable, the United States Government secretly reincarnated its method of suppressing and exploiting its black population.

Although this modern method of governmental white racism covertly also uses the American educational system to mortifyingly mis-educate and disesteem black students and the judicial and prison systems to severely reduce black growth and upward mobility by reducing black America?s ability to procreate and to vote thus to maintain its white dominance. However the most significant and detrimental aspect of this modern system of white governmental racism used today in America is its aspect of using psychological warfare against African Americans.

The worst aspect of this psychological warfare is not how it adversely affect race relations in America, but instead how it cause many blacks to perceive themselves and their community as a whole. It produces self hatred and division the pulverizes black unity thus reducing black upward mobility.

Through the national media--at the behest of the Government-- African Americans are being deliberately bombarded by false negative derogatory misinformation and statistics that are designed to divide, confuse and produce internalized racism and self hatred among its African American population and to produce a consensual environment for Black suppression .

The negative derogatory information and statistics that falsely perpetuates white moral and intellectual superiority over its black population, are being deliberately disseminated through the national media to create a consensual environment - before the world audience- that allows the U.S.

government to disproportionately mistreat its Black population through its judicial and prison systems.[it justifies the disproportioned incarceration of its black populous] Moreover, it also meets the government's objective of maintaining its white dominance by producing psychological feelings among its Black population that pulverizes Black unity thus reducing black upward mobility.

Moreover, it is this ongoing secret governmental operation that is the core factor of the now unprecedented profound division, confused outlook, and many disparities now afflicting modern Black America.

The Black psyche has been so bombarded by negative misinformation of themselves that many will disregard this monumental disclosure as being pure nonsense. In fact because of the success of this Governmental psychological warfare it has become literally easier, for many blacks to actually accept the belief that the problem of Black America has more to do with themselves than that of white racism. This campaign has been so successful that today many blacks may even attack another black person for making this claim that white racism is still the core problem in America.

Although this may sound a bit like bad science fiction, Psychological Warfare is a real and well-proven technology that exceeds the territorial limits of conventional warfare to penetrate the proposed target. This type of psychological warfare has been used by the military since World War II. The British Special Operation Executives (SOE) was pioneering this form of propaganda during the Second World War. The British Government, between 1930- 1940, conducted psychological warfare against Germany, by putting together a massive department staffed by many former journalists that conducted secret journalism and planted favorable stories in the world's press. Generally using friendly newspapers editors, but also using bribery to get pro-allied stories in print, British pilots also dropped propaganda leaflets and spread rumors concerning Germany's relations with France and other aspects of the war. Although the usage of psychological warfare began within a military setting, it was eventually realized by governmental and societal elites that this method of psychological warfare could be useful for totally controlling society. Therefore, psychological warfare technology evolved from its military usage against foreign enemies to being used to control society domestically. Today, the U.S. government, like many other developed nations, conducts planned campaigns of extensive strategic psychological operations through the national media to influence the perception and climate of the nation towards the attainment of its governmental objectives. Participating federal agencies may include the National Security Council, The Office of Strategic Council, The Central Intelligence Agency, and The Federal Bureau of Investigations. However, when it is executed domestically it is more often commonly referred to by governmental and military officials as psychological operations [PSYOPs] rather than Psychological Warfare.

The ability to influence the nation in mass using psychological operations through the national media is highly effective because the media itself is very powerful in terms of its influence. For the media helps shape our views of the world, what we consider to be good or bad, and also forges our deepest values, identities, and our sense of what it means, for example, to be male or female. These facts, combined with those studies showing that the average American watches 18 hundred hours of television each year, affirm that there is a great inclination for Americans to be affected by psychological operations conducted through the national media.

The reason psychological warfare is so unknown to most Americans is because its very nature is to be covert, and because it is not the stuff of adventure and the excitement of war that films or novels portray. However, psychological warfare is a real, sound, and proven governmental technology that has been used by the U.S. Government for many decades, and its usage is ongoing even now. For as recently as July 2004, a story was reported by the New York Times that the Defense Department had paid the Rendon Group, a Washington-based international consulting firm, $100,000 per month to help the Office of Strategic Information (OSI) with a broad campaign that would include negative propaganda or disinformation. The report stated that the OSI was established to spread positive messages about the war on terrorism, but it would also use disinformation and misinformation to mislead friends and foe alike. The report went on to say that the office of Strategic Influence had been set up to disseminate truthful information openly but also to spread what senior pentagon officials called "the Blackest of Black programs." The organization works on ways to influence and mislead the media abroad and also domestically in America, such as spreading positive messages about the war on terrorism or perpetuating disinformation through its frequent collusion with news media personnel to publish false and distorted material at the government's behest.

This is not some conspiracy theory premise that perpetuates Black defeatism. Nor is this a case of one peddling victim-hood in a frivolous attempt to absolve our race of our own responsibilities. This is the truth! The truth that we have been trained not to see-- trained by the false world that has been pulled over our eyes. When ever white our allowed to run the score board, thus being allowed to be the score keepers, they will use psychological warfare that perpetuates their superiority over other groups. Have history not already shown us this? By doing so, the United States Government acquired a far more insidious and covert method of ensuring that its white dominance is maintained that exists behind a clever shroud of secrecy and deceit? For it is in this way that the evils of racism thrive best -- when its victims do not recognize the evil.

To learn more or to get a copy of this book "the Black Matrix please to www.divineblack truth.org

---

Got a little couch potato?

Check out fun summer activities for kids.

---

Luggage? GPS? Comic books?

Check out fitting gifts for grads at Yahoo! Search.

| 23200|2007-09-27 19:18:58|Wayne Owens|Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief (Hawass)|

I concur 100%

Mahari Mengistu wrote:

Please don't misunderstand my position. I am ALL in favor of groups, organizations, individuals, and communities gathering research and extensive information to archive and present to blacks, the general public and particularly to our young people. What I indicate as na-jami is the belief that these people will say "O I concede, I see and I agree with you, I was wrong and you are right" when this information is presented to them. This seems extremely unlikely since a great deal of the information about blacks' contribution to history has been readily available for 2500 years and "they", it seems, intentionally decided to present "their" version of history that placed them in a position of pre-eminence. And as I said this attitude seems to be a psychotic one and psychoses are extremely difficult to correct.

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, Wayne Owens wrote:

>

> I agree Mengistu with the "at a minimum on psychotic" concept. The work has to be advanced and taught to the masses in a practical manner in order that our young can feel that they too can produce practical solutions to our current issues. My wife and I are of the mind that we for too long have not applied our historical research to questions of poverty, famine and genocide against African people. A symposium of the sort could have widespread affects if it supplies answers to some of these questions as well. Tutankhamen was of a people whose understanding of mathematics astounded and confounded the Greeks and subsequent Aryan invaders! With this in mind our young would know there own sense of worth. The Afrikans of the Nile Valley had to have a sense of their own divine nature in order to produce such monumental work in numerous fields. My thoughts are always on how can this information help us to feed, clothe and house ourselves.

>

> Mahari Mengistu wrote: With all due respect to the members of this forum but it appears that > most of you are naive regarding other groups attitude and > interpretation of ancient Kemetan history.

> Some may dismiss me as extreme but I think we should face the fact > that we are dealing with people who have such a deepseated interest > in perceiving us as unequal and particularly unequal to the Kemetans

> who they are quite frankly awed by. Their feelings, I believe, verge

> at a minimum on psychotic.

> Someone mentioned "work, research, work" and present the evidence,

> KEEP it out there and let it take care of itself. These people are > silly - but dangerous.

> HTP,

> Mahari

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "elliottandelliottm tg"

> wrote:

> >

> > If he does not recognize the truth found in in Kemetian tombs and > > historical documentation, in modern Egypt, where he lives, then

> what

> > words can be expressed in an email that will force him to stop
his

> > vehement and diabolical assaults against African history?

> >

> > I wonder if he would accept an invitation to debate our top

> > Kemetologist? The Iranian President was lambasted for his

> ridiculous

> > assertion that the Holocaust never occurred and in the same
fashion

> > we should give Hawass an opportunity to demonstrate his racist

> views

> > and outright historical distortions.

> >

> >

>> A few years ago he allowed for a DNA test to be performed on one of >> the African kings of Kemet and said unequivocally that the ancient >> Kemetians were in fact Arabs but in this article he contradicted
>> his >> own "scientific research". He said that the "Egyptians are not >> Arabs
>> and are not Africans despite the fact that Egypt is in Africa," but >> doesn't attribute an ethnicity to the people of Kemet. If they were >> not Asiatic, Persians, Arabs, Greeks, or Romans then the only other >> documented race would be Africans.
>>
>> How can he be a "Doctor of Egyptology" and not have read Herodotus >> who clearly states that the people of Kemet were Ethiopian in >> origin? Did he not enter the tomb of Ramses III, which has an >> undeniable pictorial representation of the people of Kemet as dark>> skinned Africans and identical to their Nubian neighbors? Did he >> skip over the tomb paintings of Ausar who is depicted as a dark >> skinned African? And that's another point of contention, African >> people come in a wide variety of hues and a diverse background of >> physical characteristics, therefore you cannot say that you must >> have a certain percentage of dark pigmentation to be identified as >> an African. In other words, African people range from yellow-brown
>> to black.
>>
>> It does not matter what Hawass thinks about the origins of African African
>> civilization. Eurocentricists, for that is who supports, finances
and >> bolsters Hawass's "scholarly credentials", have taken deliberate >> actions to erase the African origins of western civilization for >> centuries. The problem arises when African people and honest >> scholars cease to teach the truth to those who seek it.
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>

>>
>>
>>
>>
>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, "Paul Kekai Manansala"
>> wrote:
>>>
>>> Here is Hawass' email in case anyone wants to send him a note:
>>>
>>> Hawass@
>>>
>>> I'm not sure who Hawass reports to. Hope it's not Hosni Mubarak
> as
>> I'm
>>> unable to find his contact info.
>>>
>>> Regards,
>>> Paul Kekai Manansala
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>> -- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, "elliottandelliottm tg"
>>> wrote:
>>>>
>>>> Blatant Racism
>>>>
>>>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, "Alex van Deelen"
>>>> wrote:
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>>>
>>>
>>
>
http://fe25.news.re3.yahoo.com/s/afp/20070925/wl\_africa\_afp/egyptarch
>>>> aeologytutankhamunr ace
>>>>>
>>>>> Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief
>>>>> Tue Sep 25, 12:18 PM ET
>>>>>
>>>>> CAIRO (AFP) - Egyptian antiquities supremo Zahi Hawass
> insisted
>>>>> Tuesday that Tutankhamun was not black despite calls by US
>> black
>>>>> activists to recognise the boy king's dark skin colour.
>>>>>

>>>> "Tutankhamun was not black, and the portrayal of ancient >> Egyptian
>>>> civilisation as black has no element of truth to it,"
Hawass
>> told >>>> reporters.
>>>>>
>>>>> "Egyptians are not Arabs and are not Africans despite the > fact
>> that >>>>> Egypt is in Africa," he said, quoted by the official MENA
> news
>>>>> agency.
>>>>>
>>>>> Hawass said he was responding to several demonstrations in >>>>> Philadelphia after a lecture he gave there on September 6 >>>>> where he defended his theory.
>>>>>
>>>>> Protestors also claimed images of King Tut were altered to
> show
>>>>> him with lighter skin at the "Tutankhamun and the Golden Age
> of >>>>> the Pharaohs" exhibit which leaves Philadelphia for London
on >>>>> September 30.
>>>>>
>>>>> The exhibition sparked an uproar when it kicked off in Los >> Angeles
>>>>> in June 2005 when black activists demanded that a bust of the
>> boy
>>>>> king be removed because the statue portrays him as white.
>>>>>
>>>>> The face of the legendary pharaoh, who died around 3,300
years >>>>> ago at the age of just 19, was reconstructed in 2005 through
>> images >>>>> collected through CAT scans of his mummy.
>>>>>
>>>>> The boy king's intact tomb caused an international sensation
>>>>> when it was discovered by Briton Howard Carter in 1922
>>>>> near Luxor in southern Egypt.
>>>>>
>>>>>

> > >

> >

>

>

>

>

>

>

> -----

> Take the Internet to Go: Yahoo!Go puts the Internet in your pocket:
mail, news, photos & more.

>

---

Pinpoint customers who are looking for what you sell.

| 23201|2007-09-27 19:32:25|alaman5375@aol.com|Re: Africans Don't believe they Are
Africans|

In a message dated 9/27/07 10:28:11 AM, elliottandelliottmtg@yahoo.com writes:

I also agree with everything in your post except the fact that I said "Many African Americans do not consider themselves African at all." I have been told, on several occasions, from numerous African Americans, that they do not consider themselves as African and would rather be identified as Black.

You have very eloquently explained the some of the reasons why this occurs within the African American community
AMEN RA HTP,

Afrikan-Americans & Their Lost Identity Problem!

"In the course of our ordeal, Black Afrikan-Americans lost one identity and acquired another. Most of them lost the quality of being an Afrikan, or at least the consciousness of being an Afrikan. But the worst of it is in America -- they too teach Black Americans to be ashamed of Afrika. Now having cast off the robes of our history, Black Afrikan-Americans then had to carry the badge of not only being ex-slaves, but of race. For this badge is very distinct. Other Americans have their names or, as collective groups, traced by their geographical origin and their cultural origin [Jewish, Irish, Swedish, German, Italian, etc...]. But suddenly as "Negroes" or "Blacks," you have stopped referring to geography and culture. You are now referring to race. You know what that means is that the entire history of this country - "America" - has but one compelling lesson for people of Afrikan ancestry;

- o Remember what you look like;
- o Forget where you come from;
- o Forget your ancestry and remember your skin color; and
- o Forget you are Afrikan and remember you are Black.

-Statement by Dr. Ali A. Mazrui
From The Afrikan Commentary Magazine

History Is Essential

"History becomes essential. It is your road map for living."

"For when a people do not know their history they cannot chart their future."

"History should tell a people who they are, where they came from and what their potential is as a people. If it fails to do so, it is useless. The name a people call themselves must provide them with an understanding of their history by connecting them to a land mass, a language, a culture, a religion, a philosophy and so on. If a people's name fails to accomplish these simple task, then their name is useless.

The name "Colored" means little because all people are colored "crow to snow," as referenced by historian Alice Windom. The names "Negro and "Black" mean little because they do not serve the primary function of a name, which is to culturally orient a people to a specific land mass.

The names "Negro and "Black" mean little because they do not serve the primary function of a name, which is to culturally orient a people to a specific land mass.

The Europeans who immigrated to America would later insist on their independence from England, but their culture orientation remained European. The official language of America is English, and the northeastern coast of the U.S. is still referred to as "New England [states]". New York, New Jersey, New Hampshire, etc... "

-Elder Dr. John Henrik Clarke'

*****

See what's new at <http://www.aol.com>

| 23202|2007-09-27 21:42:33|asar_imhotep|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|

As I understand it, the A(a)khu is basically the ethereal double of the physical make-up. It was characterized with features such as judgment, analysis and mental reflection. It could be trained and disciplined to serve good or evil. So in essence, to me it is simply our mind or our consciousness. It, just like the body, grows and develops and depending on how well it developed, that's the state it will rest in the Duat (Tuat, Amentet) since all is "mind."

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Paul Kekai Manansala wrote:

>

> Budge translated _aakhu_ as "soul-spirits." The aakhu were revered and I guess could be considered enlightened.

>

> Regards,

> Paul Kekai Manansala

>

> cristofori whitakara wrote:

can Ta-aakhu also mean Land of the enlightened souls?

>

> Paul Kekai Manansala wrote:

> I agree. This Punt was also probably the same or overlapping with

> Ta-aakhu, Land of the Ancestral Spirits to the south of Egypt, and to > the Land of Yam about seven or eight months round-trip journey south > of Egypt.

>

> Regards,

> Paul Kekai Manansala

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:

> >

> > I am inquiring about a possible interpretation of the word /Ntr/ in > > ancient Ta_Merrian ontology. For the most part Egyptologists define

> > the word as "gods" and the more enlightened define ntr as "the vital

> > force behind animate and inanimate objects." I am posing here today

> > another definition of the word Ntr.

> >

> > In keeping consistent with traditional African thought, people who > > lived beyond the call of duty and was medicine for the community,

> > when they die, they become part of the vital force that animates

> > objects in the universe. This is true with Ntrw, Abosom and even > > Orisas.

> >

> > The late Dr. Afolabi A. Epega in his work Ifa: The Ancient Wisdom

> > pg. 50 states:

> >

> > "Yoruba deities are called either "Imales" or "Orisas." The term

> > Imale means the knowledge of the secrets of this world or of heaven:

> > knowledge of what the Creator has kept in store for the common good

> > of mankind, or one who has done some good or mighty things with his > > knowledge or power is called Imale. Men of miraculous birth or who > > become deified after death are called Imale, e.g., Dada, Oke, Oke

> > Talabi, Aina, Lisabi, Egbeji, etc. They are also called "Orisas."

> >

> >

> > This is quit common all throughout Africa and this leads me to

> > believe that another definition of Ntr is "ancestor" or "deified

> > ancestor." With this in mind, when we read the term "Ta Ntr"

> > believed to be Pwanet (Punt), to me, it should be read as "land of

> > the ancestors" instead of "land of the gods" as most Egyptologists

> > posit. To me land of the "gods" doesn't makes sense since all of the > > earth is powered by "ntrw" (the vital force behind animate and > > inanimate objects). The land of our ancestors would point to a > > genetic and cultural origin. It is no different than African-> > Americans referring to Africa proper as the "mother land" (the land

> > of our historical birth).

> >
> > We know that persons of great stature in Ta-Merri were elevated to > > the status of deity: Imhotep and Amenhotep III. In other words, they > > became Ntrw after death and this is done all over Africa. What is > > your opinion?

> >
> > Asar Imhotep
> > <http://www.mochasuite.com>
> >

>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> -----

> Luggage? GPS? Comic books?
> Check out fitting gifts for grads at Yahoo! Search.
>

| 23203|2007-09-28 08:20:26|matt mercer|Re: To Dr. Winters and Company, about TUT and blackness and Africa|

Attachments :

Humans have been arguing whether the world is "one", or flat like a pancake or the the earth is the center of our galaxy or whether the chicken or the egg came first for eons, regardless of which tribe or nation they come from. The only similarity in the themes of any "civilized" conflict in any given era of any given people is that of "us versus the other". In the book "The Seven Story Tower" by Curtis Hoffman, this is illustrated as the conflict between collectivism versus individualism.

Egypt as a world culture reflects this theme clearly. And as part of African historical legacy, is demonstrative of the challenges academia face today crystallized thru the perceptions of popular media culture as Africans and African-Americans and africanized humans meet on the world stage.

The only alien construct that is part of "African" history, for a modern student, is Egypt. Because Egypt is a center of civilization not only for africa, but europe and asia and the modern era as well. Its like the black Africans sacrificed participating in the genesis of the warring world cultures as a form of protest of refusing to participate in the madness of societies gone mad from intellectual forms of genocide.

This reminds me of the image of a south African cave painting, near the bee keepers, of a clan laden with weapons and dispersed in a line coming to attack a huddled well drawn tribe that is in an enclosure in an open field. Within the "community" of people in the cave, you can see there are definite relationships, and the attackers are wounded confused and disorganized. The continuity of cognitive growth's development for humanity has little to do with moral physical or intellectual strength or dominion thereof, but in terms of longevity are more about that intangible quality of faith or grace and community. Which is a lot like letting go of bad ideas and embracing new ones.

What interests me most about ancient studies is that cognitive growth over the ages is rarely addressed from a viewpoint of formative development. And that regardless of which region you take a sample from, or ethnic group, out of what ever religious moral spiritual or intellectual conflict of the day you are speaking of the fact remains the same that many of these people were simply working on the same forms of cognitive recognition and expression, cultivation and ecology.

The problem with "Egypt's" representation of this is that although this culture may have been born in africa, it is not African for it is part of an evolution of all cultures. Thus stuck in a proverbial rock and hard place, the space of the progenitors has been over run with inquisitors and even the language of this strange new ancient family seems lost in time to speculation and myth, which is a good place to stay if no one is "allowed" to take ownership of such a prolific black sheep of a kingdom, a kingdom that was a seat of mercy beauty and severity, and poised to be a great champion for the joy and mystery of expression.

I

find Dr. Winters work with Meroitic and Tocharian (and I would like to include Brahmi) inspiring because it reflects not only the depth of the trade relationships through their mutually affiliated lexicons, but that we are getting a glimpse into a vaster network of intellectual relationships of the development of these eschatological systems and the continuity of thought that is present from the astrological to agricultural through modal and inter-related glyph script and alphabets that address human cognitive growth and formative development.

I have enclosed several photos of my work with Meroitic, by arranging the twinned characters into different forms based on a dilating lens principal, or focus, the three ring circus as it were, of temporal measurement of the earth moon and sun, and the glyphs are the stars and the planets as a vessel for cultivation of many forms. The three rings or forms represent NU, three lines of water. My idea is that the issues of integrity were so important in this era of civilized formalization of education that many of the language systems of this era reflect an attempt to address the importance of continuity between any body of teachings, and body of teachers and any body of students thru the codified script as a way of preserving their explorations.

Like the Hebrew "Sefer Yetzirah", these forms of codification encompass a vast constellation of relationships and domain of principals set forth from a viewpoint of water ecology and sustainable living and self determination. Like the temple of Hathor ceiling, the house and its form of the larger span of time( a eon), the outer ring of decans of the 36 stars and their yearly associations (era), and the field of constellations and planets as the seasonal monthly and daily cycles of the growth of forms and the expression of their relationships (A Nu). I am working with opening the glyphs through their word forms and symbolism into strings of thought and principals that are in the form of poetry or song, somewhere between the I Ching Psalms and Dr. Seuss and the Sutras and tribal storytelling like the string game.

I wish more academics could focus on this idea of continuity rather than bicker about the origins of "The Word" and which ethnic group has authority over such development. I realize the spirit of universalism self-determination and cooperation that is definitely "part" of not only Egyptian culture and African heritage and world history deserves more devotion and respect from all camps, and I believe work such as Dr. Winters is guiding us to this stage.

Perhaps we can still help each other in the academic community "shift our focus" to universality of the field of cognitive growth( the lone tree on the outer structure of the Hathor ceiling near Taurus) and formative development( the tree with the 3 seeds and feather near Scorpius). Like "The classics" of the Spring and Autumn annals of Confucius teaches, perhaps one season of learning has ended and a new one of planting is beginning.

*Sincerely,
Matt Mercer*

clyde winters wrote:

I agree with your post. But you made a mistake.

You said that African Americans don't know they, re African. I believe you should have wrote most Africans don't believe they are Africans.

This results from the fact that most Blacks in Africa base their identity on tribe and maybe "nation", but not generically Africans. The failure to identify one self as a monolithic group keeps people in Africa from progressing.

Granted, Europeans see themselves in terms of tribes and nationalities but--they believe they are all Westerners and therefore unite against non-Western people. This disadvantages African people in the U.S. and Africa, because they seek to deal with people based on a color-blind global world, but they are confronted by a world where ethnicity and cultural identity (Western vs non-Western) dictate interpersonal and intrapersonal interactions of nations and states.

It is this sense of "non-Africaness" that make Afrocentric scholars appear as freaks to many people within and outside their own community. Afrocentric scholars are often considered freaks because the audience they are seeking to address, and would appear to be the most receptive of their message have little if any interest in their history and civilization. They have little interest because they feel, wrongly, that history has nothing to do with them--money and the pursuit of wealth--they believe make their life better. Granted, money can improve one's position in society, but it does not address one's need for self-confidence and psychological well-being. This well-being comes from recognizing one is respected, confident, capable of being all they can do.

The failure of Africans to know and understand that history situates a people within the context of their heritage and the psychological sense of well being and self-esteem all people need to effect efficacy which is constructive and relevant to their cognitive reality.

Subliminally, Africans are taught they are ignorant, barbaric and absent any history but the Medieval African Kingdoms and Slave trade. At the same time they are taught that whites built all the great civilizations Egypt, Babylon and the Greco-Roman empires. Knowledge of this false history of Blacks, lead many Blacks to feel inferior to Europeans, feelings of learned helplessness and lack of self-esteem. Europeans feel, due to this false history, that they are entitled to rule the world because it was their people--white people--who created civilization and culture. Blacks who are conditioned to trace their history back to the Medieval Kingdoms, feel that this civilization was invented by Arabs. Add this to learning about the slave trade makes most Blacks feel subconsciously they have contributed nothing to world history as shapers of history. This type of history make African people feel inferior to all the other races who have long histories.

To many of these Blacks who may attain a high or Middle class lifestyle--they create this false notion that race does not exist, even though they are bombarded by race every minute of every day- in the media and the schools.

The absence of a world view of "Africaness", by African people in Africa and abroad is the reason we don't have funded research positions in Afrocentric

studies at university and private foundations. Most Africans just can't believe we have a history that was not guided by white Europeans and white Arabs. Granted this is all false--but failure to know ones history ALLOWS ONE TO LOSE THEIR SENSE OF WHO THEY ARE.

Clyde

--- elliottandelliottmt g

<elliottandelliottmt\_g@yahoo.com> wrote:

> I absolutely agree! The only problem would be
> generating the same
> level of outrage on this topic, in comparison to the
> "Jena6"
> situation, because judicial injustice is an issue
> that resonates
> more clearly in the African American community then
> the theft,
> denial and destruction of African history. I am sure
> you understand
> how both issues are connected but the miseducated
> masses will find > it hard to grapple with the relevance. Many African > Americans do not > consider themselves African at all.
>
> I think if Afrocentric scholars, and those who seek
> historical > truths, formed some sort of African Historical > Restoration Society
> and in an organized assault, confronted Eurocentric
> Egyptologist and
> the television channels that promote and profit from
> their lies with > undeniable historical documentation and
> archeological evidence then
> the changes we desire will begin to manifest.
>
> But more importantly we need to promote our African
> history in the > form of art, music and movies. We need a "Roots" for > this generation
> but instead of the scourge of slavery the glory of > Kemet will be the > topic and will lead this generation into a higher

> understanding of > self.
>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, "asar_imhotep"
>
> wrote:
> >
> > I heard about it and I think I asked if it was
> taped somehow and > > available for purchase. But anyway, I think that > it can be done.
> The
> > climate is right and if we put enough pressure on
> the likes of
> > Discovery, The History Channel, Hawass and others
> who continually
> > perpetuate this false sense of history, I think it
> can come to > > fruition. They won't deal with the culture of > ancient ta-merri
> because > > they know it can easily be shown to compare with
> the rest of
> Africa,
> > and to an extent, its remnants in African culture
> to date.
> >
> > I think if we organized with the same sincerity
> and energy as we
> did
> > for the Jena 6 in Louisiana, then we can make this > happen. Too many > > Egyptologists make statements on emails and paper,
> and it is time
> we > > discuss this in person where a rebuttal can be > done in a timely
> fashion.
> >
> > I say we make it happen. Our ancestors fought for > us, it is time we
> > fought for them.
> >
> > Asar Imhotep
> > <http://www.mochasui te.com>
> >

> >
> >
> >
> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, bonotchim@ wrote:
> > >
> > > Some years ago, I believe when Dr. Obenga was
> at Temple, Molefi
> Asante tried to organize a symposium like you
> suggest and no white > scholar would commit. Because of what Dr. Diop and > Obenga did
> in Cairo another symposium is unlikely.
> > > Bro. Asar did you hear about or attend the > African Nationalist?
> Mdw
> > Ntr conference in New York? It was in June or > July.
> > > Bro.B.
> > >
> > > -----Original Message-----
> > > From: asar_imhotep
> > > To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> > > Sent: Wed, 26 Sep 2007 3:43 pm
> > > Subject: [Ta_Seti] A new symposium proposal - > Tutankhamun was
> not black
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > > This is what I propose, and I am so serious > about this. We need
> to > > > have another UNESCO like symposium of the > peopling of Ancient Ta-> Merri.
> > >
> > > The problem today is that we are a visual > society and these
> arguments
> > > Diop and Obenga have made have not been made > public (at large)
> where
> > > the people could see the debates. If we can get > a symposium just

> like
> > > the one for UNESCO, and have it covered by > C-Span and other
> media,
> > > here in the United States, with more scholars > contributing, I
> think we
> > > can settle this once and for all.
> > >
> > > I think since 1973 there has been more evidence > that supports
> Diop's
> > > and Obenga's claims. This can be introduced with > more rigor and
> we can > > > review the tapes as would football players after > a game. I > haven't > > > heard of Hawass agreeing to be on any panel to > debate this issue
> and I > > > think he needs to be there. There needs to be a > final
> confrontation,
> > > bringing all of the available evidence. It can > have 4 aspects to
> the > > > debate: Archeology, Linguistics, Philosophy, and > overall cultural > > > connections.
> > >
> > > I think Bro. Manu Ampim can lead this charge and > gather the other > > > scholars, in the States, Europe and the Africa,
> to participate.
> We can > > > organize it to happen anywhere from 6 months to > a year.
> > >
> > > What say ye?
> > >
> > > Asar Imhotep
> > > <http://www.mochasui te.com>
> > >
> > > --- In [Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com](mailto:Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com), "Alex van > Deelen"

> wrote:
> > > >
> > > > Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt
> antiquities chief
> (Hawass)
> > > > Posted by: "Wayne Owens" majadi9@ majadi9
> > > > Wed Sep 26, 2007 4:51 am (PST)
> > > >
> > > > Of course in Hawass' "guesstimation" they
> cannot be Afrikan.
> > > > This would of course hinder the Aryan
> theoretical framework
> > > > that has been historically presented.
> Secondly this would > > > > contradict the erroneous idea that Afrikans
> could not have > > > > built nor contribute in any shape form nor > fashion to the
> > > > genius of Nile Valley Civilizations.
> > > >
> > > > What troubles me, is that an individual like
> that is allowed
> > > > to handle Egyptian antiquities.
> > > >
> > > > Can we really trust him not to destroy or
> mislabel items
> > > > that show the Egyptians were Black?
>
=== message truncated ===

---

Building a website is a piece of cake. Yahoo! Small Business gives you all the tools to get online.

<http://smallbusiness.yahoo.com/webhosting>

---

Boardwalk for $500? In 2007? Ha!

Play Monopoly Here and Now (it's updated for today's economy) at Yahoo! Games.

| 23204|2007-09-28 08:20:26|elliottandelliottmtg|Re: Africans Don't believe they Are Africans|
Two very good passages that shed further light on the subject. Our ancestors have been paving a way for this generation for centuries;
if only we would follow the path.

I can say, quite candidly, that as a teenager I believed that selling out was the key to success in America. In many ways I still believe that opinion is valid, but personally, I found it both spiritually debilitating and morally dehumanizing. Moreover, as the Micheal Vick, Kobe Bryant, and O.J. cases clearly shows, is that there is not enough money in the world that can save an African American when White Supremacy wants to make an example out of you.

This generation needs a self identity revolution akin to the late 60's and 70's. When I watch so called "Blackploitation" films, I feel far less ashamed then when I watch BET. Furthermore, BET is a good example of how negative images are used to create a false portrayal of African Americans and it has become increasingly useless to the African American community since it was bought by Viacom and the dismissal of Tavis Smiley, who they silenced by putting him on PBS for a half hour at midnight.

Only Knowledge of Self Will Free Us!

-- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, alaman5375@... wrote:

>

>

> In a message dated 9/27/07 10:28:11 AM, ellriottandelliottmtg@... > writes:

>

>

>> I also agree with everything in your post except the fact that I >> said "Many African Americans do not consider themselves African

at >> all." I have been told, on several occasions, from numerous

African

>> Americans, that they do not consider themselves as African and would >> rather be identified as Black.

>>

>> You have very eloquently explained some of the reasons why

this

>> occurs within the African American community

>> AMEN RA HTP,

> Afrikan-Americans & Their Lost Identity Problem!

> "In the course of our ordeal, Black Afrikan-Americans lost one identity and > acquired another. Most of them lost the quality of being an Afrikan, or at > least the consciousness of being an Afrikan. But the worst of it is in America
> -- they too teach Black Americans to be ashamed of Afrika. Now having cast > off the robes of our history, Black Afrikan-Americans then had to carry the > badge of not only being ex-slaves, but of race. For this badge is very > distinct. Other Americans have their names or, as collective groups, traced by > their geographical origin and their cultural origin [Jewish, Irish, Swedish,
> German, Italian, etc...]. But suddenly as "Negroes" or "Blacks," you have stopped > referring to geography and culture. You are now referring to race. You > know what that means is that the entire history of this country -
"America" -
> has but one compelling lesson for people of Afrikan ancestry;
> o Remember what you look like;
> o Forget where you come from;
> o Forget your ancestry and remember your skin color; and
> o Forget you are Afrikan and remember you are Black.
>
> -Statement by Dr. Ali A. Mazrui
> From The Afrikan Commentary Magazine
>
> History Is Essential
> "History becomes essential. □ It is your road map for living."
>

> "For when a people do not know their history they cannot chart their future."
> "History should tell a people who they are, where they came from and what > their potential is as a people. If it fails to do so, it is useless. The name > a people call themselves must provide them with an understanding of their > history by connecting them to a land mass, a language, a culture, a religion, a > philosophy and so on. If a people's name fails to accomplish these simple > task, then their name is useless.
> The name "Colored" means little because all people are colored "crow to > snow," as referenced by historian Alice Windom. The names "Negro and "Black" mean > little because they do not serve the primary function of a name, which is to > culturally orient a people to a specific land mass.
>
> The names "Negro and "Black" mean little because they do not serve
the > primary function of a name, which is to culturally orient a people to a specific > land mass.
> The Europeans who immigrated to America would later insist on their > independence from England, but their culture orientation remained European. The > official language of America is English, and the northeastern coast of the U.S.

> is still referred to as "New England [states]". New York, New Jersey, New

> Hampshire, etc... "

> -Elder Dr. John Henrik Clarke'

>

>

>

>

>

> *****

> See what's new at <http://www.aol.com>

>

| 23205|2007-09-28 10:26:46|Atuma|Re: WHY ARE BLACKS SO NEGATIVELY
PORTRAYED|

Your insight is much appreciated Fatima. One way White society has been so successful in creating positive perceptions of themselves world-wide (particularly positive perceptions of White women) is through literature and media. Through the same medium, they have given the world a negative perception of Blacks.

Through fiction and classical works, Whites have nurtured and glorified White beauty to the point where it is accepted in any venue without scrutiny and in unrealistic ways that can often be grotesque. They have identified attributes for beauty that make even harsh-looking, or homely white women appear beautiful in the eyes of the average White man ? and perhaps in the eyes of too many minority men. At the same time, the same Western literature has over-looked the beauty of Black people as a group and focused instead on magnifying the harsh social and physical effects our struggles and life-styles have had upon us. These harsh effects have become in the minds of the masses, the hallmark of what it truly means to be Black.

It is no wonder the idea of a Black Egypt is so widely rejected among Whites.

The media has traditionally presented Black women in a way as if to say that White men could never find them attractive.

They do make exceptions however. When it is clear that a beautiful Black woman is of mixed ancestry, White media will make her none-Negroid features the focus of what is complimentary about her, making it clear that she owes her perceived beauty to her White genes. If a Black woman's beauty could not be attributed to White ancestry, it would be largely ignored as a focus of promotion. One reason might be that many White men still feel uncomfortable about being openly attracted to Black women. In more recent times, we can see the beginnings of change in this regard.

Fred

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Fatima Horta wrote:

>

> Whites always want to discredit the good qualities of black people and credit them with a lot of bad and fake flaws. Unfortunately the media is one of the ways to make them think that they are not beautiful or that they are criminals, or they are not good enough to be successful in life, but worst is when some of them assume it like a truth so two things might happen, one: they act like whites (dyeing their hair, straighten it, etc.) or two: they assume it and leave behind their dreams and goals.

> Dyeing your hair or straighten it may be just great if you do it because you want to look like that but if you do it because you don't want to look black or because the media is always telling you that blondes, or just whites are the most beautiful then it's wrong. You should be proud to be black and keep your own beauty and traditions.

> I am not black, I am latin from Mexico but I feel a deep respect for black people I think you have been walking on a way of unfair experiences and the worst thing black people can do is deny their own identity, culture and self respect. Maybe slavery is over but now you should know that the fight is not over, now you have to show the world that you are very intelligent, beautiful, and capable to do amazing things.

>

> Fatima

>

> Franklin Jones wrote:

> One morning, about a week ago, while driving in Atlanta, a radio announcement came on saying that almost one in every African American now have herpes and most don't even know it. My immediate response was to feel anger of always hearing these negative lies that are being deliberately perpetuated about us, but my feelings of anger was overtaken by the feeling of sadness. The sadness that I felt for those blacks that believe these many negative statistics to be true about themselves. Sadly today most African Americans are unaware that they are ongoing victims of false misinformation that are deliberately designed to meet the U.S. government's racist objective of maintaining its white dominance. You see although the U.S. Government openly professes equality for all of its citizens, its secret unrelenting commitment towards maintaining its white dominance has always resulted in it reincarnating newer methods of institutionalized racism against the advancement > of its black population. Such as seen where after the abolishment of slavery Jim crow laws were then implemented.

>

> Today, since the means of maintaining its white economic and political control used in the past are no longer morally and socially acceptable, and because the U.S. Government's sociologist and psychologist were well aware of the fact that those who make peaceful revolution impossible will make violent revolution inevitable, it became necessary to modify their methods of exploiting and suppressing its Black population into a form more socially acceptable with contemporary times; thus creating a more sophisticated system of white racism that deliberately wears only the appearance, if any, of being totally self afflicted by African Americans themselves. [A sophisticated system of covert white racism of were blacks are made to believe that the playing fields are now even and that their failures are all totally their own.]

> Today's modern method of white racism in the United States is for more sophisticated, elaborated and proficient than any system of racism previously faced by African Americans--yes even slavery. It is now implemented through the American educational, judicial and prison systems-- and prevails and is concealed through the usage of Psychological Warfare implemented through the national media that fosters a consensual environment for its unethical undertaking. It is now secretly applied through the government's proven method of Covert Counterintelligence Program. Although the formal COINTELPRO covert operations employed by the FBI directed against African Americans during the period of 1956-1971 was discontinued [upon the surface].
However, in truth--because the nineteen sixties were a period of massive black rebellion and unrest that caused the U.S. Government to feared the uprising of a violent revolution-- the FBI did not actually cease its formal domestic > counterintelligence programs against African Americans, but instead actually advanced it more broadly and secretively. Today there is a far more sophisticated and massive counterintelligence program being implemented against the entire African American population.

> Today the United States Government uses mis-education, false statistics and negative propaganda media reports that equates a psychological warfare that conspires to corrupt blacks of unity, reason, and common sense, thus deliberately soliciting the disparity that has now become modern Black America as a mean of meeting its objective of maintaining white dominance in the United States.
Here is a simplified analogy of the psychological aspect of this modern system of racism that is now being implemented against America's Black population. Let us say, for example, that a group of people was aboard their own massive ship and that their ship was being shadowed by another neighboring ship, a neighboring ship that was constantly broadcasting derogatory messages to the first group that their ship was lesser, smaller, not seaworthy or perhaps slowly sinking or that their crew was incompetent or was planning a mutiny.

With time, the group receiving the negative messages,

- > being unable to refute or to confirm these derogatory messages and deficiencies will grow weary and paranoid of the negative messages and will eventually come to accept these negative assessments of themselves. The perception created by the taunting now unconsciously influences how the taunted group perceives themselves, subsequently causing them to become distrustful of themselves, doubting themselves, hating themselves and, eventually, fighting among themselves. The taunted group may even become so besieged by deep feelings of inadequacy that they may even jump into the sea and attempt to swim towards the taunting ship now believing it to be superior to their own boat even if their own ship was in fact better.

- > This concept of warfare uses psychology to affect the unconscious mind through deception. Its weapon is the message that it carries and the way this message affects the recipients in terms of their behavior. Within a real world setting, this is implemented against African Americans through U.S. governmental agencies that leak false derogatory press releases, documentaries, and media information concerning its Black population that are designed to perpetuate and frame the myth of Whites' racial, moral, and ethical superiority over its Black population. Its collaborators in the news media, which either knowingly or unknowingly carry the false information or create their own false information through news releases in magazine articles, radio, and television, work to demoralize, discourage, berate, subjugate, and or dismantle the Black population. The weapon is not the way it is sent, but the messages that it carries and how the messages affect the recipient and influence

- > society.

- > This perversion of reality insinuates that America would be a better society as a whole if African Americans were gone, thus psychologically changing the root problem of racism in America to be due to Black's behavior rather than White's proclivity for racism. This shift of victimization that the problem of racism in America is due to the fault of African Americans, is perpetuated unrelentingly everywhere through the media. This campaign engenders distorted perceptions and increasingly prejudiced and acrimonious beliefs about its African American population that creates a consensual environment that facilitates the easier exploitation and suppression of Black America through the governments unfair justice system. Today because of this campaign of negative psychological warfare no one else questions the fact of why blacks are so disproportionately incarcerated. [For when contempt of Blacks appears to be justifiable, it is the fiercest and most effective type of racism > because its witnesses, bystanders, and jurors will sit by idly allowing African Americans to be brutally mistreated under the belief that it is justified.]

>

> This is a monumental disclosure that the U.S. Government does not ever want realized by its African American population. Today Blacks in America are victims of a more prevalent and detrimental system of covert white racism. In 1968 [after the assassination of Dr. King] when the earlier more blatant system of white racism used in the past to maintain white dominance had ran its course, thus became no longer moral and socially acceptable, the United States Government secretly reincarnated its method of suppressing and exploiting its black population. Although this modern method of governmental white racism covertly also uses the American educational system to mortifyingly mis-educate and disesteem black students and the judicial and prison systems to severely reduce black growth and upward mobility by reducing black America's ability to procreate and to vote thus to maintain its white dominance. However the most significant and detrimental aspect of this modern system of > white governmental racism used today in America is its aspect of using psychological warfare against African Americans.

> The worst aspect of this psychological warfare is not how it adversely affect race relations in America, but instead how it cause many blacks to perceive themselves and their community as a whole. It produces self hatred and division the pulverizes black unity thus reducing black upward mobility.

> Through the national media --at the behest of the Government-- African Americans are being deliberately bombarded by false negative derogatory misinformation and statistics that are designed divide, confused and produced internalized racism and self hatred among its African American population and to produce a consensual environment for Black suppression .

> The negative derogatory information and statistics that falsely perpetuates white moral and intellectual superiority over its black population,are being deliberately disseminated through the national media to create a consensual environment -before the world audience- that allows the U.S. government to disproportionately mistreat it's Black population through its judicial and prison systems.[its justifies the disproportioned incarceration of its black populous] Moreover, it also meets the government's objective of maintaining its white dominance by producing psychological feelings among its Black population that pulverizes Black unity thus reducing black upward mobility. Moreover, it is this ongoing secret governmental operation that is the core factor of the now unprecedented profound division, confused outlook, and many disparities now afflicting modern Black America.

> The Black psyche has been so bombarded by negative misinformation of themselves that many will disregard this monumental disclosure as being pure nonsense. In fact because of the success of this Governmental psychological warfare it has become literally easier, for many blacks to actually accept the belief that the problem of Black America has more to do with themselves than that of white racism. This campaign has been so successful that today many blacks may even attack another black person for making this claim that white racism is still the core problem in America.

>
>
>
>
>

> Although this may sound a bit like bad science fiction, Psychological Warfare is a real and well-proven technology that exceeds the territorial limits of conventional warfare to penetrate the proposed target. This type of psychological warfare has been used by the military since World War II. The British Special Operation Executives (SOE) was pioneering this form of propaganda during the Second World War. The British Government, between 1930-1940, conducted psychological warfare against Germany, by putting together a massive department staffed by many former journalists that conducted secret journalism and planted favorable stories in the world's press. Generally using friendly newspapers editors, but also using bribery to get pro-allied stories in print, British pilots also dropped propaganda leaflets and spread rumors concerning Germany's relations with France and other aspects of the war. Although the usage of psychological warfare began within a military setting, > it was eventually realized by governmental and societal elites that this method of psychological warfare could be useful for totally controlling society. Therefore, psychological warfare technology evolved from its military usage against foreign enemies to being used to control society domestically. Today, the U.S. government, like many other developed nations, conducts planned campaigns of extensive strategic psychological operations through the national media to influence the perception and climate of the nation towards the attainment of its governmental objectives. Participating federal agencies may include the National Security Council, The Office of Strategic Council, The Central Intelligence Agency, and The Federal Bureau of Investigations. However, when it is executed domestically it is more often commonly referred to by governmental and military officials as psychological operations [PSYOPs] rather than Psychological Warfare.

> The ability to influence the nation in mass using psychological operations through the national media is highly effective because the media itself is very powerful in terms of its influence. For the media helps shape our views of the world, what we consider to be good or bad, and also forges our deepest values, identities, and our sense of what it means, for example, to be male or female. These facts, combined with those studies showing that the average American watches 18 hundred hours of television each year, affirm that there is a great inclination for Americans to be affected by psychological operations conducted through the national media.

>

> The reason psychological warfare is so unknown to most Americans is because its very nature is to be covert, and because it is not the stuff of adventure and the excitement of war that films or novels portray. However, psychological warfare is a real, sound, and proven governmental technology that has been used by the U.S. Government for many decades, and its usage is ongoing even now. For as recently as July 2004, a story was reported by the New York Times that the Defense Department had paid the Rendon Group, a Washington-based international consulting firm, $100,000 per month to help the Office of Strategic Information (OSI) with a broad campaign that would include negative propaganda or disinformation. The report stated that the OSI was established to spread positive messages about the war on terrorism, but it would also use disinformation and misinformation to mislead friends and foe alike. The report went on to say that the office of Strategic Influence had been > set up to disseminate truthful information openly but also to spread what senior pentagon officials called "the Blackest of Black programs." The organization works on ways to influence and mislead the media abroad and also domestically in America, such as spreading positive messages about the war on terrorism or perpetuating disinformation through its frequent collusion with news media personnel to publish false and distorted material at the government's behest. This is not some conspiracy theory premise that perpetuates Black defeatism. Nor is this a case of one peddling victim-hood in a frivolous attempt to absolve our race of our own responsibilities. This is the truth! The truth that we have been trained not to see-- trained by the false world that has been pulled over our eyes. When ever white our allowed to run the score board, thus being allowed to be the score keepers, they will used psychological warfare that perpetuates their superiority over others groups.

> Have history not already shown us this? By doing so, the United States Government acquired a far more insidious and covert method of ensuring that its white dominance is maintained that exists behind a clever shroud of secrecy and deceit ? for it is in this way that the evils of racism thrive best -- when its victims do not recognize the evil.

>

>

>

>

> To learn more or to get a copy of this book "the Black Matrix please to www.divineblacktruth.org

>

> -----

> Got a little couch potato?

> Check out fun summer activities for kids.

>

>

>

>

> -----

> Luggage? GPS? Comic books?

> Check out fitting gifts for grads at Yahoo! Search.

>

| 23206|2007-09-28 11:04:54|Paul Kekai Manansala|Polish atomic physicists study Egyptian frescoes|

2007-09-25 14:58

Polish atomic physicists study Egyptian frescoes

Thousands of years ago, Egyptians knew many complicated methods of producing dyes. They used them to create many magnificent frescoes, which cover the walls of temples, royal palaces and tombs. Time and atmospheric factors have caused the paintings to lose their initial colours. The chemical reactions have modified the chemical content of the pigment. Thus, the colours we see today, are very distant from the pieces created by their ancient painters.

This is why scientists, with the help of modern knowledge, are looking for ways of recreating these processes to restore the creations of the Egyptian masters and craftsmen to their former glory. According to Dr Marek Pawlowski the spokesman for Andrzej Soltan Institute for Nuclear Studies in Swierk, this study is a bit like a fascinating detective adventure.

Modern atomic physics provides a valuable research tool. Samples of the plaster covered in ancient dyes are radiated with beams of speeding protons, so that through analysing the radiation emitted from the radiated sample it is possible to establish its chemical and particle content. This way, one can collect the "pieces of the puzzle", which tell us, what the initial colour of the painting was.

For the past few weeks, a scholarship holder of the Egyptian government ? Shaaban Abd El Aal is running research on the ancient dyes, under the eye of Prof. Andrzej Turos. He is applying Particle Induced X-ray Emission (PIXE), which means that characteristic X radiation, emitted from atoms as a result of ionisation of the inner atom layers, is registered on the beam of protons from the electrostatic Van de Graaff accelerator. The energy of the registered radiation provides information on the type of particles, while the intensity indicates its concentration in a given sample.

"Work on this has only started and it is difficult to predict its results. However, we have very high hopes" ? Pawlowski explained.

PAP - Nauka w Polsce, Katarzyna Czechowicz, tr.ajfb

| 23207|2007-09-28 14:29:22|Manu Ampim|Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief (Hawass)|

Greetings,

I agree that an international symposium on the population of classical Kemetis timely, but mainstream Egyptologists now conveniently claim that "race is no longer important in the study of Egypt." Therefore, many of them will ignore the call or dismiss it as a waste of time, even while they continue to promote bogus light- and white-skin images of ancient Egyptians in their "scholarly" work.

Here is a case in point. The King Tutankhamen exhibit is currently showing at the Franklin Institute in Philadelphia until Sept. 30th, and thus I have been invited next month by Bro. Mukasa Afrika and the local African community to address the issue of the falsification of King Tut's image. Our proposal was to hold the event at the Franklin Institute and have an open forum with myself, the museum staff, and any local exhibit consultants/Egyptologists associated with the exhibit. Of course, when this proposal was presented suddenly there was no further communication from the Franklin Institute, so we will hold the event at another venue in Philadelphia. Nor did the mainstream Egyptologists attend our major symposium last year in Ft. Lauderdale, FL.

My presentation will be in Philadelphia on October 27th and I will present on,

"THE VANISHING EVIDENCE OF CLASSICAL AFRICAN CIVILIZATIONS:

The Case of the Merowe Dam in Sudan."

I will send an update with the specific time and location.

With the 1973 Cairo Symposium there is no video or audio available to my knowledge, so this has allowed mainstream Egyptologists to recover from their extensive and massive academic injuries, resulting from the superior scholarship and academic mauling administered by Diop and Obenga. This healing time has allowed these mainstream writers and their descendents to pretend like the public academic mauling did not take place, and quietly change their positions and strategies whenever it has been convenient.

Another major symposium would be important to halt the public arrogance of dishonest men like Hawass and his eurocentric cohorts. UNESCO would be the ideal organization to host this type of major event, but I don't know how much support it would receive from mainstream Egyptologists for two reasons. First, their "scholarship" on this issue is paper thin, and second, they hide behind the dishonest statement that "race is no longer important in the study of Egypt." Race is always important to them until someone challenges their unscholarly anti-African positions. Since the Cairo Symposium, when Diop destroyed the Caucasian origin of Kemet myth, these same wounded scholars quietly abandoned their old ideas and retreated to a new mixed-race theory without presenting any credible evidence to support this new idea.

We should be clear that even with a well-documented public forum, the mainstream eurocentric scholars would continue with their psychotic denial of a black African Kemet. For example, when Hawass was the director of the Giza area pyramids a few years ago he stated that Africans had no influence in Kemet. He made this statement even though everyday he would go to work and have to look at Heru-em-akhet (Great Sphinx), which is the most powerful Africoid statue in the world. Other mainstream "scholars" look at Africoid images of King Tut and then irrationally claim that he was not "black."

Finally, as someone wrote earlier there is no "once and for all" because we are not dealing with rational people. Most of these people will never admit to an academic butt-kicking or to an African Kemet. We have seen this type of pathology on this forum. The older Ta-Seti members will remember (and the group archives show) that when I joined this group in late 2001, I exposed a number of these irrational people on one issue after another, and I suspect that they are still lurking around to monitor this forum in order to misrepresent our words to others.

Advancing the work,
Manu Ampim

---

A new symposium proposal - Tutankhamun was not black

This is what I propose, and I am so serious about this. We need to have another UNESCO like symposium of the peopling of Ancient Ta-Merri.

The problem today is that we are a visual society and these arguments Diop and Obenga have made have not been made public (at large) where the people could see the debates. If we can get a symposium just like the one for UNESCO, and have it covered by C-Span and other media, here in the United States, with more scholars contributing, I think we can settle this once and for all.

I think since 1973 there has been more evidence that supports Diop's and Obenga's claims. This can be introduced with more rigor and we can review the tapes as would football players after a game. I haven't heard of Hawass agreeing to be on any panel to debate this issue and I think he needs to be there. There needs to be a final confrontation, bringing all of the available evidence. It can have 4 aspects to the debate: Archeology, Linguistics, Philosophy, and overall cultural connections.

I think Bro. Manu Ampim can lead this charge and gather the other scholars, in the States, Europe and the Africa, to participate. We can organize it to happen anywhere from 6 months to a year.

What say ye?

Asar Imhotep
<http://www.mochasuite.com>

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Alex van Deelen" wrote:

>

> > Re: Tutankhamun was not black:

Egypt antiquities chief (Hawass)

> > Posted by: "Wayne Owens" majadi9@... majadi9

> > Wed Sep 26, 2007 4:51 am (PST)

>

> > Of course in Hawass' "guesstimation" they cannot be Afrikan.

> >

This would of course hinder the Aryan theoretical framework

> > that has been historically presented. Secondly this would > > contradict the erroneous idea that Afrikans could not have > > built nor contribute in any shape form nor fashion to the > > genius of Nile Valley

Civilizations.

>

> What troubles me, is that an individual like that is allowed > to handle Egyptian antiquities.

>

> Can we really

trust him not to destroy or mislabel items > that show the Egyptians were

Black?

>

> Will he re-label such items as 'Nubian', or make them

> disappear?

>

> When is egyptology going to be regulated in a modern

> and transparant manner?

>

> There have been several complaints about Hawass, > but usually people are too scared to even go on the > record.

>

>

Alex

>

| 23208|2007-09-28 14:30:35|Manu Ampim|REMINDER: KEMET TOUR ORIENTATION -
September 30th|

CLASSICAL AFRICA EDUCATIONAL TOUR IX

ANCIENT EGYPT (KEMET) - 2008

Personally escorted by

PROF. MANU AMPIM

(experienced tour guide & historian of Africana Studies)

---

*FREE TOUR INFORMATION SESSION - 1 hour

DATE:Sunday, September 30, 2007

PLACE: 580 Grand Avenue , Oakland , CA

(across from Lake Merritt )

TIME: 2:45 pm (sharp)

*Must call to reserve seat - space is limited.

510.482.5791 or Profmanu@acninc.net

Tour itinerary

http://manuampim.com/kmt\_08.doc

Tour schedule: May 31 - June 14, 2008 - $3299 (all inclusive)

---

CLASSICAL AFRICA EDUCATIONAL TOUR IX ANCIENT EGYPT (KEMET)

TRIP INCLUDES:

- All tips, taxes, and domestic travel in Egypt
- Deluxe hotel accommodations & two meals per day
- Entrance fees to over 40 sites & monuments
- CD on "Documenting Your Travel Experiences"
- On-site and evening presentations by Prof. Ampim
- Optional 5 units college credit

TOUR HIGHLIGHTS (LAND OF THE PHARAOHS):

We will visit...

- The great pyramids of Giza & the Great Sphinx (Heru-em-akhet), which is the most well-known statue in the world.
- The ancient capital city of Memphis and the extensive monuments of Sakkara, including the Tomb of Ptah-Hotep, author of the oldest surviving book in the world.
- The massive Dahshur & Meidum pyramids, and the Mastaba of Ra-Hotep & Nofret, whose famous statues in the Cairo Museum are forgeries according to Prof. Ampim in his book, Modern Fraud.
- The Egyptian Museum with its renowned collection of well-preserved Pharaonic antiquities.
- The temples of Luxor and Karnak, which constitute one of the largest open-air museums in the world.
- The famous Valley of the Kings/Queens and Noble Tombs, including the Tomb of King Tutankhamen & the Temple of Queen Hatshepsut.
- The ancient city of the tomb builders, Deir el-Medina.
- The Luxor Museum & the Nubian Museum in Aswan.
- The Dendera, Edfu, and Abydos temples
- The Noble Tombs in Aswan & the temples of Pharaoh Ramses II / Queen Nefertari at Abu Simbel.
- The ancient Workmen's Village of Deir el Medina
- The Nubian village tour
- and much more...

---

Prof. Manu Ampim is a leading primary researcher and historian on African & African American history and culture. He has written two books, conducted pioneering first-hand research in 18 countries, and has taken eight educational tours to Egypt and Central America. Ampim is currently an professor of history and Africana Studies at

Contra Costa College and Merritt College innorthern CA , and host of the popular internet radio program, 'Africana Studies' on www.BlakeRadio.com

=====

FULL TRIP ITINERARY & REGISTRATION FORM

http://manuampim.com/kmt\_08.doc

FOR MORE INFO:

Prof. Manu Ampim

Director, Advancing the Research

510-482-5791

www.ManuAmpim.com

profmanu@acninc.net

TOUR REGISTRATION & PAYMENT:

Consolidated Tours Organization, Inc.

1675 Virginia Avenue, Suite 200

Atlanta, GA 30337

Tel. 404-767-2727

Fax. 404-766-4520

Email: ctoinc@aol.com

| 23209|2007-09-28 18:20:34|Atuma|Re: Africans Don't believe they Are Africans|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Kaiza wrote:

"Intellectuals are a thorn to Eurocentrism, and I think mind wars against racism and injustice against Africans are the only way out."

Hi Peter,

Very thoughtful suggestion. I am noticing a trend among Conservative-type out-spoken White male political pundits which I do not think is a coincidence. They focus on sensitive issues as a way of challenging the Black community, then stepping up attacks on the community as a whole for the problems that exist in it. They do this by focusing on particular faults while ignoring the reality of the necessary over-all historic context.

I personally don't think it is always necessary to bring the full historical context into a matter when dealing with individuals about their need to be responsible and make good choices instead of bad ones. But it is getting to the point where these White men are making irresponsible statements that randomly beg the wrong questions -- questions that if answered according to the assume logic could only make Black people the villains in the quest to find what is wrong with race relations in America.

By ignoring the historic reality of White racism as a necessary component of racial unrest, their questions and statements implicate the Black race in America as the sole cause of its dysfunctional situation in America. Clearly they are appealing more to their White audience while trying to call so-called Black leaders on the public carpet. This appears to me to be a battle tactic ? an attempt to force a checkmate situation that the usual Black leaders are intellectually unprepared to deal with. Unfortunately, they appear to be hitchhiking on Bill Cosby's challenge to an existing problem among some in the Black community as a catapult to launch their aggressive attack.

I think they are meddling in a family type of argument they need to stay out of. Because while they say they want racism to end, they exacerbate it by: 1. providing Whites with the ammunition they need to increase their skepticism about Black people, and: 2. Infuriating Black people to a point where they may indiscriminately feel anger toward Whites.

In the meantime, they are actively trying to make Whites feel as if they are the hapless victims of Black racism.

Fred

>

> Agree with you clyde. I studied secondary school in africa around ten years ago and we never studied egypt in detail, we only touched Meroe and kush .So mighty is the edifice of lies built by eurocentrism that I never considered egypt as specifically Black(I just thought it was a no race culture) till I read diop a year ago and since then I have been very much interested in Egypt. I agree that africans somehow lack the general african identity and tend to associate themselves with tribe but revert to the black identity only when living in europe where colour consciousness matters .But there are many exceptions for example, many african countries supported each other fighting against apartheid particularly Tanzanians. I applaud black americans because for the past 30 years American blacks have done great research especially in relation to egypt and many now love their motherland and don't consider it as 'primitive'. I urge african Americans to invest more in africa especially in technological fields, schools etc. I remember Julius nyerere of Tanzania once wanted to chat liberation issues with an african american intellectual, and the American government sent Mohammed Ali (the boxer), Nyerere refused to speak with him. Intellectuals are a thorn to eurocentrism, and I think mind wars against racism and injustice against africans are the only way out.

>

>

> To: Ta_Seti@...: olmec982000@...: Thu, 27 Sep 2007 07:25:41 - 0700Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Africans Don't believe they Are Africans

>

>

>

>

> I agree with your post. But you made a mistake. You said that African Americans don't know they, reAfrican. I believe you should have wrote most Africans don't believe they are Africans. This results from the fact that most Blacks in Africa base their identity on tribe and maybe "nation", but not generically Africans. The failure to identify oneself as a monolithic group keeps people in Africa from progressing. Granted, Europeans see themselves in terms of tribes and nationalities but--they believe they are all Westerners and therefore unite against non-Western people. This disadvantages African people in the U.S. and Africa, because they seek to deal with people based on a color-blind global world, but they are confronted by a world where ethnicity and cultural identity (Western vs non-Western) dictate interpersonal and intrapersonal interactions of nations and states. It is this sense of "non-Africaness" that make Afrocentric scholars appear as freaks to many people within and outside their own community. Afrocentric scholars are often considered freaks because the audience they are seeking to address, and would appear to be the most receptive of their message have little if any interest in their history and civilization. They have little interest because they feel, wrongly, that history has nothing to do with them--money and the pursuit of wealth--they believe make their life better. Granted, money can improve one's position in society, but it does not address one's need for self-confidence and psychological well-being. This well-being comes from recognizing one is respected, confident, capable of being all they can do. The failure of Africans to know and understand that history situates a people within the context of their heritage and the psychological sense of well being and self-esteem all people need to effect efficacy which is constructive and relevant to their cognitive reality. Subliminally, Africans are taught they are ignorant, barbaric and absent any history but the Medieval African Kingdoms and Slave trade. At the same time they are taught that whites built all the great civilizations Egypt, Babylon and the Greco-Roman empires. Knowledge of this false history of Blacks, lead many Blacks to feel inferior to Europeans, feelings of learned helplessness and lack of self-esteem. Europeans feel, due to this false history, that they are entitled to rule the world because it was their people--white people--who created civilization and culture. Blacks who are conditioned to trace their history back to the Medieval Kingdoms, feel that this civilization was invented by Arabs. Add this to learning about the slave trade makes most Blacks feel subconsciously they have contributed nothing to world history as shapers of history. This type of history makes African people feel inferior to all the other races who have long histories. To many of these Blacks who may attain a high or Middle class lifestyle--they create this false notion that race does not exist, even though they are bombarded by race every minute of every day- in the media and the schools. The absence of a world view of "Africaness", by African people in Africa and abroad is the reason we don't have funded research positions in Afrocentric studies at university and private foundations. Most Africans just can't believe we have a history that was not guided by white Europeans and white Arabs. Granted this is all false--but failure to know one's history ALLOWS ONE TO LOSE THEIR SENSE OF WHO THEY ARE. Clyde-- elliottandelliottmtg wrote:> I absolutely agree! The only problem would be > generating the same > level of outrage on this topic, in comparison to the > "Jena 6" > situation, because judicial injustice is an issue > that resonates > more clearly in the African American community then > the theft, > denial and destruction of African history. I am sure > you understand > how both issues are connected but the miseducated > masses will find > it hard to grapple with the relevance. Many African > Americans do not > consider themselves African at all. > > I think if Afrocentric scholars, and those who seek > historical > truths, formed some sort of African Historical > Restoration Society > and in an organized assault, confronted Eurocentric > Egyptologist and > the television channels that promote and profit from > their lies with > undeniable historical documentation and > archeological evidence then > the changes we desire will begin to manifest. > > But more importantly we need to promote our African > history in the > form of art, music and movies. We need a "Roots" for > this generation > but instead of the scourge of slavery the glory of > Kemet will be the > topic and will lead this generation into a higher > understanding of > self. > > ---

-
In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep" > > wrote:>
>> > I heard about it and I think I asked if it was > taped somehow and > > available for purchase. But anyway, I think that > it can be done. > The > > climate is right and if we put enough pressure on > the likes of > > Discovery, The History Channel, Hawass and others > who continually > > perpetuate this false sense of history, I think it > can come to > > fruition. They won't deal with the culture of > ancient ta-merri > because > > they know it can easily be shown to compare with > the rest of > Africa, > > and to an extent, its remnants in African culture > to date. > > > > I think if we organized with the same sincerity > and energy as we > did > > for the Jena 6 in Louisiana, then we can make this happen. Too many > Egyptologists make statements on emails and paper,> and it is time > we> > discuss this in person where a rebuttal can be> done in a timely > fashion. > > > I say we make it happen. Our ancestors fought for> us, it is time we> > fought for them. > > > Asar Imhotep> > <http://www.mochasuite.com>> > > > > > > > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, bonotchim@ wrote:> > > > > Some years ago,? I?believe when? Dr. Obenga was> at Temple, Molefi> > Asante tried to organize?a?symposium like you> suggest and?no white> > scholar would? commit. Because of what?Dr. Diop and> Obenga?did> > in?Cairo?another? symposium is unlikely.> > > Bro. Asar did you hear about or attend the> African Nationalist? > Mdw> > Ntr conference in New York? It was in June or> July. > > > Bro.B.> > > > > -----Original Message-----> > From: asar_imhotep > > > To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com> > > Sent: Wed, 26 Sep 2007 3:43 pm> > > Subject: [Ta_Seti] A new symposium proposal -> Tutankhamun was > not black> This is what I propose, and I am so serious> about this. We need > to> > > have another UNESCO like symposium of the> peopling of Ancient Ta-> Merri.> > > > > The problem today is that we are a visual> society and these > arguments> > > Diop and Obenga have made have not been made> public (at large) > where> > > the people could see the debates. If we can get> a symposium just > like> > > the one for UNESCO, and have it covered by> C-Span and other > media,> > > here in the United States, with more scholars> contributing, I > think we> > > can settle this once and for all. > > > > > I think since 1973 there has been more evidence> that supports > Diop's> > > and Obenga's claims. This can be introduced with> more rigor and > we can> > > review the tapes as would football players after> a game. I > haven't> > > heard of Hawass agreeing to be on any panel to> debate this issue > and I> > > think he needs to be there. There needs to be a> final > confrontation,> > > bringing all of the available evidence. It can> have 4 aspects to > the> > > debate: Archeology, Linguistics, Philosophy, and> overall cultural> > > connections.> > > > > I think Bro. Manu Ampim can lead this charge and> gather the other> > > scholars, in the States, Europe and the Africa,> to participate. > We can> > > organize it to happen anywhere from 6 months to> a year. > > > > > What say ye?> > > > > Asar Imhotep> > > <http://www.mochasuite.com>> > > > > > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Alex van> Deelen" > wrote:> > > > > > Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt> antiquities chief > (Hawass) > > > > > Posted by: "Wayne Owens" majadi9@ majadi9 > > > > > Wed Sep 26, 2007 4:51 am (PST) > > > > > > > Of course in Hawass' "guesstimation" they> cannot be Afrikan.> > > > > This would of course hinder the Aryan> theoretical framework > > > > > that has been historically presented.> Secondly this would > > > > >

contradict the erroneous idea that Afrikans> could not have >>>>
built nor contribute in any shape form nor> fashion to the >>>> genius of Nile Valley Civilizations. >>>>>>> What troubles me, is that an individual like> that is allowed>>>> to handle Egyptian antiquities. >>>>>>> Can we really trust him not to destroy or> mislabel items>>>> that show the Egytpians were Black?
> === message truncated

===_____Build ing

a website is a piece of cake. Yahoo! Small Business gives you all the tools to get online.<http://smallbusiness.yahoo.com/webhosting>

>
>
>
>
>
>
>

---

> Celeb spotting ? Play CelebMashup and win cool prizes
> <https://www.celebmashup.com>
>

| 23210|2007-09-28 19:14:03|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt
antiquities chief (Hawass)|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Alex van Deelen" wrote:

>
> Posted by: "elliottandelliottmtg" elliottandelliottmtg@...
> elliottandelliottmtg
> Wed Sep 26, 2007 10:26 pm (PST)
>
>> But more importantly we need to promote our African history in the >> form of art, music and movies. We need a "Roots" for this generation >> but instead of the scourge of slavery the glory of Kemet will be the >> topic and will lead this generation into a higher understanding of >> self.
>
> Danny Glover is doing a lot of Afrocentric (for want of a different word) > projects.

>

It's heartening to know that Glover has taken an interest in Afrocentric themes. You usually need someone with that kind of "juice" to get the funds necessary for something on the level of "Roots" or

"The Matrix."

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23211|2007-09-28 20:58:04|clyde winters|Re: Africans Don't believe they Are Africans|

Good analysis.

Clyde

--- Atuma <arumeas@yahoo.com> wrote:

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Kaiza
> wrote:
>
> "Intellectuals are a thorn to Eurocentrism, and I > think mind wars > against racism and injustice against Africans are > the only way out."
>
> Hi Peter,
>
> Very thoughtful suggestion. I am noticing a trend > among Conservative-> type out-spoken White male political pundits which > I do not think is > a coincidence. They focus on sensitive issues as a > way of > challenging the Black community, then stepping up > attacks on the > community as a whole for the problems that exist in > it. They do this > by focusing on particular faults while ignoring the > reality of the > necessary over-all historic context.
>
> I personally don't think it is always necessary to > bring the full > historical context into a matter when dealing with > individuals about > their need to be responsible and make good choices > instead of bad > ones. But it is getting to the point where these > White men are > making irresponsible statements that randomly beg > the wrong > questions -- questions that if answered according to

- > the assume logic
- > could only make Black people the villains in the
- > quest to find what
- > is wrong with race relations in America.
- >
- > By ignoring the historic reality of White racism as
- > a necessary
- > component of racial unrest, their questions and
- > statements implicate
- > the Black race in America as the sole cause of its
- > dysfunctional
- > situation in America. Clearly they are appealing
- > more to their White
- > audience while trying to call so-called Black
- > leaders on the public
- > carpet. This appears to me to be a battle tactic ?
- > an attempt to
- > force a checkmate situation that the usual Black
- > leaders are
- > intellectually unprepared to deal with.
- > Unfortunately, they appear
- > to be hitchhiking on Bill Cosby's challenge to an
- > existing problem
- > among some in the Black community as a catapult to
- > launch their
- > aggressive attack.
- >
- > I think they are meddling in a family type of
- > argument they need to
- > stay out of. Because while they say they want
- > racism to end, they
- > exacerbate it by: 1. providing Whites with the
- > ammunition they need
- > to increase their skepticism about Black people,
- > and: 2. Infuriating
- > Black people to a point where they may
- > indiscriminately feel anger
- > toward Whites.
- >
- > In the meantime, they are actively trying to make
- > Whites feel as if
- > they are the hapless victims of Black racism.
- >
- > Fred
- >
- >

> >
> > Agree with you clyde.I studied secondary school in > africa around > ten years ago and we never studied egypt in > detail,we only touched > Meroe and kush .So mighty is the edifice of lies > built by > eurocentrism that I never considered egypt as > specifically Black(I > just thought it was a no race culture) till I read > diop a year ago > and since then I have been very much interested in > Egypt. I agree > that africans somehow lack the general african > identity and tend to > associate themselves with tribe but revert to the > black identity only > when living in europe were colour consciousness > matters .But there > are many exceptions for example, many african > countries supported > each other fighting against apartheid particularly > Tanzanians. I > applaud black americans because for the past 30 > years American blacks > have done great research especially in relation to > egypt and many now > love their motherland and don't consider it as > 'primitive'. I urge > african Americans to invest more in africa > especially in > technological fields, schools etc. I remember > Julius nyerere of > Tanzania once wanted to chat liberation issues with > an african > american intellectual,and the American goverment > sent Mohammed Ali
> (the boxer),Nyerere refused to speak with him.
> Intellectuals are a > thorn to eurocentrism, and I think mind wars against > racism and > injustice against africans are the only way out.
> >
> >
> > To: Ta_Seti@...: olmec982000@...: Thu, 27 Sep 2007
> 07:25:41 -

> 0700Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Africans Don't > believe they Are > Africans
>>
>>
>>
>>
>> I agree with your post. But you made a mistake.
> You said that > African Americans don't know they, reAfrican. I > believe you should > have wrote most Africans don't believe they are > Africans. This results > from the fact that most Blacks in Africa base their > identity on tribe > and maybe "nation", but not generically Africans. The > failure to > identify oneself as a monolithic group keeps people > in Africa > from progressing. Granted, Europeans see themselves in > terms of > tribes and nationalities but--they believe they are > all Westerners and > therefore unite against non-Western people. This > disadvantages African > people in the U.S. and Africa, because they seek to > deal with > people based on a color-blind global world, but they > are confronted by > a world where ethnicity and cultural identity > (Western vs non-Western) > dictate interpersonal and intrapersonal interactions > of nations and > states. It is this sense of "non-Africaness" that > make Afrocentric > scholars appear as freaks to many people within and > outside their own > community. Afrocentric scholars are often considered > freaks because > the audience they are seeking to address, and would > appear to be the > most receptive of their message have little if any > interest in their > history and civilization. They have little interest > because they feel, > wrongly, that history has nothing to do with

- > them--money and
- > the pursuit of wealth--they believe make there
- > life better. Granted,
- > money can improve one's position in society, but it
- > does not address
- > one's need for self-confidence and psychological
- > well-being. This well-
- > being comes from recognizing one
- > is respected, confident, capable of
- > being all they can do. The failure of Africans to
- > know and understand
- > that history situates a people within the context of
- > their heritage and
- > the psychological sense of well being and self-esteem
- > all people need
- > to effect efficacy which is constructive and relevant
- > to their
- > cognitive reality. Subliminally, Africans are taught
- > they are
- > ignorant, barbaric and absent any history but the
- > Medieval African
- > Kingdoms and Slave trade. At the same time they are
- > taught that whites
- > built all the great civilizations Egypt, Babylon and
- > the Greco-
- > Roman empires. Knowledge of this false history of
- > Blacks, lead many
- > Blacks to feel inferior to Europeans, feelings of
- > learned

=== message truncated ===

---

Tonight's top picks. What will you watch tonight? Preview the hottest shows on Yahoo! TV.

<http://tv.yahoo.com/>

| 23212|2007-09-29 05:19:09|Manu Ampim|Re: Polish atomic physicists study Egyptian frescoes|

Attachments :

Greetings,

Paul, this is a good example of why we have to be diligent in the 21st century because we have already seen the problems with paint restoration in Egyptian tombs and temples. This "modern knowledge" and technique of the Polish scientists will all but certainly involve opinion and guesswork, and this is how modern conspirators are able to change and alter scenes in their de-Africanization process.

This article is blatantly misleading. From my careful examination in the field, it is obvious that the Kemetian artists were masters of creating vivid colors that are still fresh looking today. The biggest problem with the colors is not "time and atmospheric factors" as the article states, but it is the *deliberate* actions of people who have (and continue to) purposely alter and destroy scenes. Modern villages with their water usage near the sites have caused moisture problems in several areas, but the greater issue is the deliberate de-Africanization of the images caused by human hands.

There is so-called "restoration work" that is being done (or recently completed) which involves the systematic lightening of the original colors and recarving facial features. At the actual field locations this past June, I pointed out to my Kemet tour group several temples that have been deliberately altered by modern hands, such as the Hatshepsut Temple at Deir el Bahri, Karnak Temple, and the Dendera Temple, and at the latter two temples there is current work being done. Anyone who takes a minute to stop and watch these government workers can plainly see their crude work of destroying scenes and lightening the colors.

We also see at the Luxor Temple the beginning stages of the re-introducing of images and scenes. This is the last phase of the multi-decade work of restoring the temples' images. The images in the restored scenes have no color at all, and thus one would never know that the walls once contained images of brown-skinned Africans. If there was ever a time that people should visit Kemet for the first time it is now.

Advancing the work,
Manu Ampim

---

2007-09-25 14:58

Polish atomic physicists study Egyptian frescoes

Thousands of years ago, Egyptians knew many complicated methods of producing dyes. They used them to create many magnificent frescoes, which cover the walls of temples, royal palaces and tombs. Time and atmospheric factors have caused the paintings to lose their initial colours. The chemical reactions have modified the chemical content of the pigment. Thus, the colours we see today, are very distant from the pieces created by their ancient painters.

This is why scientists, with the help of modern knowledge, are looking for ways of recreating these processes to restore the creations of the Egyptian masters and craftsmen to their former glory. According to Dr Marek Pawlowski the spokesman for Andrzej Soltan Institute for Nuclear Studies in Swierk, this study is a bit like a fascinating detective adventure.

Modern atomic physics provides a valuable research tool. Samples of the plaster covered in ancient dyes are radiated with beams of speeding protons, so that through analysing the radiation emitted from the radiated sample it is possible to establish its chemical and particle content. This way, one can collect the "pieces of the puzzle", which tell us, what the initial colour of the painting was.

For the past few weeks, a scholarship holder of the Egyptian government ? Shaaban Abd El Aal is running research on the ancient dyes, under the eye of Prof. Andrzej Turowski. He is applying Particle Induced X-ray Emission (PIXE), which means that characteristic X radiation, emitted from atoms as a result of ionisation of the inner atom layers, is registered on the beam of protons from the electrostatic

Van de Graaff accelerator. The energy of the registered radiation provides information on the type of particles, while the intensity indicates its concentration in a given sample.

"Work on this has only started and it is difficult to predict its results. However, we have very high hopes" ? Pawlowski explained.

PAP - Nauka w Polsce, Katarzyna Czechowicz, tr.ajfb

| 23213|2007-09-29 06:36:07|Bradenqp@aol.com|Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief (Hawass)|

You are correct, Manu.

I think it is however possible to force white Egyptologists into the debate or else circumvent them entirely. The way to do this is to have the symposium anyway with black (and perhaps latin or asian) scholars, to bring in sympathetic Black media and entertainment heavyweights, scholars and politicians. International figures too. Thabo Mbeki, for example is sympathetic to the Afrocentric movement.

If you bring in big names and if these take a public position on this in the media, and if you go after Hawass and the Eurocentrists in a scholarly fashion within a flawlessly documented and produced video of the symposium (you can add other video documentation of the Afrocentric case) you can force the issue. We are simply not using our power and are waiting around for white people to agree to participate with us.

Parts of the videos can be made available on sites like YouTube and a website can be created for this project at nominal cost. Linking banners can also be produced at nominal cost and all well meaning black websites can be asked to display this banner linking to the site of the project on their own sites.

We can ask prominent Afrocentric entertainment and sports figures to mention the project to the media and even wear buttons or T-Shirts etc. designed to bring attention to it.

There are any number of possibilities here. We are simply not using the power we have properly.

Peace,

Paul Braden

In a message dated 9/28/2007 5:31:35 PM Eastern Daylight Time, Profmanu@acninc.net writes:

Greetings,

I agree that an international symposium on the population of classical Kemet is timely, but mainstream Egyptologists now conveniently claim that "race is no longer important in the study of Egypt." Therefore, many of them will ignore the call or dismiss it as a waste of time, even while they continue to promote bogus light- and white-skin images of ancient Egyptians in their "scholarly" work. Here is a case in point. The King Tutankhamen exhibit is currently showing at the Franklin Institute in Philadelphia until Sept. 30th, and thus I have been invited next month by Bro. Mukasa Afrika and the local African community to address the issue of the falsification of King Tut's image. Our proposal was to hold the event at the Franklin Institute and have an open forum with myself, the museum staff, and any local exhibit consultants/ Egyptologists associated with the exhibit. Of course, when this proposal was presented suddenly there was no further communication from the Franklin Institute, so we will hold the event at another venue in Philadelphia. Nor did the mainstream Egyptologists attend our major symposium last year in Ft. Lauderdale, FL.

My presentation will be in Philadelphia on October 27th and I will present on,

"THE VANISHING EVIDENCE OF CLASSICAL AFRICAN CIVILIZATIONS:
The Case of the Merowe Dam in Sudan."

I will send an update with the specific time and location.

With the 1973 Cairo Symposium there is no video or audio available to my knowledge, so this has allowed mainstream Egyptologists to recover from their extensive and massive academic injuries, resulting from the superior scholarship and academic mauling administered by Diop and Obenga. This healing time has allowed these mainstream writers and their descendents to pretend like the public academic mauling did not take place, and quietly change their positions and strategies whenever it has been convenient.

Another major symposium would be important to halt the public arrogance of dishonest men like Hawass and his eurocentric cohorts. UNESCO would be the ideal organization to host this type of major event, but I don't know how much support it would receive from mainstream Egyptologists for two reasons. First, their "scholarship" on this issue is paper thin, and second, they hide behind the dishonest statement that "race is no longer important in the study of Egypt." Race is always important to them until someone challenges their unscholarly anti-African positions. Since the Cairo Symposium, when Diop destroyed the Caucasian origin of Kemet myth, these same wounded scholars quietly abandoned their old ideas and retreated to a new mixed-race theory without presenting any credible evidence to support this new idea.

We should be clear that even with a well-documented public forum, the mainstream eurocentric scholars would continue with their psychotic denial of a black African Kemet. For example, when Hawass was the director of the Giza area pyramids a few years ago he stated that Africans had no influence in Kemet. He made this statement even though everyday he would go to work and have to look at Heru-em-akhet (Great Sphinx), which is the most powerful African statue in the world. Other mainstream "scholars" look at African images of King Tut and then irrationally claim that he was not "black."

Finally, as someone wrote earlier there is no "once and for all" because we are not dealing with rational people. Most of these people will never admit to an academic butt-kicking or to an African Kemet. We have seen this type of pathology on this forum. The older Ta-Seti members will remember (and the group archives show) that when I joined this group in late 2001, I exposed a number of these irrational people on one issue after another, and I suspect that they are still lurking around to monitor this forum in order to misrepresent our words to others.

Advancing the work,
Manu Ampim

---

A new symposium proposal - Tutankhamun was not black

This is what I propose, and I am so serious about this. We need to have another UNESCO like symposium of the peopling of Ancient Ta-Merri.

The problem today is that we are a visual society and these arguments Diop and Obenga have made have not been made public (at large) where the people could see the debates. If we can get a symposium just like the one for UNESCO, and have it covered by C-Span and other media, here in the United States, with more scholars contributing, I think we can settle this once and for all.

I think since 1973 there has been more evidence that supports Diop's and Obenga's claims. This can be introduced with more rigor and we can review the tapes as would football players after a game. I haven't heard of Hawass agreeing to be on any panel to debate this issue and I think he needs to be there. There needs to be a final confrontation, bringing all of the available evidence. It can have 4 aspects to the debate: Archeology, Linguistics, Philosophy, and overall cultural connections.

I think Bro. Manu Ampim can lead this charge and gather the other scholars, in the States, Europe and the Africa, to participate. We can organize it to happen anywhere from 6 months to a year.

What say ye?

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Alex van Deelen" wrote:

>
> > Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief (Hawass)
> > Posted by: "Wayne Owens" majadi9@... majadi9
> > Wed Sep 26, 2007 4:51 am (PST)
>
> > Of course in Hawass' "guesstimation" they cannot be Afrikan.
> > This would of course hinder the Aryan theoretical framework
> > that has been historically presented. Secondly this would
> > contradict the erroneous idea that Afrikans could not have
> > built nor contribute in any shape form nor fashion to the
> > genius of Nile Valley Civilizations.
>
> > What troubles me, is that an individual like that is allowed
> > to handle Egyptian antiquities.
>
> > Can we really trust him not to destroy or mislabel items
> > that show the Egyptians were Black?
>
> > Will he re-label such items as 'Nubian', or make them
> > disappear?
>
> > When is egyptology going to be regulated in a modern
> > and transparent manner?
>
> > There have been several complaints about Hawass,
> > but usually people are too scared to even go on the
> > record.
>
> > Alex
>

| 23214|2007-09-29 08:51:09|kungfuhustle|Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief (Hawass)|

Well said, and very accurate.

We are not performing as you are capable, and for decades we lose more ground then gained.

Danny Glover is just 1 man, and there are still defined limits placed on his productions by those that finance him.

Whites have literally thousands of writers/producers/directors/scholars cranking out materials promoting their Aryan agenda targeting every form of media.

On top of that, they utilize the tax dollars WE PROVIDE to develop and deploy other psychological and biological tools to achieve their goals. We finance our own demise.

For example, these neurotoxins being specifically developed to target people with higher levels of melanin. Some of the effects of being subjected to these agents are;

- Apathy
- Reduced learning capability, as shown below.
- Disorientation
- Uncontrolled Fear

How the brain uses Melanin, and why the DoD Anti-Black Bioweapon manipulates melanin in blacks to create impotency, Fear, Doubt, Distorted Reality perception, Suppressed Learning neurotransmitters in those subjected.

Table 5:

Bioregulators and their clinical effects182

Bioregulator
Category

Agent

Clinical Effects

Neurotransmitters

Catecholamines

Consciousness, mood alterations,
anxiety,
hypertension, tachycardia, and sexual dysfunction.

Amino acids

Effects on learning, memory, cognition, and
pain sensitivity.

Neuropeptides

Effects on cognition and sensory processing.

How does the DoD test and monitor the desired effects? They simply issue a Request For Proposal to US colleges and universities to conduct clinical trials. The awarded university then places ads in various local media for AA test subjects for pay. In this instance, the awarded college is none other than, Howard University.

Why are black colleges and university professors actively assisting the DoD in developing ethnics specific bio-agents? In the DoD's RFP summary's cover, these are the people being targeted by the bioagent.

<http://www.sunshine-project.org/publications/pr/support/SBCfaces.pdf>

Advances in Biotechnology: Promise and Peril
George Poste, PhD

http://www.upmc-biosecurity.org/website/events/2000\_symposium-2/poste/trans\_post.html

Meninarmer

On Sat, 2007-09-29 at 09:36 -0400, Bradenqp@aol.com wrote:

> We can ask prominent Afrocentric entertainment and sports figures to

- > mention the project to the media and even wear buttons or T-Shirts
- > etc. designed to bring attention to it.
- >
- > There are any number of possibilities here. We are simply not using the
- > power we have properly.
- >

| 23215|2007-09-29 10:22:43|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief (Hawass)|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Bradenqp@... wrote:

- >
- >
- > You are correct, Manu.
- >
- > I think it is however possible to force white Egyptologists into the debate

- > or else circumvent them entirely. The way to do this is to have the
- > symposium anyway with black (and perhaps latin or asian) scholars,

to bring in

- > sympathetic Black media and entertainment heavyweights, scholars and politicians.

- > International figures too. Thabo Mbeki, for example is sympathetic to the

- > Afrocentric movement.
- >

I agree. The thing is getting it started and getting people to volunteer to work and deliver in specific areas.

There's nothing that can't be done with a web-based committee or committees at the start. Eventually you'd have to have lead people, probably paid, to put together something really extraordinary at this level.

Either that or we get already existing professional non-profit organizations to take over key full-time aspects of organizing an international-level event.

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23216|2007-09-29 10:45:36|Djehuti Sundaka|Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief (Hawass)|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Bradenqp@... wrote:

>

>

> You are correct, Manu.

>

> I think it is however possible to force white Egyptologists into the debate

> or else circumvent them entirely.

And that is where the problem lies; trying to prove something to someone else who has the luxury to ignore any outcome of a debate instead of simply developing one's own independent educational system. Objecting to another's misrepresentation of a subject is mainly an issue for those who choose not to develop their own scholastic institutions and therefore must remain subject to another's misrepresentation.

Dependence cannot compete with independence.

A *peer reviewed* system of scholasticism and education has to be developed (along with an independent media) before one can effectively challenge the misrepresentation of another power structure. Anything less will only result in the perspective of "those folks complaining again" and if the real work of social independence is never done, that perspective will be right.

Djehuti Sundaka

The way to do this is to have the

> symposium anyway with black (and perhaps latin or asian) scholars,

to bring in

- > sympathetic Black media and entertainment heavyweights, scholars and politicians.

- > International figures too. Thabo Mbeki, for example is sympathetic

to the

- > Afrocentric movement.

- >

- > If you bring in big names and if these take a public position on

this in the

- > media, and if you go after Hawass and the Eurocentrists in a

scholarly

- > fashion within a flawlessly documented and produced video of the symposium (you

- > can add other video documentation of the Afrocentric case) you can force the

- > issue. We are simply not using our power and are waiting around

for white

- > people to agree to participate with us.

- >

- > Parts of the videos can be made available on sites like YouTube

and a

- > website can be created for this project at nominal cost. Linking banners can also

- > be produced at nominal cost and all well meaning black websites

can be asked > to display this banner linking to the site of the project on their own sites.

>

> We can ask prominent Afrocentric entertainment and sports figures

to mention

> the project to the media and even wear buttons or T-Shirts etc.

designed to > bring attention to it.

>

> There are any number of possibilities here. We are simply not using the power

> we have properly.

>

>

> Peace,

> Paul Braden

>

>

> In a message dated 9/28/2007 5:31:35 PM Eastern Daylight Time,

> Profmanu@... writes:

>

>

> Greetings,

>

> I agree that an international symposium on the population of classical Kemet

> is timely, but mainstream Egyptologists now conveniently claim

that "race is > no longer important in the study of Egypt." Therefore, many of them will > ignore the call or dismiss it as a waste of time, even while they continue to

- > promote bogus light- and white-skin images of ancient Egyptians in their

- > "scholarly" work.

- >

- > Here is a case in point. The King Tutankhamen exhibit is currently showing

- > at the Franklin Institute in Philadelphia until Sept. 30th, and

thus I have

- > been invited next month by Bro. Mukasa Afrika and the local

African community

- > to address the issue of the falsification of King Tut's image.

Our proposal

- > was to hold the event at the Franklin Institute and have an open forum with

- > myself, the museum staff, and any local exhibit consultants/ Our proposal was

- > to hold the event at the Of course, when this proposal was presented

- > suddenly there was no further communication from the Franklin

Institute, so we will

- > hold the event at another venue in Philadelphia. Nor did the mainstream

- > Egyptologists attend our major symposium last year in Ft.

Lauderdale, FL.

>

> My presentation will be in Philadelphia on October 27th and I will present

> on,

> "THE VANISHING EVIDENCE OF CLASSICAL AFRICAN CIVILIZATIONS:

> The Case of the Merowe Dam in Sudan."

>

> I will send an update with the specific time and location.

>

>

> With the 1973 Cairo Symposium there is no video or audio available to my > knowledge, so this has allowed mainstream Egyptologists to recover from their > extensive and massive academic injuries, resulting from the superior

> scholarship and academic mauling administered by Diop and Obenga.

This healing time

> has allowed these mainstream writers and their descendents to pretend like the > public academic mauling did not take place, and quietly change

their > positions and strategies whenever it has been convenient.

>

> Another major symposium would be important to halt the public

arrogance of > dishonest men like Hawass and his eurocentric cohorts. UNESCO

would be the > ideal organization to host this type of major event, but I don't know how much > support it would receive from mainstream Egyptologists for two reasons.

> First, their "scholarship" on this issue is paper thin, and

second, they hide

> behind the dishonest statement that "race is no longer important

in the study of > Egypt." Race is always important to them until someone challenges

their > unscholarly anti-African positions. Since the Cairo Symposium,

when Diop

> destroyed the Caucasoid origin of Kemet myth, these same wounded

scholars quietly

> abandoned their old ideas and retreated to a new mixed-race theory without > presenting any credible evidence to support this new idea.

>

> We should be clear that even with a well-documented public forum,

the

> mainstream eurocentric scholars would continue with their psychotic denial of a > black African Kemet. For example, when Hawass was the director of the Giza area

> pyramids a few years ago he stated that Africans had no influence in Kemet.

> He made this statement eventhough everyday he would go to work and have to > look at Heru-em-akhet (Great Sphinx), which is the most powerful

Africoid

> statue in the world. Other mainstream "scholars" look at Africoid images of King

> Tut and then irrationally claim that he was not "black."

>

> Finally, as someone wrote earlier there is no "once and for all"

because we > are not dealing with rational people. Most of these people will never admit > to an academic butt-kicking or to an African Kemet. We have seen this type > of pathology on this forum. The older Ta-Seti members will remember (and the > group archives show) that when I joined this group in late 2001, I exposed a > number of these irrational people on one issue after another, and

I suspect

> that they are still lurking around to monitor this forum in order

to > misrepresent our words to others.

>

> Advancing the work,

>

> Manu Ampim

>

> _____

>

>

>

>

>

> A new symposium proposal - Tutankhamun was not black

>

> This is what I propose, and I am so serious about this. We need to > have another UNESCO like symposium of the peopling of Ancient Ta-

Merri.

>

> The problem today is that we are a visual society and these

arguments

> Diop and Obenga have made have not been made public (at large)

where > the people could see the debates. If we can get a symposium just like

> the one for UNESCO, and have it covered by C-Span and other media,

> here in the United States, with more scholars contributing, I think we > can settle this once and for all.

>

> I think since 1973 there has been more evidence that supports

Diop's

> and Obenga's claims. This can be introduced with more rigor and we can

> review the tapes as would football players after a game. I haven't > heard of Hawass agreeing to be on any panel to debate this issue

and I > think he needs to be there. There needs to be a final

confrontation,

> bringing all of the available evidence. It can have 4 aspects to

the

> debate: Archeology, Linguistics, Philosophy, and overall cultural > connections.

>

> I think Bro. Manu Ampim can lead this charge and gather the other > scholars, in the States, Europe and the Africa, to participate. We can > organize it to happen anywhere from 6 months to a year.

>

> What say ye?

>

> Asar Imhotep

> <http://www.mochasuite.com/> (<http://www.mochasuite.com/>)

>

>

>

>

> --- In _Ta_Seti@yahoogroupsTa_S_

> (http://tech.groups.yahoo.com/group/Ta\_Seti/post?

postID=R12dr1sJCTCebQl-qyaN4MvWdXrAuwZUJSUvBOHSmUgsvhE_XNO3Rlgq-4YGBxf4IL

> T4E7mhJdaViaI11Q) , "Alex van Deelen" wrote:

>>

>>> Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief (Hawass)

>>> Posted by: "Wayne Owens" majadi9@ majadi9

>>> Wed Sep 26, 2007 4:51 am (PST)

<http://www.aol.com>

| 23217|2007-09-29 10:54:31|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief (Hawass)|

I have experience with two international scholarly conferences and in both cases the involved national government was/is subsidizing and supporting the event, which makes things much, much, much easier.

In addition, I've worked on state-level (political) events here in California in which we had some leaders and benefactors who are mega-millionaires. Again, that makes it a *bit* easier.

On a local and regional level, I've worked with grassroots organizations on local/regional-level community events, and it's pure hell!

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23218|2007-09-29 11:05:52|Paul Kekai Manansala|Ramses II temple found inside Mosque|

Ancient Pharaoh Temple Discovered Inside Egypt Mosque

Steven Stanek in Cairo, Egypt
for National Geographic News

September 27, 2007

Parts of a temple dating to the reign of pharaoh Ramses II have been discovered inside a mosque in Luxor, Egypt, officials report (see map).

Experts restoring the historic mosque uncovered sections of columns, capitals, and elaborately inscribed reliefs from one of the ancient temple's courtyards built around 1250 B.C.

Enlarge Photo

RELATED

- Egyptian Tomb of Noblewoman Found \(August 16, 2007\)
- Egypt's Largest Pharaoh-Era Fortress Discovered, Experts Announce \(July 27, 2007\)
- "Egypt's Forgotten Treasures" in *National Geographic Magazine* \(May 2005\)

The previously concealed architectural elements reveal well-preserved hieroglyphics and unique scenes depicting the powerful pharaoh.

The discovery is likely to touch a nerve among religious leaders, because the newly exposed reliefs contain representations of humans and animals, which are forbidden inside mosques, the experts said.

The mosque was erected as a shrine to Muslim saint Abul Haggag in the 13th century A.D. on the site of an earlier Christian church, which was itself built on top of the ancient temple, the archaeologists explained.

The discovery was made during repair work on the mosque after a fire damaged part of the structure in June.

"To do this project of restoration, [workers] had to reclean and reopen many things, and this is when the scenes were found, and they are really unique," said Zahi Hawass, secretary general of Egypt's Supreme Council of Antiquities.

(Hawass is also a National Geographic Society explorer-in-residence. National Geographic News is a division of the National Geographic Society.)

Encryptions and Glyphs

Christians, and later Muslims, frequently built their shrines on top of ancient Egyptian holy sites, said W. Raymond Johnson, an Egyptologist at the Oriental Institute at the University of Chicago who has seen the newly exposed temple sections.

Builders of both faiths usually erased or defaced ancient artwork in the temples, he said, but the newfound reliefs remain virtually untouched.

"We are very lucky that these have been so well preserved," Johnson said.

Rather than destroying the reliefs, the mosques builders carefully hid them away with a protective layer of straw-reinforced plaster, shielding them from the elements.

Continued on Next Page >>

| 23219|2007-09-29 12:48:21|Alex van Deelen|Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief (Hawass)|

Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief (Hawass)

Posted by: "Manu Ampim" Profmanu@acninc.net m_ampim

Fri Sep 28, 2007 2:29 pm (PST)

Professor Ampim,

> Greetings,

>

> I agree that an international symposium on the population
> of classical Kemet is timely, but mainstream Egyptologists
> now conveniently claim that "race is no longer important in > the study of Egypt."

Translation: the notion that Ancient Egyptians were white
is no longer central to the study of Egypt.

So, how can we get you elected to Hawass's position? :)

Alex

| 23220|2007-09-29 13:21:47|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt
antiquities chief (Hawass)|

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Alex van Deelen" wrote:

>

> Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief (Hawass)

> Posted by: "Manu Ampim" Profmanu@... m_ampim

> Fri Sep 28, 2007 2:29 pm (PST)

>

> Professor Ampim,

>

>> Greetings,

>>

>> I agree that an international symposium on the population
>> of classical Kemet is timely, but mainstream Egyptologists
>> now conveniently claim that "race is no longer important in >> the study of Egypt."

>

> Translation: the notion that Ancient Egyptians were white > is no longer central to the study of Egypt.

>

> So, how can we get you elected to Hawass's position? :)

>

Alex, if only there could be no positions on race taken by Egyptologists or anybody else, no facial reconstructions attempted, if we just let people come to decisions by themselves based on non-retouched Egyptian art, everybody would think the Ancient Egyptians were black.

Obviously that can't be allowed to happen.

That's why the pitch was removed, along usually with the epidermis, of most royal mummies. They look black with the pitch on, and white with their skin torn off!

Only the 21st Dynasty royal mummies generally have their epidermis intact.

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

Ramses II with "red hair"

Ramses I?

| 23221|2007-09-29 15:22:06|kungfuhustle|Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief (Hawass)|

Alex, if only there could be no positions on race taken by Egyptologists or anybody else, no facial reconstructions attempted, if we just let people come to decisions by themselves based on non-retouched Egyptian art, everybody would think the Ancient Egyptians were black.

>

> Obviously that can't be allowed to happen.

>

> That's why the pitch was removed, along usually with the epidermis, of most royal mummies. They look black with the pitch on, and white with their skin torn off!

>

Sounds like a great strategy deployed by those who are setting the deck to win.

They will too, simply because any counter strategy is too weak, to influenced by THEIR standards, and too little, too late.
Drastic times, call for drastic measures.

On Sat, 2007-09-29 at 20:21 +0000, Paul Kekai Manansala wrote:

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Alex van Deelen"

> wrote:

>>

>> Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief (Hawass)

>> Posted by: "Manu Ampim" Profmanu@... m_ampim

>> Fri Sep 28, 2007 2:29 pm (PST)

>>

>> Professor Ampim,

>>

>>> Greetings,

>>>

>>> I agree that an international symposium on the population

>>> of classical Kemet is timely, but mainstream Egyptologists

>>> now conveniently claim that "race is no longer important in >>> the study of Egypt."

>>

>> Translation: the notion that Ancient Egyptians were white

>> is no longer central to the study of Egypt.

>>

>> So, how can we get you elected to Hawass's position? :)

>>

>

> Alex, if only there could be no positions on race taken by > Egyptologists or anybody else, no facial reconstructions attempted, if > we just let people come to decisions by themselves based on > non-retouched Egyptian art, everybody would think the Ancient > Egyptians were black.

>

> Obviously that can't be allowed to happen.

>

> That's why the pitch was removed, along usually with the epidermis, of > most royal mummies. They look black with the pitch on, and white with > their skin torn off!

>

> Only the 21st Dynasty royal mummies generally have their epidermis > intact.

>

> Regards,

> Paul Kekai Manansala

>

>

>

>

> 1

> Ramses II with "red hair"

>

>

>

> Ramses I?

>

>

>

>

| 23222|2007-09-29 16:08:11|Manu Ampim|Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief (Hawass)|

Greetings Paul,

I am clear that Djehuti has made the most important comment on this issue:

>And that is where the problem lies; trying to prove something

to >someone else who has the luxury to ignore any outcome of a debate

>instead of simply developing one's own independent educational >system.

Africentric scholars have been presenting and promoting the evidence of an African Kemet for decades. In the last quarter of the 20th century, there have been conferences, well-publicized debates, journals, essays, video tapes, and a powerful African-centered movement in the 1980s and early 1990s that impacted people throughout the Western world and yet eurocentric Egyptologists have largely ignored this data in order to continue with their irrational denial of an African Kemet.

It is a waste of time to ask our academic opponents to say, "Yes, you are right Egypt was a black civilization, and I will now change my conclusions." Many of them will die and never publicly admit what they know is true, as was the case with both Keith Seele and Frank Yurco.

Also, last year there was a symposium in Ft. Lauderdale with myself, Obenga, Hilliard, and Bernal, and the mainstream Egyptologists chosen to show up. Instead, they have completely ignored this event. Rather than deal with the issue of a falsified caucasoid image of Tutankhamen, the museum curator in Ft. Lauderdale simply invited us to visit the exhibit at his invitation. There was no interest in a public discussion or debate. National Geographic also chose to decline the invitation to the symposium. Further, we already have a clear example in the 1980s-1990s of how the mainstream scholars/media respond to Africentric scholarship...they acknowledge nothing but attack everything. Let's be clear that their concern is maintaining the white supremacy system. It is about what is useful and not about what is truthful.

Djehuti is right that our work is to build and development independent institutions and teach our own community. It is naive for anyone to seek approval or agreement from mainstream Eurocentric scholars. The vast majority of them will never participate in, or acknowledge the results of, a symposium. We are not going to "force" them to participate in anything. Besides, why is this seen as such an important goal? They are no authority on anything African.

If both sides are open to an international debate, then let's get on with it! But no one should naively assume that the results will end eurocentric opposition and denial.

Advancing the work,

Manu Ampim

---

You are correct, Manu.

I think it is however possible to force white Egyptologists into the debate or else circumvent them entirely. The way to do this is to have the symposium anyway with black (and perhaps latin or asian) scholars, to bring in sympathetic Black media and entertainment heavyweights, scholars and politicians. International figures too. Thabo Mbeki, for example is sympathetic to the Afrocentric movement.

If you bring in big names and if these take a public position on this in the media, and if you go after Hawass and the Eurocentrists in a scholarly fashion within a flawlessly documented and produced video of the symposium (you can add other video documentation of the Afrocentric case) you can force the issue. We are simply not using our power and are waiting around for white people to agree to participate with us.

Parts of the videos can be made available on sites like YouTube and a website can be created for this project at nominal cost. Linking banners can also be produced at nominal cost and all well meaning black websites can be asked to display this banner linking to the site of the project on their own sites.

We can ask prominent Afrocentric entertainment and sports figures to mention the project to the media and even wear buttons or T-Shirts etc. designed to bring attention to it.

There are any number of possibilities here. We are simply not using the power we have properly.

Peace,
Paul Braden

-----
> You are correct, Manu.
>
> I think it is however possible to force white Egyptologists into > the debate or else circumvent them entirely.

And that is where the problem lies; trying to prove something to someone else who has the luxury to ignore any outcome of a debate instead of simply developing one's own independent educational system. Objecting to another's misrepresentation of a subject is mainly an issue for those who choose not to develop their own scholastic institutions and therefore must remain subject to another's misrepresentation.

Dependence cannot compete with independence.

A *peer reviewed* system of scholasticism and education has to be developed (along with an independent media) before one can effectively challenge the misrepresentation of another power structure. Anything less will only result in the perspective of "those folks complaining again" and if the real work of social independence is never done, that perspective will be right.

Djehuti Sundaka

| 23223|2007-09-29 16:32:32|Manu Ampim|Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief (Hawass)|
Professor Ampim,

>
Greetings,
>
> I agree that an international symposium on the population
> of classical Kemet is timely, but mainstream Egyptologists
> now conveniently claim that "race is no longer important
in
> the study of Egypt."

Translation: the notion that Ancient Egyptians were white
is no longer central to the study of Egypt.

So, how can we get you elected to Hawass's position? :)

Alex

---

Greetings Alex,
Yes, you are right that the idea of white Egyptians is no longer an accepted scholarly position, "so let's not talk about it anyone." Phoney white images of Egyptians are promoted in TV docu-dramas and magazines but there are no scholarly arguments presented to support these images.
The time will come when African people must have some meaningful influence in the state of affairs regarding the monuments of ancient Kemet.
By the way, Hawass has made it clear that he is making sure that his successor will not be able to undo the policies that he is putting in place. On the one hand, he is right for calling for the return of artifacts and mummies, and for giving specific guidelines to foreign archaeological teams. However, at the same time he allows the blatant destruction and defacement of temple and tomb scenes, and he is fiercely anti-African in his conception of who built Kemet.
Advancing the work,
Manu A.
| 23224|2007-09-30 11:34:08|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt
antiquities chief (Hawass)|
While the 21st Dynasty and Roman era mummies largely have their epidermis intact, those of early dynasties is generally missing except in certain areas like around the toes.

See: Lucas, Alfred. Ancient Egyptian Materials and Industries, Courier Dove Publications, 1999, pp 285-9.

The 21st Dynasty was based in Tanis in northern Lower Egypt and at least the last king of the dynasty was Libyan (Meshwesh). There is also new evidence suggesting the dynasty was mostly Libyan:

Jansen-Winkel 2001. Karl Jansen-Winkel. *Der thebanische
'Gottesstaat'*. Orientalia 70 (2001). 153-182

Roman era mummies usually have the epidermis nearly perfectly intact.

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:

>
> Alex, if only there could be no positions on race taken by Egyptologists > or anybody else, no facial reconstructions attempted, if we just let > people come to decisions by themselves based on non-retouched Egyptian > art, everybody would think the Ancient Egyptians were black.
>>
>> Obviously that can't be allowed to happen.
>>
>> That's why the pitch was removed, along usually with the epidermis, of >> most royal mummies. They look black with the pitch on, and white with >> their skin torn off!
>>
>
> Sounds like a great strategy deployed by those who are setting the deck > to win.
> They will too, simply because any counter strategy is too weak, to > influenced by THEIR standards, and too little, too late.
> Drastic times, call for drastic measures.

>
>
>

| 23225|2007-10-01 07:32:44|Dexter Harper|Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities
chief (Hawass)|

Outstanding commentary Prof. Ampim!

Respectfully,

Sharma Men Ra

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Manu Ampim" wrote:

>
> Greetings Paul,
>
> I am clear that Djehuti has made the most important comment on this issue:
>
>>And that is where the problem lies; trying to prove something to >>someone else who has the luxury to ignore any outcome of a debate >>instead of simply developing one's own independent educational >>system.
>
> Africentric scholars have been presenting and promoting the evidence of an African Kemet for decades. In the last quarter of the 20th century, there have conferences, well-publicized debates, journals, essays, video tapes, and a powerful African-centered movement in the 1980s and early 1990s that impacted people throughout the Western world and yet eurocentric Egyptologists have largely ignored this data in order to continue with their irrational denial of an African Kemet.

>

> It is a waste of time to ask our academic opponents to say, "Yes, you are right Egypt was a black civilization, and I will now change my conclusions." Many of them will die and never publicly admit what they know is true, as was the case with both Keith Seele and Frank Yurco.

>

> Also, last year there was a symposium in Ft. Lauderdale with myself, Obenga, Hilliard, and Bernal, and the mainstream Egyptologists chose not to show up. Instead, they have completely ignored this event. Rather than deal with the issue of a falsified caucasoid image of Tutankhamen, the museum curator in Ft. Lauderdale simply invited us to visit the exhibit at his invitation. There was no interest in a public discussion or debate. National Geographic also chose to decline the invitation to the symposium. Further, we already have a clear example in the 1980s-1990s of how the mainstream scholars/media respond to Africentric scholarship...they acknowledge nothing but attack everything. Let's be clear that their concern is maintaining the white supremacy system. It is about what is useful and not about what is truthful.

>

> Djehuti is right that our work is to build and development independent institutions and teach our own community. It is naive for anyone to seek approval or agreement from mainstream Eurocentric scholars. The vast majority of them will never participate in, or acknowledge the results of, a symposium. We are not going to "force" them to participate in anything. Besides, why is this seen as such an important goal? They are no authority on anything African.

>

> If both sides are open to an international debate, then let's get on with it! But no one should naively assume that the results will end eurocentric opposition and denial.

>

> Advancing the work,

>

> Manu Ampim

>

> -----

-----

>

>
>
> You are correct, Manu.
>
> I think it is however possible to force white Egyptologists into the debate or else circumvent them entirely. The way to do this is to have the symposium anyway with black (and perhaps latin or asian) scholars, to bring in sympathetic Black media and entertainment heavyweights, scholars and politicians. International figures too. Thabo Mbeki, for example is sympathetic to the Afrocentric movement.
>
> If you bring in big names and if these take a public position on this in the media, and if you go after Hawass and the Eurocentrists in a scholarly fashion within a flawlessly documented and produced video of the symposium (you can add other video documentation of the Afrocentric case) you can force the issue. We are simply not using our power and are waiting around for white people to agree to participate with us.
>
> Parts of the videos can be made available on sites like YouTube and a website can be created for this project at nominal cost. Linking banners can also be produced at nominal cost and all well meaning black websites can be asked to display this banner linking to the site of the project on their own sites.
>
> We can ask prominent Afrocentric entertainment and sports figures to mention the project to the media and even wear buttons or T-Shirts etc. designed to bring attention to it.
>
> There are any number of possibilities here. We are simply not using the power we have properly.
>
>
> Peace,
> Paul Braden
> -----
-----
>
>> You are correct, Manu.
>>
>> I think it is however possible to force white Egyptologists into >>the debate or else circumvent them entirely.
>
>
>
> And that is where the problem lies; trying to prove something to > someone else who has the luxury to ignore any outcome of a debate

> instead of simply developing one's own independent educational > system. Objecting to another's misrepresentation of a subject is > mainly an issue for those who choose not to develop their own > scholastic institutions and therefore must remain subject to > another's misrepresentation.

>

> Dependence cannot compete with independence.

>

> A *peer reviewed* system of scholasticism and education has to be > developed (along with an independent media) before one can > effectively challenge the misrepresentation of another power > structure. Anything less will only result in the perspective > of "those folks complaining again" and if the real work of social > independence is never done, that perspective will be right.

>

> Djehuti Sundaka

>

| 23226|2007-10-01 09:24:32|Paul Kekai Manansala|Dental indicators of health early Egyptian and Nubian agriculturalists|

Am J Phys Anthropol. 2007 Sep 4;

Dental indicators of health and stress in early Egyptian and Nubian agriculturalists: A difficult transition and gradual recovery.
Starling AP, Stock JT.

Leverhulme Centre for Human Evolutionary Studies, Department of Biological Anthropology, University of Cambridge, Cambridge, UK CB2 1QH.

Although agriculture is now the globally predominant mode of food production, studies of the skeletal remains of early agriculturalists have indicated high levels of physiological stress and poor health relative to hunter-gatherers in similar environments. Previous studies identifying this trend in different regions prompt further research of the causes and effects of subsistence transitions in human societies. Here, 242 dentitions from five ancient Egyptian and Nubian populations are examined: 38 individuals from Jebel Sahaba (Upper Paleolithic), 56 from Badari (Predynastic), 54 from Naqada (Predynastic), 47 from Tarkhan (Dynastic), and 47 from Kerma (Dynastic). These populations span the early period of agricultural intensification along the Nile valley. Skeletal remains were scored for the presence of linear enamel hypoplasia (LEH) of the dentition, an established indicator of physiological stress and growth interruption. The prevalence of LEH was highest in the "proto-agricultural" (pastoralist) Badari population, with a gradual decline throughout the late Predynastic and early Dynastic periods of state formation. This suggests that the period surrounding the emergence of early agriculture in the Nile valley was associated with high stress and poor health, but that the health of agriculturalists improved substantially with the increasing urbanization and trade that accompanied the formation of the Egyptian state. This evidence for poor health among proto- and early agriculturalists in the Nile valley supports theories that agricultural intensification occurred as a response to ecological or demographic pressure rather than simply as an innovation over an existing stable subsistence strategy. Am J Phys Anthropol, 2007. (c) 2007 Wiley-Liss, Inc.

| 23227|2007-10-01 13:42:50|cristofori whitakara|Abu El Haggag|

there is also a festival at Abu El Haggag where boats are paraded around the mosque that was copied from the Festival of Opet that occurred in Kemet. What does Al Aksur (Luxor) mean in arabic?

Paul Kekai Manansala wrote:

Ancient Pharaoh Temple Discovered Inside Egypt Mosque

Steven Stanek in Cairo, Egypt
for National Geographic News
September 27, 2007

Parts of a temple dating to the reign of pharaoh Ramses II have been discovered inside a mosque in Luxor, Egypt, officials report (see map).

Experts restoring the historic mosque uncovered sections of columns, capitals, and elaborately inscribed reliefs from one of the ancient temple's courtyards built around 1250 B.C.

Enlarge Photo

RELATED

- Egyptian Tomb of Noblewoman Found \(August 16, 2007\)

- Egypt's Largest Pharaoh-Era Fortress Discovered, Experts Announce \(July 27, 2007\)
- "Egypt's Forgotten Treasures" in National Geographic Magazine \(May 2005\)

The previously concealed architectural elements reveal well-preserved hieroglyphics and unique scenes depicting the powerful pharaoh.

The discovery is likely to touch a nerve among religious leaders, because the newly exposed reliefs contain representations of humans and animals, which are forbidden inside mosques, the experts said.

The mosque was erected as a shrine to Muslim saint Abul Haggag in the 13th century A.D. on the site of an earlier Christian church, which was itself built on top of the ancient temple, the archaeologists explained.

The discovery was made during repair work on the mosque after a fire damaged part of the structure in June.

"To do this project of restoration, [workers] had to reclean and reopen many things, and this is when the scenes were found, and they are really unique," said Zahi Hawass, secretary general of Egypt's Supreme Council of Antiquities.

(Hawass is also a National Geographic Society explorer-in-residence. National Geographic News is a division of the National Geographic Society.)

Encryptions and Glyphs

Christians, and later Muslims, frequently built their shrines on top of ancient Egyptian holy sites, said W. Raymond Johnson, an Egyptologist at the Oriental Institute at the University of Chicago who has seen the newly exposed temple sections.

Builders of both faiths usually erased or defaced ancient artwork in the temples, he said, but the newfound reliefs remain virtually untouched.

"We are very lucky that these have been so well preserved," Johnson said.

Rather than destroying the reliefs, the mosques builders carefully hid them away with a protective layer of straw-reinforced plaster, shielding them from the elements.

Continued on Next Page >>

---

Catch up on fall's hot new shows on Yahoo! TV. Watch previews, get listings, and more!
 | 23228|2007-10-01 13:45:19|cristofori whitakara|Re: Ramses II temple found inside Mosque|
 the people who practice islam refer to the pharaonic culture as a culture of pagans but they use the pagan's temples to create their own?

Paul Kekai Manansala wrote:

Ancient Pharaoh Temple Discovered Inside Egypt Mosque

Steven Stanek in Cairo, Egypt
 for National Geographic News

September 27, 2007

Parts of a temple dating to the reign of pharaoh Ramses II have been discovered inside a mosque in Luxor, Egypt, officials report (see map).

Experts restoring the historic mosque uncovered sections of columns, capitals, and elaborately inscribed reliefs from one of the ancient temple's courtyards built around 1250 B.C.

Enlarge Photo

RELATED

- Egyptian Tomb of Noblewoman Found \(August 16, 2007\)
- Egypt's Largest Pharaoh-Era Fortress Discovered, Experts Announce \(July 27, 2007\)
- "Egypt's Forgotten Treasures" in *National Geographic Magazine* \(May 2005\)

The previously concealed architectural elements reveal well-preserved hieroglyphics and unique scenes depicting the powerful pharaoh.

The discovery is likely to touch a nerve among religious leaders, because the newly exposed reliefs contain representations of humans and animals, which are forbidden inside mosques, the experts said.

The mosque was erected as a shrine to Muslim saint Abul Haggag in the 13th century A.D. on the site of an earlier Christian church, which was itself built on top of the ancient temple, the archaeologists explained.

The discovery was made during repair work on the mosque after a fire damaged part of the structure in June.

"To do this project of restoration, [workers] had to reclean and reopen many things, and this is when the scenes were found, and they are really unique," said Zahi Hawass, secretary general of Egypt's Supreme Council of Antiquities.

(Hawass is also a National Geographic Society explorer-in-residence. National Geographic News is a division of the National Geographic Society.)

Encryptions and Glyphs

Christians, and later Muslims, frequently built their shrines on top of ancient Egyptian holy sites, said W. Raymond Johnson, an Egyptologist at the Oriental Institute at the University of Chicago who has seen the newly exposed temple sections.

Builders of both faiths usually erased or defaced ancient artwork in the temples, he said, but the newfound reliefs remain virtually untouched.

"We are very lucky that these have been so well preserved," Johnson said.

Rather than destroying the reliefs, the mosques builders carefully hid them away with a protective layer of straw-reinforced plaster, shielding them from the elements.

Continued on Next Page >>

---

Yahoo! oneSearch: Finally, mobile search that gives answers, not web links.

| 23229|2007-10-01 14:44:09|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief (Hawass)|

There's a saying that goes: "the victors write history". I guess the victims complain. There's no reason however that you can't be victorious in defeat - if you handle it right.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Djehuti Sundaka" wrote:

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Bradenqp@ wrote:

> >

> >

> > You are correct, Manu.

> >

> > I think it is however possible to force white Egyptologists into the debate > > or else circumvent them entirely.

>

>

>

> And that is where the problem lies; trying to prove something to someone else who has the luxury to ignore any outcome of a debate instead of simply developing one's own independent educational system. Objecting to another's misrepresentation of a subject is mainly an issue for those who choose not to develop their own scholastic institutions and therefore must remain subject to another's misrepresentation.

>

> Dependence cannot compete with independence.

>

> A *peer reviewed* system of scholasticism and education has to be developed (along with an independent media) before one can effectively challenge the misrepresentation of another power structure. Anything less will only result in the perspective of "those folks complaining again" and if the real work of social > independence is never done, that perspective will be right.

>

> Djehuti Sundaka

>

>

>

> The way to do this is to have the >> symposium anyway with black (and perhaps latin or asian) scholars,

> to bring in

>> sympathetic Black media and entertainment heavyweights, scholars

> and politicians.

>> International figures too. Thabo Mbeki, for example is sympathetic

> to the >> Afrocentric movement.

>>

>> If you bring in big names and if these take a public position on

> this in the >> media, and if you go after Hawass and the Eurocentrists in a > scholarly

>> fashion within a flawlessly documented and produced video of the

> symposium (you >> can add other video documentation of the Afrocentric case) you

can

> force the >> issue. We are simply not using our power and are waiting around

> for white

>> people to agree to participate with us.

>>

>> Parts of the videos can be made available on sites like YouTube

> and a >> website can be created for this project at nominal cost. Linking > banners can also >> be produced at nominal cost and all well meaning black websites

> can be asked >> to display this banner linking to the site of the project on their > own sites.

>>

>> We can ask prominent Afrocentric entertainment and sports figures

> to mention

> > the project to the media and even wear buttons or T-Shirts etc.

> designed to > > bring attention to it.

> >

> > There are any number of possibilities here. We are simply not using > the power

> > we have properly.

> >

> >

> > Peace,

> > Paul Braden

> >

> >

> > In a message dated 9/28/2007 5:31:35 PM Eastern Daylight Time,

> > Profmanu@ writes:

> >

> >

> > Greetings,

> >

> > I agree that an international symposium on the population of

> classical Kemet

> > is timely, but mainstream Egyptologists now conveniently claim

> that "race is > > no longer important in the study of Egypt." Therefore, many of > them will > > ignore the call or dismiss it as a waste of time, even while

they

> continue to > > promote bogus light- and white-skin images of ancient Egyptians

in > their

> > "scholarly" work.

> >

> > Here is a case in point. The King Tutankhamen exhibit is > currently showing

> > at the Franklin Institute in Philadelphia until Sept. 30th, and

> thus I have > > been invited next month by Bro. Mukasa Afrika and the local

> African community

> > to address the issue of the falsification of King Tut's image.

> Our proposal
> > was to hold the event at the Franklin Institute and have an open > forum with > > myself, the museum staff, and any local exhibit consultants/ Our > proposal was
> > to hold the event at the Of course, when this proposal was > presented
> > suddenly there was no further communication from the Franklin > Institute, so we will > > hold the event at another venue in Philadelphia. Nor did the > mainstream
> > Egyptologists attend our major symposium last year in Ft.
> Lauderdale, FL.
> >
> > My presentation will be in Philadelphia on October 27th and I will > present

> > on,
> > "THE VANISHING EVIDENCE OF CLASSICAL AFRICAN CIVILIZATIONS:
> > The Case of the Merowe Dam in Sudan."
> >
> > I will send an update with the specific time and location.
> >
> >
> > With the 1973 Cairo Symposium there is no video or audio available

> to my > > knowledge, so this has allowed mainstream Egyptologists to recover

> from their > > extensive and massive academic injuries, resulting from the > superior > > scholarship and academic mauling administered by Diop and Obenga.

> This healing time
> > has allowed these mainstream writers and their descendents to > pretend like the > > public academic mauling did not take place, and quietly change
> their > > positions and strategies whenever it has been convenient.
> >
> > Another major symposium would be important to halt the public

- > arrogance of
- > > dishonest men like Hawass and his eurocentric cohorts. UNESCO
- > would be the
- > > ideal organization to host this type of major event, but I don't
- > know how much
- > > support it would receive from mainstream Egyptologists for two
- > reasons.
- > > First, their "scholarship" on this issue is paper thin, and
- > second, they hide
- > > behind the dishonest statement that "race is no longer important
- > in the study of
- > > Egypt." Race is always important to them until someone challenges

- > their
- > > unscholarly anti-African positions. Since the Cairo Symposium,
- > when Diop
- > > destroyed the Caucasoid origin of Kemet myth, these same wounded
- > scholars quietly
- > > abandoned their old ideas and retreated to a new mixed-race theory

- > without
- > > presenting any credible evidence to support this new idea.
- > >
- > > We should be clear that even with a well-documented public forum,

- > the
- > > mainstream eurocentric scholars would continue with their
- > psychotic denial of a
- > > black African Kemet. For example, when Hawass was the director

of

- > the Giza area
- > > pyramids a few years ago he stated that Africans had no influence

- > in Kemet.
- > > He made this statement even though everyday he would go to work

and

- > have to
- > > look at Heru-em-akhet (Great Sphinx), which is the most powerful
- > Africoid

> > statue in the world. Other mainstream "scholars" look at

Africoid

> images of King

> > Tut and then irrationally claim that he was not "black."

> >

> > Finally, as someone wrote earlier there is no "once and for all"

> because we > > are not dealing with rational people. Most of these people will > never admit

> > to an academic butt-kicking or to an African Kemet. We have seen

> this type > > of pathology on this forum. The older Ta-Seti members will > remember (and the > > group archives show) that when I joined this group in late 2001,

I

> exposed a > > number of these irrational people on one issue after another,

and

> I suspect

> > that they are still lurking around to monitor this forum in order

> to > > misrepresent our words to others.

> >

> > Advancing the work,

> >

> > Manu Ampim

> >

> > _____

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> > A new symposium proposal - Tutankhamun was not black

> >

> > This is what I propose, and I am so serious about this. We need

to > > have another UNESCO like symposium of the peopling of Ancient Ta-> Merri.

> >
> > The problem today is that we are a visual society and these
> arguments
> > Diop and Obenga have made have not been made public (at large)
> where > > the people could see the debates. If we can get a symposium just > like
> > the one for UNESCO, and have it covered by C-Span and other

media,

> > here in the United States, with more scholars contributing, I
> think we
> > can settle this once and for all.
> >
> > I think since 1973 there has been more evidence that supports
> Diop's
> > and Obenga's claims. This can be introduced with more rigor and we

> can > > review the tapes as would football players after a game. I haven't > > heard of Hawass agreeing to be on any panel to debate this issue

> and I > > think he needs to be there. There needs to be a final
> confrontation, > > bringing all of the available evidence. It can have 4 aspects to
> the > > debate: Archeology, Linguistics, Philosophy, and overall cultural > > connections.
> >
> > I think Bro. Manu Ampim can lead this charge and gather the other > > scholars, in the States, Europe and the Africa, to participate.

We

> can > > organize it to happen anywhere from 6 months to a year.
> >
> > What say ye?
> >
> > Asar Imhotep
> > <http://www.mochasuite.com/> (<http://www.mochasuite.com/>)
> >

>>
>>
>>
>> --- In _Ta_Seti@yahoogroupsTa_S_
>> (http://tech.groups.yahoo.com/group/Ta\_Seti/post?postID=R12dr1sJCTCebQl-qyaN4MvWdXrAuWZUJSUvBOHSmUgsvhE\_XNO3Rlgq-4YGBxf4lLT4E7mhJdaViaI1lQ) , "Alex van Deelen" wrote:
>>>
>>>> Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief

(Hawass)

>>>> Posted by: "Wayne Owens" majadi9@ majadi9
>>>> Wed Sep 26, 2007 4:51 am (PST)
>>>>
>>>> Of course in Hawass' "guesstimation" they cannot be Afrikan.
>>>> This would of course hinder the Aryan theoretical framework
>>>> that has been historically presented. Secondly this would >>>> contradict the erroneous idea that Afrikans could not have
>>>> built nor contribute in any shape form nor fashion to the >>>> genius of Nile Valley Civilizations.
>>>>
>>>> What troubles me, is that an individual like that is allowed
>>>> to handle Egyptian antiquities.
>>>>
>>>> Can we really trust him not to destroy or mislabel items
>>>> that show the Egyptians were Black?
>>>>
>>>> Will he re-label such items as 'Nubian', or make them
>>>> disappear?
>>>>
>>>> When is egyptology going to be regulated in a modern
>>>> and transparant manner?
>>>>
>>>> There have been several complaints about Hawass,
>>>> but usually people are too scared to even go on the
>>>> record.
>>>>
>>>> Alex
>>>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>

> >

> >

> >

> > ***** See what's new at > <http://www.aol.com>

> >

>

| 23230|2007-10-01 14:46:21|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt
antiquities chief (Hawass)|

>>On a local and regional level, I've worked with grassroots organizations on local/regional-level community events, and it's pure hell!<<

Unfortunately, that is all too common an assessment.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala"

wrote:

>

> I have experience with two international scholarly conferences and

in > both cases the involved national government was/is subsidizing and > supporting the event, which makes things much, much, much easier.

>

> In addition, I've worked on state-level (political) events here in > California in which we had some leaders and benefactors who are > mega-millionaires. Again, that makes it a *bit* easier.

>

> On a local and regional level, I've worked with grassroots > organizations on local/regional-level community events, and it's pure > hell!

>

> Regards,

> Paul Kekai Manansala

>

| 23231|2007-10-01 18:14:17|elliottandelliottmtg|Re: Ramses II temple found inside Mosque|
Jews and Christians say the same thing. This is just more proof of the African origins of Christianity,Judaism and Islam.

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, cristofori whitakara

wrote:

>
> the people who practice islam refer to the pharaonic culture as a culture of pagans but they use the pagan's temples to create their own?

>
> Paul Kekai Manansala wrote:

Ancient Pharaoh Temple Discovered Inside Egypt Mosque

> Steven Stanek in Cairo, Egypt
> for National Geographic News

>
> September 27, 2007
> Parts of a temple dating to the reign of pharaoh Ramses II have been discovered inside a mosque in Luxor, Egypt, officials report (see map).

> Experts restoring the historic mosque uncovered sections of columns, capitals, and elaborately inscribed reliefs from one of the ancient temple's courtyards built around 1250 B.C.

>
>
> Enlarge Photo

>
> RELATED

>
> Egyptian Tomb of Noblewoman Found (August 16, 2007)
> Egypt's Largest Pharaoh-Era Fortress Discovered, Experts

Announce (July 27, 2007)
> "Egypt's Forgotten Treasures" in National Geographic Magazine

(May 2005)

>
> The previously concealed architectural elements reveal well-preserved hieroglyphics and unique scenes depicting the powerful pharaoh.

> The discovery is likely to touch a nerve among religious leaders, because the newly exposed reliefs contain representations of humans and animals, which are forbidden inside mosques, the experts said.

> The mosque was erected as a shrine to Muslim saint Abul Haggag in the 13th century A.D. on the site of an earlier Christian church, which was itself built on top of the ancient temple, the archaeologists explained.

>

> The discovery was made during repair work on the mosque after a fire damaged part of the structure in June.

> "To do this project of restoration, [workers] had to reclean and reopen many things, and this is when the scenes were found, and they are really unique," said Zahi Hawass, secretary general of Egypt's Supreme Council of Antiquities.

> (Hawass is also a National Geographic Society explorer-in-residence. National Geographic News is a division of the National Geographic Society.)

> Encryptions and Glyphs

> Christians, and later Muslims, frequently built their shrines on top of ancient Egyptian holy sites, said W. Raymond Johnson, an Egyptologist at the Oriental Institute at the University of Chicago who has seen the newly exposed temple sections.

> Builders of both faiths usually erased or defaced ancient artwork in the temples, he said, but the newfound reliefs remain virtually untouched.

> "We are very lucky that these have been so well preserved,"

Johnson said.

> Rather than destroying the reliefs, the mosques builders carefully hid them away with a protective layer of straw-reinforced plaster, shielding them from the elements.

> Continued on Next Page >>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

> Yahoo! oneSearch: Finally, mobile search that gives answers, not web links.

>

| 23232|2007-10-02 03:57:53|Peter Clark|Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief (Hawass)|

xxPeter wrote: Black Africans in the diaspora especially in the US has the ability and resources to rewrite their story and tell it how they spiritually fell and know their ancestors existed. This foolish going back and forth arguing with whites will continue until Blacks start and control their own unadulterated educational and research institutions. We have beaten them even while using their own professed material but if we want to put nails into their coffin, then you need to bring your own nails and hammer. They will never let go until we sever the hand at the elbow. What dying people has ever done this??? The same thing applies with general education. Why do Blacks continue to look towards government (public) schools to provide the necessary skills and education to use those skills beyond me. Every means for measuring their success at this task has shown disastrous crippling and too often fatal results. Blacks have countless examples of what a successful schooling apparatus should appear as. I could name many at all levels and also make recommendations. But, they want to do what is necessary to completion. The amalgamation distractions always take over. Soon there will be arguments on whether Martin Luther King, Henry Aaron and Barry Bonds were white or black. Watch and see!!

----- Original Message -----

From: Manu Ampim

To: ta_Seti@yahoo.com

Sent: Saturday, September 29, 2007 6:29:23 PM

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief (Hawass)

Professor Ampim,

> Greetings,

>

> I agree that an international symposium on the population

> of classical Kemet is timely, but mainstream Egyptologists

> now conveniently claim that "race is no longer important in

> the study of Egypt."

Translation: the notion that Ancient Egyptians were white is no longer central to the study of Egypt.

So, how can we get you elected to Hawass's position? :)

Alex

Greetings Alex,

Yes, you are right that the idea of white Egyptians is no longer an accepted scholarly position, "so let's not talk about it anymore." Phoney white images of Egyptians are promoted in TV docu-dramas and magazines but there are no scholarly arguments presented to support these images.

The time will come when African people must have some meaningful influence in the state of affairs regarding the monuments of ancient Kemet.

By the way, Hawass has made it clear that he is making sure that his successor will not be able to undo the policies that he is putting in place. On the one hand, he is right for calling for the return of artifacts and mummies, and for giving specific guidelines to foreign archaeological teams. However, at the same time he allows the blatant destruction and defacement of temple and tomb scenes, and he is fiercely anti-African in his conception of who built Kemet.

Advancing the work,

Manu A.

I agree with your position. There is no reasons for the societies of Ta-Merri to look at their past personages in a way no different than they were looked at at the foundation of that thought. What is called Ntr in that distant society was more likely given the titles of Orisas and others at the base of the practice.

----- Original Message -----

From: Paul Kekai Manansala

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Sent: Thursday, September 20, 2007 3:27:50 PM

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?

I agree. This Punt was also probably the same or overlapping with Ta-aakhu, Land of the Ancestral Spirits to the south of Egypt, and to the Land of Yam about seven or eight months round-trip journey south of Egypt.

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:

>

> I am inquiring about a possible interpretation of the word /Ntr/ in > ancient Ta_Merrian ontology. For the most part Egyptologists define
> the word as "gods" and the more enlightened define ntr as "the vital > force behind animate and inanimate objects." I am posing here today
> another definition of the word Ntr.

>

> In keeping consistent with traditional African thought, people who > lived beyond the call of duty and was medicine for the community,
> when they die, they become part of the vital force that animates > objects in the universe. This is true with Ntrw, Abosom and even > Orisas.

>

> The late Dr. Afolabi A. Epega in his work Ifa: The Ancient Wisdom
> pg. 50 states:

>

> "Yoruba deities are called either "Imales" or "Orisas." The term
> Imale means the knowledge of the secrets of this world or of heaven:
> knowledge of what the Creator has kept in store for the common good
> of mankind, or one who has done some good or mighty things with his > knowledge or power is called Imale. Men of miraculous birth or who > become deified after death are called Imale, e.g., Dada, Oke, Oke > Talabi, Aina, Lisabi, Egbeji, etc. They are also called "Orisas."

>

>

> This is quit common all throughout Africa and this leads me to > believe that another definition of Ntr is "ancestor" or "deified"

> ancestor." With this in mind, when we read the term "Ta Ntr"
 > believed to be Pwanet (Punt), to me, it should be read as "land of > the ancestors" instead of "land of the gods" as most Egyptologists > posit. To me land of the "gods" doesn't makes sense since all of the > earth is powered by "ntrw" (the vital force behind animate and > inanimate objects). The land of our ancestors would point to a > genetic and cultural origin. It is no different than African-> Americans referring to Africa proper as the "mother land" (the land
 > of our historical birth).
 >
 > We know that persons of great stature in Ta-Merri were elevated to > the status of deity: Imhotep and Amenhotep III. In other words, they > became Ntrw after death and this is done all over Africa. What is > your opinion?
 >
 > Asar Imhotep
 > <http://www.mochasuite.com>
 >

| 23234|2007-10-02 08:16:53|cristofori whitakara|Re: Ramses II temple found inside Mosque|
 i guess like the sister mahari wrote: we are dealing with a people who have a deep psychoses.

elliottandelliottmtg wrote:

Jews and Christians say the same thing. This is just more proof of the African origins of Christianity, Judaism and Islam.

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, cristofori whitakara
 wrote:

>
 > the people who practice islam refer to the pharaonic culture as a > culture of pagans but they use the pagan's temples to create their > own?
 >
 > Paul Kekai Manansala wrote:
 > Ancient Pharaoh Temple Discovered Inside Egypt Mosque
 > Steven Stanek in Cairo, Egypt
 > for National Geographic News
 >
 > September 27, 2007
 > Parts of a temple dating to the reign of pharaoh Ramses II have > been discovered inside a mosque in Luxor, Egypt, officials report > (see map).
 > Experts restoring the historic mosque uncovered sections of > columns, capitals, and elaborately inscribed reliefs from one of the ancient temple's courtyards built around 1250 B.C.

>

>

> Enlarge Photo

>

> RELATED

>

> Egyptian Tomb of Noblewoman Found \(August 16, 2007\)

> Egypt's Largest Pharaoh-Era Fortress Discovered, Experts Announce \(July 27, 2007\)

> "Egypt's Forgotten Treasures" in National Geographic Magazine \(May 2005\)

>

> The previously concealed architectural elements reveal well-preserved hieroglyphics and unique scenes depicting the powerful pharaoh.

> The discovery is likely to touch a nerve among religious leaders, because the newly exposed reliefs contain representations of humans and animals, which are forbidden inside mosques, the experts said.

> The mosque was erected as a shrine to Muslim saint Abul Haggag in the 13th century A.D. on the site of an earlier Christian church, which was itself built on top of the ancient temple, the archaeologists explained.

>

> The discovery was made during repair work on the mosque after a fire damaged part of the structure in June.

> "To do this project of restoration, [workers] had to reclean and reopen many things, and this is when the scenes were found, and they are really unique," said Zahi Hawass, secretary general of Egypt's Supreme Council of Antiquities.

> (Hawass is also a National Geographic Society explorer-in-residence. National Geographic News is a division of the National Geographic Society.)

> Encryptions and Glyphs

> Christians, and later Muslims, frequently built their shrines on top of ancient Egyptian holy sites, said W. Raymond Johnson, an Egyptologist at the Oriental Institute at the University of Chicago who has seen the newly exposed temple sections.

> Builders of both faiths usually erased or defaced ancient artwork in the temples, he said, but the newfound reliefs remain virtually untouched.

> "We are very lucky that these have been so well preserved," Johnson said.

> Rather than destroying the reliefs, the mosques builders carefully hid them away with a protective layer of straw-reinforced plaster, shielding them from the elements.

> Continued on Next Page >>

>

>

>

>

>

> -----

> Yahoo! oneSearch: Finally, mobile search that gives answers, not web links.

>

---

Be a better Heartthrob. Get better relationship answers from someone who knows.

Yahoo! Answers - Check it out.

| 23235|2007-10-02 10:40:19|kungfuhustle|Re: Ramses II temple found inside Mosque|

Yes, varied and multi-tiered psychological disorders.

Considering, a large segment of the white majority, and their ancestors have committed high crimes on the order of Adolf Hitler. Yet, they have never been held accountable, or made to pay any penalty. Criminals who operate with immunity and are supported by the legal system have little to no incentive to seek treatment. Take a look at the annual US state budgets for public mental health care in the US South, and it becomes obvious, they have no interest in treatment.

With the coming of the new dam, and the previous flooding of Aswan, it seems highly probable that the system you seek to change from within, has a long term plan that counters any attempt of blacks, regardless of educational level, to correct skewed history at any significant level. Now, that more blacks are entering the field, they flood the area, effectively blocking it from future expedition.

In Egyptology, are there many Wealthy blacks Philanthropists (Oprah, Johnson, Cosby...) who fund black run and devised Africa/Egypt survey expeditions?

Although I've received telephone calls from the Republican party attempting to secure my vote, and years ago received calls from the United Negro College fund, I have never received a call, letter, or corner invitation from any black organization (NAACP, Howard, CBC, Society Of Black Egyptologists-"example") requesting financial support of anything other than civil rights or political candidates. Since it's inception, I've never received a telephone call or letter from any black publications collecting statistical information.

Are there black organizations comparable to the ADL, or JDL, who build and maintain targeted mail lists to periodically call to obtain donations and funding for these type of activities?

If not, is there a need for this type of proactive Black planning and fund raising organization focusing on black social and cultural short and long term goals?

If anyone knows of these groups, please feel free to list them.

We have a rich wealth of black professionals in a multitude of fields. Perhaps I am wrong and missed the meeting, but it seems to me, we are all just scattered and focused on specialty areas without the benefit of, or regard for impacting and setting/meeting milestones against a larger "Grand" Plan framework.

White and Jews have a well defined and detailed Grand Plan, and it appears to be working very effectively. How can someone lacking a plan hope to prevail against that?

Meninarmer

On Tue, 2007-10-02 at 08:16 -0700, cristofori whitakara wrote:

> i guess like the sister mahari wrote: we are dealing with a people who > have a deep psychoses.

>

> elliotandelliottmtg <elliottandelliottmtg@yahoo.com> wrote:

>

> Jews and Christians say the same thing. This is just more > proof of > the African origins of Christianity, Judaism and Islam.

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, cristofori whitakara

> wrote:

>>

>> the people who practice islam refer to the pharaonic culture

> as a > culture of pagans but they use the pagan's temples to create

> their > own?

>>

>> Paul Kekai Manansala wrote:

> Ancient Pharaoh Temple Discovered Inside Egypt Mosque

>> Steven Stanek in Cairo, Egypt

>> for National Geographic News

>>

>> September 27, 2007

>> Parts of a temple dating to the reign of pharaoh Ramses II

> have > been discovered inside a mosque in Luxor, Egypt, officials > report
> (see map).
> > Experts restoring the historic mosque uncovered sections of > columns, capitals, and elaborately inscribed reliefs from one
> of the > ancient temple's courtyards built around 1250 B.C.
> >
> >
> > Enlarge Photo
> >
> > RELATED
> >
> > Egyptian Tomb of Noblewoman Found (August 16, 2007)
> > Egypt's Largest Pharaoh-Era Fortress Discovered, Experts
> Announce (July 27, 2007)
> > "Egypt's Forgotten Treasures" in National Geographic > Magazine
> (May 2005)
> >
> > The previously concealed architectural elements reveal well-> preserved hieroglyphics and unique scenes depicting the > powerful > pharaoh.
> > The discovery is likely to touch a nerve among religious > leaders, because the newly exposed reliefs contain > representations > of humans and animals, which are forbidden inside mosques,
> the
> experts said.
> > The mosque was erected as a shrine to Muslim saint Abul > Haggag
> in the 13th century A.D. on the site of an earlier Christian > church,
> which was itself built on top of the ancient temple, the > archaeologists explained.
> >
> > The discovery was made during repair work on the mosque > after a
> fire damaged part of the structure in June.
> > "To do this project of restoration, [workers] had to reclean
> and > reopen many things, and this is when the scenes were found,
> and they > are really unique," said Zahi Hawass, secretary general of

> Egypt's
> Supreme Council of Antiquities.
> > (Hawass is also a National Geographic Society explorer-in-> residence. National Geographic News is a division of the > National > Geographic Society.)
> > Encryptions and Glyphs > > Christians, and later Muslims, frequently built their > shrines on > top of ancient Egyptian holy sites, said W. Raymond Johnson,
> an > Egyptologist at the Oriental Institute at the University of > Chicago
> who has seen the newly exposed temple sections.
> > Builders of both faiths usually erased or defaced ancient > artwork in the temples, he said, but the newfound reliefs > remain
> virtually untouched.
> > "We are very lucky that these have been so well preserved,"
> Johnson said.
> > Rather than destroying the reliefs, the mosques builders > carefully hid them away with a protective layer of > straw-reinforced
> plaster, shielding them from the elements.
> > Continued on Next Page >>
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> > -----
> > Yahoo! oneSearch: Finally, mobile search that gives answers,
> not
> web links.
> >
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

---

> > Be a better Heartthrob. Get better relationship answers from someone > who knows.
> > Yahoo! Answers - Check it out.
>

>
>

| 23236|2007-10-02 10:40:24|matt mercer|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|

I believe that this subject of the meanings of the word NTR is related to the question of the etymology of Al Aksar, or luxor, which from my brief internet research is translated as "Returning" in arabic. This theme of returning to the ancestral home to commune with the bones of our ancestors is likely the backbone of this shared cultural idea. The elephants making their annual migration to their graveyards is reflected in these traditions as form of education or the recognition of cognitive growth and the cultivation of formative development.

Since the root of the word NTR is NA and TA and RA(meroitic), two lines of water or as I see this tense form of past being related( ie: two lines of water are the past, three the present and one line of water the future) in relationship to TA, a loaf of bread, RA, a well or pool of water, this word is like a sentence that is very similar to yogic teaching. The past forms of movement of mind and body shared thru nurturing mind and body. Now considering that this word is also expressed by the symbol of a tree stump with a flag in it, this word also has to do with some principal of conservation. Expressing sustainable agriculture self determined education and recognition of and the cooperation of the different members of these related fields of growth through various yearly festivals and rituals to regenerate and refocus the various aspects of social expansion to ensure that all of these boundaries are clear, recognizable and flexible or "permeable" since we talking about water.

As I like to say of the glyph NA, water flows many more ways than one.

Perhaps the Sphinx, before he was formed into his present visage, was an elephant kneeling, inviting the worlds of the ancient kingdoms to come on this journey of learning.....

MATT MERCER (JAH)

Peter Clark wrote:

I agree with your position. There is no reasons for the societies of Ta-Merri to look at their past personages in a way no different than they were looked at at the foundation of that thought. What is called Ntr in that distant society was more likely given the titles of Orisas and others at the base of the practice.

----- Original Message -----

From: Paul Kekai Manansala

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com

Sent: Thursday, September 20, 2007 3:27:50 PM

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?

I agree. This Punt was also probably the same or overlapping with Ta-aakhu, Land of the Ancestral Spirits to the south of Egypt, and to the Land of Yam about seven or eight months round-trip journey south of Egypt.

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:

>
> I am inquiring about a possible interpretation of the word /Ntr/ in > ancient Ta_Merrian ontology. For the most part Egyptologists define
> the word as "gods" and the more enlightened define ntr as "the vital > force behind animate and inanimate objects." I am posing here today
> another definition of the word Ntr.

>
> In keeping consistent with traditional African thought, people who > lived beyond the call of duty and was medicine for the community,
> when they die, they become part of the vital force that animates > objects in the universe. This is true with Ntrw, Abosom and even > Orisas.

>
> The late Dr. Afolabi A. Epega in his work Ifa: The Ancient Wisdom
> pg. 50 states:

>
> "Yoruba deities are called either "Imales" or "Orisas." The term
> Imale means the knowledge of the secrets of this world or of heaven:
> knowledge of what the Creator has kept in store for the common good
> of mankind, or one who has done some good or mighty things with his > knowledge or power is called Imale. Men of miraculous birth or who > become deified after death are called Imale, e.g., Dada, Oke, Oke > Talabi, Aina, Lisabi, Egbeji, etc. They are also called "Orisas."

>
>
> This is quit common all throughout Africa and this leads me to > believe that another definition of Ntr is "ancestor" or "deified
> ancestor." With this in mind, when we read the term "Ta Ntr"
> believed to be Pwanet (Punt), to me, it should be read as "land of > the ancestors" instead of "land of the gods" as most Egyptologists > posit. To me land of the "gods" doesn't makes sense since all of the > earth is powered by "ntrw" (the vital force behind animate and > inanimate objects). The land of our ancestors would point to a > genetic and cultural origin. It is no different than African-> Americans referring to Africa proper as the "mother land" (the land
> of our historical birth).

>
> We know that persons of great stature in Ta-Merri were elevated to > the status of deity: Imhotep and Amenhotep III. In other words, they > became Ntrw after death and this is done all over Africa. What is > your opinion?

>
> Asar Imhotep

> <http://www.mochasuite.com>

---

Shape Yahoo! in your own image. Join our Network Research Panel today!
| 23237|2007-10-02 10:40:31|elliottandelliottmtg|Re: Ramses II temple found inside Mosque|
I believe that Ramses II is the biblical Solomon so I found this part of the article, " Among the most important scenes are those that feature Ramses II offering the sun god Amun Re two obelisks to be installed at the temple's front facade.", very interesting because Solomon is said to have erected two obelisks in the front of the temple he built and the temple Ramses II built bears a striking resemblance to the temple attributed to Solomon in the bible.

Another very interesting portion of the article is "Experts say the carved inscriptions provide some of best examples of cryptographic or enigmatic writing, an unusual form of hieroglyphic text in which each glyph could stand for an entire word, phrase, or concept."
because this may turn out to be another example of ancient Hebrew writing in Kemet thereby providing further evidence of the African origins of the Hebrews.

This discovery may also explain the Hebrew scriptural origins of Islam. The fact that they were not destroyed but concealed, lends credence to the notions that early Muslims found the relief's sacred.

I hope the powers that be allow for a full investigation into the meanings of the hieroglyphs.

Yes, we are dealing with a people with a deep and diabolical psychoses but the dark abyss of ignorance, that permeates the African community concerning our own history, is far more devastating and is the reason Eurocentrics try with all their might to keep African people away from our history.

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, cristofori whitakara wrote:

>
> i guess like the sister mahari wrote: we are dealing with a people who have a deep psychoses.

>
> elliotandelliottmtg wrote:

Jews and Christians say the same thing. This is just more proof of > the African origins of Christianity, Judaism and Islam.

>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, cristofori whitakara wrote:

> >
> > the people who practice islam refer to the pharaonic culture as

a > culture of pagans but they use the pagan's temples to create their > own?

> >
> > Paul Kekai Manansala wrote:
> Ancient Pharaoh Temple Discovered Inside Egypt Mosque
> > Steven Stanek in Cairo, Egypt
> > for National Geographic News
> >
> > September 27, 2007
> > Parts of a temple dating to the reign of pharaoh Ramses II have > been discovered inside a mosque in Luxor, Egypt, officials report > (see map).
> > Experts restoring the historic mosque uncovered sections of > columns, capitals, and elaborately inscribed reliefs from one of

the > ancient temple's courtyards built around 1250 B.C.

> >
> >
> > Enlarge Photo
> >
> > RELATED
> >
> > Egyptian Tomb of Noblewoman Found (August 16, 2007)
> > Egypt's Largest Pharaoh-Era Fortress Discovered, Experts
> Announce (July 27, 2007)
> > "Egypt's Forgotten Treasures" in National Geographic Magazine
> (May 2005)

> >

> > The previously concealed architectural elements reveal well-> preserved hieroglyphics and unique scenes depicting the powerful > pharaoh.

> > The discovery is likely to touch a nerve among religious > leaders, because the newly exposed reliefs contain representations > of humans and animals, which are forbidden inside mosques, the > experts said.

> > The mosque was erected as a shrine to Muslim saint Abul Haggag > in the 13th century A.D. on the site of an earlier Christian church,

> which was itself built on top of the ancient temple, the > archaeologists explained.

> >

> > The discovery was made during repair work on the mosque after a > fire damaged part of the structure in June.

> > "To do this project of restoration, [workers] had to reclean and > reopen many things, and this is when the scenes were found, and

they > are really unique," said Zahi Hawass, secretary general of Egypt's > Supreme Council of Antiquities.

> > (Hawass is also a National Geographic Society explorer-in-> residence. National Geographic News is a division of the National > Geographic Society.)

> > Encryptions and Glyphs

> > Christians, and later Muslims, frequently built their shrines on > top of ancient Egyptian holy sites, said W. Raymond Johnson, an > Egyptologist at the Oriental Institute at the University of Chicago

> who has seen the newly exposed temple sections.

> > Builders of both faiths usually erased or defaced ancient > artwork in the temples, he said, but the newfound reliefs remain > virtually untouched.

> > "We are very lucky that these have been so well preserved,"
> Johnson said.

> > Rather than destroying the reliefs, the mosques builders > carefully hid them away with a protective layer of straw-

reinforced

> plaster, shielding them from the elements.

> > Continued on Next Page >>

> >

> >

>>
>>
>>
>> -----
>> Yahoo! oneSearch: Finally, mobile search that gives answers, not > web links.

>>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> -----
> Be a better Heartthrob. Get better relationship answers from someone who knows.

> Yahoo! Answers - Check it out.

>

| 23238|2007-10-02 10:40:43|matt mercer|Re: Abu El Haggag|

I found your question intriguing.....so I looked up Aksar.....

aksar: A adj. most/much/many/frequent

aksar: A adv. frequently/usually/generally/often

So I would say for the english speaker, that this would be translated as "returning" having to do with cycles, as in "many safe returns", like a Sufi might say.....like Ra, returning every day as the sun.....and perhaps has to do with the much older idea of the elephant graveyard, Luxor being such a great center for the antiqities and preservation of knowledge, as a place to visit our ancestors.....

cristofori whitakara wrote:

there is also a festival at Abu El Haggag where boats are paraded around the mosque that was copied from the Festival of Opet that occurred in Kemet. What does Al Aksur (Luxor) mean in arabic?

Paul Kekai Manansala wrote:

Ancient Pharaoh Temple Discovered Inside Egypt Mosque

Steven Stanek in Cairo, Egypt

for National Geographic News

September 27, 2007

Parts of a temple dating to the reign of pharaoh Ramses II have been discovered inside a mosque in Luxor, Egypt, officials report (see map).

Experts restoring the historic mosque uncovered sections of columns, capitals, and elaborately inscribed reliefs from one of the ancient temple's courtyards built around 1250 B.C.

Enlarge Photo

RELATED

- Egyptian Tomb of Noblewoman Found \(August 16, 2007\)
- Egypt's Largest Pharaoh-Era Fortress Discovered, Experts Announce \(July 27, 2007\)
- "Egypt's Forgotten Treasures" in *National Geographic Magazine* \(May 2005\)

The previously concealed architectural elements reveal well-preserved hieroglyphics and unique scenes depicting the powerful pharaoh.

The discovery is likely to touch a nerve among religious leaders, because the newly exposed reliefs contain representations of humans and animals, which are forbidden inside mosques, the experts said.

The mosque was erected as a shrine to Muslim saint Abul Haggag in the 13th century A.D. on the site of an earlier Christian church, which was itself built on top of the ancient temple, the archaeologists explained.

The discovery was made during repair work on the mosque after a fire damaged part of the structure in June.

"To do this project of restoration, [workers] had to reclean and reopen many things, and this is when the scenes were found, and they are really unique," said Zahi Hawass, secretary general of Egypt's Supreme Council of Antiquities.

(Hawass is also a National Geographic Society explorer-in-residence. National Geographic News is a division of the National Geographic Society.)

Encryptions and Glyphs

Christians, and later Muslims, frequently built their shrines on top of ancient Egyptian holy sites, said W. Raymond Johnson, an Egyptologist at the Oriental Institute at the University of Chicago who has seen the newly exposed temple sections.

Builders of both faiths usually erased or defaced ancient artwork in the temples, he said, but the newfound reliefs remain virtually untouched.
"We are very lucky that these have been so well preserved," Johnson said.
Rather than destroying the reliefs, the mosques builders carefully hid them away with a protective layer of straw-reinforced plaster, shielding them from the elements.
Continued on Next Page >>

---

Catch up on fall's hot new shows on Yahoo! TV. Watch previews, get listings, and more!

---

Catch up on fall's hot new shows on Yahoo! TV. Watch previews, get listings, and more!
| 23239|2007-10-02 13:21:56|Paul Kekai Manansala|Racism in the Academy: An Anthropological Perspective on a Persistent
This event was held on Sept. 24, but the paper/transcript may be available.

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

---

Racism in the Academy: An Anthropological Perspective on a Persistent Problem

Speaker: Faye V. Harrison, University of Florida

Discussant: Audrey Smedley, Virginia Commonwealth University

Sponsored by: Anthropology Section

Please register online by clicking on the appropriate RSVP link to the right or you may send an email to: nymeetings@nyas.org

Registration Fees:

Members $0, Anthropology Section Affiliates $0, Non-Member $20, Other Affiliates $20, Non-Member Student $10

Dr. Faye V. Harrison holds a joint appointment with the Afro-American Studies Program and Department of Anthropology at the University of Florida, Gainesville. She is executive program chair of this year's American Anthropological Association meeting, past chair of the IUAES (International Union of Anthropological and Ethnological Sciences), and the author of numerous books and articles including Outsider Within: Reworking Anthropology in the Global Age (Dec. 2007) and editor and contributor to Resisting Racism & Xenophobia: Global Perspectives on Race, Gender, & Human Rights.

The discussant is Dr. Audrey Smedley, emeritus professor at Virginia Commonwealth University, widely known for her scholarly work on racism.

Abstract

Racism in the Academy: An Anthropological Perspective on a Persistent Problem

Faye V. Harrison
University of Florida

Pundits have asserted that racism has diminished and is withering away in U.S. society. However, there is substantial evidence that a great deal of antiracist work remains to be done. The American "dreams" of so many citizens and immigrants are being thwarted as everyday human rights violations implicate a regime of knowledge, power, and political economy that sustains the salience and materiality of race and racism in the (trans)national contexts of neoliberal economic restructuring, political realignment, demographic diversification, and "homeland security." Although the culture of race and racism in the country has certainly changed over the past decades, its reconfiguration has not led to its dismantling.

The social institutions constituting academia are not at all immune from these forces of change and continuity. In fact, higher education and related sites of knowledge production and policy formation continue to be major loci of struggle over issues of equity and equality. Struggles over affirmative action and other strategies for engendering justice-centered means of ensuring access, participation, and academic success are one instance of this. Of course, academic anthropology has long been part of these debates, but anthropologists cannot afford to rest on their laurels because of the history of Boasianism and recent trends in critical race studies. Racism is not only "out there" in "the field" where anthropologists do ethnographic, archaeological, or other kinds of social research; it is also "right here" in universities, departments, professional associations, and collegial and student-teacher interactions. Sometimes it is quite blatant, but most of the time it is subtle, unnoticed, and denied. Understanding racism entails that we not only focus on the lived experiences of minorities and immigrants. In the context of the broader matrix of power within which the construction and negotiation of race are embedded, racism's corollary is experienced through the normalization of white privilege.

Flashback: In August 1973, the American Anthropological Association issued its "Report of the Committee on Minorities and Anthropology." Based on the results from a mailed questionnaire, the report recommended that the AAA encourage the "continual research and investigation" of "the problem of racism and discrimination, especially in its own midst." Using, in part, the multifocal lenses available from scholars relegated to "outsider within locations," this lecture will address the need to confront racism as it operates in the midst of the contemporary academy-with its intersecting hierarchies of gender, sexuality, class, and ethnic or ethno-national identity. Special attention will be given to the responsibility that anthropologists should accept to look at themselves in the mirror. Reception to follow.

| 23240|2007-10-02 13:34:58|Paul Kekai Manansala|Subtle Racism Might Make Your Brain Hurt|

Decoding "Ambiguous" Prejudice Can Tax The Brain, Interfering With Mental Tasks

Comments  6

Sept. 24, 2007

(CBS/AP)

---

(WebMD) Subtle racism interferes with black people's mental function even more than overt racism does, a psychological study shows.

For whites, who are much less often the targets of prejudice, overt racism interferes with mental function more.

"It appears that blacks are particularly vulnerable to cognitive impairment resulting from exposure to ambiguous prejudice -- a level of prejudice whites may not even register," conclude Princeton University psychologists Jessica Salvatore, PhD, and J. Nicole Shelton, PhD.

"Blatant" vs. "Ambiguous" Racism

Salvatore and Shelton enrolled 122 African-American and 128 white Princeton undergraduates in their study. They were told they were going to participate in two different studies (in reality, they were two parts of the same study).

In the first part of the study, participants were told they would be evaluating a company's hiring decisions. They were shown resumes from job candidates. One was from a candidate who was clearly unqualified because of mediocre grades from a "mediocre" school. Another was from the most-qualified candidate, a Yale graduate with good grades, strong job experience, and impressive school activities.

It was clear from the resumes whether the job candidates were white or African-American. Half the time the unqualified candidate was white and the highly qualified candidate was African-American. For the other half, the conditions were reversed.

The study participants were also shown hiring recommendations from what they were told were human resource officers for the company. Participants were told the officer was a white male when the unqualified job candidate was white and the highly qualified candidate was African-American. They were told the officer was an African-American male when the unqualified job candidate was African-American and the highly qualified candidate was white.

Participants were assigned to one of three groups: blatant prejudice, ambiguous prejudice, or no-prejudice. The no-prejudice group saw recommendations that advised hiring the most-qualified candidate. The prejudice groups saw hiring recommendations that always chose the least-qualified subject -- a person of the same race as the officer.

Under the blatant prejudice condition, the hiring recommendations contained obviously racist comments (such as noting that the African-American candidate "belonged to too many minority organizations" or that the white candidate "was a typical white prep-school kid").

Under the ambiguous-prejudice condition, the hiring recommendations contained no such racist comments -- the least-qualified, same-race candidate was recommended without a clear reason

In the second part of the study, participants then were given a test requiring full concentration, in which they had to name the color in which words such as "red" or "blue" were written.

Subtle Racism Wastes Brain Power

Witnessing the blatant prejudice lowered white participants' scores on the test, but not the scores of African-American participants. However, African-American participants did much worse on the test after witnessing the ambiguous prejudice.

"Blacks are better prepared to cope with blatant prejudice than whites are, at least in terms of the short-term effects on performance of cognitive tasks," Salvatore and Shelton suggest.

This, they say, is because African-Americans have experienced prejudice and have learned to deal with it, not because such prejudice is harmless.

But when African-Americans have to deal with more subtle prejudice -- prejudice that whites tend not to recognize -- it consumes mental resources.

"Targets of prejudice may experience cognitive impairment as they try to determine the cause underlying the negative events they encounter in their lives," Salvatore and Shelton conclude.

They report their findings in the September issue of Psychological Science.

By Daniel DeNoon

Reviewed by Louise Chang

(C)2007 WebMD, Inc. All rights reserved.

---

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23241|2007-10-02 14:16:29|Li (wiseladyowl)|Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief (Hawass)|

I have brought forth the idea of co housing with an african american school as part of the community but nothing has come of it as of yet. Who is willing to fund such an operation on a shoe string budget?? We are still trying to get a piece of the pie if you will and most are not ready to give of themselves freely or moderately which is what will be needed if we are to be successful in such an endeavor. There are a few schools run by our ppl but they are too expensive for the average african american family and not advertised enough to spark big interest. For this very reason I have been expousing the concept of cohousing because it creates a community of like minded individuals who can combine their talents and create the type of environment most conducive to educating their ppl. We can not hope to begin healing on a large scale until we produce healthy ppl on a small scale who can then go out from amongst the small enclave and create more communities that heal and empower our ppl.

Peter Clark wrote:

xxPeter wrote: Black Africans in the diaspora especially in the US has the ability and resources to rewrite their story and tell it how they spiritually feel and know their ancestors existed. This foolish going back and forth arguing with whites will continue until Blacks start and control their own unadulterated educational and research institutions. We have beaten them even while using their own professed material but if we want to put nails into their coffin, then you need to bring your own nails and hammer. They will never let go until we sever the hand at the elbow. What dying people has ever done this??? The same thing applies with general education. Why do Blacks continue to look towards government (public) schools to provide the necessary skills and education to use those skills beyond me. Every means for measuring their success at this task has shown disastrous crippling and too often fatal results. Blacks have countless examples of what a successful schooling apparatus should appear as. I could name many at all levels and also make recommendations. But, they want to do what is necessary to completion. The amalgamation distractions always take over. Soon there will be arguments on whether Martin Luther King, Henry Aaron and Barry Bonds were white or black. Watch and see!!

----- Original Message -----

From: Manu Ampim

To: ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com

Sent: Saturday, September 29, 2007 6:29:23 PM

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief (Hawass)

Professor Ampim,

> Greetings,

>

> I agree that an international symposium on the population
> of classical Kemet is timely, but mainstream Egyptologists
> now conveniently claim that "race is no longer important in > the study of Egypt."

Translation: the notion that Ancient Egyptians were white
is no longer central to the study of Egypt.

So, how can we get you elected to Hawass's position? :)

Alex

Greetings Alex,

Yes, you are right that the idea of white Egyptians is no longer an accepted scholarly position, "so let's not talk about it anyone." Phoney white images of Egyptians are promoted in TV docu-dramas and magazines but there are no scholarly arguments presented to support these images.

The time will come when African people must have some meaningful influence in the state of affairs regarding the monuments of ancient Kemet.

By the way, Hawass has made it clear that he is making sure that his successor will not be able to undo the policies that he is putting in place. On the one hand, he is right for calling for the return of artifacts and mummies, and for giving specific guidelines to foreign archaeological teams. However, at the same time he allows the blatant destruction and defacement of temple and tomb scenes, and he is fiercely anti-African in his conception of who build Kemet.

Advancing the work,

Manu A.

---

Don't let your dream ride pass you by. Make it a reality with Yahoo! Autos.

| 23242|2007-10-02 22:23:16|Manu Ampim|Re: [Ta-Seti] Abu El Haggag|

Greetings,

Luxor comes from the Arabic word: /al-uksor/ meaning "the palaces," which apparently refers to the many temples in the region.

Manu Ampim

---

Matt Mercer wrote:

I found your question intriguing.....so I looked up Aksar.....

aksar: A adj. most/much/many/frequent

aksar: A adv. frequently/usually/generally/often

So I would say for the english speaker, that this would be translated as "returning" having to do with cycles, as in "many safe returns", like a Sufi might say.....like Ra, returning every day as the sun.....and perhaps has to do with the much older idea of the elephant graveyard, Luxor being such a great center for the antiques and preservation of knowledge, as a place to visit our ancestors.....

---

cristofori whitakara wrote:

there is also a festival at Abu El Haggag where boats are paraded around the mosque that was copied from the Festival of Opet that occurred in Kemet. What does Al Aksur (Luxor) mean in arabic?

| 23243|2007-10-03 06:40:54|Peter Kaiza|Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiques chief (Hawass)|

Black American music is listened to throughout the world, why do the lyrics mostly relate to ghetto culture, love etc nothing about black history?

Why shouldn't the musicians use the music to promote a black Egypt ? Sometimes I think we are somehow to blame!

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

From: wiseladyowl@yahoo.com

Date: Tue, 2 Oct 2007 14:16:27 -0700

Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiques chief (Hawass)

I have brought forth the idea of co housing with an african american school as part of the community but nothing has come of it as of yet. Who is willing to fund such an operation on a shoe string budget?? We are still trying to get a piece of the pie if you will and most are not ready to give of themselves freely or moderately which is what will be needed if we are to be successful in such an endeavor. There are a few schools run by our ppl but they are too expensive for the average african american family and not advertised enough to spark big interest. For this very reason I have been expounding the concept of cohousing because it creates a community of like minded individuals who can combine their talents and create the type of environment most conducive to educating their ppl. We can not hope to begin healing on a large scale until we produce healthy ppl on a small scale who can then go out from amongst the small enclave and create more communities that heal and empower our ppl.

Peter Clark wrote:

xxPeter wrote: Black Africans in the diaspora especially in the US has the ability and resources to rewrite their story and tell it how they spiritually felt and know their ancestors existed. This foolish going back and forth arguing with whites will continue until Blacks start and control their own unadulterated educational and research institutions. We have beaten them even while using their own professed material but if we want to put nails into their coffin, then you need to bring your own nails and hammer. They will never let go until we sever the hand at the elbow. What dying people has ever done this??? The same thing applies with general education. Why do Blacks continue to look towards government (public) schools to provide the necessary skills and education to use those skills beyond me. Every means for measuring their success at this task has shown disastrous crippling and too often fatal results. Black have countless examples of what a successful schooling apparatus should appear as. I could name many at all levels and also make recommendations. But, they want to do what is necessary to completion. The amalgamation distractions always take over. Soon there will be arguments on whether Martin Luther King, Henry Aaron and Barry Bonds were white or black. Watch and see!!

----- Original Message -----

From: Manu Ampim

To: ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com

Sent: Saturday, September 29, 2007 6:29:23 PM

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief (Hawass)

Professor Ampim,

> Greetings,

>

> I agree that an international symposium on the population

> of classical Kemet is timely, but mainstream Egyptologists

> now conveniently claim that "race is no longer important in

> the study of Egypt."

Translation: the notion that Ancient Egyptians were white is no longer central to the study of Egypt.

So, how can we get you elected to Hawass's position? :)

Alex

Greetings Alex,

Yes, you are right that the idea of white Egyptians is no longer an accepted scholarly position, "so let's not talk about it anyone." Phoney white images of Egyptians are promoted in TVdocu-dramas and magazines but there are no scholarly arguments presented to support these images.

The time will come when African people must have some meaningful influence in the state of affairs regarding the monuments of ancient Kemet.

By the way, Hawass has made it clear that he is making sure that his successor will not be able to undo the policies that he is putting in place. On the one hand, he is right for calling for the return of artifacts and mummies, and for giving specific guidelines to foreign archaeological teams. However, at the same time he allows the blatant destruction and defacement of temple and tomb scenes, and he is fiercely anti-African in his conception of who build Kemet.

Advancing the work,
Manu A.

---

Don't let your dream ride pass you by. Make it a reality with Yahoo! Autos.

---

Play Movie Mash-up and win BIG prizes!

| 23244|2007-10-03 06:48:17|clyde winters|Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief (Hawass)|

--- Peter Kaiza <prweza@hotmail.co.uk> wrote:

>
>
> Black American music is listened to throughout the > world, why do the lyrics mostly relate to ghetto > culture, love etc nothing about black history?
>
> Why shouldn't the musicians use the music to promote > a black Egypt? Sometimes I think we are somehow to > blame!
>
>

Hi

Back in the early days of rap the Music was Afrocentric and a Black Egypt was a part of many songs. Today's Rappers are making crossover Music, which appeals to everyone. This rap is made to make money--not political statements.

Clyde

---

Take the Internet to Go: Yahoo!Go puts the Internet in your pocket: mail, news, photos & more.

<http://mobile.yahoo.com/go?refer=1GNXIC>

| 23245|2007-10-03 08:19:37|Alex van Deelen|Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief (Hawass)|

Posted by: "Peter Kaiza" prweza@hotmail.co.uk zetter_74

Wed Oct 3, 2007 6:40 am (PST)

- > Why shouldn't the musicians use the music to promote a black Egypt?
- > Sometimes I think we are somehow to blame!

Who is this 'we' you are talking about?

Perhaps you will spend your wrath better on the deplorable state of Country and Western.
(You know, all the 'big hat' bands.)

I mean, you must have heard of commercialism.

Alex

| 23246|2007-10-03 08:21:41|Alex van Deelen|Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief (Hawass)|

Posted by: "Peter Kaiza" prweza@hotmail.co.uk zetter_74

Wed Oct 3, 2007 6:40 am (PST)

- > Why shouldn't the musicians use the music to promote a black Egypt?
- > Sometimes I think we are somehow to blame!

Who is this 'we' you are talking about?

Perhaps you will spend your wrath better on the deplorable state of Country and Western.
(You know, all the 'big hat' bands.)

I mean, you must have heard of commercialism.

If you're sincere, check out Public Enemy and Gil Scott Herin instead. Or the Poor Righteous Teachers.

Alex

| 23247|2007-10-03 09:27:56|cristofori whitakara|Re: [Ta-Seti] Abu El Haggag| greetings, is that the same word as Al-Qasr (the castle)?

Manu Ampim wrote:

Greetings,
Luxor comes from the Arabic word: /al-uksor/ meaning "the palaces," which apparently refers to the many temples in the region.
Manu Ampim

---

Matt Mercer wrote:

I found your question intriguing.. ..... so I looked up Aksar..... aksar: A adj. most/much/many/ frequent
aksar: A adv. frequently/usually/ generally/ often
So I would say for the english speaker, that this would be translated as "returning" having to do with cycles, as in "many safe returns", like a Sufi might say..... ..like Ra, returning every day as the sun.....and perhaps has to do with the much older idea of the elephant graveyard, Luxor being such a great center for the antiqities and preservation of knowledge, as a place to visit our ancestors... ..

---

cristofori whitakara wrote:

there is also a festival at Abu El Haggag where boats are paraded around the mosque that was copied from the Festival of Opet that occurred in Kemet. What does Al Aksur (Luxor) mean in arabic?

---

Yahoo! oneSearch: Finally, mobile search that gives answers, not web links.

| 23248|2007-10-03 09:30:47|cristofori whitakara|Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief (Hawass)|

the artists like Killah Priest (www.myspace.com/killahpriest), Krs-One, and others like them are not exposed as much

Peter Kaiza wrote:

Black American music is listened to throughout the world, why do the lyrics mostly relate to ghetto culture, love etc nothing about black history?
Why shouldn't the musicians use the music to promote a black Egypt ? Sometimes I think we are somehow to blame!

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
From: wiseladyowl@ yahoo.com

Date: Tue, 2 Oct 2007 14:16:27 -0700

Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief (Hawass)

I have brought forth the idea of co housing with an african american school as part of the community but nothing has come of it as of yet. Who is willing to fund such an operation on a shoe string budget?? We are still trying to get a piece of the pie if you will and most are not ready to give of themselves freely or moderately which is what will be needed if we are to be successful in such an endeavor. There are a few schools run by our ppl but they are too expensive for the average african american family and not advertised enough to spark big interest. For this very reason I have been expounding the concept of cohousing because it creates a community of like minded individuals who can combine their talents and create the type of environment most conducive to educating their ppl. We can not hope to begin healing on a large scale until we produce healthy ppl on a small scale who can then go out from amongst the small enclave and create more communities that heal and empower our ppl.

Peter Clark wrote:

xxPeter wrote: Black Africans in the diaspora especially in the US has the ability and resources to rewrite their story and tell it how they spiritually felt and know their ancestors existed. This foolish going back and forth arguing with whites will continue until Blacks start and control their own unadulterated educational and research institutions. We have beaten them even while using their own professed material but if we want to put nails into their coffin, then you need to bring your own nails and hammer. They will never let go until we sever the hand at the elbow. What dying people has ever done this??? The same thing applies with general education. Why do Blacks continue to look towards government (public) schools to provide the necessary skills and education to use those skills is beyond me. Every means for measuring their success at this task has shown disastrous crippling and too often fatal results. Blacks have countless examples of what a successful schooling apparatus should appear as. I could name many at all levels and also make recommendations. But, they want to do what is necessary to completion. The amalgamation distractions always take over. Soon there will be arguments on whether Martin Luther King, Henry Aaron and Barry Bonds were white or black. Watch and see!!

----- Original Message -----

From: Manu Ampim

To: ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com
Sent: Saturday, September 29, 2007 6:29:23 PM
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt
antiquities chief (Hawass)

Professor Ampim,

> Greetings,

>

> I agree that an international symposium on the population
> of classical Kemet is timely, but mainstream Egyptologists
> now conveniently claim that "race is no longer important in > the study of Egypt."

Translation: the notion that Ancient Egyptians were white
is no longer central to the study of Egypt.

So, how can we get you elected to Hawass's position? :)

Alex

Greetings Alex,

Yes, you are right that the idea of white Egyptians is no longer an accepted scholarly position, "so let's not talk about it anyone."

Phoney white images of Egyptians are promoted in TV docudramas and magazines but there are no scholarly arguments presented to support these images.

The time will come when African people must have some meaningful influence in the state of affairs regarding the monuments of ancient Kemet.

By the way, Hawass has made it clear that he is making sure that his successor will not be able to undo the policies that he is putting in place. On the one hand, he is right for calling for the return of artifacts and mummies, and for giving specific guidelines to foreign archaeological teams. However, at the same time he allows the blatant destruction and defacement of temple and tomb scenes, and he is fiercely anti-African in his conception of who build Kemet.

Advancing the work,
Manu A.

---

Don't let your dream ride pass you by. Make it a reality with Yahoo!
Autos.

---

Play Movie Mash-up and win BIG prizes!

---

Fussy? Opinionated? Impossible to please? Perfect. Join Yahoo!'s user panel and lay it on us.

| 23249|2007-10-03 09:47:56|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Ramses II temple found inside Mosque|
Listen guys MAHARI IS A MAN. It is a rather common Ethiopian male name and like the Kemetic language there would be a "t" at the end to make it a female name.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, cristofori whitakara
wrote:

>
> i guess like the sister mahari wrote: we are dealing with a people who have a deep psychoses.

>
> elliottdelliottmtg wrote:

Jews and Christians say the same thing. This is just more proof of > the African origins of Christianity, Judaism and Islam.

>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, cristofori whitakara
> wrote:

> >
> > the people who practice islam refer to the pharaonic culture as a > culture of pagans but they use the pagan's temples to create their > own?

> >
> > Paul Kekai Manansala wrote:
> Ancient Pharaoh Temple Discovered Inside Egypt Mosque
> > Steven Stanek in Cairo, Egypt
> > for National Geographic News
> >
> > September 27, 2007
> > Parts of a temple dating to the reign of pharaoh Ramses II have > been discovered inside a mosque in Luxor, Egypt, officials report > (see map).
> > Experts restoring the historic mosque uncovered sections of > columns, capitals, and elaborately inscribed reliefs from one of

the > ancient temple's courtyards built around 1250 B.C.

> >
> >
> > Enlarge Photo
> >
> > RELATED
> >

> > Egyptian Tomb of Noblewoman Found (August 16, 2007)
> > Egypt's Largest Pharaoh-Era Fortress Discovered, Experts
> Announce (July 27, 2007)
> > "Egypt's Forgotten Treasures" in National Geographic Magazine
> (May 2005)
> >
> > The previously concealed architectural elements reveal well-> preserved hieroglyphics and unique scenes depicting the powerful > pharaoh.
> > The discovery is likely to touch a nerve among religious > leaders, because the newly exposed reliefs contain representations > of humans and animals, which are forbidden inside mosques, the
> experts said.
> > The mosque was erected as a shrine to Muslim saint Abul Haggag > in the 13th century A.D. on the site of an earlier Christian church,

> which was itself built on top of the ancient temple, the > archaeologists explained.

> >

> > The discovery was made during repair work on the mosque after a > fire damaged part of the structure in June.

> > "To do this project of restoration, [workers] had to reclean and > reopen many things, and this is when the scenes were found, and

they

> are really unique," said Zahi Hawass, secretary general of Egypt's > Supreme Council of Antiquities.

> > (Hawass is also a National Geographic Society explorer-in-> residence. National Geographic News is a division of the National > Geographic Society.)

> > Encryptions and Glyphs

> > Christians, and later Muslims, frequently built their shrines on > top of ancient Egyptian holy sites, said W. Raymond Johnson, an > Egyptologist at the Oriental Institute at the University of Chicago
> who has seen the newly exposed temple sections.

> > Builders of both faiths usually erased or defaced ancient > artwork in the temples, he said, but the newfound reliefs remain > virtually untouched.

> > "We are very lucky that these have been so well preserved,"
> Johnson said.

> > Rather than destroying the reliefs, the mosques builders > carefully hid them away with a protective layer of straw-reinforced > plaster, shielding them from the elements.

> > Continued on Next Page >>

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> > -----

> > Yahoo! oneSearch: Finally, mobile search that gives answers, not > web links.

> >

>

>

>

>

>

>

> -----

> Be a better Heartthrob. Get better relationship answers from someone who knows.

> Yahoo! Answers - Check it out.

>

| 23250|2007-10-03 10:40:34|neseret|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, matt mercer wrote:

>

> I believe that this subject of the meanings of the word NTR is related to the question of the etymology of Al Aksar, or luxor, which from my brief internet research is translated as "Returning" in arabic.

In Arabic, Luxor is Al-Uqsar, meaning "the palaces." The name refers to the myriad monuments to be found in the area which was once called Thebes by the Greeks, and Waset (/wAst/) or "the city" (/niwt/) by the ancient Egyptians (Hannig 2000: 1287b).

> Since the root of the word NTR is NA and TA and RA(meroitic), two lines of water or as I see this tense form of past being related( ie:

two lines of water are the past, three the present and one line of water the future) in relationship to TA, a loaf of bread, RA, a well or pool of water, this word is like a sentence that is very similar to yogic teaching.

The term /nTr/ is a single glyph symbol, which symbolises the triliteral sound of "netjer". It is glyph sign R8, which is defined by Gardiner as "cloth, wound on a pole; emblem of divinity" (Gardiner 1982 (1957): 502). The term for /nTr/ is never written orthographically in ancient Egyptian, that is, written with individual glyph phonogram symbols, as you have implied, above.

Gardiner, A. H. 1982 (1957). Egyptian Grammar: Being an Introduction to the Study of Hieroglyphs. Oxford: Griffith Institute.

Hannig, R. 2000. Die Sprache der Pharaonen: Großes Handwörterbuch Deutsch-ägyptisch (2800 - 950 v. Chr.). Kulturegeschichte der Antiken Welt 86. Mainz: von Zabern.

Katherine Griffis-Greenberg, M. A. (Lon)
Member, International Association of Egyptologists
ARCE, BANE, EES, ASOR

Doctoral Program (Egyptology)
Oriental Studies
University of Oxford
Oxford, United Kingdom

<http://www.griffis-consulting.com>

| 23251|2007-10-03 11:26:09|Peter Gray|Re: [Ta-Seti] Abu El Haggag|

I had also been informed (or read somewhere) that the Arabs first described Luxor as Al Uxor, meaning the palaces, which makes some degree of sense. XCan anyone confirm? Thanks much.

Peter Gray

---

To: ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: Profmanu@acninc.net
Date: Tue, 2 Oct 2007 22:20:13 -0700
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: [Ta-Seti] Abu El Haggag

Greetings,
Luxor comes from the Arabic word: /al-uksor/ meaning "the palaces," which apparently refers to the many temples in the region.
Manu Ampim

---

Matt Mercer wrote:

I found your question intriguing.. ..... so I looked up Aksar..... .
aksar: A adj. most/much/many/ frequent
aksar: A adv. frequently/usually/ generally/ often
So I would say for the english speaker, that this would be translated as "returning" having to do with cycles, as in "many safe returns", like a Sufi might say..... ..like Ra, returning every day as the sun.....and perhaps has to do with the much older idea of the elephant graveyard, Luxor being such a great center for the antiques and preservation of knowledge, as a place to visit our ancestors... ..

---

cristofori whitakara wrote:

there is also a festival at Abu El Haggag where boats are paraded around the mosque that was copied from the Festival of Opet that occurred in Kemet. What does Al Aksur (Luxor) mean in arabic?

---

Boo! Scare away worms, viruses and so much more! Try Windows Live OneCare! Try now!
| 23252|2007-10-03 13:02:40|asar_imhotep|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|

- > The term /nTr/ is a single glyph symbol, which symbolises the
- > trilateral sound of "netjer". It is glyph sign R8, which is defined
- > by Gardiner as "cloth, wound on a pole; emblem of divinity" (Gardiner
- > 1982 (1957): 502). The term for /nTr/ is never written
- > orthographically in ancient Egyptian, that is, written with
- > individual glyph phonogram symbols, as you have implied, above.
- >

Actually when you look at the phrase in the Rosetta Stone (The Rosetta Stone E.A. Wallis Budge pg 213) the word is written out as a phonetic complement for the tri-lateral sound of /nTr/.

(In the house of the soldiers in the house of the god)

As can clearly be seen, with the exception of the /t/ it is spelled out to show how it is supposed to be pronounced. This is how we know that it is pronounced "Netcher" and not Neter. There is no way you could intuit the pronunciation of a tri-consonant glyph without there being evidence that it was actually spelled out in the text. The larger tri-consonant words are the sum meaning of what the individual symbols represent in the context of their cosmology. You cannot understand the nature of African cultures without first understanding their cosmology. It is critical to understanding the methods and philosophies behind their expressions.

Asar Imhotep
<http://www.mochasuite.com>

| 23253|2007-10-03 14:54:16|matt mercer|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|

I understand your point, yet I believe you are missing mine. Just as the ntr are interwoven together to represent "strings" of interrelated principals ie: on the temple of Hathor relief ceiling, under the sign Leo are seen three goddesses or NETJERU, NUT, or AUSET with her hand open palmed in front of her upper chest and holding a child in her other, ANWKHET holding two vessels, and SATET holding a bow and arrow. I believe this form of symbolic eschatology is representing much wider circles and strands of continuity of thought than the modern person has time to digest. These exercises are designed to show the flexibility of the mind and preserve its fluidity.

I guess "the palaces" or "the city" is akin to the word BATZAR, in meaning, the all encompassing or all embracing fortress, Like the idea of Hathor, a space for people to come and go freely to learn, like MAAT with her wings embracing us like truth and justice, or NUT like intelligence and compassion. These principals rely on each like a great company of scholars. The Egyptians seem to have been very adept at expressing that building one brick at a time, like learning to read, and the cycles of growth denoted by festivals, like learning together, are relationships that are multifaceted and interdependent. To approach this language as a science I think denies the root beliefs of a culture that was devoted to elevating the human condition not thru the purity of its logos but thru its constant regenerated relationship with many forms of biological inquiry.

For me the image of NUT holding her child is expressing that she understands that he has the same capacity to learn as she does and that the boundary for this growth is natural, like the glyph SHA(meroitic). Anwkht or KHNWMT showing, like a yoga teacher, that mind and body have different forms of learning and that it is self determination that forms these bodies of knowledge, and SATET depicting that every tool even in its parts is an extension of these previous relationships and perhaps is representing the aim or goal towards cultivation through education is the target, or SOTHIS, the cow on its journey in the barq of the heaven, which is every form of "work" and every worker.

The temple of Hathor ceiling represents a very complex form of eschatology, like a periodic table of elements, while you can learn the elements on their own, learning their relationships of their interactions is an almost limitless field of growth and expression like the earth and the cosmos itself. And I think that is the whole point, to imagine trying to teach larger groups of diverse people a universal concept such cognitive growth or formative developmental psychology while language itself was still being formed is a daunting idea. This parallel growth is what I find most fascinating and what I feel is a good focus for the modern academic and what I see Dr. Winters is excellent at reflecting thru his work.

All of these discussions of racial conflict are a moot point indeed. For all cultures and tribes are dealing with the same forms of growth, that we are not just living in communities of people, that we share a space with many life forms and that this is all just learning, and this is not a denial of their "heritage" but an affirmation of a larger circle of cooperation in this age of world growth to respect these forms of anthropology and ecology.

And the idea of "the wound on a pole or cleansing cloth" relates to this well, for in terms of basic principals of ecology and healing, sustainability and regeneration are not just a matter of measuring time but of commitment to learning about growth just like the sacred marriage. I grew up in Carlisle Pennsylvania, home of the army war college, the oldest military installation in our country, which is also the place where the first prototype for the " Native American Industrial Schools" were formed. This atrocity of the forced re-education of children and in turn forced labor is an issue that has not been dealt with at all. And to be conscious of how deep these wounds are and how long it takes to heal them with out open acknowledgment or even recognition is indicative of this same theme in ancient history of the wide gaps of cognition of relationships due to the intensity of these conflicts, as they say remember Suten-Henen.

I still believe that ancient languages are an essential key to help open these formative blocks in learning, and if the united states problems with Attention Deficit Disorder, or as I like to say, "you can't teach me shit" (can't polish a turd if you're from central PA) is any indication, then some form of supplemental curriculum is needed to help bridge these gaps for this new generation that doesn't have a choice but to say no to the emotionally charged intellectual conflicts of their ancestors.

In an age where we have no place left to hide from one another the only choice we have is to be as open as we can about the lowest common denominator we all share. Any interrupted growth for the sake of anyones success over another is a form of universal genocide because the consequences for this are the occluded intellectual developements of many peoples who are subsequently forced to participate in regimes of survival economics. For any spiritualized ethnically motivated war cry is simply just a form of Terrets, or diarrhea of the mind. And now the we are all comfortable enough in the first world to have no excuse not reach out and learn, I hope we all find as many ways as possible to challenge each other to respect the great medicine that is still present in many of these ancient language forms.

As an asside, if you ever get a chance, check out the Oera Linda Saga online. This Frisian mythology gives an inkling in to the vast disparity in intellectual perspectives flying around in that time. Adela, the village mother relates that three old reigning goddesses, FRYA<LYDA>FINDA, euro, afro, and asian had fallen into conflict, and WR_ALDA, the god was a natural force of nature demanding the northerners to stay to themselves. How are these three goddesses related to the three I mentioned earlier, in terms of one culture not understanding anothers expression and projecting their fears of something like astronomy and eschatology into a tradition of xenophobia? And how does that relate to their dispersed ancestors who no longer even know the name Frisian in northern europe and are only aware of the surface of these conflict?. Like asking a mixed blood child born in the 70's who grew up watching the Muppets to comprehend why any ancient society practiced tried to perfect the science of sacrifice, Or asking a rain forest dweller to program your VCR. How do we over come these gaps, when the emotional weight of these histories is still symbolically represented even in the architecture of our infrastructures?

And back finally to the origin of this discussion, one word, Luxor, "the city"

any city on earth, as if this multi ethnic kingdom was the first child to stand up to the elders of the other racially enclosed powers, like the story of Siddharta and his parents and proclaim that learning is the highest ideal for everyone no matter where you come from, and like this these individuals that represent this expansion of intellectual growth are deserving of preservation.

I think this theme of regeneration through education of mutually recognizable and tangible principals is the bitter root we are all going to have to swallow if we are to overcome these obstacles and challenges we face as a world community that is finally coming out of puberty and a turbulent adolescence of self recognition of self determination.

NE- two sedge plants, healing mind and body ta- a loaf bread , nuturing ra- a pool of water, self determination

U- a young chick, every one is a student, plural, many do re mi fa so la ti do MATT MERCER
JAH

neseret wrote:

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, matt mercer wrote:

>

> I believe that this subject of the meanings of the word NTR is related to the question of the etymology of Al Aksar, or luxor, which from my brief internet research is translated as "Returning" in arabic.

In Arabic, Luxor is Al-Uqsar, meaning "the palaces." The name refers to the myriad monuments to be found in the area which was once called Thebes by the Greeks, and Waset (/wAst/) or "the city" (/niwt/) by the ancient Egyptians (Hannig 2000: 1287b).

> Since the root of the word NTR is NA and TA and RA(meroitic) , two lines of water or as I see this tense form of past being related( ie: two lines of water are the past, three the present and one line of water the future) in relationship to TA, a loaf of bread, RA, a well or pool of water, this word is like a sentence that is very similar to yogic teaching.

The term /nTr/ is a single glyph symbol, which symbolises the trilateral sound of "netjer". It is glyph sign R8, which is defined by Gardiner as "cloth, wound on a pole; emblem of divinity" (Gardiner 1982 (1957): 502). The term for /nTr/ is never written orthographically in ancient Egyptian, that is, written with individual glyph phonogram symbols, as you have implied, above.

Gardiner, A. H. 1982 (1957). Egyptian Grammar: Being an Introduction to the Study of Hieroglyphs. Oxford: Griffith Institute.

Hannig, R. 2000. Die Sprache der Pharaonen: Großes Handwörterbuch Deutsch-ägyptisch (2800 - 950 v. Chr.). Kulturegeschichte der Antiken Welt 86. Mainz: von Zabern.

Katherine Griffis-Greenberg, M. A. (Lon)
Member, International Association of Egyptologists
ARCE, BANE, EES, ASOR

Doctoral Program (Egyptology)

Oriental Studies
University of Oxford
Oxford, United Kingdom

<http://www.griffis-consulting.com>

---

Got a little couch potato?

Check out fun summer activities for kids.

| 23254|2007-10-03 20:34:39|Djehuti Sundaka|Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief (Hawass)|

1. Music isn't about history. Music is about a writer's passions and interests and if their interest isn't history, it isn't written.

2. Music is produced by producers who determine what kind of music they wish to produce. So the next time someone like Obama or Cosby has a problem with the negativity of rappers, they should put their money where their mouths are and produce someone positive or at least target their criticism to their predominately Caucasian country club producer friends for funding and promoting it all.

Djehuti Sundaka

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Kaiza wrote:

>

>

>

> Black American music is listened to throughout the world, why do the lyrics mostly relate to ghetto culture, love etc nothing about black history?

>

> Why shouldn't the musicians use the music to promote a black Egypt? Sometimes I think we are somehow to blame!

>

>

>

> To: Ta_Seti@...: wiseladyowl@...: Tue, 2 Oct 2007 14:16:27 - 0700Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief (Hawass)

>

>

>

>

>

> I have brought forth the idea of co housing with an african american school as part of the community but nothing has come of it as of yet. Who is willing to fund such an operation on a shoe string budget?? We are still trying to get a piece of the pie if you will and most are not ready to give of themselves freely or moderately which is what will be needed if we are to be successful in such an endeavor. There a few schools run by our ppl but they are too expensive for the average african american family and not advertised enough to spark big interest. For this very reason I have been expousing the concept of cohousing because it creates a community of like minded individuals who can combine their talents and create the type of environment most conducive to educating their ppl. We can not hope to begin healing on a large scale until we produce healthy ppl on a small scale who can than go out from amongst the small enclave and create more communities that heal and empower our ppl. Peter Clark wrote:

>
>
>
>

> xxPeter wrote: Black Africans in the diaspora especially in the US has the abillity and resources to rewrite their story and tell it how they spritually fell and know their ancesstors existed. This foolish going back and forth arguing with whites will continue until Blacks start and control their own unadulterd educational and research institutions. We have beaten them even while using their own professed material but if we want to put nails into their coffin, then you need to bring your own nails and hammer. They will never let go until we sever the hand at the elbow. What dying people has ever done this??? The same thing applies with general education. Why do Blacks continue to look towards government (public) schools to provide the necessary skills and education to use those skills is beyond me. Every means for measuring their sucess at this task has shown diastorous crippling and too often fatal results. Black have countless examples of what a sucessful schooling apparatus should appear as. I could name many at all levels and also make recomendations. But, they want do what is necessary to completion. The amagamation distractions always take over. Soon there will be arguments on weather Martin Luther King, Henry Aaron and Barry Bonds were white or black. Watch and see!!

> ----- Original Message -----From: Manu Ampim To: ta_Seti@...: Saturday, September 29, 2007 6:29:23 PM Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Tutankhamun was not black: Egypt antiquities chief (Hawass)

>
>

> Professor Ampim,> Greetings,>> I agree that an international symposium on the population> of classical Kemet is timely, but mainstream Egyptologists> now conveniently claim that "race is no longer important in> the study of Egypt." Translation: the notion that Ancient Egyptians were white is no longer central to the study of Egypt. So, how can we get you elected to Hawass's position? :) Alex

>

>

> Greetings Alex,

>

> Yes, you are right that the idea of white Egyptians is no longer an accepted scholarly position, "so let's not talk about it anyone." Phoney white images of Egyptians are promoted in TV docu-dramas and magazines but there are no scholarly arguments presented to support these images.

>

> The time will come when African people must have some meaningful influence in the state of affairs regarding the monuments of ancient Kemet.

>

> By the way, Hawass has made it clear that he is making sure that his successor will not be able to undo the policies that he is putting in place. On the one hand, he is right for calling for the return of artifacts and mummies, and for giving specific guidelines to foreign archaeological teams. However, at the same time he allows the blatant destruction and defacement of temple and tomb scenes, and he is fiercely anti-African in his conception of who build Kemet.

>

> Advancing the work,

>

> Manu A.

>

>

>

> Don't let your dream ride pass you by. Make it a reality with Yahoo! Autos.

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

---

> The next generation of MSN Hotmail has arrived - Windows Live Hotmail

> <http://www.newhotmail.co.uk>

>

| 23255|2007-10-04 08:23:17|Ferg|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|

Attachments :

Hi.

I've researched NTR a few years ago and here is a shortened version. Hope it will stimulate some thought

Ferg Somo

| 23256|2007-10-04 08:50:37|clyde winters|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|

Hi

Thanks for the interesting paper. Did you publish the paper?

Clyde

--- Ferg <egyptology@theunit.fsnet.co.uk> wrote:

> Hi.

>

> I've researched NTR a few years ago and here is a > shortened version. Hope it will stimulate some > thought

>

> Ferg Somo

---

Check out the hottest 2008 models today at Yahoo! Autos.

http://autos.yahoo.com/new\_cars.html

| 23257|2007-10-04 09:57:05|Divine Ruler Equality Allah|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|

The word Ntr doesn't mean God or Ancestors, although The Supreme Being (Original Hmn) and the Ancestors can be classified as a KIND of Ntr. The word Ntr means PRIMARY, or INFLUENCE, or FUNDAMENTAL.

The Ancestors are classified as a Ntr because they are remembered in the form of Wsr (Ausar) or Wst (Auset) after they have physically expired. That means their role as a PRIMARY is to provide a legacy.

The Original Hmn was Hr (Hrw, or Heru) which is the inverse spelling for the word Rh (Ra or in semetic DIALECT Lh or Lah/Allah), otherwise known as the Sun of Man, The All Eye Seeing, or God. A Ntr can be a person place or thing which is of primary importance.

For instance, the Hpy (Hapi or Nile) river was a Ntr, and a river is NOT

GOD. It was just a Fundamental part of the Society to sustain life.
Peace.

Divine Ruler Equality Allah (Rh)

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:

>

> I am inquiring about a possible interpretation of the word /Ntr/ in > ancient Ta_Merrian ontology. For the most part Egyptologists define
> the word as "gods" and the more enlightened define ntr as "the vital > force behind animate and inanimate objects." I am posing here today
> another definition of the word Ntr.

>

> In keeping consistent with traditional African thought, people who > lived beyond the call of duty and was medicine for the community,
> when they die, they become part of the vital force that animates > objects in the universe. This is true with Ntrw, Abosom and even > Orisas.

>

> The late Dr. Afolabi A. Epega in his work Ifa: The Ancient Wisdom
> pg. 50 states:

>

> "Yoruba deities are called either "Imales" or "Orisas." The term
> Imale means the knowledge of the secrets of this world or of heaven:
> knowledge of what the Creator has kept in store for the common good
> of mankind, or one who has done some good or mighty things with his > knowledge or power is called Imale. Men of miraculous birth or who > become deified after death are called Imale, e.g., Dada, Oke, Oke > Talabi, Aina, Lisabi, Egbeji, etc. They are also called "Orisas."

>

>

> This is quit common all throughout Africa and this leads me to > believe that another definition of Ntr is "ancestor" or "deified
> ancestor." With this in mind, when we read the term "Ta Ntr"
> believed to be Pwanet (Punt), to me, it should be read as "land of > the ancestors" instead of "land of the gods" as most Egyptologists > posit. To me land of the "gods" doesn't makes sense since all of the > earth is powered by "ntrw" (the vital force behind animate and > inanimate objects). The land of our ancestors would point to a > genetic and cultural origin. It is no different than African-> Americans referring to Africa proper as the "mother land" (the land
> of our historical birth).

>

> We know that persons of great stature in Ta-Merri were elevated to > the status of deity: Imhotep and Amenhotep III. In other words, they > became Ntrw after death and this is done all over Africa. What is > your opinion?

>
> Asar Imhotep
> <http://www.mochasuite.com>
>
| 23258|2007-10-04 10:22:43|cristofori whitakara|Re: Ramses II temple found inside Mosque|
forgive me Mahari

Mahari Mengistu wrote:

Listen guys MAHARI IS A MAN. It is a rather common Ethiopian male name and like the Kemetic language there would be a "t" at the end to make it a female name.

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, cristofori whitakara wrote:

>
> i guess like the sister mahari wrote: we are dealing with a people who have a deep psychoses.

>
> elliottandelliottmt g wrote:
Jews and Christians say the same thing. This is just more proof of > the African origins of Christianity, Judaism and Islam.

>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, cristofori whitakara wrote:

> >
> > the people who practice islam refer to the pharaonic culture as a > culture of pagans but they use the pagan's temples to create their > own?

> >
> > Paul Kekai Manansala wrote:
> Ancient Pharaoh Temple Discovered Inside Egypt Mosque
> > Steven Stanek in Cairo, Egypt
> > for National Geographic News

> >
> > September 27, 2007
> > Parts of a temple dating to the reign of pharaoh Ramses II have > been discovered inside a mosque in Luxor, Egypt, officials report > (see map).

> > Experts restoring the historic mosque uncovered sections of > columns, capitals, and elaborately inscribed reliefs from one of
the > ancient temple's courtyards built around 1250 B.C.

> >
> >

> > Enlarge Photo

> >

> > RELATED

> >

> > Egyptian Tomb of Noblewoman Found (August 16, 2007)

> > Egypt's Largest Pharaoh-Era Fortress Discovered, Experts

> Announce (July 27, 2007)

> > "Egypt's Forgotten Treasures" in National Geographic Magazine
> (May 2005)

> >

> > The previously concealed architectural elements reveal well-> preserved hieroglyphics and unique scenes depicting the powerful > pharaoh.

> > The discovery is likely to touch a nerve among religious > leaders, because the newly exposed reliefs contain representations > of humans and animals, which are forbidden inside mosques, the > experts said.

> > The mosque was erected as a shrine to Muslim saint Abul Haggag > in the 13th century A.D. on the site of an earlier Christian church,

> which was itself built on top of the ancient temple, the > archaeologists explained.

> >

> > The discovery was made during repair work on the mosque after a > fire damaged part of the structure in June.

> > "To do this project of restoration, [workers] had to reclean and > reopen many things, and this is when the scenes were found, and
they > are really unique," said Zahi Hawass, secretary general of Egypt's > Supreme Council of Antiquities.

> > (Hawass is also a National Geographic Society explorer-in-> residence. National Geographic News is a division of the National > Geographic Society.)

> > Encryptions and Glyphs

> > Christians, and later Muslims, frequently built their shrines on > top of ancient Egyptian holy sites, said W. Raymond Johnson, an > Egyptologist at the Oriental Institute at the University of Chicago
> who has seen the newly exposed temple sections.

> > Builders of both faiths usually erased or defaced ancient > artwork in the temples, he said, but the newfound reliefs remain > virtually untouched.

> > "We are very lucky that these have been so well preserved,"
> Johnson said.

> > Rather than destroying the reliefs, the mosques builders > carefully hid them away with a protective layer of straw-reinforced > plaster, shielding them from the elements.

> > Continued on Next Page >>

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> > -----

> > Yahoo! oneSearch: Finally, mobile search that gives answers, not > web links.

> >

>

>

>

>

>

>

> -----

> Be a better Heartthrob. Get better relationship answers from someone who knows.

> Yahoo! Answers - Check it out.

>

---

Yahoo! oneSearch: Finally, mobile search that gives answers, not web links.

| 23259|2007-10-04 14:37:38|barac1998@aol.com|Re: Africans Don't believe they Are Africans|
I haven't posted in quite a while but always follow. It is amazing how simple the identity of being African is, but yet so many disagree. We know why, and has been explained well. I had to tell someone that we use the term African after we or our ancestors leave Africa, not while being in Africa.
Peter

---

See what's new at AOL.com and Make AOL Your Homepage.

| 23260|2007-10-04 18:37:47|clyde winters|Re: Africans Don't believe they Are Africans|

--- barac1998@aol.com wrote:

> I haven't posted in quite a while but always follow.

> It is amazing how > simple the identity of being African is, but yet so > many disagree. We know why, > and has been explained well. I had to tell someone > that we use the term African > after we or our ancestors leave Africa, not while > being in Africa.

>
> Peter
>
>

Peter what you have said is truly deep. Thank you.

Clyde

---

Be a better Globetrotter. Get better travel answers from someone who knows. Yahoo! Answers - Check it out.

<http://answers.yahoo.com/dir/?link=list&sid=396545469>

| 23261|2007-10-05 00:17:53|neseret|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Divine Ruler Equality Allah" wrote:

> For instance, the Hpy (Hapi or Nile) river was a Ntr, and a river is

NOT GOD.

Hapi is the god of the act of inundation, not the river itself. The Nile was simply called /itrw/, "the river." On occasion, it was referred to simply as /nwn/, referring to its waters.

Katherine Griffis-Greenberg, M. A. (Lon)
Member, International Association of Egyptologists
ARCE, BANE, EES, ASOR

Doctoral Program (Egyptology)
Oriental Studies
University of Oxford
Oxford, United Kingdom

<http://www.griffis-consulting.com>

| 23262|2007-10-05 01:26:12|Ferg|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|

Clyde...thanks for the remark. I appreciate it.

Sadly publishing a paper can be an uphill struggle especially when Eurocentric institutions feel threatened with this kind of research. I remember a few years ago approaching Oxford University to undertake a Phd which would enable me to study the linguistic link which exists between Egyptology and Bantu languages.

Many excuses were made to deter me from pursuing my objective, these included... 'Oh we do not have the expertise to link Egyptology with Bantu languages'..... 'We do not have a suitable lecturer to supervise you as no lecturer exists who is proficient in Bantu and Egyptology'. So I approached SOAS and mentioned that there was a Bantu link with Egyptology. 'You must be seeing things'.... 'You must be joking' I was told. The best thing for you to do is to go back to Africa and do the research there!!!!

Such is the nature of Eurocentric institutions.

Ferg Somo

www.kaa-umati.co.uk

----- Original Message -----

From: clyde winters

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Sent: Thursday, October 04, 2007 4:50 PM

Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?

Hi

Thanks for the interesting paper. Did you publish the paper?

Clyde

--- Ferg <egyptology@theunit.fsnet.co.uk> wrote:

> Hi.

>

> I've researched NTR a few years ago and here is a > shortened version. Hope it will stimulate some > thought

>

> Ferg Somo

---

Check out the hottest 2008 models today at Yahoo! Autos.

http://autos.yahoo.com/new\_cars.html

| 23263|2007-10-05 07:40:04|Peter Kaiza|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|

Good work,

I'm not a linguist but I think you should do much more to publicise your work in journals etc , another note, why do the so called mainstream academicians still class the ancient Egyptian language as Afroasiatic? Do they see the evidence but choose to ignore? I'm confused!

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: egyptology@theunit.fsnet.co.uk
Date: Thu, 4 Oct 2007 16:17:28 +0100
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?

Hi.

I've researched NTR a few years ago and here is a shortened version. Hope it will stimulate some thought
Ferg Somo

---

Do you know a place like the back of your hand? Share local knowledge with BackOfMyHand.com

| 23264|2007-10-05 07:40:44|matt mercer|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|

Sorry to hear about the lack of motivation on your peers part.

And thank you for a very fascinating paper.

I wonder if you are familiar with the mythologies and oral storytelling traditions of some of the congo peoples. When I was younger I came across a small book of african folk tales that were categorized by region. There was a great story about ancient forest dwelling pygmy king who left his tribe to venture out of his region to meet the rising "civilized" city dwellers. He travels for many years from place to place and returns many years later to his forest tree dwelling people in the Congo and shows them all the new things he has learned, but then warns his people that not everything the city dwellers practice is suitable for a people like his who live where they do and goes on to say that contact with them should be minimal. The book I was reading this story from was likely published in the 70's, and was not very specific about names. And although this great forest king's name is never mentioned, for he apparently still holds the same status as a great leader to the remnants of this ancient people, it reminds me of QEB or SEB from the egyptian mythos, who's theme seems to be about dependent origination and self-determined learning. I wonder if you have heard other folk stories that share this affinity from this region as you make a great case for these languages being so closely related?

Thanks again.

MATT MERCER

Ferg wrote:

Clyde...thanks for the remark. I appreciate it.

Sadly publishing a paper can be an uphill struggle especially when Eurocentric institutions feel threatened with this kind of research. I remember a few years ago approaching Oxford University to undertake a Phd which would enable me to study the linguistic link which exists between Egyptology and Bantu languages. Many excuses were made to deter me from pursuing my objective, these included...' Oh we do not have the expertise to link Egyptology with Bantu languages'.. .... 'We do not have a suitable lecturer to supervise you as no lecturer exists who is proficient in Bantu and Egyptology'. So I approached SOAS and mentioned that there was a Bantu link with Egyptology. 'You must be seeing things'....' You must be joking' I was told. The best thing for you to do is to go back to Africa and do the research there!!!!
Such is the nature of Eurocentric institutions.

Ferg Somo
www.kaa-umati.co.uk

----- Original Message -----

From: clyde winters
To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
Sent: Thursday, October 04, 2007 4:50 PM
Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?

Hi

Thanks for the interesting paper. Did you publish the paper?

Clyde

--- Ferg <egyptology@theunit.fsnet.co.uk> wrote:

> Hi.

>

> I've researched NTR a few years ago and here is a > shortened version. Hope it will stimulate some > thought

>

> Ferg Somo

---

-----

Check out the hottest 2008 models today at Yahoo! Autos.
http://autos.yahoo.com/new\_cars.html

---

Be a better Globetrotter. Get better travel answers from someone who knows.
Yahoo! Answers - Check it out.

| 23265|2007-10-05 08:29:39|clyde winters|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|

--- Peter Kaiza <prweza@hotmail.co.uk> wrote:

>

> Good work,

>

> I'm not a linguist but I think you should do much > more to publicise your work in journals etc , another > note, why do the so called mainstream academicians > still class the acient egyptian language as > Afroasiatic? Do they see the evidence but choose to > ignore? I'm confused!

>

>

Hi Peter

I believe thy do this for two reasons. First, by claiming that Egyptian is Afroasiatic or Afrasian these scholars attempt to link Egyptians with non-African people e.g., Arabs, Israelis and etc. Secondly, by declaring that Egyptian is AfroAsiatic they are able to claim a Hebrewic relationship to Egypt.

Clyde

---

Pinpoint customers who are looking for what you sell.

<http://searchmarketing.yahoo.com/>

| 23266|2007-10-05 10:56:39|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "neseret" wrote:

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Divine Ruler Equality Allah"

> wrote:

- > Katherine Griffis-Greenberg, M. A. (Lon)
- > Member, International Association of Egyptologists
- > ARCE, BANE, EES, ASOR
- >
- > Doctoral Program (Egyptology)
- > Oriental Studies
- > University of Oxford
- > Oxford, United Kingdom
- >

Katherine, you've been working on that doctorate for a while now.
What's your dissertation thesis?

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23267|2007-10-05 11:04:40|Dexter Harper|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|

Peace & Greetings Ferg,

Can you send that paper to my email address? I am unable to receive it through the Ta-Seti yahoo group email.

dharp3r@yahoo.com

Thanks,

Sharma Men Ra

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Ferg" wrote:

>

> Hi.

>

> I've researched NTR a few years ago and here is a shortened version. Hope it will stimulate some thought

>

> Ferg Somo

>

| 23268|2007-10-05 11:05:32|Paul Kekai Manansala|Egyptian archaeological team to survey the Nile in search of sunken |

By Ahmed Maged

First Published: October 4, 2007

The Nile bed in Luxor and Aswan, pictured above, is expected to contain well-preserved antiquities

---

ALEXANDRIA: For the first time, the Nile River will be the subject of an archeological excavation. An Egyptian archeological team affiliated with the Supreme Council of Antiquities will track down the locations of the river's ancient sunken treasures.

Alaa Mahrous, director of the underwater antiquities department in Alexandria, told Daily News Egypt that the team of archaeologists headed by Dr Zahi Hawass, director of the Supreme Council of Antiquities, has selected the Nile to be the subject of their search. The river has not been excavated to date.

"The survey will cover the area between the quarries in Aswan and Abydos. Over the centuries this was a significant area ? either for the ancient Egyptians or the many rulers of the country who followed," Mahrous explained.

"The granite quarries were located in Aswan. The statues and obelisks used to be cut and shaped in the mountains before they were shipped to Luxor and Abydos."

The team hopes to find any pieces that might have went down while being loaded on unloaded from ships. "It is also possible to discover shipwrecks as many huge boats sank along with their load which consisted of statues, pottery and merchandise. We also have information regarding two small obelisks that settled in the river bed 10 km off Luxor as they were being shipped to Cairo by Maspero."

Mahrous pointed out that, fortunately, the geography of the Nile hasn't changed, especially in Upper Egypt. In addition, the river's alluvial mud is a protective agent. Unlike the seawater that erodes the wood, the mud protects all kinds of artifacts.

"But I would like to stress again that this will be only a survey to locate the site of the antiquities. Recovering them will follow at a different stage," noted Mahrous, who described how state-of-the-art technology will be used in the survey.

"This includes a sizeable rubber boat that has been provided with special facilities for accommodating and protecting the survey tools," said Mahrous.

"Our survey tools will consist of the 'side scan sonar' that reveals the artifacts buried under the river bed, the 'Bommer' that penetrates the mud and sand found in the depths of the river as well as the GPS that is used in pointing out geographical locations, a tool that will prove effective in spotting the artifacts' exact locations," the official added.

"We will be able to read the results immediately, because the sonar is also connected to a computer on board, which will show images of what stands on the river bed or what is buried under the mud."

"The GPS will guide us through several geographical locations," Mahrous added. "In the case of an object being discovered, our team of divers will swim down to examine it, ensuring it isn't a significant monument that would be missed.

"But a small dive as this isn't as easy as some think. To dive in the Nile you also have to deal with strong winds, the high density of the river water and intensity of alluvial mud that, within seconds, can turn the surroundings into dark recesses."

Based on the information relating to this survey, the ensuing stages will be decided.

"But we aim to carry out a survey of all the locations of sunken antiquities countrywide, a plan that will take us years of hard work."

| 23269|2007-10-05 12:24:00|Manu Ampim|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|

Katherine Griffis-Greenberg wrote:

>In Arabic, Luxor is Al-Uqsar, meaning "the palaces." The name refers >to the myriad monuments to be found in the area which was once called

>Thebes by the Greeks, and Waset (/wAst/) or "the city" (/niwt/) by

>the ancient Egyptians (Hannig 2000: 1287b).

I already indicated in my last post that Luxor means "the palaces."

However, the term /niwt/ does not simply mean "city." It refers to a general locale where people live, which includes a city, region, district, or country depending on the context.

Advancing the work,

Manu Ampim

| 23270|2007-10-05 13:02:40|Manu Ampim|Manu Ampim Speaks in Philadelphia (Oct. 27th)|

Prof. Manu Ampim will give a powerpoint presentation on:

The Vanishing Evidence of Classical African Civilizations:

The Case of the Merowe Dam in Sudan

Sponsored by: Laying The Foundation & Khepera Charter School

Date: Saturday, October 27, 2007

Place: Khepera Charter School

144 West Carpenter Lane

Philadelphia, PA

Time: 7:00 - 9:00 pm

Free admission, donations are accepted

For more information, contact:

Mukasa Afrika

215.520.7896 or

spirits360@yahoo.com

Prof. Manu Ampim has conducted extensive field research in Egypt and Nubia, and he has recently returned from a August 2007 field research tour to Sudan, where he visited the Merowe Dam area.

Unfortunately, when the dam is completed in 2008 it will create a 108-mile lake and permanently flood all of the ancient Kushite and Nubian artifacts in the region, which is one of the greatest archaeological regions in the world.

www.ManuAmpim.com

| 23271|2007-10-05 13:04:33|clyde winters|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|

--- Paul Kekai Manansala <pmanansala@sbcglobal.net>

wrote:

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "neseret"

> wrote:

> >

> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Divine Ruler > Equality Allah"

> > wrote:

>

>

> > Katherine Griffis-Greenberg, M. A. (Lon)
> > Member, International Association of Egyptologists
> > ARCE, BANE, EES, ASOR
> >
> > Doctoral Program (Egyptology)
> > Oriental Studies
> > University of Oxford
> > Oxford, United Kingdom
> >
>
> Katherine, you've been working on that doctorate for > a while now.
> What's your dissertation thesis?
>
> Regards,
> Paul Kekai Manansala
>
>

Hi Paul

Most PhDs in Egyptology and the Ancient world generally take a long time. It was a joke around the University of Chicago, that many students at the Oriental Institute took more than 10 years to finish up.

The length of time it takes to get a Phd , and resulting cost , is the main reason that most Egyptologists and Sumerologists come from well-to-do families.

Clyde

---

Building a website is a piece of cake. Yahoo! Small Business gives you all the tools to get online.

<http://smallbusiness.yahoo.com/webhosting>

| 23272|2007-10-05 15:11:58|asar_imhotep|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"? for Ferg|

--- In Ta_Seti@yahooogroups.com, "Ferg" wrote:

>
 > Hi.
 >
 > I've researched NTR a few years ago and here is a shortened version. Hope it will stimulate some thought
 >
 > Ferg Somo
 >

This is some very good linguistic work. As many know on this board, I have advocated that the key concepts which make up the Ta-Merrian ontology is to be found among the Ba'Ntu of east and central Africa (based on my personal correspondences with priests from the Nile Valley and Kongo regions). I personally feel your work is going in the right direction.

I would just like to add the following analysis for your research concerning Ntr and it deals with the breaking down of the individual glyphs that make up the Tri-literal sign for /nTr/.

There are certain things we have to keep in mind when dealing with classical African thought and its representation in art and communication. That is that they did not make up signs or associate symbols with concepts for no reason. To understand why they chose something to represent a concept (usually found in nature), then you have to really understand their cosmology. It is always through the cosmology that the true understanding of a people's expression can realized.

With that in mind, we must look at the cosmology of the ancient Kmtjw to understand why they would choose the symbols they did to represent /nTr/. Contrary to statement made by Katherine in an earlier post (in Message #23252), the Ta-Merrians did spell out the word /nTr/ and each "glyph" refers to concept in their cosmology. What I am positing is that to really get an understanding of the word Ntr, you have to draw from the many creation stories of Kmt and study the cosmology of the Ba'Ntu (the Kongo in particular).

The signs in /nTr/ are:

= n [water ? the "nu" or "nun" ? primordial matter]

= tj or ch [rope]

= r [open mouth]

The meaning of the /n/ and /tj/ glyphs are hinted at in the Shabbaka Stone (a very good treaty can be found here - <http://www.sofiatopia.org/maat/shabaka.htm>). For we know that the Nu(n) is the realm of matter before form. It is also the ancestral realm (keep this in mind). The /r/ glyph refers to the nature of how creation came into being ? through sound. "God" commanded/spoke creation into existence. Line 53 of the Shabaka stone is one such reference to that in the whole Men-Nefer Theology;

"(53) There comes into being in the heart; there comes into being by the tongue as the image of Atum !Ptah is the very great, who gives life to all the gods and their kas. Lo, through this heart and by this tongue.

So here we have a reference to all of the beings coming into existence from the mind [the Nu -/n/] and the tongue [Mouth - /r/] of the ultimate creative force. Remember the first Ntrw were NOT physical beings, but the necessary components of creation: you can't create anything unless you first create the environment necessary to sustain the creation. Thus we have shu (air), tefnut (moisture), geb (earth) and nut (sky/space). Asar, Aset, Set, Heru and Nebet-Het represent various other necessities in nature (Aset/light ? Set/entropy for example).

The Menefer Theology, as well as all of the other creation stories, is the articulation of how potential energy took form and became kinetic energy. Before we get to the /tj/ or /ch/ glyph, let's go back to Bantu concept of reality.

The Ba'Ntu believes that the universe is essentially a big ball of energy waves and radiations. As Dr. Fu-kiau (Self Healing Power and Therapy ? pg. 9) has articulated:

"nothing is isolated in the universe?Likewise, human beings, living or dead, as living suns rising and setting around the world, are all related to each other. The warmth of radiations never die at sunset, the physical death. It is here that the misconception of the myth of the ancestors' Cult of Africa began in the Western literacy of Africa."

This philosophy is found in every single study I have done on African spiritual systems. To African people there is no separation of the ancestral world and the living world: we exist in different forms not readily visible to each other. This is the very theory that helped Dr. Gabriel Oyibo come up with God Almighty Grand Unified Theorem (GAGUT).

The core of an African community is spirit. Trying to understand an indigenous community without recognition of this fact will lead you astray. They are always trying to stay connected to spirit because it is spirit world (the Nu) that regulates what goes on here. So in other words, rituals and spiritual systems are designed to keep that connection strong and the word connection is key to understanding the 3rd glyph under consideration; /tj/.

In Dr. Fu-Kiau's work mentioned above pg 9-10, he goes on to state:

"African people do not worship the dead. They venerate N'singa dikanda waninga, the community's genetically bounding rope (power) strengthened between the dead and the living." (emphasis mine)

In the Kongo they are always speaking about "tying and untying knots" or "ropes." This is the metaphor used to convey the concept of keeping connected to the spirit world as a rope is something used to ground a large object or tie something together: in other words a rope is what keeps something from being separate. And sense you can't fully grasp what is in the vastness of the spirit world, you do know some aspects of the spirit world; you just call it/them ancestors. They are your link between all of the knowledge in the spirit world and the proper methods to carry out the potential that lay dormant in the Nu.

So when we review the word /nTr/, you can see the philosophy of the Ba'Ntu (and the rest of Black Africa for that matter) conveyed in the glyphs. So we have 3 things vital for the understanding of existence: N = spirit world | R = creation itself spoken from the mouth of the creator | Tj/Ch = the essence that keeps them connected (the rope - ancestors). So on one level Ntr is speaking about NaTuRe as studying nature is how you will understand the workings of the spirit world (the Nu). Maintaining a healthy relationship with nature is maintaining a healthy relationship with spirit.

For those of you familiar with spiritual systems such as Ifa or the Abosom system of the Akan know that nature is a natural oracle system. All African systems that I have come across all possess this philosophy: that nature is an oracle system and if you can read Mdw Ntr (mother nature, the language of God, R = mouth,) then you can divine on things and make better decisions concerning life. I wish I had enough time to fully treat this as it is quite extensive.

But in conclusion, when we die, according to African people, we are still a part of the universe: we are just now a part of the collective energy that permeates nature until we decide to come back (reincarnate). Ancestors and nature /nTrw/ act as intermediaries between man and God /Nwn/ and it is in understanding this fundamental concept in African philosophy that will ultimately lead us into understanding the symbology in Kemetic Anthropology and Cosmology. This is also part of the reason why I associate Ntrw with ancestors and not God itself. As

Dr. Fu-Kiau has mentioned, "They venerate N'singa dikanda waninga, the community's genetically bounding rope (power)," and the rope /tj/ being the "power" behind objects in creation is consistent with all indigenous spiritual systems (Orishas, Abosom). African people don't have a representation for God.

As Baudin, a Roman Catholic priest of French descent, wrote about the Yoruba God in these words:

"The Blacks have neither statutes, nor symbols to represent God. They consider him as the Supreme Primordial Being, author and father of the gods and spirits. At the same time, they think that god after beginning the organization of the world, charged Obatala to finish it and govern it, then withdrew and went into an eternal rest to look after his happiness (Awolalu 1979, p. 4). (emphasis mine).

You won't find anywhere in Africa a symbol for the supreme being, just what can characterize a particular aspect of its being - /Nu/ (the creative potential).

Awolalu, J. O. (1979). Yoruba beliefs and sacrificial rites. London : Longman Group Ltd.

Asar Imhotep
<http://www.mochasuite.com>

| 23273|2007-10-05 17:21:01|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Ramses II temple found inside Mosque|

It's not a big deal - not much to forgive as I don't think men are better than women, therefore I'm not insulted. It's just that maleness is a part of my identity and obviously you don't completely address me if that isn't expressed, too (or assumed).

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, cristofori whitakara wrote:

>

> forgive me Mahari

>

> Mahari Mengistu wrote: Listen guys MAHARI IS

A MAN. It is a rather common Ethiopian male > name and like the Kemetic language there would be a "t" at the end

to > make it a female name.

> HTP,
> Mahari
>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, cristofori whitakara
> wrote:
>>
>> i guess like the sister mahari wrote: we are dealing with a

people
> who have a deep psychoses.
>>
>> elliottandelliottmtg wrote:
> Jews and Christians say the same thing. This is just more proof of >> the African origins of Christianity, Judaism and Islam.
>>
>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, cristofori whitakara
>> wrote:
>>>
>>> the people who practice islam refer to the pharaonic culture as

a >> culture of pagans but they use the pagan's temples to create

their >> own?
>>>
>>> Paul Kekai Manansala wrote:
>> Ancient Pharaoh Temple Discovered Inside Egypt Mosque
>>> Steven Stanek in Cairo, Egypt
>>> for National Geographic News
>>>
>>> September 27, 2007
>>> Parts of a temple dating to the reign of pharaoh Ramses II have >> been discovered inside a mosque in Luxor, Egypt, officials report >> (see map).
>>> Experts restoring the historic mosque uncovered sections of >> columns, capitals, and elaborately inscribed reliefs from one of
> the >> ancient temple's courtyards built around 1250 B.C.
>>>
>>>
>>> Enlarge Photo
>>>
>>> RELATED
>>>

>>> Egyptian Tomb of Noblewoman Found (August 16, 2007)
>>> Egypt's Largest Pharaoh-Era Fortress Discovered, Experts
>> Announce (July 27, 2007)
>>> "Egypt's Forgotten Treasures" in National Geographic Magazine
>> (May 2005)

>>>

>>> The previously concealed architectural elements reveal well->> preserved hieroglyphics and unique scenes depicting the powerful >> pharaoh.

>>> The discovery is likely to touch a nerve among religious >> leaders, because the newly exposed reliefs contain

representations

>> of humans and animals, which are forbidden inside mosques, the
>> experts said.

>>> The mosque was erected as a shrine to Muslim saint Abul Haggag >> in the 13th century A.D. on the site of an earlier Christian > church,

>> which was itself built on top of the ancient temple, the >> archaeologists explained.

>>>

>>> The discovery was made during repair work on the mosque after a >> fire damaged part of the structure in June.

>>> "To do this project of restoration, [workers] had to reclean

and

>> reopen many things, and this is when the scenes were found, and
> they >> are really unique," said Zahi Hawass, secretary general of

Egypt's

>> Supreme Council of Antiquities.

>>> (Hawass is also a National Geographic Society explorer-in->> residence. National Geographic News is a division of the National >> Geographic Society.)

>>> Encryptions and Glyphs

>>> Christians, and later Muslims, frequently built their shrines

on >> top of ancient Egyptian holy sites, said W. Raymond Johnson, an >> Egyptologist at the Oriental Institute at the University of Chicago

>> who has seen the newly exposed temple sections.

>>> Builders of both faiths usually erased or defaced ancient >> artwork in the temples, he said, but the newfound reliefs remain

```
reinforced
>> plaster, shielding them from the elements.
>>> Continued on Next Page >>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>> -----
>>> Yahoo! oneSearch: Finally, mobile search that gives answers,
```

```
web links.
>
| 23274|2007-10-05 17:33:14|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|
>>I'm confused!<<
```

Please don't be confused!!! That's what they want. If eurocentric assertions appear inappropriate, misguided, incorrect, and debasing they probably are. Their perspective seems to be "O is that simple and logical? Let's make it complicated and convoluted. O is that truthful? Let's make it a lie. O does this make sense to you?

Let's make it confusing."

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Kaiza wrote:

>

>

> Good work,

>

> I'm not a linguist but I think you should do much more to publicise your work in journals etc , another note, why do the so called mainstream academicians still class the ancient egyptian language as Afroasiatic? Do they see the evidence but choose to ignore? I'm confused!

>

>

> To: Ta_Seti@...: egyptology@...: Thu, 4 Oct 2007 16:17:28 +0100
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?

>

>

>

>

>

>

> Hi.

>

> I've researched NTR a few years ago and here is a shortened version. Hope it will stimulate some thought

>

> Ferg Somo

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

> _____
> Feel like a local wherever you go.

> <http://www.backofmyhand.com>
>
| 23275|2007-10-05 20:10:21|Divine Ruler Equality Allah|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|
--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "neseret" wrote:
>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Divine Ruler Equality Allah"
> wrote:
> > For instance, the Hpy (Hapi or Nile) river was a Ntr, and a river is > NOT GOD.
>
> Hapi is the god of the act of inundation, not the river itself. The > Nile was simply called /itrw/, "the river." On occasion, it was > referred to simply as /nwn/, referring to its waters.
>
> Katherine Griffis-Greenberg, M. A. (Lon)
> Member, International Association of Egyptologists
> ARCE, BANE, EES, ASOR
>
> Doctoral Program (Egyptology)
> Oriental Studies
> University of Oxford
> Oxford, United Kingdom
>
> <http://www.griffis-consulting.com>
>

I don't buy it, the whole "they just called it "the river"" like no other rivers exist? Sounds controversial.

Sounds like the religious connotations you are advocating came LATER, if you consider there was geographical objects with the name Hpy in them before this "River God" stuff, such as the mountains of Kr Hpy and Mw Hpy.

I understand that you have to advocate the classical view that Ntr means "god" from the mainstream training in Modern "Egyptology", but to me, it is a misrepresentation of what the word Ntr actually means.

| 23276|2007-10-05 20:16:47|clyde winters|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"? for Ferg|
Thanks for the great discussion of this term.

Clyde

--- asar_imhotep <asar\_imhotep@yahoo.com> wrote:

>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Ferg" > wrote:
> >
> > Hi.

> >
> > I've researched NTR a few years ago and here is a > shortened version.
> Hope it will stimulate some thought
> >
> > Ferg Somo
> >
> >
> >
> >
> This is some very good linguistic work. As many know > on this board, I > have advocated that the key concepts which make up > the Ta-Merrian > ontology is to be found among the Ba'Ntu of east and > central Africa > (based on my personal correspondences with priests > from the Nile Valley > and Kongo regions). I personally feel your work is > going in the right > direction.
>
> I would just like to add the following analysis for > your research > concerning Ntr and it deals with the breaking down > of the individual > glyphs that make up the Tri-literal sign for /nTr/.
>
> There are certain things we have to keep in mind > when dealing with > classical African thought and its representation in > art and > communication. That is that they did not make up > signs or associate > symbols with concepts for no reason. To understand > why they chose > something to represent a concept (usually found in > nature), then you > have to really understand their cosmology. It is > always through the > cosmology that the true understanding of a people's > expression can > realized.
>
> With that in mind, we must look at the cosmology of > the ancient Kmtjw to

- > understand why they would choose the symbols they
- > did to represent
- > /nTr/. Contrary to statement made by Katherine in an
- > earlier post (in
- > Message #23252), the Ta-Merrians did spell out the
- > word /nTr/ and each
- > "glyph" refers to concept in their cosmology. What I
- > am positing
- > is that to really get an understanding of the word
- > Ntr, you have to draw
- > from the many creation stories of Kmt and study the
- > cosmology of the
- > Ba'Ntu (the Kongo in particular).
- >
- > The signs in /nTr/ are:
- >
- >
- >
- > = n [water ? the "nu" or "nun" ? primordial
- > matter]
- >
- >
- >
- >
- >
- > = tj or ch [rope]
- >
- > = r [open mouth]
- >
- > The meaning of the /n/ and /tj/ glyphs are hinted at
- > in the Shabbaka
- > Stone (a very good treaty can be found here -
- > <http://www.sofiatopia.org/maat/shabaka.htm>
- > <<http://www.sofiatopia.org/maat/shabaka.htm>> ). For
- > we know that the
- > Nu(n) is the realm of matter before form. It is also
- > the ancestral realm
- > (keep this in mind). The /r/ glyph refers to the - > nature of how creation
- > came into being ? through sound. "God"
- > commanded/spoke
- > creation into existence. Line 53 of the Shabaka
- > stone is one such
- > reference to that in the whole Men-Nefer Theology;
- >
- > "(53) There comes into being in the heart; there

- > comes into being by the
- > tongue as the image of Atum ! Ptah is the very
- > great, who gives life to
- > all the gods and their kas. Lo, through this heart
- > and by this tongue.
- >
- > So here we have a reference to all of the beings
- > coming into existence
- > from the mind [the Nu -/n/] and the tongue [Mouth -
- > /r/] of the ultimate
- > creative force. Remember the first Ntrw were NOT
- > physical beings, but
- > the necessary components of creation: you can't
- > create anything
- > unless you first create the environment necessary to
- > sustain the
- > creation. Thus we have shu (air), tefnut (moisture),
- > geb (earth) and nut
- > (sky/space). Asar, Aset, Set, Heru and Nebet-Het
- > represent various other
- > necessities in nature (Aset/light ? Set/entropy for
- > example).
- >
- > The Menefer Theology, as well as all of the other
- > creation stories, is
- > the articulation of how potential energy took form
- > and became kinetic
- > energy. Before we get to the /tj/ or /ch/ glyph,
- > let's go back to
- > Bantu concept of reality.
- >
- > The Ba'Ntu believes that the universe is essentially
- > a big ball of
- > energy waves and radiations. As Dr. Fu-kiau (Self
- > Healing Power and
- > Therapy ? pg. 9) has articulated:
- >
- > "nothing is isolated in the universe?Likewise, human
- > beings,
- > living or dead, as living suns rising and setting
- > around the world, are
- > all related to each other. The warmth of radiations
- > never die at sunset,
- > the physical death. It is here that the
- > misconception of the myth of
- > the ancestors' Cult of Africa began in the Western > literacy of > Africa."

>
> This philosophy is found in every single study I > have done on African > spiritual systems. To African people there is no > separation of the > ancestral world and the living world: we exist in > different forms not > readily visible to each other. This is the very > theory that helped Dr.
> Gabriel Oyiibo come up with God Almighty Grand > Unified Theorem (GAGUT).
>
> The core of an African community is spirit. Trying > to understand an > indigenous community without recognition of this > fact will lead you > astray. They are always trying to stay connected to > spirit because it is > spirit world (the Nu) that regulates what goes on > here. So in other > words, rituals and spiritual systems are designed to > keep that > connection strong and the word connection is key to > understanding the > 3rd glyph under consideration; /tj/.
>
> In Dr. Fu-Kiau's work mentioned above pg 9-10, he > goes on to state:
>
> "African people do not worship the dead. They > venerate N'singa > dikanda waninga, the community's genetically > bounding rope (power) > strengthened between the dead and the living." > (emphasis mine)
>
> In the Kongo they are always speaking about "tying > and untying > knots" or "ropes." This is the metaphor used to > convey the > concept of keeping connected to the spirit world as > a rope is something > used to ground a large object or tie something > together: in other words

> a rope is what keeps something from being separate.
> And sense you > can't fully grasp what is in the vastness of the > spirit world, you > do know some aspects of the spirit world; you just > call it/them > ancestors. They are your link between all of the > knowledge in the spirit > world and the proper methods to carry out the > potential that lay dormant > in the Nu.
>
>

==== message truncated ====

---

Boardwalk for $500? In 2007? Ha! Play Monopoly Here and Now (it's updated for today's economy) at Yahoo! Games.

<http://get.games.yahoo.com/proddesc?gamekey=monopolyherenow>

| 23277|2007-10-06 04:45:28|Dexter Harper|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"? for Ferg|

I remember reading (I can't remember where) in a book that said the Kamitic people did not have a name for the 'supreme being' because it (supreme being) was beyond their comprehension. And since the attributes were so plentiful, they used the term 'Ntr' to identify the attributes and functions of the one 'god' (for lack of a better term).

Moustafa Gadalla says in "Historical Deception" the following:

"The Egyptians regarded the universe as a conscious act of creation by the One Great God. The fundamental doctrine was the unity of the Deity. This One God was never represented. It is the functions and attributes of his domain that were represented. Once a reference was made to his functions/attributes, he became a distinguishable agent; reflecting this particular function/attribute, and its influence on the world. His various functions and attributes as the Creator, Healer, and the like, were called the neteru(singular: neter in the masculine form and netert in the feminine form). As such, an Egyptian neter/netert was not a god/goddess but the personification of a function/attribute of the One God."

Respectfully,

Sharma Men Ra

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep"
wrote:

>

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Ferg" wrote:

>>

>> Hi.

>>

>> I've researched NTR a few years ago and here is a shortened

version.

> Hope it will stimulate some thought

>>

>> Ferg Somo

>>

>

>

>

> This is some very good linguistic work. As many know on this board,

I

> have advocated that the key concepts which make up the Ta-Merrian

> ontology is to be found among the Ba'Ntu of east and central Africa

> (based on my personal correspondences with priests from the Nile

Valley

> and Kongo regions). I personally feel your work is going in the right > direction.

>

> I would just like to add the following analysis for your research

> concerning Ntr and it deals with the breaking down of the individual > glyphs that make up the Tri-literal sign for /nTr/.

>

> There are certain things we have to keep in mind when dealing with > classical African thought and its representation in art and > communication. That is that they did not make up signs or associate > symbols with concepts for no reason. To understand why they chose > something to represent a concept (usually found in nature), then you > have to really understand their cosmology. It is always through the > cosmology that the true understanding of a people's expression can > realized.

>

> With that in mind, we must look at the cosmology of the ancient

Kmtjw to > understand why they would choose the symbols they did to represent > /nTr/. Contrary to statement made by Katherine in an earlier post

(in > Message #23252), the Ta-Merrians did spell out the word /nTr/ and

each

> "glyph" refers to concept in their cosmology. What I am positing > is that to really get an understanding of the word Ntr, you have to draw

> from the many creation stories of Kmt and study the cosmology of the > Ba'Ntu (the Kongo in particular).

>

> The signs in /nTr/ are:

>

>

>

> = n [water ? the "nu" or "nun" ? primordial
> matter]

>

>

>

>

>

> = tj or ch [rope]

>

> = r [open mouth]

>

> The meaning of the /n/ and /tj/ glyphs are hinted at in the Shabbaka

> Stone (a very good treaty can be found here -

> <http://www.sofiatopia.org/maat/shabaka.htm>

> <<http://www.sofiatopia.org/maat/shabaka.htm>> ). For we know that the > Nu(n) is the realm of matter before form. It is also the ancestral realm

> (keep this in mind). The /r/ glyph refers to the nature of how creation

> came into being ? through sound. "God" commanded/spoke > creation into existence. Line 53 of the Shabaka stone is one such > reference to that in the whole Men-Nefer Theology;

>

> "(53) There comes into being in the heart; there comes into being

by the > tongue as the image of Atum ! Ptah is the very great, who gives life to > all the gods and their kas. Lo, through this heart and by this tongue.

>

> So here we have a reference to all of the beings coming into existence

> from the mind [the Nu -/n/] and the tongue [Mouth - /r/] of the ultimate > creative force. Remember the first Ntrw were NOT physical beings,

but

> the necessary components of creation: you can't create anything

> unless you first create the environment necessary to sustain the > creation. Thus we have shu (air), tefnut (moisture), geb (earth)

and nut

> (sky/space). Asar, Aset, Set, Heru and Nebet-Het represent various other > necessities in nature (Aset/light ? Set/entropy for example).

>

> The Menefer Theology, as well as all of the other creation stories,

is

> the articulation of how potential energy took form and became

kinetic

> energy. Before we get to the /tj/ or /ch/ glyph, let's go back to > Bantu concept of reality.

>

> The Ba'Ntu believes that the universe is essentially a big ball of > energy waves and radiations. As Dr. Fu-kiau (Self Healing Power and > Therapy ? pg. 9) has articulated:

>

> "nothing is isolated in the universe?Likewise, human beings, > living or dead, as living suns rising and setting around the world,

are > all related to each other. The warmth of radiations never die at sunset,

> the physical death. It is here that the misconstruction of the myth

of

> the ancestors' Cult of Africa began in the Western literacy of > Africa."

>

> This philosophy is found in every single study I have done on

African

> spiritual systems. To African people there is no separation of the > ancestral world and the living world: we exist in different forms

not > readily visible to each other. This is the very theory that helped

Dr.

> Gabriel Oyibo come up with God Almighty Grand Unified Theorem

(GAGUT).

>

> The core of an African community is spirit. Trying to understand an > indigenous community without recognition of this fact will lead you > astray. They are always trying to stay connected to spirit because it is > spirit world (the Nu) that regulates what goes on here. So in other > words, rituals and spiritual systems are designed to keep that > connection strong and the word connection is key to understanding

the > 3rd glyph under consideration; /tj/.

>

> In Dr. Fu-Kiau's work mentioned above pg 9-10, he goes on to state:

- >
- > "African people do not worship the dead. They venerate N'singa
- > dikanda waninga, the community's genetically bounding rope (power)
- > strengthened between the dead and the living." (emphasis mine)
- >
- > In the Kongo they are always speaking about "tying and untying
- > knots" or "ropes." This is the metaphor used to convey the
- > concept of keeping connected to the spirit world as a rope is something

- > used to ground a large object or tie something together: in other words

- > a rope is what keeps something from being separate. And sense you
- > can't fully grasp what is in the vastness of the spirit world, you
- > do know some aspects of the spirit world; you just call it/them
- > ancestors. They are your link between all of the knowledge in the spirit

- > world and the proper methods to carry out the potential that lay

dormant

- > in the Nu.
- >
- > So when we review the word /nTr/, you can see the philosophy of the
- > Ba'Ntu (and the rest of Black Africa for that matter) conveyed in
- > the glyphs. So we have 3 things vital for the understanding of
- > existence: N = spirit world | R = creation itself spoken from the mouth

- > of the creator | Tj/Ch = the essence that keeps them connected (the rope

- > - ancestors). So on one level Ntr is speaking about NaTuRe as studying

- > nature is how you will understand the workings of the spirit world

(the

- > Nu). Maintaining a healthy relationship with nature is maintaining a
- > healthy relationship with spirit.

>

- > For those of you familiar with spiritual systems such as Ifa or the
- > Abosom system of the Akan know that nature is a natural oracle system.

> All African systems that I have come across all possess this philosophy:

> that nature is an oracle system and if you can read Mdw Ntr (mother > nature, the language of God, R = mouth,) then you can divine on things

> and make better decisions concerning life. I wish I had enough time

to > fully treat this as it is quite extensive.

>

> But in conclusion, when we die, according to African people, we are > still a part of the universe: we are just now a part of the collective

> energy that permeates nature until we decide to come back

(reincarnate).

> Ancestors and nature /nTrw/ act as intermediaries between man and

God

> /Nwn/ and it is in understanding this fundamental concept in African > philosophy that will ultimately lead us into understanding the symbolology

> in Kemetic Anthropology and Cosmology. This is also part of the reason

> why I associate Ntrw with ancestors and not God itself. As Dr. Fu-

Kiau

> has mentioned, "They venerate N'singa dikanda waninga, the > community's genetically bounding rope (power)," and the rope

> /tj/ being the "power" behind objects in creation is consistent > with all indigenous spiritual systems (Orishas, Abosom). African

people

> don't have a representation for God.

>

> As Baudin, a Roman Catholic priest of French descent, wrote about

the > Yoruba God in these words:

>

> "The Blacks have neither statutes, nor symbols to represent God.

> They consider him as the Supreme Primordial Being, author and father of > the gods and spirits. At the same time, they think that god after > beginning the organization of the world, charged Obatala to finish

it > and govern it, then withdrew and went into an eternal rest to look after > his happiness (Awolalu 1979, p. 4). (emphasis mine).

>
> You won't find anywhere in Africa a symbol for the supreme being, > just what can characterize a particular aspect of its being - /Nu/

(the > creative potential).
>
>
>
>
>
>
> Awolalu, J. O. (1979). Yoruba beliefs and sacrificial rites. London:
> Longman Group Ltd.

>
>
>
>
>
> Asar Imhotep
> <http://www.mochasuite.com> <<http://www.mochasuite.com>>
>
> | 23278|2007-10-06 09:22:25|neseret|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala"
> wrote:
>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "neseret" wrote:
>
>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Divine Ruler Equality Allah"
> wrote:
>
>
> > Katherine Griffis-Greenberg, M. A. (Lon)
> > Member, International Association of Egyptologists
> > ARCE, BANE, EES, ASOR
> >

> > Doctoral Program (Egyptology)
> > Oriental Studies
> > University of Oxford
> > Oxford, United Kingdom
> >
>
> Katherine, you've been working on that doctorate for a while now.

As Clyde indicated, it's not unusual to work for at least 10 years on such a dissertation.

> What's your dissertation thesis?

The working title is

"The Temple of Seti I Complex at Abydos as the Sacred Space for Osirian Mystery Rituals in the Ramesside New Kingdom"

Its proposed research scope:

This research endeavours to study the temple and its structures with concentration upon its position within the Egyptian landscape. It will consider how ancient Egyptian cultural attitudes toward use of space, orientation, and direction guided not only the original establishment of this temple, but defined its use as creating a sacred landscape for the performance of religious rites in and around the temple complex.

HTH.

Katherine Griffis-Greenberg, M. A. (Lon)
Doctoral Program (Egyptology)
Oriental Studies
University of Oxford
Oxford, United Kingdom

<http://www.griffis-consulting.com>

| 23279|2007-10-06 09:58:15|neseret|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|
--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Manu Ampim" wrote:

> Katherine Griffis-Greenberg wrote:
>
> > In Arabic, Luxor is Al-Uqsur, meaning "the palaces." The name refers to the myriad monuments to be found in the area which was once called

> >Thebes by the Greeks, and Waset (/wAst/) or "the city" (/niwt/) by > >the ancient Egyptians (Hannig 2000: 1287b).

>

> I already indicated in my last post that Luxor means "the palaces."

As I was not replying to you, but Mr Mercer, I'm not inclined to think this comment is being directed to me.

> However, the term /niwt/ does not simply mean "city." It refers to a general locale where people live, which includes a city, region, district, or country depending on the context.

/niwt/ means either 'village' or 'city' as a primary meaning (WB II, 210). I was not referring to its primary meaning. however.

In the context of a referent specifically to _Thebes_, it does indeed mean "the city," as shown in a number of Egyptian texts, such that it rated its own category in the /niwt/ definition in the WB II as "Die Stadt: Theben" (WB II, 21: C, II, 7).

Divine Ruler Equality Allah" wrote

In re /itrw/

>I don't buy it, the whole "they just called it "the river"" like no other rivers exist? Sounds controversial. Sounds like the religious connotations you are advocating came LATER<

Not a modern interpretation, but used in texts as the name for the Nile from at least the Middle Kingdom (WB I: 146, I, 10), and as /itrw aA/ 'the great river' in referring to its principal branches, also since the Middle Kingdom.

As ancient Egypt was primarily a riverine population, it would not be surprising that they would name the main river which served them as "the river."

WB = Erman, A. and H. Grapow 1926. Wörterbuch der Aegyptischen
Sprache. (7 Vols.) Leipzig: J. C. Hinrich.

Katherine Griffis-Greenberg, M. A. (Lon)

Member, International Association of Egyptologists
ARCE, BANE, EES, ASOR

Doctoral Program (Egyptology)
Oriental Studies
University of Oxford
Oxford, United Kingdom
| 23280|2007-10-06 09:59:34|encyclopediaegypt|Hyksos ruled nothing|

When the British, French and Greek.. and the Babylonians controled Egypt we have hundreds of names of foreigners.

#1 Show text written in any such thing as Hyksos language.

#2 Go to the places where information is written about them and show us the number of white faces or black face people depicted as the Hyksos

#3 If there was a period when the Hyksos ruled Egypt, show us a period in Egypt when there was no Egyptian pharaoh in power

#4 If some such thing as non Egyptians invaded Egypt show us where they came from and give your evidence.

#5 Show us their written language.. show us their records of being in Egypt.

#6 Show us the communities that are supposed to be where the Hyksos lived (where they are digging).. then tell us what the greatest possible number of people that could possibly have lived there.. you know the people who were supposed to have defeated hundreds of thousands.. millions of Egyptians

#7 As far as I can tell there is nothing but Egyptian text about such characters.. and very little of that.

It appears any such group that existed could be no more than a splinter group of Egyptians who tried to cause a civil war.

There is nothing about them not in the language of the Egyptians and the only images I have seen supposed to be Hyksos were of the same black race as the Egyptians.

Give me the facts which prove the supposed Hyksos were any thing but a break off group of Egyptians who NEVER ruled Egypt at any time?

*

Encyclopedia Egypt 5/a>

| 23281|2007-10-06 09:59:56|cushiite|Have The Hieroglyphs Been Deciphered?|

It has come to my attention that the hieroglyphs have never been deciphered, simply because the Ancient Egyptians were not around to say what the symbols meant. I am not an Egyptologist, though I have read much of the information from this group for the past few years. How do we know what the hieroglyphs say? Would someone like to clear this up for me?

| 23282|2007-10-06 10:25:52|neseret|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep"

wrote:

>

I wrote:

> > The term /nTr/ is a single glyph symbol, which symbolises the > > trilateral sound of "netjer". It is glyph sign R8, which is defined > by Gardiner as "cloth, wound on a pole; emblem of divinity" (Gardiner 1982 (1957): 502). The term for /nTr/ is never written

> > orthographically in ancient Egyptian, that is, written with > > individual glyph phonogram symbols, as you have implied, above.

>

> Actually when you look at the phrase in the Rosetta Stone (The Rosetta Stone E.A. Wallis Budge pg 213) the word is written out as a phonetic complement for the tri-lateral sound of /nTr/.<

You do realise the Rosetta Stone is primarily a Ptolemaic Greek text, right? That is, it was not written for Egyptians, though it uses Egyptian glyphs. When phrases which are unfamiliar in Egyptian are written, they are usually written as orthography, as in this case.

There is one place in ancient Egyptian literature where /nTr/ is not written with the R8 symbol, but is "spelled out" and that is in afterlife books of the New Kingdom (WB II: 358). This was probably done for magical reasons, but in everyday royal and religious texts, the R8 symbol for /nTr/ was consistently used, since the time of the Pyramid Texts, _unless_ it was a phrase (usually of foreign construction) with which Egyptian was unfamiliar.

> As can clearly be seen, with the exception of the /r/ it is spelled out to show how it is supposed to be pronounced. This is how we know that it is pronounced "Netcher" and not Neter. There is no way you could intuit the pronunciation of a tri-con0sant glyph without there being evidence that it was actually spelled out in the text.<

This is just plain silly: there are myriad symbols in ancient Egyptian which are trilaterals that are never "spelled out" in orthography. I refer you to p. 44 of Gardiner, 42, which states

"The trilateral signs represent combinations of three consonants and have naturally far more restrictive use than the biliteral signs. They need to be learnt only as the occasion arises."

Some are "assisted" by consonants, but not all, just as in the case of biliterals, according to Gardiner. You simply cannot count on the additional consonants to always be there, though, which is why they have to be memorised.

Hannig (1995) contains a list of no less than 9 pages of both biliteral and trilateral signs, which most Egyptology students have to learn as part of their instruction in Egyptian language, and learn the full trilateral transcription of each sign as part of these studies.

WB = Erman, A. and H. Grapow 1926. Wörterbuch der Aegyptischen Sprache. (7 Vols.) Leipzig: J. C. Hinrich.

Hannig, R. 1995. Die Sprache der Pharaonen: Großes Handwörterbuch ägyptisch-Deutsch (2800 - 950 v. Chr.). Kulturegeschichte der Antiken Welt 64. Mainz: von Zabern.

Katherine Griffis-Greenberg, M. A. (Lon)
Member, International Association of Egyptologists
ARCE, BANE, EES, ASOR

Doctoral Program (Egyptology)
Oriental Studies
University of Oxford
Oxford, United Kingdom

<http://www.griffis-consulting.com>

| 23283|2007-10-06 10:47:41|neseret|Re: Hyksos ruled nothing|
--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "encyclopediaegypt"
wrote:

>

> When the British, French and Greek.. and the Babylonians controlled

Egypt we have hundreds of names of foreigners.

> #3 If there was a period when the Hyksos ruled Egypt, show us a period in Egypt when there was no Egyptian pharaoh in power

See: Dynasties 15 and 15 in any book on ancient Egyptians kings and you will find them there. See in particular:

Clayton, P. 1994. Chronicle of the Pharaohs: The Reign-by-Reign Record of the Rulers and Dynasties of Ancient Egypt. London: Thames and Hudson.

von Beckerath, J. 1999 (1984). Handbuch der Ägyptischen Königslisten. Münchner Ägyptologische Studien, Bd. 49. G. Burkard and D. Kessler. Mainz: von Zabern.

Recall that the Hyksos ruled from Avaris, which is in northern Egypt. Theban king/princes have their own kingship in southern Egypt, sometimes at the same time, sometimes not.

As for Hyksos origins, see

Kempinski, A. 1985. Some Observations on the Hyksos (XVth) Dynasty and Its Canaanite Origins. In Sarah Israelit-Groll, ed., Pharaonic Egypt. The Bible and Christianity: 129-137. Jerusalem: The Magnes Press/The Hebrew University.

Mayani, Z. 1956. Les Hyksos et le monde de la Bible. Conquête de l'empire des Pharaons par les nomades d'Asie. - Leurs origines eurasiatiques. - Leur culte du feu, du soleil et du cheval. - L'Égypte et les Indo-Aryens. - Les Hyksos et les Sémites. - La révolution d'Akhnaton. - L'Exode. - Du culte du feu sacré du soleil au monothéisme mosaïque. Bibliothèque Historique. Paris: Payot.

> #6 Show us the communities that are supposed to be where the Hyksos lived (where they are digging).. then tell us what the greatest possible number of people that could possibly have lived there.. you know the people who were supposed to have defeated hundreds of thousands.. millions of Egyptians.

Probably not millions. At its height in the New Kingdom, ancient Egypt probably had a population of about 4 million.

See:

Bietak, M. 1996. Avaris, the Capital of the Hyksos: Recent Excavations at Tell el-Dab'a. London: British Museum Press.

Caubert, A., Ed. 1999. L'acrobate au taureau: Les découvertes de Tell el-Dab'a et l'archéologie de la Méditerranée orientale (1800 - 1400 av. J.-C.)_. Louvre conférences et colloques. Paris, Musée du Louvre/La documentation Française.

Oren, E., Ed. 1997. _The Hyksos: New Historical and Archaeological Perspectives_. University Museum Monograph 90/University Museum Symposium Series 8. Philadelphia, University Museum/University of Pennsylvania.

van Seters, J. 1966. _The Hyksos. A New Investigation_. New Haven and London.: Yale University Press.

>

> #7 As far as I can tell there is nothing but Egyptian text about such characters.. and very little of that.

Actually, the Egyptians write quite a bit about the Hyksos, how they started a war with them (the Battle Stela of Kamose), which talks about the King Apophis. Several kings fought the Hyksos, and declared how they routed them (such as Ahmose, with references to Ahhotep's valour in keeping Egypt safe while he fought the Hyksos, Thutmose III, Hatshepsut, etc.). One would have to have not read anything in ancient Egyptian literature to not know that the Egyptians in the New Kingdom fixated on getting the Hyksos out of Egypt.

A good place to start would be

ANET = Pritchard, J. B., Ed. 1969. _Ancient Near Eastern Texts Relating to the Old Testament_. Princeton, Princeton University Press.

Lichtheim, M. 1976. _Ancient Egyptian Literature: The New Kingdom_. Berkeley: University of California.

> It appears any such group that existed could be no more than a splinter group of Egyptians who tried to cause a civil war.<

And you get this from what source?

Katherine Griffis-Greenberg, M. A. (Lon)
Member, International Association of Egyptologists
ARCE, BANE, EES, ASOR

Doctoral Program (Egyptology)
Oriental Studies
University of Oxford
Oxford, United Kingdom

<http://www.griffis-consulting.com>

| 23284|2007-10-06 10:52:58|neseret|Re: Have The Hieroglyphs Been Deciphered?|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "cushiite" wrote:

>

> It has come to my attention that the hieroglyphs have never been > deciphered, simply because the Ancient Egyptians were not around to say what the symbols meant. I am not an Egyptologist, though I have read much of the information from this group for the past few years. How do we know what the hieroglyphs say? Would someone like to clear this up for me?

>

Mainly because we know how Greek and Coptic were pronounced, which is why we could read the Greek text of the Rosetta Stone and back into the words from its Greek translation?

See how we know how to decipher Egyptian here:

<http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Decipherment\_of\_hieroglyphic\_writing>

Katherine Griffis-Greenberg, M. A. (Lon)
Member, International Association of Egyptologists
ARCE, BANE, EES, ASOR

Doctoral Program (Egyptology)

Oriental Studies

University of Oxford

Oxford, United Kingdom

| 23285|2007-10-06 13:23:01|asar_imhotep|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|

This is a far cry from the statement you made as:

>>The term for /nTr/ is never written

orthographically in ancient Egyptian, that is, written with individual glyph phonogram symbols, as you have implied, above.

>>

It wouldn't matter the time period it was written as they were clearly emphasizing how to say the word. And the fact that even you point out another known instance contradicts your earlier statement that it was NEVER used.

- > This is just plain silly: there are myriad symbols in ancient
- > Egyptian which are triterals that are never "spelled out" in
- > orthography.

You would have to explain to me how a non Kmtjw would know in the 20th century know how a trilateral glyph was pronounced without its consonantal skeleton spelled out in any text? What would be his grounding to say something "sounds" like this and is pronounced this way in a language that has allegedly been dead for over 2000 years?

The only way YOU as a 21st century student of Ta-merrian history is going to "guess" the pronunciation of the glyphs is if somewhere in the literature there was some indication, by emphasis or full spelling, that the word is supposed to sound like this as opposed to that. There is no way you would guess S38 as /HkA/ unless the emphasis letters were there or they spelled it out completely or spelled it out for other nations in the later periods. The later proves that you can't guess the pronunciation if the Kmtjw themselves had to spell it out for foreign people so they would know how to say it.

The people of the time it was widely used would have the privilege of just learning what the signs mean and how they are pronounced as they grow up in the culture. People of the 19th-21st centuries do not have that luxury. So the only way you would know how it is pronounced is to either check for full spellings or the trilateral with the spelling before (whether in use in the ancient or Ptolemaic period). This is how the texts were deciphered in the first place - looking for the correspondences in Greek and Coptic...

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

| 23286|2007-10-06 22:00:07|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|

Please do the same for me.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Dexter Harper" wrote:

- >
- >
- > Peace & Greetings Ferg,
- >
- > Can you send that paper to my email address? I am unable to receive
- > it through the Ta-Seti yahooogroup email.
- >
- > dharp3r@...
- >

> Thanks,
>
> Sharma Men Ra
>
>
>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Ferg" wrote:
> >
> > Hi.
> >
> > I've researched NTR a few years ago and here is a shortened > version. Hope it will stimulate some thought
> >
> > Ferg Somo
> >
>
| 23287|2007-10-06 23:02:49|Ferg|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|
Send me your email address
Ferg

----- Original Message -----

From: [Mahari Mengistu](mailto:Mahari Mengistu)

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Sent: Sunday, October 07, 2007 6:00 AM

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?

Please do the same for me.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Dexter Harper" wrote:

>

>

> Peace & Greetings Ferg,

>

> Can you send that paper to my email address? I am unable to receive > it through the Ta-Seti yahooogroup email.

>

> dharp3r@...

>

> Thanks,

>

> Sharma Men Ra

>

>

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Ferg" wrote:

> >
> > Hi.
> >
> > I've researched NTR a few years ago and here is a shortened > version. Hope it will stimulate some thought
> >
> > Ferg Somo
> >
>

| 23288|2007-10-06 23:15:10|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|
mahari@myway.com

Thanks.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Ferg" wrote:

>
> Send me your email address
>
> Ferg
>
>
> ----- Original Message -----
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Sent: Sunday, October 07, 2007 6:00 AM
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?
>
>

> Please do the same for me.
> HTP,
> Mahari
>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Dexter Harper" wrote:

> >
> >
> > Peace & Greetings Ferg,
> >
> > Can you send that paper to my email address? I am unable to receive
> > it through the Ta-Seti yahooogroup email.
> >
> > dharp3r@
> >
> > Thanks,

> >
> > Sharma Men Ra
> >
> >
> >
> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Ferg" wrote:
> > >
> > > Hi.
> > >
> > > I've researched NTR a few years ago and here is a shortened > > version. Hope it will stimulate some thought
> > >
> > > Ferg Somo
> > >
> >
>
| 23289|2007-10-06 23:26:49|Manu Ampim|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|
Katherine Griffis-Greenberg wrote:

>As I was not replying to you, but Mr Mercer, I'm not inclined to >think this comment is being directed to me.
He was not asking *you* a question eventhough you took the liberty to answer. I was directing my comment to you because your statement on the meaning of Luxor is redundant. Of course, Waset is consistently described as a "city," but /niwt/ also has meanings which include a region, district, or country which is clear from various texts.
Advancing the work,
Manu Ampim

| 23290|2007-10-07 00:33:29|Manu Ampim|Re: Have The Hieroglyphs Been Deciphered?|
Greetings Cushiite,
Yes, the Rosetta Stone is the important trilingual text, discovered in 1799, that allowed for the translation of Medu Netcher ("hieroglyphs") in 1822. There is basic knowledge of how to read Medu Netcher, so it is incorrect that this language has never been translated. I too have heard this incorrect statement that Medu Netcher has never been translated.
However, it is clear that many Medu Netcher spiritual texts are consistently mutilated by eurocentric translators, who are uninformed about African spiritual culture and they have no point of reference to adequately translate these texts. The issue here is that mainstream Egyptologists are modern intellectuals who are unsuccessfully attempting to translate African spiritual manuals.
It is impossible to understand Medu Netcher spiritual texts as a mere intellectual, and this is why I am convinced that mainstream Europeans could study this language for next 200 years and never make any real progress.
Advancing the work,
Manu Ampim

---

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "cushiite" wrote:
>
> It has come to my attention that the hieroglyphs have never been > deciphered, simply because the Ancient Egyptians were not around to > say what the symbols meant. I am not an Egyptologist, though I have > read much of the information from this group for the past few > years. How do we know what the hieroglyphs say? Would someone like > to clear this up for me?

-----

Katherine Griffis-Greenberg wrote:

Mainly because we know how Greek and Coptic were pronounced, which is why we could read the Greek text of the Rosetta Stone and back into the words from its Greek translation?

See how we know how to decipher Egyptian here:

<http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Decipherment\_of\_hieroglyphic\_writing>

| 23291|2007-10-07 00:48:34|asar_imhotep|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"? for Ferg|
I would also like to add that one must on some level deal with the early depictions of the form including the possible nature of the wrappings around nTr symbol. A good book to consult is the English translation (if you can't read German) of "Conceptions of God in Ancient Egypt: The One and the Many" By Erik Hornung. Below are some of the early depictions.

Figure A is from the old kingdom onward. Figures B and C are predynastic depictions. What is clear from the early depictions is that stripes, usually on flags on polls, is very vital in understanding this symbol. From the early dynastic period onward, which are almost always pointed, are shown in front of the sanctuary of Nit (Neith, Netet). See W. Petrie Royal Tombs of the Earliest Dynasties Vol. II and G. Matthione Scandone, Or Ant 6 (1967) 145-168.

What Hornung observes on page 35 is that this symbol in its "enigmatic" or "cryptographic" form has the value of /w/ on a number of scarabs. Etienne Drioton derived this from /wt/ -- "wrap, bind." From earlier periods the word /wt/ meant embalmer and was the word for "mummy" wrappings. During the Roman period in the papyrus Tunis they have for the symbol /nTr/, jw.f grs - "he is buried."

This further leads me to believe that this symbol is a symbol for ancestors along with the information I presented in the previous post below. This makes a lot of sense when we consider the Ba'Ntu concept of the "Vee" and the Dingo Dingo (life process) cosmograph [dikenga]. As the Kmtjw were mimicing the conceptual birthing process (Musoni - symbolized the color yellow) performed in the womb and recreating it for the soul to be born in the Luvemba stage represented by the color white. Remember these flag cloths and colors were also on the Djed Pillars of Asar who we know after his death became "lord of the perfect Black" in the realm of the Duat/Tuat (ancestral realm). From that point on he became deified and mummification was associated with Asar. The colors associated with the flags in the new kingdom were red, white, green (sometimes only red and white). In some you will find Black as well, especially on the Tet or Djed pillars.

I think that this symbol is one of those symbols that works like Maat with its many definitions that individually feed off of each other that can be summed up by the larger term. The more we understand the nature of energy (ngolo), man's purpose and believed cycle before life, during life and after death, and the workings of nature, the better we can peace this puzzle together.

Asar Imhotep
<http://www.mochasuite.com>

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:

>

>

> --- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Ferg" egyptology@ wrote:

> >

> > Hi.
> >
> > I've researched NTR a few years ago and here is a shortened version.
> Hope it will stimulate some thought
> >
> > Ferg Somo
> >
> >
> >
> This is some very good linguistic work. As many know on this board, I > have advocated that the key concepts which make up the Ta-Merrian
> ontology is to be found among the Ba'Ntu of east and central Africa > (based on my personal correspondences with priests from the Nile Valley > and Kongo regions). I personally feel your work is going in the right > direction.
>
> I would just like to add the following analysis for your research > concerning Ntr and it deals with the breaking down of the individual > glyphs that make up the Tri-literal sign for /nTr/.
>
> There are certain things we have to keep in mind when dealing with > classical African thought and its representation in art and > communication. That is that they did not make up signs or associate > symbols with concepts for no reason. To understand why they chose > something to represent a concept (usually found in nature), then you > have to really understand their cosmology. It is always through the > cosmology that the true understanding of a people's expression can > realized.
>
> With that in mind, we must look at the cosmology of the ancient Kmtjw to > understand why they would choose the symbols they did to represent > /nTr/. Contrary to statement made by Katherine in an earlier post (in > Message #23252), the Ta-Merrians did spell out the word /nTr/ and each
> "glyph" refers to concept in their cosmology. What I am positing > is that to really get an understanding of the word Ntr, you have to draw > from the many creation stories of Kmt and study the cosmology of the > Ba'Ntu (the Kongo in particular).
>
> The signs in /nTr/ are:
>
>
>
> = n [water ? the "nu" or "nun" ? primordial
> matter]
>

>
>
>
>
> = tj or ch [rope]
>
> = r [open mouth]
>
> The meaning of the /n/ and /tj/ glyphs are hinted at in the Shabbaka
> Stone (a very good treaty can be found here - > <http://www.sofiatopia.org/maat/shabaka.htm>
> ). For we know that the > Nu(n) is the realm of matter before form. It is also the ancestral realm > (keep this in mind). The /r/ glyph refers to the nature of how creation > came into being ? through sound. "God" commanded/spoke > creation into existence. Line 53 of the Shabaka stone is one such > reference to that in the whole Men-Nefer Theology;
>
> "(53) There comes into being in the heart; there comes into being by the > tongue as the image of Atum ! Ptah is the very great, who gives life to > all the gods and their kas. Lo, through this heart and by this tongue.
>
> So here we have a reference to all of the beings coming into existence > from the mind [the Nu -/n/] and the tongue [Mouth - /r/] of the ultimate > creative force. Remember the first Ntrw were NOT physical beings, but > the necessary components of creation: you can't create anything > unless you first create the environment necessary to sustain the > creation. Thus we have shu (air), tefnut (moisture), geb (earth) and nut > (sky/space). Asar, Aset, Set, Heru and Nebet-Het represent various other > necessities in nature (Aset/light ? Set/entropy for example).
>
> The Menefer Theology, as well as all of the other creation stories, is > the articulation of how potential energy took form and became kinetic > energy. Before we get to the /tj/ or /ch/ glyph, let's go back to > Bantu concept of reality.
>
> The Ba'Ntu believes that the universe is essentially a big ball of > energy waves and radiations. As Dr. Fu-kiau (Self Healing Power and > Therapy ? pg. 9) has articulated:
>
> "nothing is isolated in the universe?Likewise, human beings, > living or dead, as living suns rising and setting around the world, are > all related to each other. The warmth of radiations never die at sunset, > the physical death. It is here that the misconstruction of the myth of > the ancestors' Cult of Africa began in the Western literacy of > Africa."

>

> This philosophy is found in every single study I have done on African > spiritual systems. To African people there is no separation of the > ancestral world and the living world: we exist in different forms not > readily visible to each other. This is the very theory that helped Dr.
 > Gabriel Oyibo come up with God Almighty Grand Unified Theorem (GAGUT).
 >

> The core of an African community is spirit. Trying to understand an > indigenous community without recognition of this fact will lead you > astray. They are always trying to stay connected to spirit because it is > spirit world (the Nu) that regulates what goes on here. So in other > words, rituals and spiritual systems are designed to keep that > connection strong and the word connection is key to understanding the > 3rd glyph under consideration; /tj/.
 >

> In Dr. Fu-Kiau's work mentioned above pg 9-10, he goes on to state:
 >

> "African people do not worship the dead. They venerate N'singa
 > dikanda waninga, the community's genetically bounding rope (power) > strengthened between the dead and the living." (emphasis mine)
 >

> In the Kongo they are always speaking about "tying and untying > knots" or "ropes." This is the metaphor used to convey the > concept of keeping connected to the spirit world as a rope is something > used to ground a large object or tie something together: in other words > a rope is what keeps something from being separate. And sense you > can't fully grasp what is in the vastness of the spirit world, you > do know some aspects of the spirit world; you just call it/them > ancestors. They are your link between all of the knowledge in the spirit > world and the proper methods to carry out the potential that lay dormant > in the Nu.
 >

> So when we review the word /nTr/, you can see the philosophy of the > Ba'Ntu (and the rest of Black Africa for that matter) conveyed in > the glyphs. So we have 3 things vital for the understanding of > existence: N = spirit world | R = creation itself spoken from the mouth > of the creator | Tj/Ch = the essence that keeps them connected (the rope > - ancestors). So on one level Ntr is speaking about NaTuRe as studying > nature is how you will understand the workings of the spirit world (the > Nu). Maintaining a healthy relationship with nature is maintaining a > healthy relationship with spirit.
 >

> For those of you familiar with spiritual systems such as Ifa or the > Abosom system of the Akan know that nature is a natural oracle system.
 > All African systems that I have come across all possess this philosophy:
 > that nature is an oracle system and if you can read Mdw Ntr (mother > nature, the language of God, R = mouth,) then you can divine on things > and make better decisions concerning life. I wish I had enough time to > fully treat this as it is quite extensive.

 >
 > But in conclusion, when we die, according to African people, we are > still a part of the universe: we are just now a part of the collective > energy that permeates nature until we decide to come back (reincarnate).
 > Ancestors and nature /nTrw/ act as intermediaries between man and God > /Nwn/ and it is in understanding this fundamental concept in African > philosophy that will ultimately lead us into understanding the symbology > in Kemetic Anthropology and Cosmology. This is also part of the reason > why I associate Ntrw with ancestors and not God itself. As Dr. Fu-Kiau > has mentioned, "They venerate N'singa dikanda waninga, the > community's genetically bounding rope (power)," and the rope > /tj/ being the "power" behind objects in creation is consistent > with all indigenous spiritual systems (Orishas, Abosom). African people > don't have a representation for God.
 >
 > As Baudin, a Roman Catholic priest of French descent, wrote about the > Yoruba God in these words:
 >
 > "The Blacks have neither statutes, nor symbols to represent God.
 > They consider him as the Supreme Primordial Being, author and father of > the gods and spirits. At the same time, they think that god after > beginning the organization of the world, charged Obatala to finish it > and govern it, then withdrew and went into an eternal rest to look after > his happiness (Awolalu 1979, p. 4). (emphasis mine).
 >
 > You won't find anywhere in Africa a symbol for the supreme being, > just what can characterize a particular aspect of its being - /Nu/ (the > creative potential).
 >
 >
 >
 >
 >
 >
 > Awolalu, J. O. (1979). Yoruba beliefs and sacrificial rites. London:
 > Longman Group Ltd.
 >
 >
 >
 >
 >
 > Asar Imhotep
 > <http://www.mochasuite.com>

>

| 23292|2007-10-07 08:45:34|Terry Sanders|Re: Have The Hieroglyphs Been Deciphered?|

Prof. Ampin,

Thank you for clearing the matter up for me. If my finances permit, I will be able to accompany you on your next tour of Egypt (Kemet).

We met last year in Youngstown, Ohio at your lecture on the fraud of Tutankhamen. At the end of the lecture, we had a lengthy discussion and you took pictures with my wife and daughter.

What a very impactful day that was for my family. Your lecture was very informative and a major step in the direction of the liberation of my black mind, from the intentional distortions of history and the deceptions and bondage of religion, to spiritual emancipation.

Though the church where the lecture was held was sort of small and so was the turnout, your trip and lecture was not in vain. Many lives have been and continue to be influenced by efforts that resulted, in part, from that day!

Continue to advance the work!

Ma'at Hotep,

Cushiite

Manu Ampim wrote:

Greetings Cushiite,

Yes, the Rosetta Stone is the important trilingual text, discovered in 1799, that allowed for the translation of Medu Netcher ("hieroglyphs") in 1822. There is basic knowledge of how to read Medu Netcher, so it is incorrect that this language has never been translated. I too have heard this incorrect statement that Medu Netcher has never been translated.

However, it is clear that many Medu Netcher spiritual texts are consistently mutilated by eurocentric translators, who are uninformed about African spiritual culture and they have no point of reference to adequately translate these texts. The issue here is that mainstream Egyptologists are modern intellectuals who are unsuccessfully attempting to translate African spiritual manuals.

It is impossible to understand Medu Netcher spiritual texts as a mere intellectual, and this is why I am convinced that mainstream Europeans could study this language for next 200 years and never make any real progress.

Advancing the work,

Manu Ampim

---

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "cushiite" wrote:

>

> It has come to my attention that the hieroglyphs have never been > deciphered, simply because the Ancient Egyptians were not around to > say what the symbols meant. I am not an Egyptologist, though I have > read much of the information from this group for the past few > years. How do we know what the hieroglyphs say? Would someone like > to clear this up for me?

-----

Katherine Griffis-Greenberg wrote:

Mainly because we know how Greek and Coptic were pronounced, which is why we could read the Greek text of the Rosetta Stone and back into the words from its Greek translation?

See how we know how to decipher Egyptian here:

<http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Decipherment\_of\_hieroglyphic\_writing>

| 23293|2007-10-07 10:57:12|asar_imhotep|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"? for Ferg|
Oh and another thing, I think the early depictions of the sign nTr is actually the Flail (flag).
Compare the two and tell me what you think.

Compare to C below

Figure C is the earliest attestation of the Ntr sign and it closely resembles the Flail commonly found with the deceased Nisw Bity (so-called pr-aa - pharaoh). A hypothesis I have for the inclusion of the "flail" in the coffins is that it may be an official way to say this person is worthy enough to be considered a nTr in the after life. This was in essence his/her "stamp" of approval - one who was found to be worthy of the title. He/she at this point is being deified.

Asar Imhotep
<http://www.mochasuite.com>

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:

>

> I would also like to add that one must on some level deal with the early > depictions of the form including the possible nature of the wrappings > around nTr symbol. A good book to consult is the English translation (if > you can't read German) of "Conceptions of God in Ancient Egypt: The One > and the Many" By Erik Hornung. Below are some of the early depictions.

>

>

>

>

> Figure A is from the old kingdom onward. Figures B and C are predynastic
> depictions. What is clear from the early depictions is that stripes, > usually on flags on polls, is very vital in understanding this symbol.
> From the early dynastic period onward, which are almost always pointed, > are shown in front of the sanctuary of Nit (Neith, Netet). See W. Petrie > Royal Tombs of the Earliest Dynasties Vol. II and G. Matthione Scandone, > Or Ant 6 (1967) 145-168.

>

> What Hornung observes on page 35 is that this symbol in its "enigmatic" > or "cryptographic" form has the value of /w/ on a number of scarabs.
> Etienne Drioton derived this from /wt/ -- "wrap, bind." From earlier > periods the word /wt/ meant embalmer and was the word for "mummy" > wrappings. During the Roman period in the papyrus Tunis they have for > the symbol /nTr/, jw.f grs - "he is buried."

>

> This further leads me to believe that this symbol is a symbol for > ancestors along with the information I presented in the previous post > below. This makes a lot of sense when we consider the Ba'Ntu concept of > the "Vee" and the Dingo Dingo (life process) cosmograph [dikenga]. As > the Kmtjw were mimicing the conceptual birthing process (Musoni - > symbolized the color yellow) performed in the womb and recreating it for > the soul to be born in the Luvemba stage represented by the color white.
> Remember these flag cloths and colors were also on the Djed Pillars of > Asar who we know after his death became "lord of the perfect Black" in > the realm of the Duat/Tuat (ancestral realm). From that point on he > became deified and mummification was associated with Asar. The colors > associated with the flags in the new kingdom were red, white, green > (sometimes only red and white). In some you will find Black as well, > especially on the Tet or Djed pillars.

>

> I think that this symbol is one of those symbols that works like Maat > with its many definitions that individually feed off of each other that > can be summed up by the larger term. The more we understand the nature > of energy (ngolo), man's purpose and believed cycle before life, during > life and after death, and the workings of nature, the better we can > peace this puzzle together.

>
> Asar Imhotep
> <http://www.mochasuite.com>
>
>
>

| 23294|2007-10-07 11:14:12|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"? for Ferg|
--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:

>
> Oh and another thing, I think the early depictions of the sign nTr is > actually the Flail (flag). Compare the two and tell me what you think.
>
>

Asar, do you have any explanation as to why the flail would be used to represent the word for "god?"

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23295|2007-10-07 12:13:26|asar_imhotep|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"? for Ferg|

Well this is my conviction; that the term is misinterpreted to mean "god." That is our modern Christian concept of it. Africans never call their aspects of the All Encompassing Deity "gods," that's a European interpretation of the energies. Just like the Egyptians prior to the Roman invasion never called their leaders "pr-aa's" but Nsw Bty. Even calling them "Kings" is using a foreign term to describe the leadership of African systems and it doesn't fit the idea of the ruling figure for African people.

From the evidence I have been able to view, on one level, the symbol means ancestor. Another thing we have to understand about some African words and concepts is that there are multiple "levels" to its meaning, but they all feed off of each other. Maat is one of the more well known terms. Oludumare (Odudua) is another one amongst the Yoruba people. His name means, on one level, "owner of everlasting abundance." In Ifa it also means "The sixteen principle Odus (divine spirits)," called "Olodu" owners. "Mere" means to go forward.

Remember another spelling of "Ra" is "Re" in the Coptic and something most people don't know is that Ra is a symbol for "propagated" energy (energy that moves forward). Oludumare is written in two ways: 1) Oludumare; 2) Olodumaare.

Olu is a contraction of the word "Oluwa" (lord, owner). Odu, that is, "O du" (you exert) and "Mare" (go forward, go without ceasing, or everlasting). These combined together gives us Oludumare which means: the deity that goes out everlasting or the unceasing odu. Odu also means "container" and Olodu means "general container". Remember Oludumare is a praise title for Odudua. Odu ti o da gbogbo iwa, that is, "Odu that created all that exists."

I say all that to point out that terms in African languages have many meanings that all relate to each other and when you study the names of the living systems in Africa, they give us clues on how to interpret the classical terms. So as in the case above Odudua is the "Odu that created all that exists." Odus are Orishas (Abosoms, Netchers). Odudua is like saying "King of Kings," "Lord of Lords."

You can think of a Ntr as an Odu (container) of life energy because that is what they are. In African philosophy, what we are able to see in the waking world are "shells" for an underlying meaning you can't see. So what you see on earth are "containers" for a deeper more subtle energy. They are not "gods" and we lead ourself astray applying that term. I doubt the term "flail" even fits for the symbol that is found with Ntrw and deceased Nsw-Bity. I need to look up the true word for the term. This is why I hate when Egyptologists do not use the indigenous terms for Kmtjw thought, but the Greek or English: it causes a lot of confusion.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala" wrote:

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:

> >

> > Oh and another thing, I think the early depictions of the sign nTr is > > actually the Flail (flag). Compare the two and tell me what you think.

> >

> >

>

> Asar, do you have any explanation as to why the flail would be used to represent the word for "god?"

>

> Regards,

> Paul Kekai Manansala

>

| 23296|2007-10-07 12:25:10|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"? for Ferg|
Asar, don't the ntr have individual personalities?

I mean for example, Ra, Ptah, etc. Of course, these ntr could also be viewed as ancestors.

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

asar_imhotep wrote:

Well this is my conviction; that the term is misinterpreted to mean "god." That is our modern Christian concept of it. Africans never call their aspects of the All Encompassing Deity "gods," that's a European interpretation of the energies. Just like the Egyptians prior to the Roman invasion never called their leaders "pr-aa's" but Nsw Bty. Even calling them "Kings" is using a foreign term to describe the leadership of African systems and it doesn't fit the idea of the ruling figure for African people.

From the evidence I have been able to view, on one level, the symbol means ancestor. Another thing we have to understand about some African words and concepts is that there are multiple "levels" to its meaning, but they all feed off of each other. Maat is one of the more well known terms. Oludumare (Odudua) is another one amongst the Yoruba people. His name means, on one level, "owner of everlasting abundance." In Ifa it also means "The sixteen principle Odus (divine spirits)," called "Olodu" owners. "Mere" means to go forward.

Remember another spelling of "Ra" is "Re" in the Coptic and something most people don't know is that Ra is a symbol for "propagated" energy (energy that moves forward). Oludumare is written in two ways: 1) Oludumare; 2) Olodumaare.

Ol is a contraction of the word "Oluwa" (lord, owner). Odu, that is, "O du" (you exert) and "Mare" (go forward, go without ceasing, or everlasting) . These combined together gives us Oludumare which means: the deity that goes out everlasting or the unceasing odu. Odu also means "container" and Olodu means "general container". Remember Oludumare is a praise title for Odudua. Odu ti o da gbogbo iwa, that is, "Odu that created all that exists."

I say all that to point out that terms in African languages have many meanings that all relate to each other and when you study the names of the living systems in Africa, they give us clues on how to interpret the classical terms. So as in the case above Odudua is the "Odu that created all that exists." Odus are Orishas (Abosoms, Netchers). Odudua is like saying "King of Kings," "Lord of Lords."

You can think of a Ntr as an Odu (container) of life energy because that is what they are. In African philosophy, what we are able to see in the waking world are "shells" for an underlying meaning you can't see. So what you see on earth are "containers" for a deeper more subtle energy. They are not "gods" and we lead ourself astray applying that term. I doubt the term "flail" even fits for the symbol that is found with Ntrw and deceased Nsw-Bity. I need to look up the true word for the term. This is why I hate when Egyptologists do not use the indigenous terms for Kmtjw thought, but the Greek or English: it causes a lot of confusion.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala" wrote:

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:

> >

> > Oh and another thing, I think the early depictions of the sign nTr is > > actually the Flail (flag). Compare the two and tell me what you think.

> >

> >

>

> Asar, do you have any explanation as to why the flail would be used to represent the word for "god?"

>

> Regards,

> Paul Kekai Manansala

>

| 23297|2007-10-07 14:15:13|asar_imhotep|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"? for Ferg|
That's what I'm saying. That the term Ntr is applied to multiple things. That's why I gave the example in the Yoruba system of what I mean. The main deity is Odudua. One of his praise names is Oludumare.

In the name Odudua is the root "odu" which means "container." In the system of Ifa, "Ifa" is an "Odu." Just like Obtala, Shango, Eshu, Ogun, etc. They are also called Imales or Orishas. They are representations of energy concepts in nature. Each of these are "deities" just like Asar, Aset, Nebet-Het, etc. But also people who lived exceptional lives in Yoruba culture become Orishas.

They just break down the concepts into separate parts but in essence they are the same thing. An Odu is just an interpretation of the energy during a divination reading. "Ifa" is just another name for "Orunmila" (witness of fate).

So just as "Ra" or "Ptah/ta" or "Amun/Imn" is the ruler of all Ntrw, he himself is a "nTr," the same with Odudua as he is the ruler and creator of all the Odus and Orishas, he himself is an "Odu."

What is confusing for most people is they are still attempting to think of Ra, Atum, Asar, Aset, Set, Shango, Odudua, Orunmila, Nyame, etc. as "gods." That's the first mistake. It's not confusing when you understand those are just the names given for the energy.

Like I said before, you have to understand the underlying theme behind African cosmology to understand Kemetic mythology. Everything else will make sense. Here is a summary -

"In the beginning there was perfection. God in its perfection realized that it was imperfect because it did not have a means to experience itself (as there is no motion and no time in perfection). So through his own mind he/it/she began to cause ideas (as the core of the universe is mind) to take form and created (in its mind) this thing we call the universe so it could experience itself."

This is why you will hear African priests say something like, "I am God having a human experience." God in a sense is "dreaming" and this reality isn't "reality" but a dream. So everything you see around you has at its basis, its core "spirit" or "energy" or "consciousness."

The philosophy is YOU as a human being cannot contemplate or fathom the vastness of the creator (since it is an ever expanding, infinite being). Since our finite minds can't grasp in fullness of the creator, the only way we can get a hint to what it is and how "it" operates is to breakdown the creator into smaller parts and study the "energy" that makes up the varying aspects of the creator. In the process, you are to show how they all relate and go about bring together a "synthesis" of ideas for better understanding. This is why so many stories that originated from all over Africa ended up in the Egyptian pantheon and incorporated in the various stories of creation. The temples weren't "temples" but Universities.

So just like in the study of electricity, you have different energy levels: KHz (kilohertz), Mhz (mega hertz), Ghz (Gigahertz), THz

(terahertz), etc., In Africa we break down those "energy" levels as "Shu, Tefnut, Geb, Nut, Set, Asar, Ra, etc.). Science will tell you that all things in the universe is "energy;" just energy at "different concentrations." Well African people have always held this philosophy and created complex ways of teaching how these "energy" forces interact with each other. And a human being is a form of "energy."

Africans understood first the concept that energy cannot be created nor destroyed: it can only CHANGE FORM. So you have living human being energy, after death, turning into "ancestor" energy or that energy is absorbed and redirected to another form of energy on the planet (trees, water, rocks, rivers, animals, etc.).

So as you can see, they are speaking about the same thing whether we say Ra or Imhotep: it is all "energy" and this is the key to understanding African mythology. It's a study of science and how different concentrations of energy interact with each other. They are not individual "personalities" but aspects of the same body we call "the creator." Just like I have my body that makes me...me. But my body consist of Arms, legs, stomach, knees, neck, back, bones, blood, cells, water, etc.

Instead of calling my arms...arms, I call it Knum, and my back Asar. And I create a story to help you better memorize how they work together. All Egyptian myths dealt with health, science and astronomy. The temples were used as autopsy rooms to study the insides of the body. This is the EXACT same process with the Orishas in Yoruba land and the Abosom with the Akan. Sorry for being long, but there is no other way around it. This is the basis of all African myths.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Paul Kekai Manansala wrote:

>

> Asar, don't the ntr have individual personalities?

>

> I mean for example, Ra, Ptah, etc. Of course, these ntr could also be viewed as ancestors.

>

> Regards,

> Paul Kekai Manansala

>

>

| 23298|2007-10-07 14:31:19|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"? for Ferg|
asar_imhotep wrote:

>

So as you can see, they are speaking about the same thing whether we say Ra or Imhotep: it is all "energy" and this is the key to understanding African mythology. It's a study of science and how different concentrations of energy interact with each other. They are not individual "personalities" but aspects of the same body we call "the creator." Just like I have my body that makes me...me. But my body consist of Arms, legs, stomach, knees, neck, back, bones, blood, cells, water, etc.

>

And humans too would be the same energy without individual personalities?

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23299|2007-10-07 15:31:43|neseret|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Manu Ampim" wrote:

>

>

> Katherine Griffis-Greenberg wrote:

>

> >As I was not replying to you, but Mr Mercer, I'm not inclined to > >think this comment is being directed to me.

>

>

> He was not asking *you* a question eventhough you took the liberty to answer.

Last I understood the discussion group method, _any member_ to this group can reply to any statement made by another. I pointed out that 'Luxor' does not mean "the returning," and never has. As for your "reundant" comment, I had not seen any reply from you at the time I made my post on the Luxor translation.

> Of course, Waset is consistently described as a "city," but /niwt/ also has meanings which include a region, district, or country which is clear from various texts.<

Actually no, but I gave the citations in the Wb where you can see this, if you are so inclined.

Egyptian has specific terms for land designations, and they weren't so vague as to clump them under the single term /niwt/. In the case of the terms to which you refer, they had several designations, depending upon context:

'district/nome' (/qaHt/ (Wb V: 20) or /a/ (Hannig 1999: 280a));

'region' (/Xnw/ (Wb III: 107), /rwD/ (Hannig 1999:281b),/Snw/ (Hannig 1999: 283b),/tAS/ (Wb V: 236), /ww/ (Wb I; 243) (foreign regions), /StA/ (Hannig 1999: 283b), /zATw/ (Hannig 1999: 283b), /swAw/ (Wb IV: 62)), and

'country' (/tA/ (Wb V: 212), /sxt/ (Hannig 1995: 741b), /xAst/ (Hannig 1999: 285a) (foreign land),/SA/ (Hannig 1999: 283b)).

/niwt/ is never used as a designation for any of the above terms, as far as I can see. Of course, if you think otherwise, you should be able to give me a citation for this.

Reference:

Wb = Erman, A. and H. Grapow 1926. Wörterbuch der Aegyptischen Sprache. (7 Vols.) Leipzig: J. C. Hinrich.

Hannig, R. 1995. Die Sprache der Pharaonen: Großes Handwörterbuch ägyptisch-Deutsch (2800 - 950 v. Chr.). Kulturegeschichte der Antiken Welt 64. Mainz: von Zabern.

_____. 1999. Kulturhandbuch Ägyptens: Wortschatz der Pharaonen in Sachgruppen. Kulturgeschichte der Antiken Welt 72. Mainz: von Zabern.

Katherine Griffis-Greenberg, M. A. (Lon)
Member, International Association of Egyptologists
ARCE, BANE, EES, ASOR

Doctoral Program (Egyptology)
Oriental Studies
University of Oxford
Oxford, United Kingdom

<http://www.griffis-consulting.com>

| 23300|2007-10-07 15:35:13|Manu Ampim|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"? for Ferg|
Asar Imhotep wrote:

<"god." That is our modern Christian concept of it. Africans never call Thanks, enjoying your works.....

Matt Mercer

asar_imhotep wrote:

That's what I'm saying. That the term Ntr is applied to multiple things. That's why I gave the example in the Yoruba system of what I mean. The main deity is Odudua. One of his praise names is Oludumare.

In the name Odudua is the root "odu" which means "container." In the system of Ifa, "Ifa" is an "Odu." Just like Obtala, Shango, Eshu, Ogun, etc. They are also called Imales or Orishas. They are representations of energy concepts in nature. Each of these are "deities" just like Asar, Aset, Nebet-Het, etc. But also people who lived exceptional lives in Yoruba culture become Orishas.

They just break down the concepts into separate parts but in essence they are the same thing. An Odu is just an interpretation of the energy during a divination reading. "Ifa" is just another name for "Orunmila" (witness of fate).

So just as "Ra" or "Ptah/ta" or "Amun/Imn" is the ruler of all Ntrw, he himself is a "nTr," the same with Odudua as he is the ruler and creator of all the Odus and Orishas, he himself is an "Odu."

What is confusing for most people is they are still attempting to think of Ra, Atum, Asar, Aset, Set, Shango, Odudua, Orunmila, Nyame, etc. as "gods." That's the first mistake. It's not confusing when you understand those are just the names given for the energy.

Like I said before, you have to understand the underlying theme behind African cosmology to understand Kemetic mythology. Everything else will make sense. Here is a summary -

"In the beginning there was perfection. God in its perfection realized that it was imperfect because it did not have a means to experience itself (as there is no motion and no time in perfection). So through his own mind he/it/she began to cause ideas (as the core of the universe is mind) to take form and created (in its mind) this thing we call the universe so it could experience itself."

This is why you will hear African priests say something like, "I am

God having a human experience." God in a sense is "dreaming" and this reality isn't "reality" but a dream. So everything you see around you has at its basis, its core "spirit" or "energy" or "consciousness. "

The philosophy is YOU as a human being cannot contemplate or fathom the vastness of the creator (since it is an ever expanding, infinite being). Since our finite minds can't grasp in fullness of the creator, the only way we can get a hint to what it is and how "it" operates is to breakdown the creator into smaller parts and study the "energy" that makes up the varying aspects of the creator. In the process, you are to show how they all relate and go about bring together a "synthesis" of ideas for better understanding. This is why so many stories that originated from all over Africa ended up in the Egyptian pantheon and incorporated in the various stories of creation. The temples weren't "temples" but Universities.

So just like in the study of electricity, you have different energy levels: KHz (kilohertz), Mhz (mega hertz), Ghz (Gigahertz), THz (terahertz), etc., In Africa we break down those "energy" levels as "Shu, Tefnut, Geb, Nut, Set, Asar, Ra, etc.). Science will tell you that all things in the universe is "energy;" just energy at "different concentrations. " Well African people have always held this philosophy and created complex ways of teaching how these "energy" forces interact with each other. And a human being is a form of "energy."

Africans understood first the concept that energy cannot be created nor destroyed: it can only CHANGE FORM. So you have living human being energy, after death, turning into "ancestor" energy or that energy is absorbed and redirected to another form of energy on the planet (trees, water, rocks, rivers, animals, etc.).

So as you can see, they are speaking about the same thing whether we say Ra or Imhotep: it is all "energy" and this is the key to understanding African mythology. It's a study of science and how different concentrations of energy interact with each other. They are not individual "personalities" but aspects of the same body we call "the creator." Just like I have my body that makes me...me. But my body consist of Arms, legs, stomach, knees, neck, back, bones, blood, cells, water, etc.

Instead of calling my arms...arms, I call it Knun, and my back Asar. And I create a story to help you better memorize how they work together. All Egyptian myths dealt with health, science and astronomy. The temples were used as autopsy rooms to study the insides of the body. This is the EXACT same process with the Orishas in Yoruba land and the Abosom with the Akan. Sorry for being long, but there is no other way around it. This is the basis of all African myths.

Asar Imhotep
<http://www.mochasui te.com>

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, Paul Kekai Manansala wrote:

>

> Asar, don't the ntr have individual personalities?

>

> I mean for example, Ra, Ptah, etc. Of course, these ntr could also be viewed as ancestors.

>

> Regards,

> Paul Kekai Manansala

>

>

---

Yahoo! oneSearch: Finally, mobile search that gives answers, not web links.

| 23302|2007-10-07 17:07:11|asar_imhotep|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"? for Ferg|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Paul Kekai Manansala

wrote:

>

> And humans too would be the same energy without individual personalities?

>

> Regards,

> Paul Kekai Manansala

>

Yes they would. We are getting into another aspect of ancient Ta-Merrian culture, which is another discussion in of it self. I will say this, that in traditional African thought, each spirit spark (the human being) comes here with a personality type depending on when and where they were born. I will give my self as an example to make this clear. There are various systems across the world that are rooted in this philosophy and I'm pretty sure you will find this even in your own lineage.

I was born on July 30, 1979. In "astrology" that would make me a Leo personality. When you add the numbers up for my birth date and you reduce the numbers to single digits, the result is the number 9. A number 9 "life path" is someone who is ultimately supposed to be a teacher of some sort. One who is an idealist, comforter or counselor. So according to "numerology" that is an aspect of my personality type. In Ifa it was determined during a reading that my Ori (primary odu, governing personality type - my head) is "Eshu." My compliment is "Oshun." The personality types as expressed through various Ifa myths are a part of the personality that makes me...me.

In the Dagara system of Burkino Faso, because I was born in a 9-year (1979) I am a "Mineral" personality. A mineral personality is someone who is a word-smith, poet, story teller, someone who deals with helping people to "remember;" in other words a "historian." Since I was born on Monday, in the Akan system, my personality would be "Kodjo/Kojo." All of these are personality traits and "deities."

Most, if not all, African indigenous systems operate along similar lines. And they use deities to represent the personality types of the individual. It is like this; I came to this earth to fulfill a certain destiny, or complete a job. In order for me to complete that task, and learn the lessons I need to learn in this life, the universe has given to me certain tools or "gifts" that will help me to do my tasks.

So in the case of Ifa, Eshu is a linguist, he is a messenger. The trait of this person is one who can disseminate information very well (a teacher). Eshu shortens the distance between "meaning" and a person's "understanding." Eshu is the deity that brings sacrifices and messages to Odudua. He is the intermediary between man and "god." He serves the same function as Jesus. And for those who want to research more into it, Jesus is yESHUa in the Hebrew. In the Akan system he is ayESHU. Another spelling of Eshu is "Esu." So we have even in jESUs - Esu. But this is off topic now.

All this to show that the energies have personality types and human beings, according to the ancients, possess these types. These personality types are present to help you fulfill your purpose.

For those of you who have ever wondered how did a priest of ancient Ta-Merri become a priest of Het-Heru or a priest of Djehuty for example, they operated on the same schema as in Ifa. When you are born, as mentioned earlier, you are born with a certain personality type. This is discovered through divination. If you decide to go into the priesthood, you would be initiated into that priesthood that governs your "head" or your primary "odu" (Orisha, Netcher, Abosom, etc.). So I would be initiated into the priesthood of "Esu." If in Egypt I would be initiated in the priesthood of Djehuty.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

| 23303|2007-10-07 17:17:08|asar_imhotep|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"? reply Manu|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Manu Ampim" wrote:

>

> Greetings,

>

> Actually, the term /pr-aa/ is used during the pyramid age ("old kingdom") to refer to the palace where the king lived. By the 18th dynasty during the time of Akhenaten the term /pr-aa/ (meaning "Great House") was used to refer to the king himself. This indigneous African term /pr-aa/ was later changed to "pharaoh" during the Greco-Roman era around 300 BCE.

>

> Advancing the work,

>

> Manu Ampim

>

I apologize, I should have been more clear. I meant to say that you won't find the Ta-Merrian Cartouches with the words /pr-aa/ on them. They are almost always use Nsw-Bity for the name of the king. As you mentioned, pr-aa was used for the palace, but not the leader himself in the old kingdom. Now I haven't come across the term for Akenaten, but I will definitely look for it now for my records. Thanks!

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

| 23304|2007-10-07 17:40:21|Manu Ampim|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|

Manu Ampim wrote:

"/niwt/ also has meanings which include a region, district, or country which is clear from various texts."

Katherine Griffis-Greenberg wrote:

>Egyptian has specific terms for land designations, and they weren't so vague as to clump them under the single term /niwt/. ...

>/niwt/ is never used as a designation for any of the above terms, as far as I can see. Of course, if you think otherwise, you should be able to give me a citation for this.

Well, you should open your eyes more and read the standard texts. It is obvious that you have again fallen short. You boldly claim that /niwt/ is "never[emphasis added] used as a designation for any of the above terms," yet the very source that you have been quoting from in recent posts clearly indicates that you are badly misinformed. You have been quoting Alan Gardiner and yet in response to the issue of the term /niwt/ you conveniently omit the following information. Here is what Gardiner states for /niwt/:

1. "inhabited region, in [the word] Kmt, 'Egypt' lit. 'the black (land')." Emphasis added.

*Source: Alan Gardiner, Egyptian Grammar (Oxford: Griffith Institute, 1957), 3rd edition, p. 498.

2. In the word /Kmt/ Raymond Faulker gives three examples with the determinative /niwt/ and the translation is consistently "the Black land, Egypt."

*Source: Raymond Faulkner, Concise Dictionary of Middle Egyptian (Oxford: Griffith Institute, 1972), p. 286.

3. /niwt/ is also used as a determinative to indicate the region of "lower heaven" (Source: Gardiner, p. 498).

In each of three references that I have cited the determinative /niwt/ is reference to a region, district, or country just as I have informed you earlier. The /niwt/ symbol does not only refer to a "city," and thus you should know that African terms are more complex in meaning than many mainstream westerners can appreciate.

Since you are supposedly working on your Ph.D. in Oxford, it is strange how you could so conveniently overlook two of the basic Egyptology sources, both published in Oxford. I will be more impressed with your titles when you can show more respect for the discipline.

Everyone can see the objective facts that I have provided above, so you should admit that you are wrong and show more caution in your future statements.

Advancing the work,

Prof. Manu Ampim
Director
Advancing The Research
PO Box 18623
Oakland, CA 94619
510-482-5791
www.ManuAmpim.com

"Primary research is the greatest weapon against the distortion of African culture & history." - MA

---

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Manu Ampim" wrote:

>

>

> Katherine Griffis-Greenberg
wrote:

>

> >As I was not replying to you, but Mr Mercer, I'm not inclined to > >think this comment is being directed to me.

>

>

> He was not asking *you* a question eventhough you took the liberty
to answer.

Last I understood the discussion group method, _any member_ to this group can reply to any statement made by another. I pointed out that 'Luxor' does not mean "the returning," and never has. As for your "reundant" comment, I had not seen any reply from you at the time I made my post on the Luxor translation.

> Of course,

Waset is consistently described as a "city," but /niwt/also has meanings which include a region, district, or country which is clear from various texts.<

Actually no, but I gave the citations in the Wb where you can see this, if you are so inclined.

Egyptian has specific terms for land designations, and they weren't so vague as to clump them under the single term /niwt/. In the case of the terms to which you refer, they had several designations,
depending upon context:

'district/nome' (/qaHt/ (Wb V: 20) or /a/ (Hannig 1999: 280a));

'region' (/Xnw/ (Wb III: 107), /rwD/ (Hannig 1999:281b),/Snw/ (Hannig 1999: 283b),/tAS/ (Wb V: 236), /ww/ (Wb I: 243) (foreign regions), /StA/ (Hannig 1999: 283b), /zATw/ (Hannig 1999:
283b), /swAw/ (Wb IV: 62)), and

'country' (/tA/ (Wb V: 212), /sxt/ (Hannig 1995: 741b), /xAst/(Hannig 1999: 285a) (foreign land),/SA/ (Hannig 1999: 283b)).

/niwt/ is never used as a designation for any of the above terms, as far as I can see. Of course, if you think otherwise, you should be able to give me a citation for this.

Reference:

Wb = Erman, A. and H. Grapow 1926. Wörterbuch der Aegyptischen Sprache. (7 Vols.) Leipzig: J. C. Hinrich.

Hannig, R. 1995. Die Sprache der Pharaonen: Großes Handwörterbuch Ägyptisch-Deutsch (2800 - 950 v. Chr.). Kulturegeschichte der Antiken Welt 64. Mainz: von Zabern.

_____. 1999. Kulturhandbuch Ägyptens: Wortschatz der Pharaonen in Sachgruppen. Kulturegeschichte der Antiken Welt 72. Mainz: von Zabern.

Katherine Griffis-Greenberg, M. A. (Lon)
Member, International Association of Egyptologists
ARCE, BANE, EES, ASOR

Doctoral Program (Egyptology)
Oriental Studies
University of Oxford
Oxford, United Kingdom

<http://www.griffis-consulting.com>

| 23305|2007-10-07 18:00:06|Manu Ampim|Re: Have The Hieroglyphs Been Deciphered?|

Hotep,

Thank you for the positive feedback. Yes, I distinctly remember you and your family. I am glad to hear from you because I have had computer problems and I don't have your contact information from that event. Please email me your contact details privately and I will send you an update on the May/June 2008 Kemet tour.

Advancing the work,

Manu A.

profmanu@acninc.net

---

Prof. Ampim,

Thank you for clearing the matter up for me. If my finances permit, I will be able to accompany you on your next tour of Egypt (Kemet).

We met last year in Youngstown, Ohio at your lecture on the fraud of Tutankhamen. At the end of the lecture, we had a lengthy discussion and you took pictures with my wife and daughter. What a very impactful day that was for my family. Your lecture was very informative and a major step in the direction of the liberation of my black mind, from the intentional distortions of history and the deceptions and bondage of religion, to spiritual emancipation.

Though the church where the lecture was held was sort of small and so was the turnout, your trip and lecture was not in vain. Many lives have been and continue to be influenced by efforts that resulted, in part, from that day!

Continue to advance the work!

Ma'at Hotep,
Cushiite

---

Manu Ampim wrote:

Greetings Cushiite,
Yes, the Rosetta Stone is the important trilingual text, discovered in 1799, that allowed for the translation of Medu Netcher ("hieroglyphs") in 1822. There is basic knowledge of how to read Medu Netcher, so it is incorrect that this language has never been translated. I too have heard this incorrect statement that Medu Netcher has never been translated. However, it is clear that many Medu Netcher spiritual texts are consistently mutilated by eurocentric translators, who are uninformed about African spiritual culture and they have no point of reference to adequately translate these texts. The issue here is that mainstream Egyptologists are modern intellectuals who are unsuccessfully attempting to translate African spiritual manuals. It is impossible to understand Medu Netcher spiritual texts as a mere intellectual, and this is why I am convinced that mainstream Europeans could study this language for next 200 years and never make any real progress.
Advancing the work,
Manu Ampim

---

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoo.com, "cushiite" wrote:

>
> It has come to my attention that the hieroglyphs have never been > deciphered, simply because the Ancient Egyptians were not around to > say what the symbols meant. I am not an Egyptologist, though I have > read much of the information from this group for the past few > years. How do we know what the hieroglyphs say? Would someone like > to clear this up for me?

| 23306|2007-10-07 18:41:18|Manu Ampim|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"? reply Manu|

> Greetings,
>
> Actually, the term /pr-aa/ is used during the pyramid age ("old kingdom") to refer to the palace where the king lived. By the 18th dynasty during the time of Akhenaten the term /pr-aa/ (meaning "Great House") was used to refer to the king himself. This indigneous African term /pr-aa/ was later changed to "pharaoh" during the Greco-Roman era around 300 BCE.
>
> Advancing the work,
>
> Manu Ampim

---

I apologize, I should have been more clear. I meant to say that you won't find the Ta-Merrian Cartouches with the words /pr-aa/ on them. They are almost always used for the name of the king. As you mentioned, pr-aa was used for the palace, but not the leader himself in the old kingdom. Now I haven't come across the term for Akenaten, but I will definitely look for it now for my records. Thanks!

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

---

You are welcome. Here is the information for Akhenaten and the term /pr-aa/.

F.L. Griffith, Hieratic Papyrus from Kahum and Gurob, 38, 17.

Advancing the work,

MA

| 23307|2007-10-08 05:29:14|Peter Kaiza|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|

Nice work! I am amazed at the similarities between african languages and acient egyptian.

For example, water in ancient Egyptian is Miri, in Kiswahili, Maji, in Ruhaya, a niger congo language, aMaizi.!! How can ancient Egypt be a different civilisation other than African?

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

From: egyptology@theunit.fsnet.co.uk

Date: Thu, 4 Oct 2007 16:17:28 +0100

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?

Hi.

I've researched NTR a few years ago and here is a shortened version. Hope it will stimulate some thought

Ferg Somo

---

Play Movie Mash-up and win BIG prizes!

| 23308|2007-10-08 05:31:02|Dexter Harper|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"? for Ferg|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep"

wrote:

>

Peace Bro. Imhotep,

I noticed where you made the correlation between Eshu(Ifa) and Djehuty (Ta-Merri) in terms of priesthood initiation. Correct me if i'm wrong but I was taught that Sobek(Apuat) was the KMTK equivalent to Eshu. It is my understanding that the KMTK symbol of the divine messenger is the crocodile and that Sobek governs communication.

As you and I both know there's been a lot of miseducation in Afrikan spirituality. You have made me aware of such things before so if I am incorrect, please enlighten me. Thanks.

Respectfully,

Sharma Men Ra

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Paul Kekai Manansala

> wrote:

> >

> > And humans too would be the same energy without individual > personalities?

> >

> > Regards,

> > Paul Kekai Manansala

> >

>

> Yes they would. We are getting into another aspect of ancient > Ta-Merrian culture, which is another discussion in of it self. I will > say this, that in traditional African thought, each spirit spark

(the > human being) comes here with a personality type depending on when

and > where they were born. I will give my self as an example to make this > clear. There are various systems across the world that are rooted in > this philosophy and I'm pretty sure you will find this even in your > own lineage.

>

> I was born on July 30, 1979. In "astrology" that would make me a Leo > personality. When you add the numbers up for my birth date and you > reduce the numbers to single digits, the result is the number 9. A > number 9 "life path" is someone who is ultimately supposed to be a > teacher of some sort. One who is an idealist, comforter or counselor.

> So according to "numerology" that is an aspect of my personality type.

> In Ifa it was determined during a reading that my Ori (primary odu, > governing personality type - my head) is "Eshu." My compliment is > "Oshun." The personality types as expressed through various Ifa myths

> are a part of the personality that makes me...me.

>

> In the Dagara system of Burkino Faso, because I was born in a 9-year > (1979) I am a "Mineral" personality. A mineral personality is someone > who is a word-smith, poet, story teller, someone who deals with > helping people to "remember;" in other words a "historian." Since I > was born on Monday, in the Akan system, my personality would be

> "Kodjo/Kojo." All of these are personality traits and "deities."

>

> Most, if not all, African indigenous systems operate along similar > lines. And they use deities to represent the personality types of

the > individual. It is like this; I came to this earth to fulfill a certain > destiny, or complete a job. In order for me to complete that task,

and > learn the lessons I need to learn in this life, the universe has given > to me certain tools or "gifts" that will help me to do my tasks.

>

> So in the case of Ifa, Eshu is a linguist, he is a messenger. The > trait of this person is one who can disseminate information very well

> (a teacher). Eshu shortens the distance between "meaning" and a > person's "understanding." Eshu is the deity that brings sacrifices

and > messages to Odudua. He is the intermediary between man and "god." He > serves the same function as Jesus. And for those who want to research

> more into it, Jesus is yESHUa in the Hebrew. In the Akan system he

is > ayESHU. Another spelling of Eshu is "Esu." So we have even in jESUs -

> Esu. But this is off topic now.

>

> All this to show that the energies have personality types and human > beings, according to the ancients, possess these types. These > personality types are present to help you fulfill your purpose.
>
> For those of you who have ever wondered how did a priest of ancient > Ta-Merri become a priest of Het-Heru or a priest of Djehuty for > example, they operated on the same schema as in Ifa. When you are > born, as mentioned earlier, you are born with a certain personality > type. This is discovered through divination. If you decide to go into

> the priesthood, you would be initiated into that preisthood that > governs your "head" or your primary "odu" (Orisha, Netcher, Abosom, > etc.). So I would be initiated into the priesthood of "Esu." If in > Egypt I would be initiated in the priesthood of Djehuty.

>

> Asar Imhotep

> <http://www.mochasuite.com>

>

| 23309|2007-10-08 06:08:27|asar_imhotep|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"? reply to Sharma|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Dexter Harper" wrote:

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep"

> wrote:

> >

>

> Peace Bro. Imhotep,

>

> I noticed where you made the correlation between Eshu(Ifa) and Djehuty > (Ta-Merri) in terms of priesthood initiation. Correct me if i'm wrong > but I was taught that Sobek(Apuat) was the KMTK equivalent to Eshu.
> It is my understanding that the KMTK symbol of the divine messenger > is the crocodile and that Sobek governs communication.

>

> As you and I both know there's been a lot of miseducation in Afrikan > spirituality. You have made me aware of such things before so if I am > incorrect, please enlighten me. Thanks.

>

>

> Respectfully,

>

> Sharma Men Ra

>

The philosophy in which you seem to mention looks like the work of Ra Un Nfr and the Ausar/Auset society teachings. This isn't based on their teachings. There is more to Esu than I mentioned. The similarities aren't necessarily due to their known "messenger" status, but their function in the body.

Esu is the messenger of the Orisha, Holder of Ashe (power) among the Orisha, he is prime negotiator between negative and positive forces in the body, enforces the "law of being". Helps to enhance the power of herbs. Esu's physical correspondences with the body are: sympathetic nervous system, para sympathetic nervous system.

As mentioned before, the Orishas, Ntrw, Abosom, etc., are masks for principles in nature, especially the functioning the body. Remember the Kemetic proverb, "Know thyself and you will know the Gods!" This is what they were talking about. Know the functions of the body and you will know the Ntrw (the energy) that makes it work.

Djehuty isn't an exact match to Esu. But he serves the same function. He is the intermediary between "God" and "Man." Now think about the "Brain" and how all of the information gets from the brain to the rest of the body. It sends messages through the nervous system. You cannot communicate with the brain unless you go through the Nerves. You cannot get through to "God" unless you go through Djehuty or you go through Esu. The same with jESUs: No one can go to the father except through me...The nerves deal with "information" and "logic." It shouldn't be hard from this point to see the correlations.

As mentioned before, the temples were universities. They performed autopsies there. The Ntrw, on one level, are masks for body parts and some of the myths actually detail how certain aspects of the body works and how to cure disease. All African systems deal primarily with Health. Egypt was no different.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

| 23310|2007-10-08 06:32:51|Dexter Harper|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"? reply to Sharma| Thanks for the quick reply.....

While I am aware that the Ausar-Auset society teaches this correlation, I was actually told this by an Ifa priest after he did a reading for me. I've also read this in the work of other followers of Ifa.

I am not suggesting what you have presented is incorrect, as i am aware of the functions of the deities within the body. I'm just trying to make sure that what was taught to me by this priest is not incorrect.

Respectfully,

Sharma Men Ra

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Dexter Harper" wrote:

> >

> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep"

> > wrote:

> > >

> >

> > Peace Bro. Imhotep,

> >

> > I noticed where you made the correlation between Eshu(Ifa) and

Djehuty

> > (Ta-Merri) in terms of priesthood initiation. Correct me if i'm wrong

> > but I was taught that Sobek(Apuat) was the KMTK equivalent to Eshu.

> > It is my understanding that the KMTK symbol of the divine messenger

> > is the crocodile and that Sobek governs communication.

> >

> > As you and I both know there's been a lot of miseducation in > > spirituality. You have made me aware of such things before so if I am

Afrikan

> > incorrect, please enlighten me. Thanks.

> >

> >

> > Respectfully,

> >

> > Sharma Men Ra

> >

>

>

> The philosophy in which you seem to mention looks like the work of

Ra

> Un Nfr and the Ausar/Auset society teachings. This isn't based on > their teachings. There is more to Esu than I mentioned. The > similarities aren't necessarily due to their known "messenger"

status,

> but their function in the body.

>

> Esu is the messenger of the Orisha, Holder of Ashe (power) among the > Orisha, he is prime negotiator between negative and positive forces

in > the body, enforces the "law of being". Helps to enhance the power of > herbs. Esu's physical correspondences with the body are: sympathetic > nervous system, para sympathetic nervous system.

>

> As mentioned before, the Orishas, Ntrw, Abosom, etc., are masks for > principles in nature, especially the functioning the body. Remember > the Kemetic proverb, "Know thyself and you will know the Gods!" This > is what they were talking about. Know the functions of the body and > you will know the Ntrw (the energy) that makes it work.

>

> Djehuty isn't an exact match to Esu. But he serves the same

function.

> He is the intermediary between "God" and "Man." Now think about the > "Brain" and how all of the information gets from the brain to the rest > of the body. It sends messages through the nervous system. You cannot > communicate with the brain unless you go through the Nerves. You > cannot get through to "God" unless you go through Djehuty or you go > through Esu. The same with jESUs: No one can go to the father except > through me...The nerves deal with "information" and "logic." It > shouldn't be hard from this point to see the correlations.

>

> As mentioned before, the temples were universities. They performed > autopsies there. The Ntrw, on one level, are masks for body parts

and > some of the myths actually detail how certain aspects of the body > works and how to cure disease. All African systems deal primarily

with

> Health. Egypt was no different.

>

> Asar Imhotep

> <http://www.mochasuite.com>

>

| 23311|2007-10-08 06:40:30|Ferg|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"? for Ferg|

Attachments :

Greetings.

Thank you for your well thoughtout analysis of African spirituality. I will certainly takeonboard your ideas when researching further work.

NYAME AKRUMA GOD'S AXE
THE AKAN SYMBOL OF GOD

The AKAN symbol is based on neolithic axe heads, found in the region, and considered by the Akan to be the physical remains of thunderbolts hurled by angry Gods. The Akan would often wear one or more shells as a talisman against lightning strikes (and later as protection against firearms).

However, may I point out that a Flail, third one along, is strictly speaking not a flag. A Flail is an agricultural implement used for threshing grain by hand. It is an implement that uses force just as an axe is used for cutting. In all the three symbols depicting NTR, we observe that the symbols display some form of physical force, violence or strength which have become symbols of domination associated with NTR in predynastic Egypt. The ideas behind the axe as a symbol of divinity is not new, in fact many cultures around the world make use of it as may be seen above. Somo

----- Original Message -----

From: Paul Kekai Manansala

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Sent: Sunday, October 07, 2007 7:14 PM

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Ntr means "ancestors"? for Ferg

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:

>

> Oh and another thing, I think the early depictions of the sign nTr is > actually the Flail (flag). Compare the two and tell me what you think.

>

>

Asar, do you have any explanation as to why the flail would be used to represent the word for "god?"

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23312|2007-10-08 06:43:28|Dexter Harper|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"? for Ferg|
Peace bro. Ferg,

I did receive the work you submitted via email. Thanks.

Sharma Men Ra

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Ferg" wrote:

>

> Greetings.

>

> Thank you for your well thoughtout analysis of African spirituality.
I will certainly take on board your ideas when researching further work.

>

> NYAME AKRUMA GOD'S AXE

>

> THE AKAN SYMBOL OF GOD

>
>
>
> The AKAN symbol is based on neolithic axe heads, found in the region, and considered by the Akan to be the physical remains of thunderbolts hurled by angry Gods. The Akan would often wear one or more shells as a talisman against lightning strikes (and later as protection against firearms).
>
> However, may I point out that a Flail, third one along, is strictly speaking not a flag. A Flail is an agricultural implement used for threshing grain by hand. It is an implement that uses force just as an axe is used for cutting. In all the three symbols depicting NTR, we observe that the symbols display some form of physical force, violence or strength which have become symbols of domination associated with NTR in predynastic Egypt. The ideas behind the axe as a symbol of divinity is not new, in fact many cultures around the world make use of it as may be seen above.
>
> Somo
>
>
> ----- Original Message -----
> From: Paul Kekai Manansala
> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Sent: Sunday, October 07, 2007 7:14 PM
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Ntr means "ancestors"? for Ferg
>
>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:
> >
> > Oh and another thing, I think the early depictions of the sign nTr is > > actually the Flail (flag). Compare the two and tell me what you think.
> >
> >
>
> Asar, do you have any explanation as to why the flail would be used to > represent the word for "god?"
>
> Regards,
> Paul Kekai Manansala
>

| 23313|2007-10-08 09:41:51|elliottandelliottmtg|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|
Manu Ampim,

You may find this article regarding Katheirne Griffis-Greenburg interesting.

Fun with jurisdiction online

March 12, 2003

While discussing how the Internet affects a court's jurisdiction over a person in Civ. Pro this week, we read Griffis v. Luban, 646 N.W.2d 527 (2002 Minn.). In this decision, the Minnesota Supreme Court held that an Alabama court did not have proper jurisdiction over a Minnesota resident whose contacts with Alabama centered around attacking the credentials of an Alabama resident in a series of newsgroup posts (in sci.archaeology). Like most procedure cases, the interesting aspects of the ruling have little to do with the conduct that led to the lawsuit. The question addressed in the Minnesota court ruling deals with personal jurisdiction and the minimum contacts analysis when the contacts only happen through a newsgroup. The fun with a case that stems from possible defamation in a newsgroup is that the posts that led to the lawsuit are easily available through Google's Usenet archive (formerly Dejanews).

Griffis, an adjunct professor instructor at the University of Alabama, sued Marianne Luban in Alabama state court, claiming that Luban's postings to sci.archaeology were defamatory. Some of these posts included: Phoney Egyptologists

Why a person like Katherine Griffis feels she has the right to circumvent all this and simply pluck a degree out of Cracker Jack box in order to lend herself some sort of cachet in a science-oriented newsgroup, is incomprehensible to me. It implies a basic lack of self-confidence that seems odd in such an arrogant individual.

and Griffis Is A Lawyer Now (was Indian Artifacts etc.)
HA HA HA!!!! Now the phoney Egyptologist is a Juris Doctor!!! I'll bet she has several professions in newsgroups all over the Net!

Griffis won a default judgment in Alabama state court (leading to this fun thread in sci.archaeology: A DEFAULT JUDGMENT IS A LOT OF CRAP.) Griffis then sued in Minnesota to enforce the judgment. The trial court and appellate court both found for Griffis and held that the Alabama court had jurisdiction over Luban, so Luban would be forced to pay the $25,000 judgment entered in Alabama.

As the case proceeded through the courts, posters littered sci.archaeology with the smoking ruins of a long-running flame war. For example, Their Smear Campaign Still Continues (1998).

The Minnesota Supreme Court, sitting en banc, reversed and held that the Alabama court had no jurisdiction over Luban, since the main effects of her actions were not directly felt only in Alabama and because she did not explicitly target her actions towards Alabama. This week, the Supreme Court denied hearing the appeal, so the Minnesota Supreme Court's judgment denying jurisdiction stands.

Minnesota will uphold a foreign court exercising personal jurisdiction over a Minnesota citizen when such exercise complies with the foreign state's law providing jurisdiction and the exercise of jurisdiction does not violate the Due Process clause of the US Constitution. The Alabama statute provides for personal jurisdiction over nonresident defendants "to the full extent permitted by due process", so the Minnesota ruling focuses on the due process inquiry. Griffis contended that the Alabama courts had specific jurisdiction over Luban, arising out of the defendant's contacts with Alabama.

The Minnesota Court analyzed this case under the effects test adopted by the Supreme Court in Calder v. Jones, 465 U.S. 783 (1984). The Calder effects test will allow personal jurisdiction over a party whose conduct was expressly aimed at the forum state, knowing that the harmful effects would be felt primarily there and that the defendants would "reasonably anticipate being haled into court." (In Calder, the Court upheld jurisdiction over the defendants, who wrote and edited an allegedly libelous National Enquirer article in Florida about the California activities of the plaintiff, a California resident. Not only did the Enquirer had its largest circulation in California, but Jones's professional activities were centered in California.)

The Minnesota Court adopted the Third Circuit's three-part analysis of the effects test from Imo Industries, Inc. v. Kiekert AG, 155 F.3d 254 (3d Cir. 1998). This test requires the plaintiff to show that: "(1) the defendant committed an intentional tort; (2) the plaintiff felt the brunt of the harm caused by that tort in the forum such that the forum state was the focal point of the plaintiff's injury; and (3) the defendant expressly aimed the tortious conduct at the forum such that the forum state was the focal point of the tortious activity." id. The Minnesota Court focuses on the third prong of the Imo Industries analysis, which requires not just a showing that the defendant committed an intentional tort against the plaintiff, but a showing that the forum was the focal point of the tortious activity.

The conclusion reached by the Minnesota Court, that the evidence does not clearly demonstrate that Luban's statements were expressly aimed at Alabama, is based on the nature of the newsgroup as an ephemeral, non-geographic forum. No matter what effects the sci.archaeology postings had on Griffis's business and professional reputation in Alabama, because they were not specifically targeted towards an Alabama audience, they were not sufficient to establish Alabama as the focal point of the tortious activity. Even though the newsgroup postings could have been read in Alabama, those postings could be read anywhere in the world, which was not sufficient to establish Alabama as the focal point of the activity. Because the newsgroup was based on a subject interest, not a geographical interest, there was no reason to assume that the effects would manifest primarily in Alabama. Unlike in Calder, where the Court found that California represented the center of the entertainment industry, the Minnesota Court finds no such connection between Alabama and Egyptology.

Of course, allegedly libelous posts to a subject-centric newsgroup will probably have more significant negative effects on a person's professional reputation within that specialized field than similar posts to a geographic-centric online discussion forum. However, the victim of libelous statements in an online discussion forum will have to sue in the defendant's home state. Even though this rule forces a victim to litigate in a foreign forum, it keeps a defendant from having to defend lawsuits in foreign forum. If newsgroup contacts were enough to establish personal jurisdiction, defendants would be forced to travel to defend suits of little merit. By forcing plaintiffs to litigate in the defendant's home state, this policy may weed out the less meritorious lawsuits, reduce the number of marginal lawsuits and promote judicial efficiency.

Not only does this case provide an interesting foray into the law of personal jurisdiction, but it also provides an interesting case about interpersonal interactions online. Usenet became particularly bad, but in many online forums, participants fail to treat the others with respect. People feel comfortable saying things to others online that most people would never say to others in person. Perhaps people are inherently nasty, and act less inhibited online because the medium is impersonal and they believe they can get away with being nasty without any bad repercussions. Perhaps they fail to realize that what they post may be archived for future generations to find.

Edited 4/8/2002 to elaborate on the legal analysis. I intend to edit at least once more for clarity and consistency of citations

Posted by Andrew Raff at March 12, 2003 04:45 PM

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Manu Ampim" wrote:

>

> Manu Ampim wrote:

>

> "/niwt/ also has meanings which include a region, district, or country which is clear from various texts."

>

>

> Katherine Griffis-Greenberg wrote:

>

> >Egyptian has specific terms for land designations, and they weren't so vague as to clump them under the single term /niwt/. ...

>

> >/niwt/ is never used as a designation for any of the above terms, as far as I can see. Of course, if you think otherwise, you should be able to give me a citation for this.

>

>

> Well, you should open your eyes more and read the standard texts. It is obvious that you have again fallen short. You boldly claim that /niwt/ is "never [emphasis added] used as a designation for any of the above terms," yet the very source that you have been quoting from in recent posts clearly indicates that you are badly misinformed. You have been quoting Alan Gardiner and yet in response to the issue of the term /niwt/ you conveniently omit the following information. Here is what Gardiner states for /niwt/:

>

> 1. "inhabited region, in [the word] Kmt, 'Egypt' lit. 'the black (land')." Emphasis added.

>

> *Source: Alan Gardiner, Egyptian Grammar (Oxford: Griffith Institute, 1957), 3rd edition, p. 498.

>

>

> 2. In the word /Kmt/ Raymond Faulker gives three examples with the determinative /niwt/ and the translation is consistently "the Black land, Egypt."

>

> *Source: Raymond Faulkner, Concise Dictionary of Middle Egyptian (Oxford: Griffith Institute, 1972), p. 286.

>

>

> 3. /niwt/ is also used as a determinative to indicate the region of "lower heaven" (Source: Gardiner, p. 498).

>

>

> In each of three references that I have cited the determinative /niwt/ is reference to a region, district, or country just as I have informed you earlier. The /niwt/ symbol does not only refer to a "city," and thus you should know that African terms are more complex in meaning than many mainstream westerners can appreciate.

>

> Since you are supposedly working on your Ph.D. in Oxford, it is strange how you could so conveniently overlook two of the basic Egyptology sources, both published in Oxford. I will be more impressed with your titles when you can show more respect for the discipline.

>

> Everyone can see the objective facts that I have provided above, so you should admit that you are wrong and show more caution in your future statements.

>

> Advancing the work,

>

> Prof. Manu Ampim

> Director

> Advancing The Research

> PO Box 18623

> Oakland, CA 94619

> 510-482-5791

> www.ManuAmpim.com

>

> "Primary research is the greatest weapon against the distortion of African culture & history." - MA

>

>

> -----

-----

>

>

>
>
>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Manu Ampim" wrote:
>
>
>> Katherine Griffis-Greenberg wrote:
>
>>> As I was not replying to you, but Mr Mercer, I'm not inclined to >>> think this comment is being directed to me.
>
>
>> He was not asking *you* a question eventhough you took the liberty
> to answer.
>
> Last I understood the discussion group method, _any member_ to this > group can reply to any statement made by another. I pointed out > that 'Luxor' does not mean "the returning," and never has. As for > your "reundant" comment, I had not seen any reply from you at the > time I made my post on the Luxor translation.
>
>> Of course, Waset is consistently described as a "city," but /niwt/
> also has meanings which include a region, district, or country
which > is clear from various texts.<
>
> Actually no, but I gave the citations in the Wb where you can see > this, if you are so inclined.
>
> Egyptian has specific terms for land designations, and they weren't > so vague as to clump them under the single term /niwt/. In the case > of the terms to which you refer, they had several designations, > depending upon context:
>
> 'district/nome' (/qaHt/ (Wb V: 20) or /a/ (Hannig 1999: 280a));
>
> 'region' (/Xnw/ (Wb III: 107), /rwD/ (Hannig 1999:281b),/Snw/(Hannig
> 1999: 283b),/tAS/ (Wb V: 236), /ww/ (Wb I: 243) (foreign > regions), /StA/ (Hannig 1999: 283b), /zATw/ (Hannig 1999:
> 283b), /swAw/ (Wb IV: 62)), and
>
> 'country' (/tA/ (Wb V: 212), /sxt/ (Hannig 1995: 741b), /xAst/> (Hannig 1999: 285a) (foreign land),/SA/ (Hannig 1999: 283b)).

>
 > /niwt/ is never used as a designation for any of the above terms,
 as > far as I can see. Of course, if you think otherwise, you should be > able to give me a citation for this.
 >
 > Reference:
 >
 > Wb = Erman, A. and H. Grapow 1926. _Wörterbuch der Aegyptischen
 > Sprache_. (7 Vols.) Leipzig: J. C. Hinrich.
 >
 > Hannig, R. 1995. _Die Sprache der Pharaonen: Großes Handwörterbuch > ägyptisch-Deutsch (2800 - 950 v. Chr.)_. Kulturegeschichte der > Antiken Welt 64. Mainz: von Zabern.
 >
 > _____. 1999. _Kulturhandbuch ägyptens: Wortschatz der Pharaonen > in Sachgruppen_. Kulturegeschichte der Antiken Welt 72. Mainz: von > Zabern.
 >
 > Katherine Griffis-Greenberg, M. A. (Lon)
 > Member, International Association of Egyptologists
 > ARCE, BANE, EES, ASOR
 >
 > Doctoral Program (Egyptology)
 > Oriental Studies
 > University of Oxford
 > Oxford, United Kingdom
 >
 > <http://www.griffis-consulting.com>
 >
 | 23314|2007-10-08 09:41:54|kungfuhustle|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"? for Ferg|
 Thank you for sharing this worldview Asar.
 I find it very enlightening.

meninarmer

On Sun, 2007-10-07 at 21:15 +0000, asar_imhotep wrote:

> That's what I'm saying. That the term Ntr is applied to multiple > things. That's why I gave the example in the Yoruba system of what I > mean. The main deity is Odudua. One of his praise names is Oludumare.
 >
 > In the name Odudua is the root "odu" which means "container." In the > system of Ifa, "Ifa" is an "Odu." Just like Obatala, Shango, Eshu, > Ogun, etc. They are also called Imales or Orishas. They are > representations of energy concepts in nature. Each of these are > "deities" just like Asar, Aset, Nebet-Het, etc. But also people who > lived exceptional lives in Yoruba culture become Orishas.

>

> They just break down the concepts into separate parts but in essence > they are the same thing. An Odu is just an interpretation of the > energy during a divination reading. "Ifa" is just another name for

> "Orunmila" (witness of fate).

>

> So just as "Ra" or "Ptah/ta" or "Amun/Imn" is the ruler of all Ntrw, > he himself is a "nTr," the same with Odudua as he is the ruler and > creator of all the Odus and Orishas, he himself is an "Odu."

>

> What is confusing for most people is they are still attempting to > think of Ra, Atum, Asar, Aset, Set, Shango, Odudua, Orunmila, Nyame, > etc. as "gods." That's the first mistake. It's not confusing when you > understand those are just the names given for the energy.

>

> Like I said before, you have to understand the underlying theme behind

> African cosmology to understand Kemetic mythology. Everything else > will make sense. Here is a summary -

>

> "In the beginning there was perfection. God in its perfection realized > that it was imperfect because it did not have a means to experience > itself (as there is no motion and no time in perfection). So through > his own mind he/it/she began to cause ideas (as the core of the > universe is mind) to take form and created (in its mind) this thing we > call the universe so it could experience itself."

>

> This is why you will hear African priests say something like, "I am

> God having a human experience." God in a sense is "dreaming" and this > reality isn't "reality" but a dream. So everything you see around you > has at its basis, its core "spirit" or "energy" or "consciousness."

>

> The philosophy is YOU as a human being cannot contemplate or fathom

> the vastness of the creator (since it is an ever expanding, infinite > being). Since our finite minds can't grasp in fullness of the creator, > the only way we can get a hint to what it is and how "it" operates is > to breakdown the creator into smaller parts and study the "energy" > that makes up the varying aspects of the creator. In the process, you > are to show how they all relate and go about bring together a > "synthesis" of ideas for better understanding. This is why so many > stories that originated from all over Africa ended up in the Egyptian > pantheon and incorporated in the various stories of creation. The > temples weren't "temples" but Universities.

>

> So just like in the study of electricity, you have different energy > levels: KHz (kilohertz), Mhz (mega hertz), Ghz (Gigahertz), THz

> (terahertz), etc., In Africa we break down those "energy" levels as

> "Shu, Tefnut, Geb, Nut, Set, Asar, Ra, etc.). Science will tell you > that all things in the universe is "energy;" just energy at "different > concentrations." Well African people have always held this philosophy > and created complex ways of teaching how these "energy" forces > interact with each other. And a human being is a form of "energy."
>
> Africans understood first the concept that energy cannot be created > nor destroyed: it can only CHANGE FORM. So you have living human being > energy, after death, turning into "ancestor" energy or that energy is > absorbed and redirected to another form of energy on the planet > (trees, water, rocks, rivers, animals, etc.).
>
> So as you can see, they are speaking about the same thing whether we > say Ra or Imhotep: it is all "energy" and this is the key to > understanding African mythology. It's a study of science and how > different concentrations of energy interact with each other. They are > not individual "personalities" but aspects of the same body we call > "the creator." Just like I have my body that makes me...me. But my > body consist of Arms, legs, stomach, knees, neck, back, bones, blood, > cells, water, etc.
>
> Instead of calling my arms...arms, I call it Knum, and my back Asar.
> And I create a story to help you better memorize how they work > together. All Egyptian myths dealt with health, science and astronomy.
> The temples were used as autopsy rooms to study the insides of the > body. This is the EXACT same process with the Orishas in Yoruba land > and the Abosom with the Akan. Sorry for being long, but there is no > other way around it. This is the basis of all African myths.
>
> Asar Imhotep
> <http://www.mochasuite.com>
>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Paul Kekai Manansala
> wrote:
>
>
> > Asar, don't the ntr have individual personalities?
> >
> > I mean for example, Ra, Ptah, etc. Of course, these ntr could also > be viewed as ancestors.
> >
> > Regards,
> > Paul Kekai Manansala
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >

>

>

>

| 23315|2007-10-08 12:21:26|neseret|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Manu Ampim" wrote:

>

> Manu Ampim wrote:

>

> "/niwt/ also has meanings which include a region, district, or country which is clear from various texts."

>

>

> Katherine Griffis-Greenberg wrote:

>

> >Egyptian has specific terms for land designations, and they weren't so vague as to clump them under the single term /niwt/. ...

>

> >/niwt/ is never used as a designation for any of the above terms,

as far as I can see. Of course, if you think otherwise, you should be > able to give me a citation for this.

>

>

> Well, you should open your eyes more and read the standard texts.

It is obvious that you have again fallen short. You boldly claim that /niwt/ is "never [emphasis added] used as a designation for any of the above terms," yet the very source that you have been quoting from in recent posts clearly indicates that you are badly misinformed. You have been quoting Alan Gardiner and yet in response to the issue of the term /niwt/ you conveniently omit the following information. Here is what Gardiner states for /niwt/:

>

> 1. "inhabited region, in [the word] Kmt, 'Egypt' lit. 'the black

(land')." Emphasis added.

>

> *Source: Alan Gardiner, Egyptian Grammar (Oxford: Griffith

Institute, 1957), 3rd edition, p. 498.

>

> 2. In the word /Kmt/ Raymond Faulker gives three examples with the determinative /niwt/ and the translation is consistently "the Black land, Egypt."

>

> *Source: Raymond Faulkner, Concise Dictionary of Middle Egyptian

(Oxford: Griffith Institute, 1972), p. 286.

I see where you are making your error now. You are assuming that Glyph O49 = /niwt/; it doesn't. O49 the determinative for the term /niwt/, but it is not translatable as /niwt/. O49 is an ideogram, which is what we usually call a determinative - that is, it signifies/enhances the word, or as a term associated with it (such as the mountain range glyph (N25) signifying sandy lands as deserts or foreign lands; the /pt/ (N1) glyph signifying the sky, etc.)

So, O49 is associated with any inhabited area, such as towns, villages, countries, etc., but it does not have a phonetic value, and in specific, it does not translate as /niwt/. Gardiner, at p. 498 (your citation, mind you), clearly says this.

In fact, your own example of the O49 usage in /kmt/ also proves there is not phonetic translation of O49 as /niwt/, for IF O49 = /niwt/ then would I not translate I6-G17-X1:O49 (/kmt/) as /kmt-niwt/? Yet I know of NO dictionary in ancient Egyptian which does this, and neither do you, as you have aptly shown.

> 3. /niwt/ is also used as a determinative to indicate the region of "lower heaven" (Source: Gardiner, p. 498).

Which has a reading of /nnt/ + the inverted /pt/ (lower sky sign) + O49. Read Gardiner's note 1 at O49, p. 498, that a reading of /N(iw)t/ is uncertain, but that a reading of /nnt/ is more likely. The sign is here surely used as phonogram (nw), normally indicated by the glyph W24. So the reading here is 'lower heaven' as /nn(w)t/ (Wb II, 213). This is also indicated in Faulkner at p. 134. See also the other writings for this same term using double M22 = /nn(t)/. Hannig (2000: 892b) shows the same term as /nnwt/, but corrects the O49 sign to 3 W24 glyphs, which is the usual spelling of the term "lower sky", sometimes translated as 'Naunet'.

> In each of three references that I have cited the determinative /niwt/ is reference to a region, district, or country just as I have informed you earlier. The /niwt/ symbol does not only refer to a "city," and thus you should know that African terms are more complex in meaning than many mainstream westerners can appreciate.

Seeing that you made such a glaring error as I noted above that you seem to think that O49 = /niwt/, I feel your ability to lecture me on the topic of ancient Egyptian is a bit premature.

> Since you are supposedly working on your Ph.D. in Oxford, it is strange how you could so conveniently overlook two of the basic Egyptology sources, both published in Oxford. I will be more impressed with your titles when you can show more respect for the discipline.<

I'll be more impressed when you in fact can learn to read and discern that the O49 ideogram does not have a phonetic value of /niwt/, and know this since _the author specifically tells you this in the very description_ to which you refer me.

You see, I can actually read and _understand_ what Gardiner says in his explanations, which is something you cannot seem to do, as no first year ancient Egyptian student at Oxford, or anywhere else, would make such an error concerning O49 being a determinative, and not a word (and survive).

> Everyone can see the objective facts that I have provided above, so you should admit that you are wrong and show more caution in your future statements.<

Why should I admit I am wrong when I can show quite convincingly in this case it is YOU who cannot read simple English text at p. 498 in which Gardiner explains O49 as a determinative?

I think that anyone who wants to bother to get a copy of Gardiner's _Egyptian Grammar_ (1982 (1957)), or even Allen's _Middle Egyptian_ (2000: 439) can see that O49 is merely a determinative, not a meaning of /niwt/. Perhaps you should show more caution is attempting to correct me and then have it backfire upon you.

> Advancing the work,
>
> Prof. Manu Ampim
> Director
> Advancing The Research
> PO Box 18623
> Oakland, CA 94619
> 510-482-5791

> www.ManuAmpim.com

I daresay that you cannot be adequately "advancing the work" when you cannot read the clear and simple explanation Gardiner gives about O49 at p. 498, and somehow miss the _entire point_ that O49 is a determinative/ideogram and not a word (i.e., /niwt/).

I stand by my original comments about /niwt/ _not_ meaning the same as "district/nome, region, country", and as a colloquial name for the city of Thebes in ancient Egyptian.

Reference:

Wb = Erman, A. and H. Grapow 1926. _Wörterbuch der Aegyptischen Sprache_. (7 Vols.) Leipzig: J. C. Hinrich.

Allen, J. P. 2000. _Middle Egyptian: An Introduction to the Language and Culture of Hieroglyphs_. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

Gardiner, A. H. 1982 (1957). _Egyptian Grammar: Being an Introduction to the Study of Hieroglyphs_. Oxford: Griffith Institute.

Hannig, R. 2000. _Die Sprache der Pharaonen: Großes Handwörterbuch Deutsch-ägyptisch (2800 - 950 v. Chr.)_. Kulturegeschichte der Antiken Welt 86. Mainz: von Zabern.

Katherine Griffis-Greenberg, M. A. (Lon)
Member, International Association of Egyptologists
ARCE, BANE, EES, ASOR

Doctoral Program (Egyptology)
Oriental Studies
University of Oxford
Oxford, United Kingdom

<http://www.griffis-consulting.com>

| 23316|2007-10-08 16:18:49|asar_imhotep|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"? for Ferg|
--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Ferg" wrote:

> The AKAN symbol is based on neolithic axe heads, found in the region, and considered by the Akan to be the physical remains of thunderbolts hurled by angry Gods. The Akan would often wear one or more shells as a talisman against lightning strikes (and later as protection against firearms).

>

> However, may I point out that a Flail, third one along, is strictly speaking not a flag. A Flail is an agricultural implement used for threshing grain by hand. It is an implement that uses force

just as an axe is used for cutting. In all the three symbols depicting NTR, we observe that the symbols display some form of physical force, violence or strength which have become symbols of domination associated with NTR in predynastic Egypt. The ideas behind the axe as a symbol of divinity is not new, in fact many cultures around the world make use of it as may be seen above.

>

> Somo

>

>

Peace

I am not saying the "flail" and what Hornung deems as a "flag" are the same thing. I am saying that the first sign for /nTr/ doesn't look anything like an axe and I don't think it was. Later on in the early dynastic period did it take on the form of "B" and then later "A." I have never seen an axe that has flimzy parts like figure "C."

However, when looking at other relics of Ta-Merrian culture, what it does resemble is what Egyptologists call the "flail" that you see depictions of Ntrw carrying and what "pharaohs" were buried with. Both of the figures consist of a poll with 3 distinct, loose extensions at the head. This is not the case with figure "A" below. As we can tell as time went on, they got more elaborate with the design as can be seen by the second picture of Ptah below. If you look at this version of "flail" on the Tutankhamen figure below, you will notice the general shape of the /nTrw/ symbol with out the 3 loose extensions. But it has a slight angle on the flail while the general nTr sign is straight.

This is why I'm suggesting that what they call a "flail" and what Hornung calls a "Flag" isn't either, but represents some practical item in which they used to represent Ntrw. As time went on they could have just altered the design to what we see now. Kmtjw people have various ways of relating the same concept using different signs. And slight alterations to a sign to represent the same entities in different forms. For instance, the sign for Aset (the throne) is the same sign for Nebet-het. Nebet-Het's throne is just upside down. Amsu Min is Amun manifesting as Heru in another form. Djehuty is represented by the Ibis bird and the Baboon. All of this to remind us that we can't get caught up in thinking that Kemetic people only used one sign or deity to represent the same concept or deity.

Here is another Ta-Merri - Bantu connection worth exploring

Bes

Nkondi statue (diploma) given when an initiate has completed his/her initiation (Nganga)

What many of you may not know is that the way a figure is situated (where the hands are located) in African artwork denotes what level or what particular priesthood someone belongs to.

Those of you who are Masons or in a Greek Lettered Fraternal organization should know what I'm talking about. The positions are like "grips" to those in the various crafts. So think about that when you look at carvings on tomb walls with Kemetic priests standing a certain way with their arms in a certain position.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

| 23317|2007-10-08 21:12:14|Manu Ampim|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|

Your post shows a profound misrepresentation of the Medu Netcher glyph /niwt/. Before I comment on your current misrepresentation, keep in mind that I have taught and instructed you on a long list of issues on this public forum since October 2001. You conveniently have a short memory.

For example, I have consistently shown that you made erroneous and false statements regarding the images in the tomb of Meresankh III, the Table of Nations scene in the tomb of Ramses III, the joint statue from the tomb of Ikhetneb, the images of Seti I, Cheikh Anta Diop, and other issues. In each case, you either admitted that you were wrong, or you conveniently disappeared from the discussion after I showed objective images to expose your false statements and nonsense. After having your misinformation exposed, you tend to disappear for weeks or months as was the case with the Tomb of Ramses III. You then come out again when it is safe. You only run away when your positions and statements have been objectively destroyed with visual evidence. Of course, you would like to deny these facts but this forum has stored ALL of the posts as a permanent record for years in the future, so that no one can lie and claim that these events did not occur.

You state:

So, O49 is associated with _any inhabited area_, such as towns, villages, countries, etc., but it does not have a phonetic value, and in specific, it does not translate as /niwt/. Gardiner, at p. 498 (your citation, mind you), clearly says this.

Your statement is blatantly false. Your comments on Gardiner's O49 crossroads symbol /niwt/ show that you have badly misread his comments and the examples provided by Faulkner. On page 498 Gardiner CLEARLY states that the crossroads symbol in question is pronounced as "niwt." This is plain as day. The phonetic value is "niwt" when the symbol is used LITERALLY. Apparently, you don't understand the meaning of the literal stroke beneath the symbol, and this is sad. [I invite all forum members to see the objective facts which show the various uses of the O49 symbol on page 498 in Gardiner's book.]

Initially, the question was asked about the meaning of the place name "Luxor," and in this discussion of place names you jumped in and mentioned /niwt/ as meaning "city." I then informed you that /niwt/ does not only refer to a "city," but it is also used to connote a particular district, region, or country. I was referring to this symbol as a *determinative.* It is used as a determinative in the place name Waset (indicating a "city" in this instance), but it is also used as a determinative in regards to a district, region, or country as I indicated earlier. I gave these clear examples to support my statement:

1. "inhabited region, in [the word] Kmt, 'Egypt' lit. 'the black (land')." Emphasis added.

*Source: Alan Gardiner, Egyptian Grammar (Oxford: Griffith Institute, 1957), 3rd edition, p. 498.

2. In the word /Kmt/ Raymond Faulker gives three examples with the determinative /niwt/ and the translation is consistently "the Black land, Egypt."

*Source: Raymond Faulkner, Concise Dictionary of Middle Egyptian (Oxford: Griffith Institute, 1972), p. 286.

3. /niwt/ is also used as a determinative to indicate the region of "lower heaven" (Source: Gardiner, p. 498).

Unfortunately, you fumbled through these examples and grossly misrepresented Gardiner and Faulkner. Both writers are showing examples of the O49 /niwt/ symbol in a context beyond a mere "city." Apparently, you don't understand that when the O49 crossroads (pronounced "niwt") is used LITERALLY (with one stroke underneath the sign) it usually means "village" or "city" and it is pronounced as "niwt," but it is also used as a DETERMINATIVE (or ideogram) at the end of place names, as I demonstrated in the three examples above.

"Kemet" for example is the name of the country and it is *always* written with the /niwt/ symbol as its determinative at the end. It is the /niwt/ symbol which gives "Kemet" its meaning as a COUNTRY. If you don't understand this basic fact, then you won't comprehend too much else about /niwt/. Pick up a dictionary and look up the words "determinative" and "literal" in a linguistic context, because the same term /niwt/ is used in both ways. According to your faulty logic, Kemet would be a "city" instead of a country. The use of /niwt/ is varied and to deny this fact is ridiculous. Anybody can see that this crossroads symbol is pronounced "niwt," and the meaning it gives to a place name can be city, district, region, or country as I said in the beginning. The three above examples clearly show the flexibility of this symbol, which refers to various places of habitation and not simply a "city" as you erroneously claim.

Before you continue to try and arrogantly instruct members of this forum on Medu Netcher, you need to go back and learn the use of determinatives (ideograms) in words with group symbols, which is LESSON II in Gardiner's work.

It is a shame that you are the only person on this forum who arrogantly post titles and indicate that you are a Ph.D. student, and yet you can't comprehend a basic undergraduate lesson on /niwt/! I should bill you for this and all the previous lessons I gave you on tomb art and statues.

Advancing the work,

Prof. Manu Ampim

African American Studies

Meritt College

Oakland, CA 94619

www.ManuAmpim.com

---

> Manu Ampim wrote:

>

> "/niwt/

also has meanings which include a region, district, or country which is clear from various texts."

>

>

> Katherine Griffis-Greenberg

wrote:

>

> >Egyptian has specific terms for land designations,
and they weren't so vague as to clump them under the single term /niwt/. ...

>

> >/niwt/ is never used as a designation for any of the above terms,

as far as I can see. Of course, if you think otherwise, you should be > able to give me a citation for this.

>

>

>

Well, you should open your eyes more and read the standard texts.
It is obvious that you have again fallen short. You boldly claim that /niwt/ is "never [emphasis added] used as a designation for any of the above terms," yet the very source that you have been quoting from in recent posts clearly indicates that you are badly misinformed. You have been quoting Alan Gardiner and yet in response to the issue of the term /niwt/ you conveniently omit the following information. Here is what Gardiner states for /niwt/:

>

> 1. "inhabited region, in [the word] Kmt, 'Egypt' lit.
'the black
(land')." Emphasis added.

>

> *Source: Alan Gardiner, Egyptian Grammar (Oxford: Griffith Institute, 1957), 3rd edition, p. 498.

>

> 2. In the word /Kmt/ Raymond Faulker gives three examples with the determinative /niwt/ and the translation is consistently "the Black land, Egypt."

>

> *Source: Raymond Faulkner, Concise Dictionary of Middle Egyptian
(Oxford: Griffith Institute, 1972), p. 286.

I see where you are making your error now. You are assuming that Glyph O49 = /niwt/; it doesn't. O49 the determinative for the term /niwt/, but it is not translatable as /niwt/. O49 is an ideogram, which is what we usually call a determinative - that is, it signifies/enhances the word, or as a term associated with it (such as the mountain range glyph (N25) signifying sandy lands as deserts or foreign lands; the /pt/ (N1) glyph signifying the sky,etc.)

So, O49 is associated with _any inhabited area_, such as towns, villages, countries, etc., but it does not have a phonetic value, and in specific, it does not translate as /niwt/. Gardiner, at p. 498 (your citation, mind you), clearly says this.

In fact, your own example of the O49 usage in /kmt/ also proves there is not phonetic translation of O49 as /niwt/, for IF O49 = /niwt/ then would I not translate I6-G17-X1:O49 (/kmt/) as /kmt-niwt/? Yet I know of NO dictionary in ancient Egyptian which does this, and neither do you, as you have aptly shown.

> 3. /niwt/ is also used as a determinative to indicate the region of "lower heaven" (Source: Gardiner, p. 498).

Which has a reading of /nnt/ + the inverted /pt/ (lower sky sign) + O49. Read Gardiner's note 1 at O49, p. 498, that a reading of /N(iw)t/ is uncertain, but that a reading of /nnt/ is more likely. The sign is here surely used as phonogram (nw), normally indicated by the glyph W24. So the reading here is 'lower heaven' as /nn(w)t/ (Wb II, 213). This is also indicated in Faulkner at p. 134. See also the other writings for this same term using double M22 = /nn(t)/. Hannig (2000: 892b) shows the same term as /nnwt/, but corrects the O49 sign to 3 W24 glyphs, which is the usual spelling of the term "lower sky", sometimes translated as 'Naunet'.

> In each of three references that I have cited the determinative /niwt/ is reference to a region, district, or country just as I have informed you earlier. The /niwt/ symbol does not only refer to a "city," and thus you should know that African terms are more complex in meaning than many mainstream westerners can appreciate.

Seeing that you made such a glaring error as I noted above that you seem to think that O49 = /niwt/, I feel your ability to lecture me on the topic of ancient Egyptian is a bit premature.

>

Since you are supposedly working on your Ph.D. in Oxford, it is strange how you could so conveniently overlook two of the basic Egyptology sources, both published in Oxford. I will be more impressed with your titles when you can show more respect for the discipline.<

I'll be more impressed when you in fact can learn to read and discern that the O49 ideogram does not have a phonetic value of /niwt/, and know this since _the author specifically tells you this in the very description_ to which you refer me.

You see, I can actually read and _understand_ what Gardiner says in his explanations, which is something you cannot seem to do, as no first year ancient Egyptian student at Oxford, or anywhere else, would make such an error concerning O49 being a determinative, and not a word (and survive).

> Everyone can see the objective facts that I have provided above, so you should admit that you are wrong and show more caution in your future statements.<

Why should I admit I am wrong when I can show quite convincingly in this case it is YOU who cannot read simple English text at p. 498 in which Gardiner explains O49 as a determinative?

I think that anyone who wants to bother to get a copy of Gardiner's _Egyptian Grammar_ (1982 (1957)), or even Allen's _Middle Egyptian_ (2000: 439) can see that O49 is merely a determinative, not a meaning of /niwt/. Perhaps you should show more caution is attempting to correct me and then have it backfire upon you.

> Advancing the work,
>
> Prof. Manu
Ampim
> Director
> Advancing The Research
> PO Box
18623
> Oakland, CA 94619
> 510-482-5791
>
www.ManuAmpim.com

I daresay that you cannot be adequately "advancing the work" when you cannot read the clear and simple explanation Gardiner gives about O49 at p. 498, and somehow miss the _entire point_ that O49 is a determinative/ideogram and not a word (i.e., /niwt/).

I stand by my original comments about /niwt/ _not_ meaning the same as "district/nome, region, country", and as a colloquial name for the city of Thebes in ancient Egyptian.

Reference:

Wb = Erman, A. and H. Grapow 1926. Wörterbuch der Aegyptischen Sprache. (7 Vols.) Leipzig: J. C. Hinrich.

Allen, J. P. 2000. Middle Egyptian: An Introduction to the Language and Culture of Hieroglyphs. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

Gardiner, A. H. 1982 (1957). Egyptian Grammar: Being an Introduction to the Study of Hieroglyphs. Oxford: Griffith Institute.

Hannig, R. 2000. Die Sprache der Pharaonen: Großes Handwörterbuch Deutsch-ägyptisch (2800 - 950 v. Chr.). Kulturegeschichte der Antiken Welt 86. Mainz: von Zabern.

Katherine Griffis-Greenberg, M. A. (Lon)
Member, International Association of Egyptologists
ARCE, BANE, EES, ASOR

Doctoral Program (Egyptology)
Oriental Studies
University of Oxford
Oxford, United Kingdom

"Primary research is the greatest weapon against the distortion of African culture & history." -
MA

| 23318|2007-10-08 22:37:33|Manu Ampim|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|

Thank you. This case already came up on this forum in March 2004 because when Griffis-Greenburg only held a bachelor's degree (received her M.A. in 2002) she was projecting herself on this forum as a well-established "Egyptologist" (although she said that this was not her intentions), and she felt at liberty to dismiss the credentials of Dr. Cheikh Anta Diop, Dr. Ben, and Dr. Theophile Obenga, etc.

Advancing the work,
MA

---

In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "elliottandelliottmtg" wrote:
Manu Ampim,

You may find this article regarding Katherine Griffis-Greenburg interesting.

Fun with jurisdiction online
March 12, 2003

While discussing how the Internet affects a court's jurisdiction over a person in Civ. Pro this week, we read Griffis v. Luban, 646 N.W.2d 527 (2002 Minn.). In this decision, the Minnesota Supreme Court held that an Alabama court did not have proper jurisdiction over a Minnesota resident whose contacts with Alabama centered around attacking the credentials of an Alabama resident in a series of newsgroup posts (in sci.archaeology). Like most procedure cases, the interesting aspects of the ruling have little to do with the conduct that led to the lawsuit. The question addressed in the Minnesota court ruling deals with personal jurisdiction and the minimum contacts analysis when the contacts only happen through a newsgroup. The fun with a case that stems from possible defamation in a newsgroup is that the posts that led to the lawsuit are easily available through Google's Usenet archive (formerly Dejanews).

Griffis, an adjunct professor instructor at the University of Alabama, sued Marianne Luban in Alabama state court, claiming that Luban's postings to sci.archaeology were defamatory. Some of these posts included: Phoney Egyptologists

Why a person like Katherine Griffis feels she has the right to circumvent all this and simply pluck a degree out of Cracker Jack box in order to lend herself some sort of cachet in a science-oriented newsgroup, is incomprehensible to me. It implies a basic lack of self-confidence that seems odd in such an arrogant individual. and Griffis Is A Lawyer Now (was Indian Artifacts etc.) HA HA HA!!!! Now the phoney Egyptologist is a Juris Doctor!!! I'll bet she has several professions in newsgroups all over the Net!

Griffis won a default judgment in Alabama state court (leading to this fun thread in sci.archaeology: A DEFAULT JUDGMENT IS A LOT OF CRAP.) Griffis then sued in Minnesota to enforce the judgment. The trial court and appellate court both found for Griffis and held that the Alabama court had jurisdiction over Luban, so Luban would be forced to pay the $25,000 judgment entered in Alabama.

As the case proceeded through the courts, posters littered sci.archaeology with the smoking ruins of a long-running flame war. For example, Their Smear Campaign Still Continues (1998).

The Minnesota Supreme Court, sitting en banc, reversed and held that the Alabama court had no jurisdiction over Luban, since the main effects of her actions were not directly felt only in Alabama and because she did not explicitly target her actions towards Alabama. This week, the Supreme Court denied hearing the appeal, so the Minnesota Supreme Court's judgment denying jurisdiction stands.

Minnesota will uphold a foreign court exercising personal jurisdiction over a Minnesota citizen when such exercise complies with the foreign state's law providing jurisdiction and the exercise of jurisdiction does not violate the Due Process clause of the US Constitution. The Alabama statute provides for personal jurisdiction over nonresident defendants "to the full extent permitted by due process", so the Minnesota ruling focuses on the due process inquiry. Griffis contended that the Alabama courts had specific jurisdiction over Luban, arising out of the defendant's contacts with Alabama.

The Minnesota Court analyzed this case under the effects test adopted by the Supreme Court in Calder v. Jones, 465 U.S. 783 (1984). The Calder effects test will allow personal jurisdiction over a party whose conduct was expressly aimed at the forum state, knowing that the harmful effects would be felt primarily there and that the defendants would "reasonably anticipate being haled into court." (In Calder, the Court upheld jurisdiction over the defendants, who wrote and edited an allegedly libelous National Enquirer article in Florida about the California activities of the plaintiff, a California resident. Not only did the Enquirer have its largest circulation in California, but Jones's professional activities were centered in California.)

The Minnesota Court adopted the Third Circuit's three-part analysis of the effects test from Imo Industries, Inc. v. Kiekert AG, 155 F.3d 254 (3d Cir. 1998). This test requires the plaintiff to show that: "(1) the defendant committed an intentional tort; (2) the plaintiff felt the brunt of the harm caused by that tort in the forum such that the forum state was the focal point of the plaintiff's injury; and (3) the defendant expressly aimed the tortious conduct at the forum such that the forum state was the focal point of the tortious activity." id. The Minnesota Court focuses on the third prong of the Imo Industries analysis, which requires not just a showing that the defendant committed an intentional tort against the plaintiff, but a showing that the forum was the focal point of the tortious activity.

The conclusion reached by the Minnesota Court, that the evidence does not clearly demonstrate that Luban's statements were expressly aimed at Alabama, is based on the nature of the newsgroup as an ephemeral, non-geographic forum. No matter what effects the sci.archaeology postings had on Griffis's business and professional reputation in Alabama, because they were not specifically targeted towards an Alabama audience, they were not sufficient to establish Alabama as the focal point of the tortious activity. Even though the newsgroup postings could have been read in Alabama, those postings could be read anywhere in the world, which was not sufficient to establish Alabama as the focal point of the activity. Because the newsgroup was based on a subject interest, not a geographical interest, there was no reason to assume that the effects would manifest primarily in Alabama. Unlike in Calder, where the Court found that California represented the center of the entertainment industry, the Minnesota Court finds no such connection between Alabama and Egyptology.

Of course, allegedly libelous posts to a subject-centric newsgroup will probably have more significant negative effects on a person's professional reputation within that specialized field than similar posts to a geographic-centric online discussion forum. However, the victim of libelous statements in an online discussion forum will have to sue in the defendant's home state. Even though this rule forces a victim to litigate in a foreign forum, it keeps a defendant from having to defend lawsuits in foreign forum. If newsgroup contacts were enough to establish personal jurisdiction, defendants would be forced to travel to defend suits of little merit. By forcing plaintiffs to litigate in the defendant's home state, this policy may weed out the less meritorious lawsuits, reduce the number of marginal lawsuits and promote judicial efficiency.

Not only does this case provide an interesting foray into the law of personal jurisdiction, but it also provides an interesting case about interpersonal interactions online. Usenet became particularly bad, but in many online forums, participants fail to treat the others with respect. People feel comfortable saying things to others online that most people would never say to others in person. Perhaps people are inherently nasty, and act less inhibited online because the medium is impersonal and they believe they can get away with being nasty without any bad repercussions. Perhaps they fail to realize that what they post may be archived for future generations to find.

Edited 4/8/2002 to elaborate on the legal analysis. I intend to edit at least once more for clarity and consistency of citations

Posted by Andrew Raff at March 12, 2003 04:45 PM

| 23319|2007-10-08 23:53:08|Ferg|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|

Neseret.

You have not made any input on the subject discussing the symbol of divinity NTR. I wonder why? What are your opinions on the subject from your end.

Ferg Somo

----- Original Message -----

From: neseret

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Sent: Monday, October 08, 2007 8:21 PM

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, "Manu Ampim" wrote:

>

> Manu Ampim wrote:

>

> "/niwt/ also has meanings which include a region, district, or country which is clear from various texts."

>

>

> Katherine Griffis-Greenberg wrote:

>

> >Egyptian has specific terms for land designations, and they weren't so vague as to clump them under the single term /niwt/. ...

>

> >/niwt/ is never used as a designation for any of the above terms, as far as I can see. Of course, if you think otherwise, you should be > able to give me a citation for this.

>

>

> Well, you should open your eyes more and read the standard texts. It is obvious that you have again fallen short. You boldly claim that /niwt/ is "never [emphasis added] used as a designation for any of the above terms," yet the very source that you have been quoting from in recent posts clearly indicates that you are badly misinformed. You have been quoting Alan Gardiner and yet in response to the issue of the term /niwt/ you conveniently omit the following information. Here is what Gardiner states for /niwt/:

>

> 1. "inhabited region, in [the word] Kmt, 'Egypt' lit. 'the black (land')." Emphasis added.

>

> *Source: Alan Gardiner, Egyptian Grammar (Oxford: Griffith Institute, 1957), 3rd edition, p. 498.

>

> 2. In the word /Kmt/ Raymond Faulker gives three examples with the determinative /niwt/ and the translation is consistently "the Black land, Egypt."

>

> *Source: Raymond Faulkner, Concise Dictionary of Middle Egyptian (Oxford: Griffith Institute, 1972), p. 286.

I see where you are making your error now. You are assuming that Glyph O49 = /niwt/; it doesn't. O49 the determinative for the term /niwt/, but it is not translatable as /niwt/. O49 is an ideogram, which is what we usually call a determinative - that is, it signifies/enhances the word, or as a term associated with it (such as the mountain range glyph (N25) signifying sandy lands as deserts or foreign lands; the /pt/ (N1) glyph signifying the sky, etc.)

So, O49 is associated with any inhabited area, such as towns, villages, countries, etc., but it does not have a phonetic value, and in specific, it does not translate as /niwt/. Gardiner, at p. 498 (your citation, mind you), clearly says this.

In fact, your own example of the O49 usage in /kmt/ also proves there is not phonetic translation of O49 as /niwt/, for IF O49 = /niwt/ then would I not translate I6-G17-X1:O49 (/kmt/) as /kmt-niwt/? Yet I know of NO dictionary in ancient Egyptian which does this, and neither do you, as you have aptly shown.

> 3. /niwt/ is also used as a determinative to indicate the region of "lower heaven" (Source: Gardiner, p. 498).

Which has a reading of /nnt/ + the inverted /pt/ (lower sky sign) +

O49. Read Gardiner's note 1 at O49, p. 498, that a reading of /N(iw) t/ is uncertain, but that a reading of /nnt/ is more likely. The sign is here surely used as phonogram (nw), normally indicated by the glyph W24. So the reading here is 'lower heaven' as /nn(w)t/ (Wb II, 213). This is also indicated in Faulkner at p. 134. See also the other writings for this same term using double M22 = /nn(t)/. Hannig (2000: 892b) shows the same term as /nnwt/, but corrects the O49 sign to 3 W24 glyphs, which is the usual spelling of the term "lower sky", sometimes translated as 'Naunet'.

> In each of three references that I have cited the determinative /niwt/ is reference to a region, district, or country just as I have informed you earlier. The /niwt/ symbol does not only refer to a "city," and thus you should know that African terms are more complex in meaning than many mainstream westerners can appreciate.

Seeing that you made such a glaring error as I noted above that you seem to think that O49 = /niwt/, I feel your ability to lecture me on the topic of ancient Egyptian is a bit premature.

> Since you are supposedly working on your Ph.D. in Oxford, it is strange how you could so conveniently overlook two of the basic Egyptology sources, both published in Oxford. I will be more impressed with your titles when you can show more respect for the discipline.<

I'll be more impressed when you in fact can learn to read and discern that the O49 ideogram does not have a phonetic value of /niwt/, and know this since _the author specifically tells you this in the very description_ to which you refer me.

You see, I can actually read and _understand_ what Gardiner says in his explanations, which is something you cannot seem to do, as no first year ancient Egyptian student at Oxford, or anywhere else, would make such an error concerning O49 being a determinative, and not a word (and survive).

> Everyone can see the objective facts that I have provided above, so you should admit that you are wrong and show more caution in your future statements.<

Why should I admit I am wrong when I can show quite convincingly in this case it is YOU who cannot read simple English text at p. 498 in which Gardiner explains O49 as a determinative?

I think that anyone who wants to bother to get a copy of Gardiner's Egyptian Grammar (1982 (1957)), or even Allen's Middle Egyptian (2000: 439) can see that O49 is merely a determinative, not a meaning of /niwt/. Perhaps you should show more caution is attempting to correct me and then have it backfire upon you.

> Advancing the work,
>
> Prof. Manu Ampim
> Director
> Advancing The Research
> PO Box 18623
> Oakland, CA 94619
> 510-482-5791
> www.ManuAmpim.com

I daresay that you cannot be adequately "advancing the work" when you cannot read the clear and simple explanation Gardiner gives about O49 at p. 498, and somehow miss the entire point that O49 is a determinative/ ideogram and not a word (i.e., /niwt/).

I stand by my original comments about /niwt/ not meaning the same as "district/nome, region, country", and as a colloquial name for the city of Thebes in ancient Egyptian.

Reference:

Wb = Erman, A. and H. Grapow 1926. Wörterbuch der Aegyptischen Sprache. (7 Vols.) Leipzig: J. C. Hinrich.

Allen, J. P. 2000. Middle Egyptian: An Introduction to the Language and Culture of Hieroglyphs. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

Gardiner, A. H. 1982 (1957). Egyptian Grammar: Being an Introduction to the Study of Hieroglyphs. Oxford: Griffith Institute.

Hannig, R. 2000. Die Sprache der Pharaonen: Großes Handwörterbuch Deutsch-ägyptisch (2800 - 950 v. Chr.). Kulturegeschichte der Antiken Welt 86. Mainz: von Zabern.

Katherine Griffis-Greenberg, M. A. (Lon)
Member, International Association of Egyptologists
ARCE, BANE, EES, ASOR

Doctoral Program (Egyptology)
Oriental Studies

University of Oxford
Oxford, United Kingdom

<http://www.griffis-consulting.com>

| 23320|2007-10-09 06:41:22|Wayne Owens|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|

"I should bill you for this and all the previous lessons I gave you on tomb art and statues."

Prof. Ampim that is classic line (lol), Although this type of misrepresentation on your adversary's part is serious as it may mislead some down an unfortunate path, I read this early this morning and I have not stopped laughing, "I should bill you for this..." truly genius at work. Thank you for all your work for our people. As a novice seeking to gather funds to take your courses you teach me things through this forum as well thank you.

Majadi Baruti

---

Tonight's top picks. What will you watch tonight? Preview the hottest shows on Yahoo! TV.

| 23321|2007-10-09 10:12:11|neseret|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Manu Ampim" wrote:

>

> Thank you. This case already came up on this forum in March 2004

because when Griffis-Greenburg only held a bachelor's degree (received her M.A. in 2002)

Actually, I held a higher degree than a BA when this case began, had you any knowledge of this case. It happens to be a JD in Law.

Further, I never projected myself as a "...well-established 'Egyptologist'" in any point of these legal proceedings, or upon this list. Perhaps you should read the original judgment here as to what was being litigated:

<http://www.geocities.com/grif-con\_legal/>

> she was projecting herself on this forum as a well-established "Egyptologist" (although she said that this was not her intentions), and she felt at liberty to dismiss the credentials of Dr. Cheikh Anta Diop, Dr. Ben, and Dr. Theophile Obenga, etc.<

In 2004, and at the time I questioned the positions of Dr. Ben (his assertion that pHunefer mentions the "mountains of the moon" (of Uganda) as the origin point of the ancient Egyptians (which it does not), and the fact I am very unimpressed with Obenga's arguments (which I have a right to express, having read some of his works), I had the MA in Egyptian Archaeology.

Perhaps next time you should get YOUR facts straight.

You also said:

>Your statement is blatantly false. Your comments on Gardiner's O49 crossroads symbol /niwt/ show that you have badly misread his comments and the examples provided by Faulkner. On page 498 Gardiner CLEARLY states that the crossroads symbol in question is pronounced as "niwt." This is plain as day. The phonetic value is "niwt" when the symbol is used LITERALLY. Apparently, you don't understand the meaning of the literal stroke beneath the symbol, and this is sad. [I invite all forum members to see the objective facts which show the various uses of the O49 symbol on page 498 in Gardiner's book.]<

/niwt/ = O49 is your argument: the symbol O49 does not mean that, EXCEPT in the situation where you have O49:X1*Z1 - that is, that it is the construction of a word using _all_ symbols. There, the O49 symbol stands in for /n(i)w/, and all symbols _together_ = /niwt/, which means ONLY "village/town" (Gardiner 1982 (1957)498).

BUT O49 in use _**by itself**_ is a _determinative_ for other words, meaning _any inhabited region_, i.e., a settlement. As I noted, IF O49 = the WORD /niwt/, then would I not translate I6-G17-X1:O49 (/kmt/) as /kmt-niwt/?

By your argument, I must, so since it is NOT translated in this way means that O49 has a ideogrammatic/determinative meaning of "inhabited area", and NOT a literal translation as /niwt/ in _all_ cases where O49 appears_. This is clear in the Gardiner explanation, given above (Gardiner 1982 (1957): 498), in Allen (2000: 439, 460) that the sign O49 = determinative for 'settlement /town' and that the word O49:X1*Z1 = /niwt/ which means "town/village" ONLY, in Faulkner (1982: 125) that O49:X1*Z1 = /niwt/, meaning town/village ONLY, and in the Wb II, 210, with the main meaning of O49:X1*Z1 as "Dorf, Stadt" ("village, town/city").

To me, it is you that cannot read a simple explanation, not I.

Beyond that, I see you devolve into the same tired argument over again, which is demonstrably false, and then into your usual format of ad hominem name-calling. Both are signs of a bankrupt argument,

IMO, so I see no need to repeat what I said earlier, since obviously you are unable to see how absolutely wrong you are.

I pity your students, and anyone else foolish enough to listen to you.

Done.

Katherine Griffis-Greenberg, M. A. (Lon)
Member, International Association of Egyptologists
ARCE, BANE, EES, ASOR

Doctoral Program (Egyptology)
Oriental Studies
University of Oxford
Oxford, United Kingdom

<http://www.griffis-consulting.com>

| 23322|2007-10-09 10:19:03|A.E.|Zahi Hawass insisted Tuesday that Tutankhamun was not black|

Attachments :

Original Egyptians were of the Swasian and African races

CAIRO (AFP) - Egyptian antiquities supremo Zahi Hawass insisted Tuesday that Tutankhamun was not black despite calls by US black activists to recognise the boy king's dark skin colour.

"Tutankhamun was not black, and the portrayal of ancient Egyptian civilisation as black has no element of truth to it," Hawass told reporters.

"Egyptians are not Arabs and are not Africans despite the fact that Egypt is in Africa," he said, quoted by the official MENA news agency.

Hawass said he was responding to several demonstrations in Philadelphia after a lecture he gave there on September 6 where he defended his theory.

Protesters also claimed images of King Tut were altered to show him with lighter skin at the "Tutankhamun and the Golden Age of the Pharaohs" exhibit which leaves Philadelphia for London on September 30.

=====

Look at the earliest colored photos of the images of Tut when they came out of his tomb.

What Hawass says means nothing (if he even said it in the first place).

What matters is the physical evidence.

The word Arab as used by millions of people all over the earth is the subset of natives of the middle east... usually from Afghanistan to Egypt.

The word Arab is used to identify a people of a region of earth. Today that population is infested with Greeks, Romans, Brits, French, Germans, Spaniards.

The population of the middle east is a pot luck of all outsiders who have traded, been at war with them and invaded their nations.

We have a model to look at Germany.. how there were no blacks living there before WW2 and with in 55 years, there were/are hundreds of thousands living there.

NO such thing as an Egyptian race ever existed. Egypt is a word that identifies political boundaries. Who an Egyptian was, depends on the political control.

The south west of now what is called Israel was Egypt when the accounts of the bible were supposed to have taken place. Egypt extended into northern Sudan.

Egypt.. country name.. just a word to identify political boundaries

The native people of ancient Egypt were a combination of two races. African/Negroes and Swasians.

Scientist have never used such a word to identify a people so I guess I will have to enlighten the world and assign an identity.

Race is a quality that separates a population in one part of the world from all other populations.

SWAsians = South Western Asians

Asians like Orientals but they have different physical features and DNA

Black like Africans but have different physical features and DNA

SWAsians begin around Afghanistan/India and extend into Egypt.

Is the only thing that separates SWAsians from Negroes, curly hair .. not hardly.

Negroes get diseases exclusive to them and it is not only kinky hair or their skin, the skeletons of Negroes are different than SWAsians.

If you watch forensic science programs, look for the detective program where they found a corps in a trunk at an airport. The authorities identified them as being from south Asia.. and sure enough when identified it was a man from India.

In another program they found NOTHING but a skull. They identified it as a young female of African descent NO HAIR .. NOT THE COLOR OF THE SKIN.

The girl was identified as an African from nothing but her skull. I will give you the screen shots of the girl and the forensic detectives who worked on the case.

Different races have different skin thicknesses, skull shapes .. that is how they identified this girl.. by her skull .. and of course the shapes of our faces is determined by the shapes of the skull.

Of course there are diverse sub races of Africans but what classifies all natives of Africa as Negroes is the physical traits they have that no other populations on the world had (before people began to invade their land and carry them away)

SWASIANS = NON blond, NON fair skin, NON Negro race who's skeletons of ancient times match that of natives from India to Egypt.

You will find their straight hair in paintings and in the mummies.

As for Hawass, he has hair of curls but looks like a Euro / Afro mix to me.

Look at the National Geographic picture of him putting Tut back in his tomb and look at the other Egyptians there beside him.

Hawass looks more like one of those Greeks was his great grandpa than the ancient Egyptians.

Greek Alexander

Of course one is not a descendant of one ancestor but a composite of every ancestor they ever had. Hawass just looks like to have a good European mix.

The idea of an Egyptian race is laughable. Egyptian = political description... race = what makes a people different than any other population on earth.. so what physical quality does any Egyptian have that Swasians or Africans do not have.

All ancient Egyptians Swasians/Africans were of a black race, but all blacks are not descendants of Egyptians.

There is NO facts tying "Ethiopians" to ancient Egyptians nor any Africans other than the Cushites/Nubians/Sudanese

.

*

Encyclopedia Egypt

| 23323|2007-10-09 10:22:50|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: Zahi Hawass insisted Tuesday that Tutankhamun was not black|

Greek Alexander

Where did this painting come from?

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23324|2007-10-09 11:10:23|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|
Katherine,

On usenet you had accused Cheikh Anta Diop of not having Egyptology credentials. On this list you at least insinuated the same thing about Theophile Obenga.

The truth is that both were/are established, fully-credentialed Egyptologists in the French academy. Obenga has trained Egyptologists for doctorates here in the United States as well.

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23325|2007-10-09 12:04:32|Mahari|Re: Zahi Hawass insisted Tuesday that Tutankhamun was not black|

You assessment seems almost as narrow-minded and limited as Hawass'. There are any number of images of Egyptians with Africoid features INCLUDING kinky hair/braided wigs.

Of course, not all Afrikans are descended from Egyptians. That's like saying that all europeans are descended from Greeks.

FREE INDIA'S BLACKS.....

It is well enough that people of the nation do not understand our banking and monetary system, for if they did, I believe there would be a revolution before tomorrow morning.

Henry Ford (23)

--- On Tue 10/09, A.E. <archaic.egypt@encyclopediaegypt.com> wrote:

From: A.E. [mailto:archaic.egypt@encyclopediaegypt.com]

To: EncEg_EgyptianRace@yahoogroups.com, EncEg_Science@yahoogroups.com, SOE-lounge@yahoogroups.com, Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Date: Tue, 9 Oct 2007 12:42:28 -0400

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Zahi Hawass insisted Tuesday that Tutankhamun was not black

Original Egyptians were of the Swasian and African races

CAIRO (AFP) - Egyptian antiquities supremo Zahi Hawass insisted Tuesday that Tutankhamun was not black despite calls by US black activists to recognise the boy king's dark skin colour.

"Tutankhamun was not black, and the portrayal of ancient Egyptian civilisation as black has no element of truth to it," Hawass told reporters.

"Egyptians are not Arabs and are not Africans despite the fact that Egypt is in Africa," he said, quoted by the official MENA news agency.

Hawass said he was responding to several demonstrations in Philadelphia after a lecture he gave there on September 6 where he defended his theory.

Protesters also claimed images of King Tut were altered to show him with lighter skin at the "Tutankhamun and the Golden Age of the Pharaohs" exhibit which leaves Philadelphia for London on September 30.

=====

Look at the earliest colored photos of the images of Tut when they came out of his tomb.

What Hawass says means nothing (if he even said it in the first place).

What matters is the physical evidence.

The word Arab as used by millions of people all over the earth is the subset of natives of the middle east... usually from Afghanistan to Egypt.

The word Arab is used to identify a people of a region of earth. Today that population is infested with Greeks, Romans, Brits, French, Germans, Spaniards.

The population of the middle east is a pot luck of all outsiders who have traded, been at war with them and invaded their nations.

We have a model to look at Germany.. how there were no blacks living there before WW2 and with in 55 years, there were/are hundreds of thousands living there.

NO such thing as an Egyptian race ever existed. Egypt is a word that identifies political boundaries. Who an Egyptian was, depends on the political control.

The south west of now what is called Israel was Egypt when the accounts of the bible were supposed to have taken place. Egypt extended into northern Sudan.

Egypt.. country name.. just a word to identify political boundaries

The native people of ancient Egypt were a combination of two races. African/Negroes and Swasians.

Scientist have never used such a word to identify a people so I guess I will have to enlighten the world and assign an identity.

Race is a quality that separates a population in one part of the world from all other populations.

SWAsians = South Western Asians

Asians like Orientals but they have different physical features and DNA

Black like Africans but have different physical features and DNA

SWAsians begin around Afghanistan/ India and extend into Egypt.

Is the only thing that separates SWAsians from Negroes, curly hair .. not hardly.

Negroes get diseases exclusive to them and it is not only kinky hair or their skin, the skeletons of Negroes are different than SWAsians.

If you watch forensic science programs, look for the detective program where they found a corps in a trunk at an airport. The authorities identified them as being from south Asia.. and sure enough when identified it was a man from India.

In another program they found NOTHING but a skull. They identified it as a young female of African descent NO HAIR .. NOT THE COLOR OF THE SKIN.

The girl was identified as an African from nothing but her skull. I will give you the screen shots of the girl and the forensic detectives who worked on the case.

Different races have different skin thicknesses, skull shapes .. that is how they identified this girl.. by her skull .. and of course the shapes of our faces is determined by the shapes of the skull.

Of course there are diverse sub races of Africans but what classifies all natives of Africa as Negroes is the physical traits they have that no other populations on the world had (before people began to invade their land and carry them away)

SWASIANS = NON blond, NON fair skin, NON Negro race who's skeletons of ancient times match that of natives from India to Egypt.

You will find their straight hair in paintings and in the mummies.

As for Hawass, he has hair of curls but looks like a Euro / Afro mix to me.

Look at the National Geographic picture of him putting Tut back in his tomb and look at the other Egyptians there beside him.

Hawass looks more like one of those Greeks was his great grandpa than the ancient Egyptians.

Greek Alexander

Of course one is not a descendant of one ancestor but a composite of every ancestor they ever had. Hawass just looks like to have a good European mix.

The idea of an Egyptian race is laughable. Egyptian = political description. .. race = what makes a people different than any other population on earth.. so what physical quality does any Egyptian have that Swasians or Africans do not have.

All ancient Egyptians Swasians/Africans were of a black race, but all blacks are not descendants of Egyptians.

There is NO facts tying "Ethiopians" to ancient Egyptians nor any Africans other than the Cushites/Nubians/Sudanese

.

*

Encyclopedia Egypt

Attachment: tut_zoom.jpg (6.07KB)
Attachment: DrHawass_pyr.jpg (3.73KB)
Attachment: main.jpg (3.37KB)
Attachment: blurb200.jpg (4.38KB)
Attachment: wp4qiziy.jpg (3.50KB)
Attachment: ZahiHawass_Grani_5244867_400.jpg (3.25KB)
Attachment: king_tut_and_his_wife1large.jpg (6.87KB)
Attachment: alexandermosaicsmall.jpg (87.31KB)
Attachment: meter.asp?site=s41ThePhar0ahs (0.23KB)

---

No banners. No pop-ups. No kidding.

Make My Way your home on the Web - <http://www.myway.com>

| 23326|2007-10-09 17:12:59|Fatima Horta|Re: Zahi Hawass insisted Tuesday that Tutankhamun was not black|

I passed to be angry about Zahi Hawass's opinion to laugh about his opinion, I mean when someone say something stupid you get mad but when he said it again you just know that he is defending his ignorance and it is funny, poor of him. We know the truth and I think we need to convince the world about the truth instead to convince one man (Zahi Hawass) because he is trying to monopolize the world with HIS ideas, HIS opinion, HIS beliefs about Ancient Egypt and HE make believe the rest of the world HIS own ideas, instead of the truth or at least their own opinions.

"A.E." wrote:

Original Egyptians were of the Swasian and African races

CAIRO (AFP) - Egyptian antiquities supremo Zahi Hawass insisted Tuesday that Tutankhamun was not black despite calls by US black activists to recognise the boy king's dark skin colour.

"Tutankhamun was not black, and the portrayal of ancient Egyptian civilisation as black has no element of truth to it," Hawass told reporters.

"Egyptians are not Arabs and are not Africans despite the fact that Egypt is in Africa," he said, quoted by the official MENA news agency.

Hawass said he was responding to several demonstrations in Philadelphia after a lecture he gave there on September 6 where he defended his theory.

Protesters also claimed images of King Tut were altered to show him with lighter skin at the "Tutankhamun and the Golden Age of the Pharaohs" exhibit which leaves Philadelphia for London on September 30.

=====

Look at the earliest colored photos of the images of Tut when they came out of his tomb.

What Hawass says means nothing (if he even said it in the first place).

What matters is the physical evidence.

The word Arab as used by millions of people all over the earth is the subset of natives of the middle east... usually from Afghanistan to Egypt.

The word Arab is used to identify a people of a region of earth. Today that population is infested with Greeks, Romans, Brits, French, Germans, Spaniards.

The population of the middle east is a pot luck of all outsiders who have traded, been at war with them and invaded their nations.

We have a model to look at Germany.. how there were no blacks living there before WW2 and with in 55 years, there were/are hundreds of thousands living there.

NO such thing as an Egyptian race ever existed. Egypt is a word that identifies political boundaries. Who an Egyptian was, depends on the political control.

The south west of now what is called Israel was Egypt when the accounts of the bible were supposed to have taken place. Egypt extended into northern Sudan.

Egypt.. country name.. just a word to identify political boundaries

The native people of ancient Egypt were a combination of two races.

African/Negroes and Swasians.

Scientist have never used such a word to identify a people so I guess I will have to enlighten the world and assign an identity.

Race is a quality that separates a population in one part of the world from all other populations.

SWAsians = South Western Asians

Asians like Orientals but they have different physical features and DNA

Black like Africans but have different physical features and DNA

SWAsians begin around Afghanistan/ India and extend into Egypt.

Is the only thing that separates SWAsians from Negroes, curly hair .. not hardly.

Negroes get diseases exclusive to them and it is not only kinky hair or their skin, the skeletons of Negroes are different than SWAsians.

If you watch forensic science programs, look for the detective program where they found a corps in a trunk at an airport. The authorities identified them as being from south Asia.. and sure enough when identified it was a man from India.

In another program they found NOTHING but a skull. They identified it as a young female of African descent NO HAIR .. NOT THE COLOR OF THE SKIN.

The girl was identified as an African from nothing but her skull. I will give you the screen shots of the girl and the forensic detectives who worked on the case.

Different races have different skin thicknesses, skull shapes .. that is how they identified this girl.. by her skull .. and of course the shapes of our faces is determined by the shapes of the skull.

Of course there are diverse sub races of Africans but what classifies all natives of Africa as Negroes is the physical traits they have that no other populations on the world had (before people began to invade their land and carry them away)

SWASIANS = NON blond, NON fair skin, NON Negro race who's skeletons of ancient times match that of natives from India to Egypt.

You will find their straight hair in paintings and in the mummies.
As for Hawass, he has hair of curls but looks like a Euro / Afro mix to me.

Look at the National Geographic picture of him putting Tut back in his tomb and look at the other Egyptians there beside him.

Hawass looks more like one of those Greeks was his great grandpa than the ancient Egyptians.

Greek Alexander

Of course one is not a descendant of one ancestor but a composite of every ancestor they ever had. Hawass just looks like to have a good European mix.

The idea of an Egyptian race is laughable. Egyptian = political description. .. race = what makes a people different than any other population on earth.. so what physical quality does any Egyptian have that Swasians or Africans do not have. All ancient Egyptians Swasians/Africans were of a black race, but all blacks are not descendants of Egyptians.

There is NO facts tying "Ethiopians" to ancient Egyptians nor any Africans other than the Cushites/Nubians/ Sudanese

•
*

Encyclopedia Egypt

Moody friends. Drama queens. Your life? Nope! - their life, your story.

Play Sims Stories at Yahoo! Games.

| 23327|2007-10-09 17:30:04|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: Zahi Hawass insisted Tuesday that Tutankhamun was not black|

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari" wrote:

>
> You assessment seems almost as narrow-minded and limited as Hawass'. There are any number of images of Egyptians with Africoid features INCLUDING kinky hair/braided wigs.
>

These are known as "Nubian wigs" and they leave quite an impression when you see them in person.

PRINCESS NESIKHONSU'S WIG.

Regards.

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23328|2007-10-09 18:19:36|K. Loganathan|Newfound ancient African megadroughts|

Newfound ancient African megadroughts may have driven the evolution of humans and fishes

View of the Lake Malawi's lush vegetation.

Credit: Courtesy of the Lake Malawi Drilling Project

From 135,000 to 90,000 years ago tropical Africa had megadroughts more extreme and widespread than any previously known for that region, according to new research.

Learning that now-lush tropical Africa was an arid scrubland during the early Late Pleistocene provides new insights into humans' migration out of Africa and the evolution of fishes in Africa's Great Lakes.

"Lake Malawi, one of the deepest lakes in the world, acts as a rain gauge," said lead scientist Andrew S. Cohen of The University of Arizona in Tucson. "The lake level dropped at least 600 meters (1,968 feet) -- an extraordinary amount of water lost from the lake. This tells us that it was much drier at that time."

He added, "Archaeological evidence shows relatively few signs of human occupation in tropical Africa during the megadrought period."

The new finding provides an ecological explanation for the Out-of-Africa hypothesis that suggests all humans descended from just a few people living in Africa sometime between 150,000 and 70,000 years ago.

"We've got an explanation for why that might have occurred -- tropical Africa was extraordinarily dry about 100,000 years ago," said Cohen, a UA professor of geosciences. "Maybe human populations just crashed."

Other researchers have documented droughts in individual regions of Africa at that time, such as the Kalahari desert expanding north and the Sahel expanding south, he said. "But no one had put it together that those droughts were part of a bigger picture."

Tropical Africa's climate became wetter by 70,000 years ago, a time for which there is evidence of more people in the region and of people moving north. As the population rebounded, people left Africa, Cohen said.

The newly discovered drastic drought also suggests the famous cichlid fishes of Lake Malawi evolved four to eight times slower than previously thought, altering scientists' view of fish evolution in the African Great Lakes.

The research article by Cohen, UA researchers Jeffery Stone, Peter Reinthal and David Dettman and their colleagues, "Ecological consequences of early Late Pleistocene megadroughts in tropical Africa," is scheduled for early online publication the week of Oct. 8 in the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences. Another article by members of the Lake Malawi Drilling Project, "East African megadroughts between 135 and 75 thousand years ago and bearing on early-modern human origins," is online at the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences. Christopher Scholz of Syracuse University in N.Y. is first author and Cohen and others are co-authors.

Both articles are scheduled for publication in the Oct. 16, 2007, print edition of the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences. A full list of authors for each article is at the end of this release. The National Science Foundation, the International Continental Drilling Program and the Smithsonian Institution funded the research.

Cohen and his colleagues have been working for years to learn more about ancient Africa's climate and ecology by coring Africa's deepest lakes.

The scientists discovered the ancient megadroughts by studying sediments cored from the bottom of Lake Malawi, an African rift lake that is currently 2,316 feet (706 meters) deep, and comparing those findings with similar records from Lakes Tanganyika and Bosumtwi.

"What's unique about the Malawi, Tanganyika and Bosumtwi cores is that they're continuous records. We can see what happened in one place over a long period of time," Cohen said.

Extracting cores from Lake Malawi required the kind of rig used in ocean-going drilling expeditions. Those expeditions just sail a drill-equipped ship to the desired site.

However, the Lake Malawi Drilling Project's target was land-locked.

The international research team collected the equipment necessary, shipped it overland, rented a barge and outfitted it to become a scientific drilling vessel. They equipped the ship, M/V Viphya, with the type of GPS positioning system needed to hold the large ship steady under windy and wavy conditions. The drilling equipment was lowered 1,942 feet (592 meters) to the lake bottom and bored into the lake's sediment another 1247 feet (380 meters). If the ship didn't hold its position over the drilling site, the expensive drilling equipment might snap.

The work was successful -- the team extracted a series of cores, some as much as 1247 feet (380 meters) long, representing hundreds of thousands of years of African history.

Such lake cores contain a high-resolution record of the things that fell in or died in the lake -- plankton, aquatic invertebrates, charcoal from fires on land, pollen from the surrounding vegetation. Scientists analyze those materials to figure out what the vegetation and the lake conditions were like at a particular point in time.

The researchers used radiocarbon and other dating techniques to establish the age of regions of the Malawi cores. Then researchers took samples at 300-year-intervals.

Samples from the megadrought times had little pollen or charcoal, suggesting sparse vegetation with little to burn.

Cohen said, "The area around Lake Malawi, which today is heavily forested and has rainfall levels comparable to the southeastern U.S., at that time would have looked like Tucson."

One indicator of drought present in the cores were species of invertebrates and plankton that only live in shallow, turbid, algae-rich waters -- a situation very different from the deep, clearwater lake that Malawi is now.

"During the megadrought, Lake Malawi was algae-filled and pea-soup green, much like modern-day Lake Turkana," Cohen said. "Lake Turkana is known as the Jade Sea."

The African Great Lakes are known for the spectacular biological diversity of their cichlid fish species, which number in the hundreds. A dramatic increase in the number of species was thought to happened after a dry spell about 25,000 to 15,000 years ago.

In contrast, Cohen and his colleagues suggest that the rise in species diversity happened after the megadroughts. By 70,000 years ago the lake had risen to more or less its current level and it had become a freshwater lake as it is today.

Although the team has used the lake cores to peer back in time 150,000 years, there's still much more to do: the Lake Malawi core represents as much as 1.5 million years of tropical Africa's past.

Source: University of Arizona

<http://www.physorg.com/news111083381.html>

---

Be a better Heartthrob. Get better relationship answers from someone who knows.

Yahoo! Answers - Check it out.

| 23329|2007-10-10 00:10:42|neseret|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala"

wrote:

> Katherine,

>

> On usenet you had accused Cheikh Anta Diop of not having Eygyptology > credentials. On this list you at least insinuated the same thing > about Theophile Obenga.

>

> The truth is that both were/are established, fully-credentialed

> Egyptologists in the French academy. Obenga has trained Egyptologists

> for doctorates here in the United States as well.

The Societe Francaise d'Egyptologie, the "French academy" to which you refer, specifically states that its membership includes people who are not Egyptologists, but "people interested into the survey of Egypt since its origins." There is no requirement that one be an Egyptologist to be a part of this organisation

<<http://www.thotweb.com/portail/associations/SFE.htm>>, nor, I might

add, to be a member of the International Association of Egyptologists

<<http://www.iae.lmu.de/>>, though a non-Egyptologist needs references from 2 Egyptologists to join, per Section 3.3 of the Statutes. So, membership in either organisation does not "fully-credential" you as an Egyptologist. A degree in Egyptology does allow you to refer to yourself as an Egyptologist, as you have academic credentials in the field.

According to what is known about Obenga's biography by me, I see no reference to an Egyptology degree, but studies in history only:

'Diop's best-known intellectual disciple is the Congolese historical linguist Theophile Obenga, who has clearly also been the most important of the relatively few African historians who have sought to pursue and extend Diop's line of thought. Obenga, a little younger than Diop, was born in Brazzaville in 1930, from a Mbochi-speaking background: he has sought to trace parallels between Mbochi and ancient Egyptian languages, just as Diop has done with his native Wolof. Obenga's university training was varied: he studied at Pittsburgh University in the USA, and at the Ecole Pratique des Hautes Etudes, the College de France, and the University of Bordeaux. By contrast with Diop's long years as permanent oppositionist in Senega, Obenga spent periods in the Congo Republic's corridors of power, serving as Foreign Minister in 1975-7 under the Marxist government of Marien Ngouabi. Thereafter he acted as Director of Research at the 'Centre International des Civilisations Bantu' in Libreville, Gabon; but he has recently moved to the USA to take up a post at Molefi Asante's Temple University, Philadelphia department, the main centre of US Afrocentrism.' (Howe 1998: 179-180)

The Ecole Pratique des Haute Etudes does not offer a degree of any kind in Egyptology, but the closest it DOES offer is a Masters of Science (MS) in "Historiques, philologiques et religieuses", with a speciality in Antiquité méditerranéenne et proche-orientale: langues, histoire, religions <http://www.ephe.sorbonne.fr/index.php?option=com\_content&task=view&id=250&Itemid=236>. The College de France does not offer degrees in Egyptology, nor does the University of Bordeaux, nor the University of Pittsburgh.

At present, I don't see Obenga's name on the list of faculty at Temple University <<http://www.temple.edu/aas/faculty.htm>>, but there's been some years passed since Howe wrote the above about Obenga. Perhaps he's moved on to another University. Online, he's stated to presently be the "Director General of the International Center for Bantu Studies" centred in Libreville, Gabon.
<http://africawithin.com/obenga/obenga\_bio.htm>

Further, while you state that Obenga has "...has trained Egyptologists for doctorates here in the United States...", I should point out that Temple University does not offer any degrees in Egyptology, but offers this subject only through its exchange with Hamburg University in Germany (where any student would have to go to acquire coursework in Egyptology). This can be found in Temple University's own materials online:
<http://www.temple.edu/studyabroad/programs/temple\_exchanges/germany.html>
> and

rochure.pdf - 2007-06-21>

Diop's master's and doctorate degrees were given to him under something of a cloud, as he was rejected for his doctoral degree, which I recall as being in History, not Egyptology (the University of Paris/Sorbonne does not have a degree in Egyptology), three times. This is described as follows:

"His initial doctoral dissertation submitted at the University of Paris, Sorbonne in 1951, based on the premise that Egypt of the pharaohs was an African civilization--was rejected... Two additional attempts to have his doctorate granted were turned back until 1960 when he entered his defense session with an array of sociologists, anthropologists and historians and successfully carried his argument. After nearly a decade of titanic and herculean effort, Diop had finally won his Docteur es Lettres!"

<http://www.africawithin.com/diop/diop\_bio1.htm>

Now, the above are matters of fact, so perhaps you can see why I question the assertion about Diop and Obenga being "established, fully-credentialed Egyptologists," when, as far as I can see, neither have degrees in Egyptology.

Reference:

Howe, S. 1998. Afrocentrism: Mythical Past and Imagined Homes. London: Verso.

Katherine Griffis-Greenberg, M. A. (Lon)
Member, International Association of Egyptologists
ARCE, BANE, EES, ASOR

Doctoral Program (Egyptology)
Oriental Studies
University of Oxford
Oxford, United Kingdom

<http://www.griffis-consulting.com>

| 23330|2007-10-10 01:25:19|Fatima Horta|Re: Zahi Hawass insisted Tuesday that Tutankhamun was not black|

Paul Kekai Manansala wrote:

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups .com, "Mahari" wrote:

>

> You assessment seems almost as narrow-minded and limited as Hawass'. There are any number of images of Egyptians with Africoid features INCLUDING kinky hair/braided wigs.

>

These are known as "Nubian wigs" and they leave quite an impression when you see them in person.

PRINCESS NESIKHONSU'S WIG.

Regards.

Paul Kekai Manansala

---

Be a better Heartthrob. Get better relationship answers from someone who knows.

Yahoo! Answers - Check it out.

| 23331|2007-10-10 08:25:20|Ferg|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|

Katherine.

You seem to have all the facts and figures at your fingertips at the press of a button, but sadly you have not made any positive contribution to the more important topic, namely the discussion on the symbol of divinity NTR.

I did ask you once. Again what are your views about the symbol ?

Somo.

----- Original Message -----

From: neseret

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Sent: Wednesday, October 10, 2007 8:10 AM

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, "Paul Kekai Manansala" wrote:

> Katherine,

>

> On usenet you had accused Cheikh Anta Diop of not having Egyptology > credentials. On this list you at least insinuated the same thing > about Theophile Obenga.

>

- > The truth is that both were/are established, fully-credentialed
- > Egyptologists in the French academy. Obenga has trained Egyptologists
- > for doctorates here in the United States as well.

The Societe Francaise d'Egyptologie, the "French academy" to which you refer, specifically states that its membership includes people who are not Egyptologists, but "people interested into the survey of Egypt since its origins." There is no requirement that one be an Egyptologist to be a part of this organisation

<<http://www.thotweb.com/portail/associations/SFE.htm>>, nor, I might add, to be a member of the International Association of Egyptologists <<http://www.iae.lmu.de/>>, though a non-Egyptologist needs references from 2 Egyptologists to join, per Section 3.3 of the Statutes. So, membership in either organisation does not "fully-credential" you as an Egyptologist. A degree in Egyptology does allow you to refer to yourself as an Egyptologist, as you have academic credentials in the field.

According to what is known about Obenga's biography by me, I see no reference to an Egyptology degree, but studies in history only:

'Diop's best-known intellectual disciple is the Congolese historical linguist Theophile Obenga, who has clearly also been the most important of the relatively few African historians who have sought to pursue and extend Diop's line of thought. Obenga, a little younger than Diop, was born in Brazzaville in 1930, from a Mbochi-speaking background: he has sought to trace parallels between Mbochi and ancient Egyptian languages, just as Diop has done with his native Wolof. Obenga's university training was varied: he studied at Pittsburgh University in the USA, and at the Ecole Pratique des Hautes Etudes, the College de France, and the University of Bordeaux. By contrast with Diop's long years as permanent oppositionist in Senega, Obenga spent periods in the Congo Republic's corridors of power, serving as Foreign Minister in 1975-7 under the Marxist government of Marien Ngouabi. Thereafter he acted as Director of Research at the 'Centre International des Civilisations Bantu' in Libreville, Gabon; but he has recently moved to the USA to take up a post at Molefi Asante's Temple University, Philadelphia department, the main centre of US Afrocentrism. ' (Howe 1998: 179-180)

The Ecole Pratique des Haute Etudes does not offer a degree of any kind in Egyptology, but the closest it DOES offer is a Masters of Science (MS) in "Historiques, philologiques et religieuses" , with a speciality in Antiquité méditerranéenne et proche-orientale: langues, histoire, religions <http://www.ephe.sorbonne.fr/index.php?option=com\_content&task=view&id=250&Itemid=236>. The College de

France

does not offer degrees in Egyptology, nor does the University of Bordeaux, nor the University of Pittsburgh.

At present, I don't see Obenga's name on the list of faculty at Temple University <<http://www.temple.edu/aas/faculty.htm>>, but there's been some years passed since Howe wrote the above about Obenga. Perhaps he's moved on to another University. Online, he's stated to presently be the "Director General of the International Center for Bantu Studies" centred in Libreville, Gabon.

<http://africawithin.com/obenga/obenga\_bio.htm>

Further, while you state that Obenga has "...has trained Egyptologists for doctorates here in the United States...", I should point out that Temple University does not offer any degrees in Egyptology, but offers this subject only through its exchange with Hamburg University in Germany (where any student would have to go to acquire coursework in Egyptology). This can be found in Temple University's own materials online:

<http://www.temple.edu/studyabroad/programs/temple\_exchanges/germany.htm

> and

rochure.pdf - 2007-06-21>

Diop's master's and doctorate degrees were given to him under something of a cloud, as he was rejected for his doctoral degree, which I recall as being in History, not Egyptology (the University of Paris/Sorbonne does not have a degree in Egyptology), three times. This is described as follows:

"His initial doctoral dissertation submitted at the University of Paris, Sorbonne in 1951, based on the premise that Egypt of the pharaohs was an African civilization- -was rejected... Two additional attempts to have his doctorate granted were turned back until 1960 when he entered his defense session with an array of sociologists, anthropologists and historians and successfully carried his argument. After nearly a decade of titanic and herculean effort, Diop had finally won his Docteur es Lettres!"

<http://www.africawithin.com/diop/diop\_bio1.htm>

Now, the above are matters of fact, so perhaps you can see why I question the assertion about Diop and Obenga being "established, fully-credentialed Egyptologists," when, as far as I can see, neither have degrees in Egyptology.

Reference:

Howe, S. 1998. Afrocentrism: Mythical Pasts and Imagined Homes.
London: Verso.

Katherine Griffis-Greenberg, M. A. (Lon)
Member, International Association of Egyptologists
ARCE, BANE, EES, ASOR

Doctoral Program (Egyptology)
Oriental Studies
University of Oxford
Oxford, United Kingdom

<http://www.griffis-consulting.com>

| 23332|2007-10-10 08:39:20|Manu Ampim|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|

In Ta\_Seti@yahoo.com, "Katherine Griffis-Greenberg" wrote:

< In 2004, and at the time I questioned the positions of Dr. Ben (his assertion that pHunefer mentions the "mountains of the moon" (of Uganda) as the origin point of the ancient Egyptians (which it does not), and the fact I am very unimpressed with Obenga's arguments (which I have a right to express, having read some of his works), I had the MA in Egyptian Archaeology.>

You have again LIED on this forum. You forget that this Ta-Seti forum keeps a *permanent* record of your ignorant statements.

You first dismissed Yosef Ben-Jochannon's, Cheikh Anta Diop's and Theophile Obenga's credentials and background in 2002 (not "2004" as you falsely state), and you had a lowly B.A. degree as I said, and not an M.A. in Egyptian Archaeology as you falsely claim above.

Here is the ignorant and foolish statement that you made in reference to these three scholars allegedly never taking advantage of opportunities to study the Medu Netcher language:

Post 1254 (Feb. 21, 2002) Griffis-Greenberg stated:

>The same situation cannot be said of Diop, Obenga,

Ben-Jochannon,
etc., because, quite frankly, there are a proliferation of places in the world now where one can study Egyptian language - and the criticism of these persons reflects merely they have not taken advantage of these options.<

After your ignorant comments I corrected you as usual and gave you *facts* about their background. You then thanked me for clearing up some of your ignorance.

Post 1270 (Feb. 22, 2002) - Manu Ampim stated:

>>Suffice it to say, that you are dead wrong in your claim that Cheikh Anta Diop and Theophile Obenga did not take advantage of opportunities to study the ancient Egyptian language. Both men took formal Mdw Ntr classes in Paris: Diop at the Sorbonne and Obenga at the Ecole Pratique des Hautes Etudes. In fact, my colleague Obenga and I have discussed the details of his training on a couple of occasions. Thus, you need to correct your > > information. (For more details see: Chris Gray, _Conceptions of History: Cheikh Anta Diop & Theophile Obenga_, 1989).<<

Griffis-Greenberg reply:

>Thank you, Prof. Ampim, for the update. The most recent information

I had read was from various reports about Diop and a few others, in regards to what appears to be their working knowledge of the language. I am content to have the record straight on Diop and Obenga...>

The record is clear that you are not interested in facts about African scholars, but rather making foolish statements and distortions to cover up your original foolish statements.
All members of this forum can read the record as I have provided and see that you have no credibility. In a court of law, the jury is instructed that if the witness has been shown to have lied, then they are at liberty to dismiss the witness' entire testimony because (he) has no credibility.
Lastly regarding /niwt/, when I return to my office next week I will scan the page of this term in Gardiner's book to show members of this forum that you are either making false statements as you did in the above example, or you are pitifully ignorant of a basic Medu Netcher symbol and have a difficult time seeing reality.

If you are ever going to be at least an average student, you have to learn that DOCUMENTATION BEATS CONVERSATION.

Advancing the work,
Prof. Manu Ampim
African American Studies
Merritt College
Oakland, CA 94619
510-482-5791
www.ManuAmpim.com

---

Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?

Posted by: "neseret" egylist@griffis-consulting.com neseret

Tue Oct9,2007 10:12am (PST)

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, "Manu Ampim" wrote:

>

> Thank you. This case already came up on this forum in March 2004 because when Griffis-Greenburg only held a bachelor's degree (received her M.A. in 2002)

Actually, I held a higher degree than a BA when this case began, had you any knowledge of this case. It happens to be a JD in Law.

Further, I never projected myself as a "...well-established 'Egyptologist' " in any point of these legal proceedings, or upon this list. Perhaps you should read the original judgment here as to what was being litigated:

<http://www.geocities.com/grif-con\_legal/>

>

she was projecting herself on this forum as a well-established "Egyptologist" (although she said that this was not her intentions), and she felt at liberty to dismiss the credentials of Dr. Cheikh Anta Diop, Dr. Ben, and Dr. Theophile Obenga, etc.<

In 2004, and at the time I questioned the positions of Dr. Ben (his assertion that pHunefer mentions the "mountains of the moon" (of Uganda) as the origin point of the ancient Egyptians (which it does not), and the fact I am very unimpressed with Obenga's arguments (which I have a right to express, having read some of his works), I had the MA in Egyptian Archaeology.

Perhaps next time you should get YOUR facts straight.

You also said:

>Your statement is blatantly false. Your comments on Gardiner's O49 crossroads symbol /niwt/ show that you have badly misread his comments and the examples provided by Faulkner. On page 498 Gardiner CLEARLY states that the crossroads symbol in question is pronounced as "niwt." This is plain as day. The phonetic value is "niwt" when the symbol is used LITERALLY. Apparently, you don't understand the meaning of the literal stroke beneath the symbol, and this is sad. [I invite all forum members to see the objective facts which show the various uses of the O49 symbol on page 498 in Gardiner' book.]<

/niwt/ = O49 is your argument: the symbol O49 does not mean that, EXCEPT in the situation where you have O49:X1*Z1 - that is, that it is the construction of a word using _all_ symbols. There, the O49 symbol stands in for /n(i)w/, and all symbols _together_ = /niwt/, which means ONLY "village/town" (Gardiner 1982 (1957)498).

BUT O49 in use _**by itself**_ is a _determinative_ for other words, meaning _any inhabited region_, i.e., a settlement. As I noted, IF O49 = the WORD /niwt/, then would I not translate I6-G17-X1:O49 (/kmt/) as /kmt-niwt/?

By your argument, I must, so since it is NOT translated in this way means that O49 has a ideogrammatic/ determinative meaning of "inhabited area", and NOT a literal translation as /niwt/ in _all cases where O49 appears_. This is clear in the Gardiner explanation, given above (Gardiner 982 (1957): 498), in Allen (2000: 439, 460) that the sign O49 = determinative for 'settlement /town' and that the word O49:X1*Z1 = /niwt/ which means "town/village" ONLY, in Faulkner (1982: 125) that O49:X1*Z1 = /niwt/, meaning town/village ONLY, and in the Wb II, 210, with the main meaning of O49:X1*Z1 as "Dorf, Stadt" ("village, town/city").

To me, it is you that cannot read a simple explanation, not I.

Beyond that, I see you devolve into the same tired argument over again, which is demonstrably false, and then into your usual format of ad hominem name-calling. Both are signs of a bankrupt argument, IMO, so I see no need to repeat what I said earlier, since obviously you are unable to see how absolutely wrong you are.

I pity your students, and anyone else foolish enough to listen to you.

Done.

Katherine Griffis-Greenberg, M. A. (Lon)
Member, International Association of Egyptologists
ARCE, BANE, EES, ASOR

Doctoral Program (Egyptology)
Oriental Studies
University of Oxford
Oxford, United Kingdom

<http://www.griffis-consulting.com>

| 23333|2007-10-10 08:50:00|Manu Ampim|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|

"I should bill you for this and all the previous lessons I gave you on tomb art and statues."

Prof. Ampim that is classic line (lol), Although this type of misrepresentation on your adversary's part is serious as it may mislead some down an unfortunate path, I read this early this morning and I have not stopped laughing, "I should bill you for this..." truly genius at work. Thank you for all your work for our people. As a novice seeking to gather funds to take your courses you teach me things through this forum as well thank you.

Majadi Baruti

---

Greetings Majadi,
I appreciate the feedback. Part of my work is to show interested forum members how to use documentation and primary research to expose and dismantle dishonest eurocentric nonsense. Honest disagreement is fine, but this lady has a hidden agenda aimed at misdirecting new members. Advancing the work,
Manu A.

| 23334|2007-10-10 09:23:47|elliottandelliottmtg|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|
Katherine,

I was wondering if you believe the people of Kemet to be of indeginious African origin?

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "neseret" wrote:

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala"

> wrote:

>

> > Katherine,

> >

> > On usenet you had accused Cheikh Anta Diop of not having Egyptology

> > credentials. On this list you at least insinuated the same thing > > about Theophile Obenga.

> >

> > The truth is that both were/are established, fully-credentialed > > Egyptologists in the French academy. Obenga has trained
Egyptologists

> > for doctorates here in the United States as well.

>

> The Societe Francaise d'Egyptologie, the "French academy" to which
you

> refer, specifically states that its membership includes people who
are > not Egyptologists, but "people interested into the survey of Egypt

> since its origins." There is no requirement that one be an

> Egyptologist to be a part of this organisation

> <<http://www.thotweb.com/portail/associations/SFE.htm>>, nor, I might > add, to be a member of the International Association of Egyptologists

> <<http://www.iae.lmu.de/>>, though a non-Egyptologist needs
references

> from 2 Egyptologists to join, per Section 3.3 of the Statutes.

So,

> membership in either organisation does not "fully-credential" you
as an

> Egyptologist. A degree in Egyptology does allow you to refer to > yourself as an Egyptologist, as you have academic credentials in

the > field.

>

> According to what is known about Obenga's biography by me, I see no > reference to an Egyptology degree, but studies in history only:

>

> 'Diop's best-known intellectual disciple is the Congolese historical > linguist Theophile Obenga, who has clearly also been the most important > of the relatively few African historians who have sought to pursue and > extend Diop's line of thought. Obenga, a little younger than Diop, was > born in Brazzaville in 1930, from a Mbochi-speaking background: he has > sought to trace parallels between Mbochi and ancient Egyptian > languages, just as Diop has done with his native Wolof. Obenga's > university training was varied: he studied at Pittsburgh

University in > the USA, and at the Ecole Pratique des Hautes Etudes, the College de > France, and the University of Bordeaux. By contrast with Diop's long > years as permanent oppositionist in Senega, Obenga spent periods in the > Congo Republic's corridors of power, serving as Foreign Minister in > 1975-7 under the Marxist government of Marien Ngouabi. Thereafter he > acted as Director of Research at the 'Centre International des

> Civilisations Bantu' in Libreville, Gabon; but he has recently moved to > the USA to take up a post at Molefi Asante's Temple University,

> Philadelphia department, the main centre of US Afrocentrism.'

(Howe

> 1998: 179-180)

>

> The Ecole Pratique des Haute Etudes does not offer a degree of any kind > in Egyptology, but the closest it DOES offer is a Masters of Science

> (MS) in "Historiques, philologiques et religieuses", with a speciality > in Antiquité méditerranéenne et proche-orientale: langues,

histoire,

> religions <http://www.ephe.sorbonne.fr/index.php?option=com\_content&task=view&id=250&Itemid=236>. The College de France > does not offer degrees in Egyptology, nor does the University of Bordeaux, nor the University of Pittsburgh.

>

> At present, I don't see Obenga's name on the list of faculty at Temple > University <<http://www.temple.edu/aas/faculty.htm>>, but there's been > some years passed since Howe wrote the above about Obenga. Perhaps > he's moved on to another University. Online, he's stated to presently > be the "Director General of the International Center for Bantu Studies"

> centred in Libreville, Gabon.

> <http://africawithin.com/obenga/obenga\_bio.htm>

>

> Further, while you state that Obenga has "...has trained Egyptologists

> for doctorates here in the United States...", I should point out that

> Temple University does not offer any degrees in Egyptology, but offers

> this subject only through its exchange with Hamburg University in > Germany (where any student would have to go to acquire coursework in > Egyptology). This can be found in Temple University's own materials > online:

>

<http://www.temple.edu/studyabroad/programs/temple\_exchanges/germany.htm

> l> and

>

rgB

> rochure.pdf - 2007-06-21>

>

> Diop's master's and doctorate degrees were given to him under something > of a cloud, as he was rejected for his doctoral degree, which I recall

> as being in History, not Egyptology (the University of

Paris/Sorbonne

- > does not have a degree in Egyptology), three times. This is described
- > as follows:
- >
- > "His initial doctoral dissertation submitted at the University of
- > Paris, Sorbonne in 1951, based on the premise that Egypt of the
- > pharaohs was an African civilization--was rejected... Two additional
- > attempts to have his doctorate granted were turned back until 1960 when
- > he entered his defense session with an array of sociologists,
- > anthropologists and historians and successfully carried his argument.
- > After nearly a decade of titanic and herculean effort, Diop had finally
- > won his Docteur es Lettres!"
- > <http://www.africawithin.com/diop/diop\_bio1.htm>
- >
- > Now, the above are matters of fact, so perhaps you can see why I
- > question the assertion about Diop and Obenga being "established, fully-
- > credentialed Egyptologists," when, as far as I can see, neither have
- > degrees in Egyptology.

>

> Reference:

>

- > Howe, S. 1998. _Afrocentrism: Mythical Pasts and Imagined Homes_.
- > London: Verso.

>

- > Katherine Griffis-Greenberg, M. A. (Lon)
- > Member, International Association of Egyptologists
- > ARCE, BANE, EES, ASOR

>

- > Doctoral Program (Egyptology)
- > Oriental Studies
- > University of Oxford
- > Oxford, United Kingdom

>

- > <http://www.griffis-consulting.com>

>

| 23335|2007-10-10 09:32:03|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|

First of all, the Sorbonne in Paris is one of the leading Egyptological centers with its own Egyptology Library and an institute of Papyrus studies.

Diop received a Docteur d'nat 賠Lettres et Sciences Humaines in the field of Ancient Egypt.

There was not at that time a formal "Docteur en Egyptologie" recognized in France, which had a standardized system.
http://fr.wikipedia.org/wiki/Doctorat\_\(France\)#Disciplines\_de\_sant.C3.A9#Disciplines_de_sant.C3.A9)

And as Manu Ampim as noted with references, Diop completed formal Egyptian language training at the University of Paris, Sorbonne.

As Manu also stated, Theophile Obenga studied Egyptology in Geneva where he was instructed in language by Emile Benveniste in Egyptian archaeology by Jean Leclant and Charles Maystre.

You even admitted before on this list that you knew one of Obenga's PhD candidates:

- > Yes, in addition, Dr. Obenga was a professor of Egyptology
- > at the University of Brazzaville and also had at least
- > one PhD candidate at Temple University:
- >
- > BEATTY, Mario H. The Image of Celestial Phenomena in
- > the Book of Coming Forth by Day: An Astronomical and
- > Philological Analysis: A Dissertation Submitted to the
- > Temple University Graduate Board in Partial Fulfillment
- > of the Requirements for the Degree Doctor of Philosophy.
- > Philadelphia: Temple University; 1998. 1 volume
- > (ix + 227 pages)`. University Microfilms Order No.
- > 9838461. Supervised by Theophile J. Obenga.
- >
- > From: The Directory of North American Egyptologists
- > http://www-oi.uchicago.edu/OI/DEPT/RA/ABZU/EGDIR\_LIST.HTML#1

I, in fact, have Mario Beatty's dissertation, so I was aware that Obenga had served as advisor. However, I personally did not question whether Obenga had a doctorate OR knew Egyptian (see below).

http://tech.groups.yahoo.com/group/Ta\_Seti/message/1270

---

Now, we know that both Cheikh Anta Diop and Theophile Obenga were invited by UNESCO along with other recognized Egyptologists to work on the chapter concerning Ancient Egyptian origins.

So how can it be that you fail to recognize them as Egyptologists, which by the way does not require a specific degree in "Egyptology."

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23336|2007-10-10 10:26:15|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala"

wrote:

>

> As Manu also stated, Theophile Obenga studied Egyptology in Geneva
> where he was instructed in language by Emile Benveniste in Egyptian > archaeology by Jean Leclant and Charles Maystre.

>

>

That should be he studied Egyptian archaeology and Egyptian language under Leclant and Maystre. General linguistics under Benveniste.

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23337|2007-10-10 11:52:46|neseret|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Manu Ampim" wrote:

>

> In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Katherine Griffis-Greenberg" wrote:

>

> < In 2004, and at the time I questioned the positions of Dr. Ben

(his > assertion that pHunefer mentions the "mountains of the moon" (of > Uganda) as the origin point of the ancient Egyptians (which it does > not), and the fact I am very unimpressed with Obenga's arguments > (which I have a right to express, having read some of his works), I > had the MA in Egyptian Archaeology.>

>

>

> You have again LIED on this forum. You forget that this Ta-Seti forum keeps a *permanent* record of your ignorant statements.

>

> You first dismissed Yosef Ben-Jochannon's, Cheikh Anta Diop's and Theophile Obenga's credentials and background in 2002 (not "2004" as you falsely state), and you had a lowly B.A. degree as I said, and not an M.A. in Egyptian Archaeology as you falsely claim above.<

Excuse me, I was responding to this comment YOU made

"This case already came up on this forum in March 2004 because when Griffis-Greenberg only held a bachelor's degree (received her M.A. in 2002)"

I obtained my MA in Egyptian Archaeology in 2002. I've had the "lowly" JD degree since 1981.

Note that even YOU acknowledge I obtained my MA in 2002.

Again, I suggest to you to check your own facts before making wild claims such as the above, and then claim I "lied."

> Here is the ignorant and foolish statement that you made in reference to these three scholars allegedly never taking advantage of opportunities to study the Medu Netcher language:

>

> Post 1254 (Feb. 21, 2002) Griffis-Greenberg stated:

> >The same situation cannot be said of Diop, Obenga, Ben-Jochannon, > etc., because, quite frankly, there are a proliferation of places in > the world now where one can study Egyptian language - and the > criticism of these persons reflects merely they have not taken > advantage of these options.<

>

> After your ignorant comments I corrected you as usual and gave you *facts* about their background. You then thanked me for clearing up some of your ignorance.

>

>

> Post 1270 (Feb. 22, 2002) - Manu Ampim stated:

> >>Suffice it to say, that you are dead wrong > in your claim that Cheikh Anta Diop and Theophile Obenga did not > take advantage of opportunities to study the ancient Egyptian > language. Both men took formal Mdw Ntr classes in Paris: Diop at the > Sorbonne and Obenga at the Ecole Pratique des Hautes Etudes. In > fact, my colleague Obenga and I have discussed the details of his > training on a couple of occasions. Thus, you need to correct your > > > information. (For more details see: Chris Gray, _Conceptions of > History: Cheikh Anta Diop & Theophile Obenga_, 1989).<<

>

> Griffis-Greenberg reply:

> >Thank you, Prof. Ampim, for the update. The most recent information
> I had read was from various reports about Diop and a few others, in > regards to what appears to be their working knowledge of the > language. I am content to have the record straight on Diop and > Obenga...>

>
> The record is clear that you are not interested in facts about

African scholars, but rather making foolish statements and distortions to cover up your original foolish statements. All members of this forum can read the record as I have provided and see that you have no credibility. In a court of law, the jury is instructed that if the witness has been shown to have lied, then they are at liberty to dismiss the witness' entire testimony because s(he) has no credibility.<

Excuse me, but if you view my other post, I proved a few telling facts about these African scholars (such as having no degrees in Egyptology, as Paul has claimed). This stands up in any court of law of which I am aware.

As I said, anyone can take Egyptian language classes just about anywhere: the Sorbonne does not have a degree in Egyptology, nor does the Ecole Pratique des Hautes Etudes in Paris. Both may teach Egyptian language (in fact, I believe the Ecole Pratique des Hautes Etudes offers hieratic but not the /mdw nTr/ (glyphs)), but again _*simply taking Egyptian language does not make one an Egyptologist*_.

> Lastly regarding /niwt/, when I return to my office next week I will scan the page of this term in Gardiner's book to show members of this forum that you are either making false statements as you did in the above example, or you are pitifully ignorant of a basic Medu Netcher symbol and have a difficult time seeing reality.

>

> If you are ever going to be at least an average student, you have to learn that DOCUMENTATION BEATS CONVERSATION.

Too bad you never learned this.

Done.

Katherine Griffis-Greenberg, M. A. (Lon)
Member, International Association of Egyptologists
ARCE, BANE, EES, ASOR

Doctoral Program (Egyptology)
Oriental Studies

University of Oxford
Oxford, United Kingdom

<http://www.griffis-consulting.com>

| 23338|2007-10-10 12:40:31|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "neseret" wrote:

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Manu Ampim" wrote:

> >

> Excuse me, but if you view my other post, I proved a few telling > facts about these African scholars (such as having no degrees in > Egyptology, as Paul has claimed). This stands up in any court of law > of which I am aware.

>

> As I said, anyone can take Egyptian language classes just about > anywhere: the Sorbonne does not have a degree in Egyptology, nor does > the Ecole Pratique des Hautes Etudes in Paris. Both may teach > Egyptian language (in fact, I believe the Ecole Pratique des Hautes > Etudes offers hieratic but not the /mdw nTr/ (glyphs)), but again > _*simply taking Egyptian language does not make one an Egyptologist*_.

>

> >

No one claimed they had "degrees in Egyptology."

Many Egyptologists of note do not or did not have such degrees. They could have degrees in archaeology, anthropology, philosophy, literature, religion, philology, etc. but with a specialization in Ancient Egypt.

Some present-day examples:

Antonio Loprieno -- Philosophy

Bruce Williams -- Near East Archaeology

Bruce Trigger -- Anthropology

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23339|2007-10-10 12:57:42|clyde winters|Re: What makes one an Egyptologist|

--- neseret <egylist@griffis-consulting.com> wrote:

Both

> may teach

> Egyptian language (in fact, I believe the Ecole

- > Pratique des Hautes
- > Etudes offers hieratic but not the /mdw nTr/
- > (glyphs)), but again
- > _*simply taking Egyptian language does not make one
- > an Egyptologist*_.
- >

What makes one an Egyptologist?

Clyde

---

Fussy? Opinionated? Impossible to please? Perfect. Join Yahoo!'s user panel and lay it on us.

http://surveylink.yahoo.com/gmrs/yahoo\_panel\_invite.asp?a=7
 | 23340|2007-10-10 13:06:22|neseret|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|
 --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala"
 wrote:

- >
- > First of all, the Sorbonne in Paris is one of the leading
- > Egyptological centers with its own Egyptology Library and an
- institute of Papyrus studies.

Indeed, and that is certainly true, but Obenga's online CV shows that he has a M.A. in History from the University of Paris, Sorbonne - NOT Egyptology. His Ph.D. is in Letters, Arts and Humanities from Montpellier University, France - NOT the Sorbonne.

He also states he has "advanced studies" (but no degree) in History, Linguistics, and Egyptology (University of Geneva, Switzerland); in Prehistory (Institut de Paléontologie Humaine, Paris), and in Linguistics, Philology, and Egyptology at the University of Paris, Sorbonne, and College de France. Yet, neither of these institutions have departments in Egyptology.

- > Diop received a Docteur d'État en Lettres et Sciences Humaines in
- the field of Ancient Egypt.

But not in Egyptology; it was in History.

- > There was not at that time a formal "Docteur en Egyptologie"
- > recognized in France, which had a standardized system.

> <http://fr.wikipedia.org/wiki/Doctorat> (France)

#Disciplines_de_sant.C3.A9

Who, for example, did Diop study under at the Sorbonne if he had a degree in Egyptology? That's usually something listed by every Egyptologist of whom I am aware.

- > And as Manu Ampim as noted with references, Diop completed formal
- > Egyptian language training at the University of Paris, Sorbonne.
- >
- > As Manu also stated, Theophile Obenga studied Egyptology in Geneva
- > where he was instructed in language by Emile Benveniste in Egyptian
- > archaeology by Jean Leclant and Charles Maystre.

Yes, these were "advanced studies" but did not terminate in a degree in Egyptology, as I noted above. Before I took formal training in Egyptology at University College London, I too attended "advanced studies" in Egyptology in London, but in no way did I consider attendance at those classes made me a "fully credentialed" Egyptologist.

- > You even admitted before on this list that you knew one of Obenga's
- > PhD candidates:
- >
- >> Yes, in addition, Dr. Obenga was a professor of Egyptology
- >> at the University of Brazzaville and also had at least
- >> one PhD candidate at Temple University:
- >>
- >> BEATTY, Mario H. The Image of Celestial Phenomena in
- >> the Book of Coming Forth by Day: An Astronomical and
- >> Philological Analysis: A Dissertation Submitted to the
- >> Temple University Graduate Board in Partial Fulfillment
- >> of the Requirements for the Degree Doctor of Philosophy.
- >> Philadelphia: Temple University; 1998. 1 volume
- >> (ix + 227 pages)`. University Microfilms Order No.
- >> 9838461. Supervised by Theophile J. Obenga.
- >>
- >> From: The Directory of North American Egyptologists
- >> http://www-oi.uchicago.edu/OI/DEPT/RA/ABZU/EGDIR\_LIST.HTML#1
- >
- > I, in fact, have Mario Beatty's dissertation, so I was aware that
- > Obenga had served as advisor. However, I personally did not question
- > whether Obenga had a doctorate OR knew Egyptian (see below).
- >
- > http://tech.groups.yahoo.com/group/Ta\_Seti/message/1270

> ---

Beatty did not receive a degree in Egyptology, for Temple University has no such degree. As best as I can determine from the PhD dissertation by Beatty, the degree is in Africana Studies, which Temple University DOES offer.

> So how can it be that you fail to recognize them as Egyptologists, > which by the way does not require a specific degree in "Egyptology."

In definition, an "Egyptologist" is "an archeologist who specializes in Egyptology." This requires formal training. Without a formal education in Egyptology, most of those who might wish to make a living at Egyptology lack both the formal historical education and various skills, such as reading hieroglyphics. Furthermore, Egyptology is not a profession that can usually be practiced independently, such as photography. One must usually draw a paycheck from a museum, university or other organization that will require a formal education in the field. And unlike many years ago, when one only needed some financing to go treasure hunting in Egypt, today the SCA (Supreme Council of Antiquities) limits excavation to recognized organizations which are mostly museums and universities.

In reality, almost all of the Egyptologists who do important work in the field have advanced degrees, and usually doctorates earned from very specific schools.

Katherine Griffis-Greenberg, M. A. (Lon)
Member, International Association of Egyptologists
ARCE, BANE, EES, ASOR

Doctoral Program (Egyptology)
Oriental Studies
University of Oxford
Oxford, United Kingdom

<http://www.griffis-consulting.com>

| 23341|2007-10-10 13:27:35|neseret|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|
--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala"
wrote:

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "neseret" wrote:

>>

>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Manu Ampim" wrote:

>>>

>
> > Excuse me, but if you view my other post, I proved a few telling > > facts about these African scholars (such as having no degrees in > > Egyptology, as Paul has claimed). This stands up in any court of law

> > of which I am aware.

> >

> > As I said, anyone can take Egyptian language classes just about > > anywhere: the Sorbonne does not have a degree in Egyptology, nor does

> > the Ecole Pratique des Hautes Etudes in Paris. Both may teach > > Egyptian language (in fact, I believe the Ecole Pratique des

Hautes

> > Etudes offers hieratic but not the /mdw nTr/ (glyphs)), but again > > *_simply taking Egyptian language does not make one an Egyptologist*_.

> >

> > >

>

> No one claimed they had "degrees in Egyptology."

_You_ claimed they were "full credentialed Egyptologists." They aren't. They are scholars with a special interest in ancient Egypt, but who do not have formal degrees/training in Egyptology.

> Many Egyptologists of note do not or did not have such degrees.

They

> could have degrees in archaeology, anthropology, philosophy, > literature, religion, philology, etc. but with a specialization in > Ancient Egypt.

>

> Some present-day examples:

>

> Antonio Loprieno -- Philosophy

And is considered primarily a linguist with specialisation in ancient languages (not just Egyptian).

> Bruce Williams -- Near East Archaeology

I believe Williams considers himself a "Nubiologist" and not an "Egyptologist."

> Bruce Trigger -- Anthropology

And Trigger considers himself an Anthropologist and not an "Egyptologist" - he's a professor of Anthropology at McGill University In Canada.

Again, to be an "fully credentialed" Egyptologist implies formal training and degrees in the field.

Katherine Griffis-Greenberg, M. A. (Lon)
Member, International Association of Egyptologists
ARCE, BANE, EES, ASOR

Doctoral Program (Egyptology)
Oriental Studies
University of Oxford
Oxford, United Kingdom

<http://www.griffis-consulting.com>

| 23342|2007-10-10 13:28:12|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "neseret" wrote:

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala"

> wrote:

> >

> > Diop received a Docteur d'nat 賠Lettres et Sciences Humaines in > the field of Ancient Egypt.

>

> But not in Egyptology; it was in History.

>

There was no such doctorate with the title of doctorate of Egyptology, yet the Sorbonne continued to churn out internationally recognized Egyptologists.

> Who, for example, did Diop study under at the Sorbonne if he had a > degree in Egyptology? That's usually something listed by every > Egyptologist of whom I am aware.

>
>

Technically he was under the supervision of Africanist Marcel Griaule (Dogon studies) and Gaston Bachelard (philosophy).

His Egyptological studies came under Gustave Lefebvre, J.J. Clere and Jean Sainte Fare Garnot.

>

In definition, an "Egyptologist" is "an archeologist who specializes in Egyptology." This requires formal training. Without a formal education in Egyptology, most of those who might wish to make a living at Egyptology lack both the formal historical education and various skills, such as reading hieroglyphics.

>

There are different definitions of "Egyptologist" that include more than just archaeologists. In fact, many Egyptology depts. have few if any archaeologists.

I've addressed the education qualification in another message. It is not required to have a degree in "Egyptology" to be an Egyptologist.

Obenga held a professor of Egyptology. Diop was allowed to perform melanin tests on mummies from Paris and cranial studies on ancient Egyptian skulls. They were recognized as professional Egyptologists.

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23343|2007-10-10 13:33:26|neseret|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala"

wrote:

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "neseret" wrote:

>>

>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala"

>> wrote:

>>>

>>> Diop received a Docteur d'nat 賠Lettres et Sciences Humaines

in > > the field of Ancient Egypt.

> >

> > But not in Egyptology; it was in History.

> >

>

> There was no such doctorate with the title of doctorate of

Egyptology,

> yet the Sorbonne continued to churn out internationally recognized

> Egyptologists.

>

>

> > Who, for example, did Diop study under at the Sorbonne if he had

a > > degree in Egyptology? That's usually something listed by every > > Egyptologist of whom I am aware.

> >

> >

>

> Technically he was under the supervision of Africanist Marcel

Griaule

> (Dogon studies) and Gaston Bachelard (philosophy).

>

> His Egyptological studies came under Gustave Lefebvre, J.J. Clere

and Jean Sainte Fare Garnot.

But these men were not willing to give him a doctorate in the field of Egyptology? Interesting.

> >

> In definition, an "Egyptologist" is "an archeologist who specializes > in Egyptology." This requires formal training. Without a formal > education in Egyptology, most of those who might wish to make a > living at Egyptology lack both the formal historical education and > various skills, such as reading hieroglyphics.

> >

>

> There are different definitions of "Egyptologist" that include more > than just archaeologists. In fact, many Egyptology depts. have few if any archaeologists.

I can't think of many Egyptology department who do not have Egyptologists who haven't been in the field on excavations. Perhaps you could name them.

> I've addressed the education qualification in another message. It is > not required to have a degree in "Egyptology" to be an Egyptologist.

Again, I have answered that as well.

>
> Obenga held a professor of Egyptology.

Where? for he does not list it on his resume.

<<http://www.sfsu.edu/~ethnicst/afers/obenga.html>>

Katherine Griffis-Greenberg, M. A. (Lon)
Member, International Association of Egyptologists
ARCE, BANE, EES, ASOR

Doctoral Program (Egyptology)
Oriental Studies
University of Oxford
Oxford, United Kingdom

<http://www.griffis-consulting.com>

| 23344|2007-10-10 13:43:58|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "neseret" wrote:

>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala"
> wrote:
>>
>> -

>> Some present-day examples:

>>

>> Antonio Loprieno -- Philosophy

>

> And is considered primarily a linguist with specialisation in ancient > languages (not just Egyptian).

>

He is a Professor of Egyptology at the UCLA Dept of Egyptology.

<http://www.egyptology.ucla.edu/page%20files/faculty/loprieno.htm>

He just doesn't have the Griffis-Greenburg License of Egyptology yet.

> > Bruce Williams -- Near East Archaeology

>

> I believe Williams considers himself a "Nubiologist" and not

> an "Egyptologist."

>

Wouldn't that require a degree in "Nubianology?" And isn't there a Nubia in Egypt?

Williams, and also Lorpieno, are listed as Egyptologists in both the North American and International Association of Egyptologists listings.

> > Bruce Trigger -- Anthropology

>

> And Trigger considers himself an Anthropologist and not > an "Egyptologist" - he's a professor of Anthropology at McGill

> University In Canada.

Bruce Trigger is also listed as an Egyptologist by the Oriental Institute.

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23345|2007-10-10 13:46:44|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "neseret" wrote:

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala"

> wrote:

> >

> >

> But these men were not willing to give him a doctorate in the field > of Egyptology? Interesting.

>

Ok, I'm getting ready to stop, but I'll repeat this one more time -- they did not have a specific doctorate with that title at the time.

>
> Again, I have answered that as well.
> >
> > Obenga held a professor of Egyptology.
>
> Where? for he does not list it on his resume.
>
>

I've already mentioned this previously.

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala
| 23346|2007-10-10 14:06:48|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|
Thank you, BTW.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Ferg" wrote:

>
> Send me your email address
>
> Ferg
>
>
> ----- Original Message -----
> From: Mahari Mengistu
> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Sent: Sunday, October 07, 2007 6:00 AM
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?

>
>
> Please do the same for me.
> HTP,
> Mahari
>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Dexter Harper" wrote:

> >
> >
> > Peace & Greetings Ferg,
> >
> > Can you send that paper to my email address? I am unable to receive
> > it through the Ta-Seti yahooogroup email.
> >
> > dharp3r@

> >

> > Thanks,

> >

> > Sharma Men Ra

> >

> >

> >

> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Ferg" wrote:

> > >

> > > Hi.

> > >

> > > I've researched NTR a few years ago and here is a shortened > > version. Hope it will stimulate some thought

> > >

> > > Ferg Somo

> > >

> >

>

| 23347|2007-10-10 14:19:59|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"? for Ferg|

Forgive me if someone has already asked this question. I am just catching up with the recent posts. Asar, in "a" toward the bottom of the staff aren't those alternating reverse "n's"? Or is it a coincidence that may not be a co-incidence at all? The pattern created looks very much like Afrikan cloth.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep"
wrote:

>

> I would also like to add that one must on some level deal with the early > depictions of the form including the possible nature of the wrappings > around nTr symbol. A good book to consult is the English translation (if > you can't read German) of "Conceptions of God in Ancient Egypt: The

One

> and the Many" By Erik Hornung. Below are some of the early depictions.

>
>
>
>

> Figure A is from the old kingdom onward. Figures B and C are

predynastic

> depictions. What is clear from the early depictions is that stripes, > usually on flags on poles, is very vital in understanding this symbol.

> From the early dynastic period onward, which are almost always pointed,

> are shown in front of the sanctuary of Nit (Neith, Netet). See W.

Petrie

> Royal Tombs of the Earliest Dynasties Vol. II and G. Matthione

Scandone,

> Or Ant 6 (1967) 145-168.

>

> What Hornung observes on page 35 is that this symbol in its "enigmatic"

> or "cryptographic" form has the value of /w/ on a number of scarabs.

> Etienne Drioton derived this from /wt/ -- "wrap, bind." From earlier > periods the word /wt/ meant embalmer and was the word for "mummy" > wrappings. During the Roman period in the papyrus Tunis they have

for

> the symbol /nTr/, jw.f grs - "he is buried."

>

> This further leads me to believe that this symbol is a symbol for > ancestors along with the information I presented in the previous post

> below. This makes a lot of sense when we consider the Ba'Ntu concept of > the "Vee" and the Dingo Dingo (life process) cosmograph [dikenga].

As

> the Kmtjw were mimicing the conceptual birthing process (Musoni - > symbolized the color yellow) performed in the womb and recreating

it for > the soul to be born in the Luvemba stage represented by the color

white.

> Remember these flag cloths and colors were also on the Djed Pillars

of

> Asar who we know after his death became "lord of the perfect Black"

in

> the realm of the Duat/Tuat (ancestral realm). From that point on he > became deified and mummification was associated with Asar. The colors

> associated with the flags in the new kingdom were red, white, green

> (sometimes only red and white). In some you will find Black as well, > especially on the Tet or Djed pillars.

>

> I think that this symbol is one of those symbols that works like

Maat

> with its many definitions that individually feed off of each other

that > can be summed up by the larger term. The more we understand the nature > of energy (ngolo), man's purpose and believed cycle before life,

during

> life and after death, and the workings of nature, the better we can

> piece this puzzle together.

>

> Asar Imhotep

> <http://www.mochasuite.com>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep"

wrote:

> >
> >
> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Ferg" egyptology@ wrote:
> > >
> > > Hi.
> > >
> > > I've researched NTR a few years ago and here is a shortened

version.

> > Hope it will stimulate some thought
> > >
> > > Ferg Somo
> > >
> >
> >
> >
> > This is some very good linguistic work. As many know on this board, I > > have advocated that the key concepts which make up the Ta-Merrian > > ontology is to be found among the Ba'Ntu of east and central

Africa

> > (based on my personal correspondences with priests from the Nile > > Valley
> > and Kongo regions). I personally feel your work is going in the right

> > direction.
> >
> > I would just like to add the following analysis for your research > > concerning Ntr and it deals with the breaking down of the individual

> > glyphs that make up the Tri-literal sign for /nTr/.
> >
> > There are certain things we have to keep in mind when dealing with > > classical African thought and its representation in art and > > communication. That is that they did not make up signs or associate > > symbols with concepts for no reason. To understand why they chose > > something to represent a concept (usually found in nature), then

you > > have to really understand their cosmology. It is always through

the

> > cosmology that the true understanding of a people's expression can > > realized.

> >

> > With that in mind, we must look at the cosmology of the ancient

Kmtjw

> to > > understand why they would choose the symbols they did to represent > > /nTr/. Contrary to statement made by Katherine in an earlier post

(in > > Message #23252), the Ta-Merrians did spell out the word /nTr/ and

each

> > "glyph" refers to concept in their cosmology. What I am positing > > is that to really get an understanding of the word Ntr, you have to > draw

> > from the many creation stories of Kmt and study the cosmology of

the > > Ba'Ntu (the Kongo in particular).

> >

> > The signs in /nTr/ are:

> >

> >

> >

> > = n [water ? the "nu" or "nun" ? primordial

> > matter]

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> > = tj or ch [rope]

> >

> > = r [open mouth]

> >

> > The meaning of the /n/ and /tj/ glyphs are hinted at in the

Shabbaka

> > Stone (a very good treaty can be found here -

> > <http://www.sofiatopia.org/maat/shabaka.htm>

> > <<http://www.sofiatopia.org/maat/shabaka.htm>> ). For we know that

the

> > Nu(n) is the realm of matter before form. It is also the ancestral

> realm

> > (keep this in mind). The /r/ glyph refers to the nature of how

> creation

> > came into being ? through sound. "God" commanded/spoke > > creation into existence. Line 53 of the Shabaka stone is one such > > reference to that in the whole Men-Nefer Theology;

> >

> > "(53) There comes into being in the heart; there comes into being

by

> the > > tongue as the image of Atum ! Ptah is the very great, who gives life

> to > > all the gods and their kas. Lo, through this heart and by this tongue.

> >

> > So here we have a reference to all of the beings coming into existence

> > from the mind [the Nu -/n/] and the tongue [Mouth - /r/] of the > ultimate

> > creative force. Remember the first Ntrw were NOT physical beings,

but

> > the necessary components of creation: you can't create anything

> > unless you first create the environment necessary to sustain the > > creation. Thus we have shu (air), tefnut (moisture), geb (earth)

and > nut

> > (sky/space). Asar, Aset, Set, Heru and Nebet-Het represent various > other > > necessities in nature (Aset/light ? Set/entropy for example).

> >

> > The Menefer Theology, as well as all of the other creation stories, is > > the articulation of how potential energy took form and became

kinetic

> > energy. Before we get to the /tj/ or /ch/ glyph, let's go back to > > Bantu concept of reality.

> >

> > The Ba'Ntu believes that the universe is essentially a big ball of > > energy waves and radiations. As Dr. Fu-kiau (Self Healing Power

and

> > Therapy ? pg. 9) has articulated:

> >

> > "nothing is isolated in the universe?Likewise, human beings, > > living or dead, as living suns rising and setting around the world,

> are > > all related to each other. The warmth of radiations never die at > sunset,

> > the physical death. It is here that the misconstruction of the myth of > > the ancestors' Cult of Africa began in the Western literacy of > > Africa."

> >

> > This philosophy is found in every single study I have done on

African

> > spiritual systems. To African people there is no separation of the > > ancestral world and the living world: we exist in different forms

not > > readily visible to each other. This is the very theory that helped Dr.

> > Gabriel Oyibo come up with God Almighty Grand Unified Theorem

(GAGUT).

> >

> > The core of an African community is spirit. Trying to understand

an > > indigenous community without recognition of this fact will lead

you

> > astray. They are always trying to stay connected to spirit

because it

> is > > spirit world (the Nu) that regulates what goes on here. So in other

> > words, rituals and spiritual systems are designed to keep that > > connection strong and the word connection is key to understanding

the > > 3rd glyph under consideration; /tj/.

> >

> > In Dr. Fu-Kiau's work mentioned above pg 9-10, he goes on to state:

> >

> > "African people do not worship the dead. They venerate N'singa

> > dikanda waninga, the community's genetically bounding rope (power)

> > strengthened between the dead and the living." (emphasis mine)

> >

> > In the Kongo they are always speaking about "tying and untying > > knots" or "ropes." This is the metaphor used to convey the > > concept of keeping connected to the spirit world as a rope is > something

> > used to ground a large object or tie something together: in other > words

> > a rope is what keeps something from being separate. And sense you > > can't fully grasp what is in the vastness of the spirit world, you > > do know some aspects of the spirit world; you just call it/them > > ancestors. They are your link between all of the knowledge in the > spirit

> > world and the proper methods to carry out the potential that lay

> dormant

> > in the Nu.

> >

> > So when we review the word /nTr/, you can see the philosophy of

the > > Ba'Ntu (and the rest of Black Africa for that matter) conveyed in > > the glyphs. So we have 3 things vital for the understanding of > > existence: N = spirit world | R = creation itself spoken from the > mouth

> > of the creator | Tj/Ch = the essence that keeps them connected

(the > rope

> > - ancestors). So on one level Ntr is speaking about NaTuRe as studying

> > nature is how you will understand the workings of the spirit world

> (the > > Nu). Maintaining a healthy relationship with nature is maintaining a > > healthy relationship with spirit.

> >

> > For those of you familiar with spiritual systems such as Ifa or

the

> > Abosom system of the Akan know that nature is a natural oracle system.

> > All African systems that I have come across all possess this > philosophy:

> > that nature is an oracle system and if you can read Mdw Ntr

(mother > > nature, the language of God, R = mouth,) then you can divine on things

> > and make better decisions concerning life. I wish I had enough time to > > fully treat this as it is quite extensive.

> >

> > But in conclusion, when we die, according to African people, we

are > > still a part of the universe: we are just now a part of the collective

> > energy that permeates nature until we decide to come back

> (reincarnate).

> > Ancestors and nature /nTrw/ act as intermediaries between man and

God

> > /Nwn/ and it is in understanding this fundamental concept in > > philosophy that will ultimately lead us into understanding the > symbology > > in Kemetic Anthropology and Cosmology. This is also part of the reason

African

> > why I associate Ntrw with ancestors and not God itself. As Dr. Fu-

Kiau

> > has mentioned, "They venerate N'singa dikanda waninga, the > > community's genetically bounding rope (power)," and the rope > > /tj/ being the "power" behind objects in creation is consistent > > with all indigenous spiritual systems (Orishas, Abosom). African
> people
> > don't have a representation for God.
> >
> > As Baudin, a Roman Catholic priest of French descent, wrote about

the

> > Yoruba God in these words:
> >
> > "The Blacks have neither statutes, nor symbols to represent God.
> > They consider him as the Supreme Primordial Being, author and father

> of > > the gods and spirits. At the same time, they think that god after > > beginning the organization of the world, charged Obatala to finish it > > and govern it, then withdrew and went into an eternal rest to look > after > > his happiness (Awolalu 1979, p. 4). (emphasis mine).

> >
> > You won't find anywhere in Africa a symbol for the supreme being,
> > just what can characterize a particular aspect of its being - /Nu/
> (the > > creative potential).
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> > Awolalu, J. O. (1979). Yoruba beliefs and sacrificial rites.

London:

> > Longman Group Ltd.

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> > Asar Imhotep

> > <http://www.mochasuite.com> <<http://www.mochasuite.com/>>

> >

>

| 23348|2007-10-10 19:36:26|asar_imhotep|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"? for reply to Mahari|

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:

>

> Forgive me if someone has already asked this question. I am just > catching up with the recent posts. Asar, in "a" toward the bottom of > the staff aren't those alternating reverse "n's"? Or is it a co> incidence that may not be a co-incidence at all? The pattern created > looks very much like Afrikan cloth.

> HTP,

> Mahari

>

I really can't say at this point as I would need more samples to compare it to. But it does bring to question the Bantu concept of the "Vee" in art, which is found all over Africa, especially in cloth patterns. Dr. Fu-Kiau in African Cosmology of the Bantu Kongo pg 143 explains it like this:

"This diamond-like pattern, very common in Bantu industry of art and weaving, is a focus on life [moyo], its reproductive web, and its value among the Bantu people in particular, and among all African people in general. Velvets woven on the ground of this pattern became diadactical tools used to teach the formation process of societies; these patterns are taught to the communities, the families and extended families. Western scholars of the African industry of art and weaving (visual art) were unable to explain these African iconographs. Their lack of knowledge about the Bantu world view, their cosmologies, and their vital concept of the "Vee" discussed here did not prepare them. "

I think we need to see some more patterns before we can make a definitive decision. I would like to add to this discussion the similarities between the common sign of /nTr/ with that of the /a/ (arm- "ayin")

From Shwaller de Lubicz The Temple of Man: Sacred Architecture and the Perfect Man (1977) pg. 64

Is this a coincidence or is there a deeper meaning behind the similarities. Another similarity which I do not think is coincidental is that of the "Flail" and that of the various picks of Sun rays.

From Schwaller Lubicz in Ancient Egypt, Science and the Evolution of Consciousness (1978) pg. 33

Compare the common "3-rays" with that on all of the "Flails" that we know of. Also pay attention to the unique "fringe" type pattern of the first concept of /nTr/ in Figure C above, the fringe and shape patterns along each fring or ray of light extending from the icons in the figure above, and the Crook and Flail image below.

Do not the "checker like" patterns around the Crook and Flail resemble the "cloth pattern" around the /nTr/ symbol in Figure A above? Tell me what you all think.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

| 23349|2007-10-11 04:55:27|neseret|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala"

wrote:

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "neseret" wrote:

>>

>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala"

>> wrote:

>>>

>>> -

>

>>> Some present-day examples:

>>>

>>> Antonio Loprieno -- Philosophy

>>

>> And is considered primarily a linguist with specialisation in ancient >> languages (not just Egyptian).

>

> He is a Professor of Egyptology at the UCLA Dept of Egyptology.

>

> <http://www.egyptology.ucla.edu/page%20files/faculty/loprieno.htm>

>

> He just doesn't have the Griffis-Greenburg License of Egyptology

yet.

I don't think I said he wasn't an Egyptologist: I commented upon what he is best known for...and BTW...

...he doesn't have the training you implied. His resume, when he was at Basel, Switzerland, shows that in fact he took his training in obtained a Baccalaur 黠 Europ 饮 in 1972. He then studied Egyptology, Linguistics, and Semitic Languages and Literatures at the University of Torino where he received his PhD and worked as an assistant.

So, he trained _specifically_ in Egyptology, not Philosophy, as you claimed, and as I pointed out, is what is required to be an Egyptologist. He is primarily known for his linguistic acumen in ancient Egyptian language and otehr languages, and in Egyptian religion. As the UCLA site says:

"(Loprieno) is co-editor of Lingua Aegyptia, the Journal of Egyptian Language Studies. His research includes work in the fields of language, literature, comparative Afroasiatics and religion."

<http://www.egyptology.ucla.edu/page%20files/faculty-trad.htm>

> > > Bruce Williams -- Near East Archaeology
> >
> > I believe Williams considers himself a "Nubiologist" and not > > an "Egyptologist."
> >
>
> Wouldn't that require a degree in "Nubianology?" And isn't there a > Nubia in Egypt?

No, Nubia, both Lower and Upper, is/was a separate country from Egypt, just as any good book or map can tell you. Today, Upper Nubia is known as Sudan, and Lower Nubia is known as Lake Aswan. Further, even Williams' own dissertation submitted at the University of Chicago for a PhD in Near Eastern Languages and Civilizations shows that his interest was not primarily about Egypt, but with the entire ANE, and with some specific interest in Nubia.

Egyptologists recognised Nubiologists as persons with specific interest in Nubia. Reisner was, in today's parlance, a Nubiologist. Today, Stuart Smith in California, is another.

> Williams, and also Loprieno, are listed as Egyptologists in both the > North American and International Association of Egyptologists listings.

>
> > > Bruce Trigger -- Anthropology
> >
> > And Trigger considers himself an Anthropologist and not > > an "Egyptologist" - he's a professor of Anthropology at McGill > > University In Canada.
>
> Bruce Trigger is also listed as an Egyptologist by the Oriental Institute.

Er, no, he isn't. You should read the Introduction to the DNAE more closely next time:

"The directory primarily lists trained individuals (including current doctoral students who have obtained candidacy for the Ph.D. degree in Egyptology) whose regular work involves the history, archaeology, language or culture of ancient (pre-Islamic) Egypt. _**The directory also lists a number of other scholars who, while not primarily trained in Egyptology, are engaged in research, administration, preservation, or other related work in this field**_."

<http://oi.uchicago.edu/OI/DEPT/RA/ABZU/EGDIR\_INTRO.HTML>

So, inclusion in the DNAE does not make one an 'Egyptologist', but can merely means that one is a scholar in another discipline who worked in issues in the field of Egyptology.

I have one last comment to make, in the next post, and then I'm done.

Katherine Griffis-Greenberg, M. A. (Lon)
Member, International Association of Egyptologists
ARCE, BANE, EES, ASOR

Doctoral Program (Egyptology)
Oriental Studies
University of Oxford
Oxford, United Kingdom

<http://www.griffis-consulting.com>

| 23351|2007-10-11 06:05:48|Ferg|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|

Now that you are done and cleared the air could you please answer the question.

Again, what are your views and ideas on the symbol of divinity NTR which was discussed in this forum? Somo.

----- Original Message -----

From: neseret

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Sent: Thursday, October 11, 2007 1:08 PM

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala" wrote:

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "neseret" wrote:

>>

>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala"

>> wrote:

>>>

>>>

>> But these men were not willing to give him a doctorate in the field > > of Egyptology? Interesting.

>

> Ok, I'm getting ready to stop, but I'll repeat this one more time --

> they did not have a specific doctorate with that title at the time.

No, YOU are missing the point. When one graduated in the Sorbonne with a PhD it was for a specific set of studies, albeit from a combined coursework on ancient Egypt, as there is/was no "degree" in Egyptology. Diop's was in History, not in Egyptian Studies, which the Sorbonne does grant. Such studies are possible, but is not considered a Egyptology degree, as it too is a "combined" major at the Sorbonne.

Had Diop been granted such a degree in Egyptian Studies, it would not have taken three tries, as these Egyptologists listed as his "advisors" would have agreed on his results. They didn't and rejected it **three times**. It was his defense before "...an array of sociologists, anthropologists and historians.. " (NOT Egyptologists) which finally granted his Docteur es Lettres.

> > Again, I have answered that as well.

> > >

> > > Obenga held a professor of Egyptology.

> >

> > Where? for he does not list it on his resume.

>

> I've already mentioned this previously.

Where? You merely said in Message #23342 that he was a Professor of Egyptology, but you don't say _where_ he was such a professor. Obenga also does not list such a position on his resume at SFSU. Now, _there_ he is a professor in Africana Studies in the College of Ethnic Studies, but he is _not_ listed as a professor of Egyptology, and SFSU does not have an Egyptology Department. So, where was he a "professor of Egyptology"?

You also wrote:

>Now, we know that both Cheikh Anta Diop and Theophile Obenga were invited by UNESCO along with other recognized Egyptologists to work on the chapter concerning Ancient Egyptian origins.<

Amazingly enough, that's _not_ what the reviews of the time said about their appearance at the UNESCO symposium, which was considered disruptive and apparently uninvited by the participants in the symposium. This is Bruce Trigger's comment about Obenga and Diop at the UNESCO symposium:

"The discussion of these (Egyptologists' ) papers consisted largely of an unproductive and sometimes acrimonious confrontation between Cheikh Anta Diop and Theophile Obenga, who both maintained that the Egyptians had been blacks prior to their conquest by the Persians and the Greeks, and other participants who either categorically rejected this view or regarded it as extreme and dogmatic."

He continues:

"Obenga presented an unscheduled paper in which he attempted to demonstrate that ancient Egyptian was a "Negro-African" language rather than a member of Joseph Greenberg's Afro-Asiatic family. His comparison of random lexical items culled from a hodge-podge of sometimes unrelated modern African languages employs procedures that scientific linguists have long rejected as incapable of establishing any kind of valid genetic relationships among languages. It is difficult to conceive of any justification for publishing this paper."

Trigger concluded:

"It seems extraordinary that not one physical anthropologist or any leading comparative linguist was present at this conference, _which was clearly not the world meeting of foremost authorities on the subjects being discussed that it is presented as being_. In the discussion, P. L. Shinnie observed that the absence of anyone able to present authoritative, up-to-date views on the theory of racial and physical variations had impeded a productive discussion of Egyptian ethnic origins. It is likewise regrettable that Greenberg or some other comparative linguist specializing in African languages was not present to respond to Obenga's paper or that Hintze was unable to comment on Leclant's presentation. In particular, it is distressing to see antiquated racial concepts and unscientific linguistic speculations being widely disseminated under the imprimatur of UNESCO. For this, the anonymous organizers of the symposium, rather than the participants, must bear the major share of the blame." (Trigger 1980: 372-373; emphasis _ _ added)

Source: Trigger, B. 1980 (Review) The Peopling of Ancient Egypt and the Decipherment of Meroitic Script: Proceedings of the Symposium Held in Cairo from 28 January to 3 February 1974 by UNESCO. The International Journal of African Historical Studies, Vol. 13/2: 371-373.

So, please don't tell me how "accepted" these men were/are as Egyptologists, or that they were invited to the 1974 UNESCO symposium by the other Egyptologists or other participants at the symposium, for there is ample published information that such was/is not the case.

With this, I'm done. Argue to the wall on this, if you like, but facts are facts, and I feel no need to continue this discussion.

Katherine Griffis-Greenberg, M. A. (Lon)
Member, International Association of Egyptologists
ARCE, BANE, EES, ASOR

Doctoral Program (Egyptology)
Oriental Studies
University of Oxford
Oxford, United Kingdom

| 23352|2007-10-11 07:25:25|elliottandelliottmtg|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|
Katherine,

I know that I do not have the credentials you tout but I am very interested to know if you consider the people of Kemet to be of black African origins. What has all of your education taught you concerning the racial identity of the people of Kemet?

Elliott

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "neseret" wrote:
>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala"
> wrote:
>>
>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "neseret" wrote:
>>>
>>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala"
>>> wrote:
>>>>
>>>> Diop received a Docteur d'nat 賠Lettres et Sciences
Humaines
> in >>> the field of Ancient Egypt.
>>>
>>> But not in Egyptology; it was in History.

> > >
> >
> > There was no such doctorate with the title of doctorate of > Egyptology,
> > yet the Sorbonne continued to churn out internationally recognized > > Egyptologists.
> >
> >
> > > Who, for example, did Diop study under at the Sorbonne if he had
> a > > > degree in Egyptology? That's usually something listed by every > > > Egyptologist of whom I am aware.
> > >
> > >
> >
> > Technically he was under the supervision of Africanist Marcel > Griaule
> > (Dogon studies) and Gaston Bachelard (philosophy).
> >
> > His Egyptological studies came under Gustave Lefebvre, J.J.
Clere
> and Jean Sainte Fare Garnot.
>
> But these men were not willing to give him a doctorate in the field
> of Egyptology? Interesting.
>
> > >
> > In definition, an "Egyptologist" is "an archeologist who specializes > > in Egyptology." This requires formal training. Without a formal > > education in Egyptology, most of those who might wish to make a > > living at Egyptology lack both the formal historical education
and > > various skills, such as reading hieroglyphics.
> > >
> >
> > There are different definitions of "Egyptologist" that include
more > > than just archaeologists. In fact, many Egyptology depts. have few
> if any archaeologists.
>

> I can't think of many Egyptology department who do not have > Egyptologists who haven't been in the field on excavations.
Perhaps
> you could name them.
>
> > I've addressed the education qualification in another message.
It is > > not required to have a degree in "Egyptology" to be an Egyptologist.
>
> Again, I have answered that as well.
> >
> > Obenga held a professor of Egyptology.
>
> Where? for he does not list it on his resume.
>
> <<http://www.sfsu.edu/~ethnicst/afrs/obenga.html>>
>
> Katherine Griffis-Greenberg, M. A. (Lon)
> Member, International Association of Egyptologists
> ARCE, BANE, EES, ASOR
>
> Doctoral Program (Egyptology)
> Oriental Studies
> University of Oxford
> Oxford, United Kingdom
>
> <http://www.griffis-consulting.com>
>
| 23353|2007-10-11 07:42:55|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|
--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "neseret" wrote:
>
>
> I have one last comment to make, in the next post, and then I'm done.
>
>

You're done, because you know as usual you've been shown to not know you're subject matter.

There are many Egyptologists who do not have specific degrees in Egyptology. In fact in Europe degrees often do not mention the specialization but instead show a general degree as Docteur de Lettres along with dissertation which in Diop's case was "Qu'ont-ils fait les Egyptiens prénastiques."

Of course, Loprieno had advanced studies in Egyptology as did Diop and Obenga, that was their specialization, part of their credentials, however his official doctorate title is not in "Egyptology."

Diop and Obenga were invited as Egyptologists to the UNESCO "Symposium on the Peopling of Ancient Egypt and the Deciphering of the Meroitic Script" and published in the massive volumes from that meeting in the section on Ancient Egypt.

You seem to try to give some idea that they just barged in and forced UNESCO to publish their papers. You have a terrible habit of misrepresentation.

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23354|2007-10-11 10:26:57|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Zahi Hawass insisted Tuesday that Tutankhamun was not black|

Thanks, Paul,

You were right on time.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala" wrote:

>

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari" wrote:

> >

> > You assessment seems almost as narrow-minded and limited as

Hawass'.

> There are any number of images of Egyptians with Africoid features

> INCLUDING kinky hair/braided wigs.

> >

>

> These are known as "Nubian wigs" and they leave quite an impression

when > you see them in person.

>

>

[http://www.acewigs.com/shop/image\_uploads/News/Newswighistory\_M.jpg%5d

>
> [PRINCESS NESIKHONSU'S WIG.]
> PRINCESS NESIKHONSU'S WIG.
>
>
>
>
> Regards.
> Paul Kekai Manansala
>
> | 23355|2007-10-11 11:24:52|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?|
You are being TOO GENEROUS. She may have all the figures but as for the facts, that is yet to be determined for the world. For us however, the facts are clear and she DOES NOT have them or want them.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Ferg" wrote:

>
> Katherine.
>
> You seem to have all the facts and figures at your fingertips at the press of a button, but sadly you have not made any positive contribution to the more important topic, namely the discussion on the symbol of divinity NTR.
>
> I did ask you once. Again what are your views about the symbol ?
>
> Somo.

>
>
>
>
> ----- Original Message -----
> From: neseret
> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> Sent: Wednesday, October 10, 2007 8:10 AM
> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?
>
>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala"

> wrote:
>
>> Katherine,
>>
>> On usenet you had accused Cheikh Anta Diop of not having Egytology
>> credentials. On this list you at least insinuated the same thing > > about Theophile Obenga.

> >

> > The truth is that both were/are established, fully-credentialed

> > Egyptologists in the French academy. Obenga has trained Egyptologists > > for doctorates here in the United States as well.

>

> The Societe Francaise d'Egyptologie, the "French academy" to which you > refer, specifically states that its membership includes people who are > not Egyptologists, but "people interested into the survey of Egypt

> since its origins." There is no requirement that one be an

> Egyptologist to be a part of this organisation

> <<http://www.thotweb.com/portail/associations/SFE.htm>>, nor, I might

> add, to be a member of the International Association of Egyptologists

> <<http://www.iae.lmu.de/>>, though a non-Egyptologist needs references

> from 2 Egyptologists to join, per Section 3.3 of the Statutes.

So,

> membership in either organisation does not "fully-credential" you as an

> Egyptologist. A degree in Egyptology does allow you to refer to > yourself as an Egyptologist, as you have academic credentials in the > field.

>

> According to what is known about Obenga's biography by me, I see no > reference to an Egyptology degree, but studies in history only:

>

> 'Diop's best-known intellectual disciple is the Congolese historical > linguist Theophile Obenga, who has clearly also been the most important

> of the relatively few African historians who have sought to pursue and > extend Diop's line of thought. Obenga, a little younger than Diop, was > born in Brazzaville in 1930, from a Mbochi-speaking background: he has > sought to trace parallels between Mbochi and ancient Egyptian

> languages, just as Diop has done with his native Wolof. Obenga's > university training was varied: he studied at Pittsburgh

 University in > the USA, and at the Ecole Pratique des Hautes Etudes, the College de > France, and the University of Bordeaux. By contrast with Diop's long > years as permanent oppositionist in Senega, Obenga spent periods in the > Congo Republic's corridors of power, serving as Foreign Minister
 in > 1975-7 under the Marxist government of Marien Ngouabi. Thereafter
 he > acted as Director of Research at the 'Centre International des > Civilisations Bantu' in Libreville, Gabon; but he has recently moved to > the USA to take up a post at Molefi Asante's Temple University, > Philadelphia department, the main centre of US Afrocentrism.'
 (Howe > 1998: 179-180)
 >
 > The Ecole Pratique des Haute Etudes does not offer a degree of any kind > in Egyptology, but the closest it DOES offer is a Masters of Science
 > (MS) in "Historiques, philologiques et religieuses", with a speciality
 > in Antiquit頭餘terran飲ne et proche-orientale: langues,
 histoire,
 > religions <http://www.ephe.sorbonne.fr/index.php? > option=com_content&task=view&id=250&Itemid=236>. The College de France
 > does not offer degrees in Egyptology, nor does the University of > Bordeaux, nor the University of Pittsburgh.
 >
 > At present, I don't see Obenga's name on the list of faculty at Temple > University <<http://www.temple.edu/aas/faculty.htm>>, but there's been > some years passed since Howe wrote the above about Obenga.
 Perhaps
 > he's moved on to another University. Online, he's stated to presently > be the "Director General of the International Center for Bantu Studies"
 > centred in Libreville, Gabon.
 > <http://africawithin.com/obenga/obenga\_bio.htm>

>
> Further, while you state that Obenga has "...has trained Egyptologists
> for doctorates here in the United States...", I should point out
that > Temple University does not offer any degrees in Egyptology, but offers > this subject only through its exchange with Hamburg University in > Germany (where any student would have to go to acquire coursework
in > Egyptology). This can be found in Temple University's own materials
> online:
>
<http://www.temple.edu/studyabroad/programs/temple\_exchanges/germany.h
tm
> l> and
>

gB
> rochure.pdf - 2007-06-21>
>
> Diop's master's and doctorate degrees were given to him under something > of a cloud, as he was rejected for his doctoral degree, which I recall > as being in History, not Egyptology (the University of Paris/Sorbonne
> does not have a degree in Egyptology), three times. This is described > as follows:
>
> "His initial doctoral dissertation submitted at the University of > Paris, Sorbonne in 1951, based on the premise that Egypt of the > pharaohs was an African civilization--was rejected... Two additional > attempts to have his doctorate granted were turned back until 1960 when
> he entered his defense session with an array of sociologists, > anthropologists and historians and successfully carried his argument.
> After nearly a decade of titanic and herculean effort, Diop had finally > won his Docteur es Lettres!"
> <http://www.africawithin.com/diop/diop\_bio1.htm>
>

> Now, the above are matters of fact, so perhaps you can see why I > question the assertion about Diop and Obenga being "established, fully-> credentialed Egyptologists," when, as far as I can see, neither
have > degrees in Egyptology.
>
> Reference:
>
> Howe, S. 1998. _Afrocentrism: Mythical Pasts and Imagined Homes_.
> London: Verso.
>
> Katherine Griffis-Greenberg, M. A. (Lon)
> Member, International Association of Egyptologists
> ARCE, BANE, EES, ASOR
>
> Doctoral Program (Egyptology)
> Oriental Studies
> University of Oxford
> Oxford, United Kingdom
>
> <http://www.griffis-consulting.com>
>

| 23356|2007-10-11 11:58:03|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Zahi Hawass insisted Tuesday that Tutankhamun was not black|

Paul,

I'd like to know who designated these wigs as "Nubian wigs"? Is it denoted in Kemetic writings as such? Or was it designated as such by eurocentric Egyptologists who wanted to give the impression that because these wigs are so clearly Afrikan that they are the exception to the rule; that these are not typical "Egyptian" wig?

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala"
wrote:

>
>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari" wrote:
> >
> > You assessment seems almost as narrow-minded and limited as

Hawass'.

> There are any number of images of Egyptians with Africoid features > INCLUDING kinky hair/braided wigs.
> >

>
> These are known as "Nubian wigs" and they leave quite an impression

when

> you see them in person.

>
>

[http://www.acewigs.com/shop/image\_uploads/News/Newswighistory\_M.jpg%5d

>
> [PRINCESS NESIKHONSU'S WIG.]

> PRINCESS NESIKHONSU'S WIG.

>
>
>

> Regards.

> Paul Kekai Manansala

>

| 23357|2007-10-11 12:11:03|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: Zahi Hawass insisted Tuesday that Tutankhamun was not black|
Mahari,

As far as I'm aware, "Nubian wig" is a term coined by Egyptologists based on the similarity of the wig with Nubian hairstyles.

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

Mahari Mengistu wrote:

Paul,

I'd like to know who designated these wigs as "Nubian wigs"? Is it denoted in Kemetic writings as such? Or was it designated as such by eurocentric Egyptologists who wanted to give the impression that because these wigs are so clearly Afrikan that they are the exception to the rule; that these are not typical "Egyptian" wig?

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, "Paul Kekai Manansala" wrote:

>
>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, "Mahari" wrote:

> >

> > You assessment seems almost as narrow-minded and limited as Hawass'.

> There are any number of images of Egyptians with Africoid features > INCLUDING kinky hair/braided wigs.
> >
>
> These are known as "Nubian wigs" and they leave quite an impression
when
> you see them in person.
>
>
> [http://www.acewigs.com/shop/image\_uploads/News/Newswighistory\_M.jpg]
>
> [PRINCESS NESIKHONSU'S WIG.]
> PRINCESS NESIKHONSU'S WIG.
>
>
>
> Regards.
> Paul Kekai Manansala
>

| 23358|2007-10-11 20:31:11|ulagankmy|Fwd: Paper: African elephants run from the sound of disturbed bees|

--- In evolutionary-psychology@yahoogroups.com, "Stephan Pickering"
wrote:

Lucy E. King, Iain Douglas-Hamilton, Fritz Vollrath, 2007. African elephants run from the sound of disturbed bees. Current Biology 17(19):R832-R833 + Supplemental Data. ABSTRACT. Encroaching human development into former wildlife areas is compressing African elephants into ever smaller home ranges, causing increased levels of human?elephant conflict. African honeybees have been proposed as a possible deterrent to elephants. We have performed a sound playback experiment to study this hypothesis. We found that a significant majority of elephants, in a sample of 18 well-known families and subgroups of varying sizes, reacted negatively ? immediately walking or running away ? when they heard the buzz of disturbed bees, while they ignored the control sound of natural white-noise. Whether the observed response was the result of individual conditioning or of learning by social facilitation remains to be established. Our study strongly supports the hypothesis that bees ? and perhaps even their buzz alone ? may be deployed to keep elephants at bay.

~~~~~
STEPHAN PICKERING / Chofetz Chayim ben-Avraham
The Dinosaur Fractals Project
2333 Portola Drive # 4

Santa Cruz, California 95062-4250

stephanpickering@...

website: http://groups.yahoo.com/group/paleo\_bio\_dinosaur\_ontology

<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/paleo\_bio\_dinosaur\_ontology>

theropod research summarized: < www.dinodata.net

<<http://www.dinodata.net>> > see PICKERING under their

Reference Base

IN PROGRESS; Mutanda Dinosaurologica: in memory of Samuel Paul Welles

(9 November 1909--6 August 1997)

IN PROGRESS: Alfred Russel Wallace's KING KONG: the semiotics of Willis

O'Brien

PARTNER IN THE UNIVERSE TO: NANCYGENE SCOTT, MY BELOVED QUANTUM
PISCES

Member 13853: SOCIETY OF VERTEBRATE PALEONTOLOGY

--- End forwarded message ---

| 23359|2007-10-12 00:01:25|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Zahi Hawass insisted Tuesday that
Tutankhamun was not black|

Thanks, Paul. I guess I'll do some research and find out how "exceptional" these wigs are that they deserve to be called "Nubian wigs" rather than "Egyptian wigs". They look pretty much like the hair styles in the Kemetic icons that we see on tomb walls albeit without the exceptional 3d detail.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Paul Kekai Manansala
wrote:

>

> Mahari,

>

> As far as I'm aware, "Nubian wig" is a term coined by Egyptologists based on the similarity of the wig with Nubian hairstyles.

>

> Regards,

> Paul Kekai Manansala

>

> Mahari Mengistu wrote:

Paul,

> I'd like to know who designated these wigs as "Nubian wigs"? Is

it > denoted in Kemetic writings as such? Or was it designated as such

by

- > eurocentric Egyptologists who wanted to give the impression that
- > because these wigs are so clearly Afrikan that they are the exception

- > to the rule; that these are not typical "Egyptian" wig?
- > HTP,
- > Mahari
- >
- > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala"
- > wrote:
- >>
- >>
- >> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari" wrote:
- >>>
- >>> You assessment seems almost as narrow-minded and limited as
- > Hawass'.
- >> There are any number of images of Egyptians with Africoid features

- >> INCLUDING kinky hair/braided wigs.
- >>>
- >>
- >> These are known as "Nubian wigs" and they leave quite an impression

- > when
- >> you see them in person.
- >>
- >>
- >

[http://www.acewigs.com/shop/image\_uploads/News/Newswighistory\_M.jpg%5d

- >>
- >> [PRINCESS NESIKHONSU'S WIG.]
- >> PRINCESS NESIKHONSU'S WIG.
- >>
- >>
- >>
- >> Regards.
- >> Paul Kekai Manansala
- >>
- >

| 23360|2007-10-12 00:04:46|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Fwd: Paper: African elephants run from the sound of disturbed b|

Poor beautiful intelligent elephants - no where to run, no where to hide.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "ulagankmy" wrote:

>

> --- In evolutionary-psychology@yahoogroups.com, "Stephan Pickering"
> wrote:

>

> Lucy E. King, Iain Douglas-Hamilton, Fritz Vollrath, 2007. African > elephants run from the sound of disturbed bees. Current Biology > 17(19):R832-R833 + Supplemental Data. ABSTRACT. Encroaching human > development into former wildlife areas is compressing African > elephants

> into ever smaller home ranges, causing increased levels of > human?elephant conflict. African honeybees have been proposed as a > possible deterrent to elephants. We have performed a sound playback > experiment to study this hypothesis. We found that a significant > majority of elephants, in a sample of 18 well-known families and > subgroups of varying sizes, reacted negatively ? immediately walking > or running away ? when they heard the buzz of disturbed bees, while > they ignored the control sound of natural white-noise. Whether the > observed response was the result of individual conditioning or of > learning by social facilitation remains to be established. Our study > strongly supports the hypothesis that bees ? and perhaps even their > buzz alone ? may be deployed to keep elephants at bay.

> ~~~~~

> STEPHAN PICKERING / Chofetz Chayim ben-Avraham

> The Dinosaur Fractals Project

> 2333 Portola Drive # 4

> Santa Cruz, California 95062-4250

> stephanpickering@

> website: http://groups.yahoo.com/group/paleo\_bio\_dinosaur\_ontology

> <http://groups.yahoo.com/group/paleo\_bio\_dinosaur\_ontology>

> theropod research summarized: < www.dinodata.net

> <<http://www.dinodata.net>> > see PICKERING under their

> Reference Base

> IN PROGRESS; Mutanda Dinosaurologica: in memory of Samuel Paul > Welles

> (9 November 1909--6 August 1997)

> IN PROGRESS: Alfred Russel Wallace's KING KONG: the semioptics of > Willis

> O'Brien

> PARTNER IN THE UNIVERSE TO: NANCYGENE SCOTT, MY BELOVED QUANTUM
> PISCES

> Member 13853: SOCIETY OF VERTEBRATE PALEONTOLOGY

>

> --- End forwarded message ---

>

| 23361|2007-10-12 00:31:51|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"? for reply to Mahari|

Well, it certainly does appear that the flail in the pix represents a pyramid/triangle. The Great Pyramid when finished possessed a golden cap at its top. The juncture of the flail forms a "golden triangle" (incidentally I believe that is an architectural term designating a kind of geometric perfection). One theory I read suggested that the pyramid represents the sun and its rays extending downward. The flail seems to represent a pyramid with the three fringes representing the rays forming a sort of schematic pyramid within a pyramid.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:

>

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:

> >

> > Forgive me if someone has already asked this question. I am just > > catching up with the recent posts. Asar, in "a" toward the bottom of > > the staff aren't those alternating reverse "n's"? Or is it a co> > incidence that may not be a co-incidence at all? The pattern created

> > looks very much like Afrikan cloth.

> > HTP,

> > Mahari

> >

>

>

>

> I really can't say at this point as I would need more samples to compare

> it to. But it does bring to question the Bantu concept of the "Vee"

in > art, which is found all over Africa, especially in cloth patterns.

Dr.

> Fu-Kiau in African Cosmology of the Bantu Kongo pg 143 explains it like > this:

>

> "This diamond-like pattern, very common in Bantu industry of art and > weaving, is a focus on life [moyo], its reproductive web, and its value

> among the Bantu people in particular, and among all African people

in > general. Velvets woven on the ground of this pattern became diadactical

> tools used to teach the formation process of societies; these patterns

> are taught to the communities, the families and extended families.

> Western scholars of the African industry of art and weaving (visual art)

> were unable to explain these African iconographs. Their lack of > knowledge about the Bantu world view, their cosmologies, and their vital > concept of the "Vee" discussed here did not prepare them. "

>

> I think we need to see some more patterns before we can make a > definitive decision. I would like to add to this discussion the > similarities between the common sign of /nTr/ with that of the /a/(arm-> "ayin")

>

> From Shwaller de Lubicz The Temple of Man: Sacred Architecture and

the

> Perfect Man (1977) pg. 64

>

> Is this a coincidence or is there a deeper meaning behind the > similarities. Another similarity which I do not think is coincidental is > that of the "Flail" and that of the various picks of Sun rays.

>

> From Schwaller Lubicz in Ancient Egypt, Science and the Evolution

of

> Consciousness (1978) pg. 33

>

>

> Compare the common "3-rays" with that on all of the "Flails" that we > know of. Also pay attention to the unique "fringe" type pattern of

the > first concept of /nTr/ in Figure C above, the fringe and shape

patterns

> along each fring or ray of light extending from the icons in the figure

> above, and the Crook and Flail image below.

>

>

>

>

>

>

> Do not the "checker like" patterns around the Crook and Flail resemble

> the "cloth pattern" around the /nTr/ symbol in Figure A above? Tell me

> what you all think.

>

> Asar Imhotep

> <http://www.mochasuite.com>

>

| 23362|2007-10-12 01:22:23|asar_imhotep|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"? for reply to Mahari|
--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:

>

> Well, it certainly does appear that the flail in the pix represents a > pyramid/triangle. The Great Pyramid when finished possessed a golden > cap at its top. The juncture of the flail forms a "golden triangle" > (incidentally I believe that is an architectural term designating a > kind of geometric perfection). One theory I read suggested that the > pyramid represents the sun and its rays extending downward. The > flail seems to represent a pyramid with the three fringes > representing the rays forming a sort of schematic pyramid within a > pyramid.

- > HTP,
- > Mahari

I would say the "flail" resembles more the Rays of the Sun (male energy/propagation) as they extend more so than a representation of a pyramid. As far as the concept of the pyramid however, I again am going to have to go with Dr. Fu-Kiau and the Ba'Ntu people on this one. As has been mentioned in other posts, what you see as architecture in Ta-Merri is the manifestation of a philosophy that originated in the forests of east central Africa. My personal correspondences with African priests in various spiritual systems back-up what Dr. Fu-Kiau has presented in African cosmology of the Bantu Kongo.

Egyptologists could never understand what pyramids were and why they were built. Most of all, they couldn't penetrate the philosophy behind the pyramids (mers) which gave rise to its construction.

The whole concept makes sense when you understand the cosmological philosophy as expressed through their graphical representations of the Dikenga (cosmograph) and the Dingo-Dingo (process/cycle of life). Below is a rendition I created with various different Bantu philosophies interwoven graphically in the diagram.

The Muntu (human being) is a living sun [represented by the small circles above]. Just as the sun appears to move around the earth, man according to the Bantu moves around its own circular path represented above [starting from V-1]. The Musoni stage is the "conceptual" stage of man [as well as ideas] and this is where the development takes place [the womb]. V-2 is the stage of being [Kala] and this is birth through adult initiation. V-3 is the Nganga stage [a rightful master]. This is "Ra" at noon time. This was the most aspired "Vee" in the Dingo-Dingo. V-4 is the ancestor realm (death).

As Dr. Fu-Kiau has expressed:

"Therefore, the Vee in reality, is a living pyramid in constant motion, which follows the path of life and passes the four main points of demarcation of the cosmogram [dikenga], which in turn is symbolized by the flame of life inside the community circle." pg 132 (emphasis mine)

As we know most Ta-Merri mers were used to burry Kings. For those who get it by now, what the Kmtjw were doing was trying to recreate the Dingo-Dingo process in a man made "Musoni" (pyramid). Just as conceptually and physically you develop in the womb (musoni) to prepare for your sojourn in this life time and to walk your path around the didi (core/center of the community) in your own Dikenga, "as above, so below." The Kmtjw were sending their kings off the very way they came in. They are just now preparing their spirit to sojourn in the Luvemba stage in their man made Musoni [the pyramid]

The shape and the functions executed in the pyramids is the outward expression of this ancient philosophy. This figure or diagram is found all over Africa and is the core of the shared philosophy. You find it amongst the Zulu, Yoruba, in Benin, amongst the Dagara and the Akan. Everyone in Africa teaches from a circle broken up into 4 demarcations [Vees].

This is where you will find the meaning behind the pyramids.

Asar Imhotep
<http://www.mochasuite.com>

| 23363|2007-10-12 05:18:54|Dexter Harper|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"? for Ferg|
I wanted to go back to this reply specifically because I came across something that sparked my interest. It is my understanding that in the pre-dynastic period, some roadside shrines were marked with long pennant flags on flagpoles.

Maybe someone (perhaps Pro. Ampim) can verify this.

I wonder if this has any correlation with the symbols (more specifically the "flag") for Ntr?

Respectfully,

Sharma Men Ra

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Ferg" wrote:

>

> > The AKAN symbol is based on neolithic axe heads, found in the region,

> and considered by the Akan to be the physical remains of thunderbolts > hurled by angry Gods. The Akan would often wear one or more shells

as a > talisman against lightning strikes (and later as protection against > firearms).

> >

> > However, may I point out that a Flail, third one along, is strictly > speaking not a flag. A Flail is an agricultural implement used for > threshing grain by hand. It is an implement that uses force just

as an > axe is used for cutting. In all the three symbols depicting NTR, we > observe that the symbols display some form of physical force, violence

> or strength which have become symbols of domination associated with > in predynastic Egypt. The ideas behind the axe as a symbol of divinity > is not new, in fact many cultures around the world make use of it as may > be seen above.

NTR

> >

> > Somo

> >

> >

>

>

> Peace

>

> I am not saying the "flail" and what Hornung deems as a "flag" are

the > same thing. I am saying that the first sign for /nTr/ doesn't look > anything like an axe and I don't think it was. Later on in the early > dynastic period did it take on the form of "B" and then later "A." I > have never seen an axe that has flimzy parts like figure "C."

>

> However, when looking at other relics of Ta-Merrian culture, what it > does resemble is what Egyptologists call the "flail" that you see > depictions of Ntrw carrying and what "pharaohs" were buried with.

Both

> of the figures consist of a poll with 3 distinct, loose extensions

at > the head. This is not the case with figure "A" below. As we can tell as > time went on, they got more elaborate with the design as can be seen by > the second picture of Ptah below. If you look at this version of

> "flail" on the Tutankhamen figure below, you will notice the general > shape of the /nTrw/ symbol with out the 3 loose extensions. But it has a > slight angle on the flail while the general nTr sign is straight.

>

> [The image

> "<http://www.touregypt.net/featurestories/crooksandflails12.jpg>"

- > cannot be displayed, because it contains errors.]
- > This is why I'm suggesting that what they call a "flail" and what
- > Hornung calls a "Flag" isn't either, but represents some practical item

- > in which they used to represent Ntrw. As time went on they could have

- > just altered the design to what we see now. Kmtjw people have various

- > ways of relating the same concept using different signs. And slight
- > alterations to a sign to represent the same entities in different forms.

- > For instance, the sign for Aset (the throne) is the same sign for
- > Nebet-het. Nebet-Het's throne is just upside down. Amsu Min is Amun
- > manifesting as Heru in another form. Djehuty is represented by the

Ibis

- > bird and the Baboon. All of this to remind us that we can't get caught

- > up in thinking that Kemetic people only used one sign or deity to
- > represent the same concept or deity.

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

- > Here is another Ta-Merri - Bantu connection worth exploring

>

- > Bes

>

- > [http://images.tribe.net/tribe/upload/photo/877/ca5/877ca5ca-1053-

4b03-8\

- > 838-78de0a29931c]

>

- > Nkondi statue (diploma) given when an initiate has completed his/her > initiation (Nganga)

>

>

>

> What many of you may not know is that the way a figure is situated > (where the hands are located) in African artwork denotes what level

or > what particular priesthood someone belongs to. Those of you who are > Masons or in a Greek Lettered Fraternal organization should know

what

> I'm talking about. The positions are like "grips" to those in the > various crafts. So think about that when you look at carvings on tomb

> walls with Kemetic priests standing a certain way with their arms

in a > certain position.

>

> Asar Imhotep

> <http://www.mochasuite.com>

>

| 23364|2007-10-12 07:34:14|asar_imhotep|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"? for Ferg|
--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Dexter Harper" wrote:

>

> I wanted to go back to this reply specifically because I came across > something that sparked my interest. It is my understanding that in > the pre-dynastic period, some roadside shrines were marked with long > pennant flags on flagpoles.

>

> Maybe someone (perhaps Pro. Ampim) can verify this.

>

> I wonder if this has any correlation with the symbols (more > specifically the "flag") for Ntr?

>

>

> Respectfully,

>

> Sharma Men Ra

>

Take a look at W.M.F. Petrie's "The Royal Tombs of the Earliest Dynasties II" [MEEF 21, 1901] where two "flags" are shown (always pointed) in front of the temple of Neith. You can also see the images collected by G. Matthiae Scandone "OrAnt 6" (1967) 145-68.

The Temple of Luxor had cedar-wood flag masts from which pennants streamed. There is a scene for User Maat Ra (Ramesis II) that names his 17 sons starting with Amenherkhepshef that has a drawn representation of the first pylon that shows the flags flying on the temple. Unfortunately you won't find any of flags in any museum. No one has escavated any real "flags."

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

| 23365|2007-10-12 08:25:36|sonofptah2000|Re: Zahi Hawass insisted Tuesday that Tutankhamun was not black|

The term Nubian wig was coined by Egyptologist. These wigs were not the exception but were the rule and were more prominent than any other hairstyle. The braided and twist hair styles of ancient Egypt pose a very serious problem for eurocentric scholars trying to prove that ancient Egypt was white, Asian, or of the Mysterious Egyptian race LOL. Culture is like genetic proof. It is the genetic code which exist outside of the human body and is passed down from generation to generation. Braiding of the hair and especially how the ancient Egyptians displayed the style is distinctly African and people of no other ethnic origin practiced braiding of this sort. If today you wanted any so called modern Egyptian to get their hair braided by a contemporary Egyptian, basically meaning one of Arabic descent they would be at a total loss because it is not a part of their cultural genetic code. You can not explain or justify the loss of a practice that was instituted as part of a culture for thousands of years. This is why in popular media they shun the braided hairstyle because they no this is the cultural genetic code of the African and no one other people, and this why to this day one must go to an African to get their hair properly braided. When the ancient Egyptian ruler is painted, carved and displayed showing braided, or twist hairstyles as they so often were they were without question showing proof of their African cultural roots and genetic code to the world. Remember even in modern slave times of America the determining factor to prove one was of African origin or a so called negro, was the HAIR not the skin color, because there are other ethnic groups with dark skin but only the African has hair of the kind Herotodus mentions in his story relating how the ancient Egyptians looked. This hair type does not exist on any other living organsim human or animal and is with out proof a clear indicator of one of African origins. Egyptologist had to call this hairstyle the Nubian wig because no other people can produce a look like that and it would be foolish to try prove other wise so they are stuck between a rock and hard place when it comes to this distinctive hair style which was so prolifically reproduced in ancient Egyptian art. So you can see that the African origins of the Ancient Egyptian is "LOCKED" via the hair which all the world is clearly forced to recognize and yes the pun was intend.

--- In Ta_Seti@yahooogroups.com, Paul Kekai Manansala wrote:

>

> Mahari,

>

> As far as I'm aware, "Nubian wig" is a term coined by Egyptologists based on the similarity of the wig with Nubian hairstyles.

>

> Regards,

> Paul Kekai Manansala

>

> Mahari Mengistu mahari@... wrote: Paul,

> I'd like to know who designated these wigs as "Nubian wigs"? Is it > denoted in Kemetic writings as such? Or was it designated as such by > eurocentric Egyptologists who wanted to give the impression that > because these wigs are so clearly Afrikan that they are the exception

> to the rule; that these are not typical "Egyptian" wig?

> HTP,

> Mahari

>

> --- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala" > pmanansala@ wrote:

>>

>>

>> --- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari" wrote:

>>>

>>> You assessment seems almost as narrow-minded and limited as

> Hawass'.

>> There are any number of images of Egyptians with Africoid features

>> INCLUDING kinky hair/braided wigs.

>>>

>>

>> These are known as "Nubian wigs" and they leave quite an impression

> when

>> you see them in person.

>>

>>

> [http://www.acewigs.com/shop/image\_uploads/News/Newswighistory\_M.jpg]

>>

>> [PRINCESS NESIKHONSU'S WIG.]

>> PRINCESS NESIKHONSU'S WIG.

>>

>>

>>

>> Regards.

>> Paul Kekai Manansala

>>

>

Point taken!

It seems to me that the essence of Eurocentric thought is to remain silent when confronted with tangible evidence. Ducking and diving in and out of a discussion and reappearing from the woodwork when it is safe to do so as some sort of infestation and spreading false information seems to be the order of the day.

It is sad but confronted by this sort of calculated cowardly tactic only shows what an uphill struggle one has in destroying this type of cancerous thinking.

Somo

----- Original Message -----

From: Mahari Mengistu

To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Sent: Thursday, October 11, 2007 7:20 PM

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?

You are being TOO GENEROUS. She may have all the figures but as for the facts, that is yet to be determined for the world. For us however, the facts are clear and she DOES NOT have them or want them.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Ferg" wrote:

>

> Katherine.

>

> You seem to have all the facts and figures at your fingertips at the press of a button, but sadly you have not made any positive contribution to the more important topic, namely the discussion on the symbol of divinity NTR.

>

> I did ask you once. Again what are your views about the symbol ?

>

> Somo.

>

>

>

> ----- Original Message -----

> From: naseret

> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> Sent: Wednesday, October 10, 2007 8:10 AM

> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Ntr means "ancestors"?

>

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala"

> wrote:

>

> > Katherine,
> >
> > On usenet you had accused Cheikh Anta Diop of not having Egyptology
> > credentials. On this list you at least insinuated the same thing > > about Theophile Obenga.
> >
> > The truth is that both were/are established, fully-credentialed > > Egyptologists in the French academy. Obenga has trained
Egyptologists
> > for doctorates here in the United States as well.
>
> The Societe Francaise d'Egyptologie, the "French academy" to which you > refer, specifically states that its membership includes people who are > not Egyptologists, but "people interested into the survey of Egypt
> since its origins." There is no requirement that one be an > Egyptologist to be a part of this organisation
> <<http://www.thotweb.com/portail/associations/SFE.htm>>, nor, I might > add, to be a member of the International Association of Egyptologists
> <<http://www.iae.lmu.de/>>, though a non-Egyptologist needs
references
> from 2 Egyptologists to join, per Section 3.3 of the Statutes.
So,
> membership in either organisation does not "fully-credential" you
as an > Egyptologist. A degree in Egyptology does allow you to refer to > yourself as an Egyptologist, as you have academic credentials in
the > field.
>
> According to what is known about Obenga's biography by me, I see no
> reference to an Egyptology degree, but studies in history only:
>
> 'Diop's best-known intellectual disciple is the Congolese
historical > linguist Theophile Obenga, who has clearly also been the most important > of the relatively few African historians who have sought to pursue and > extend Diop's line of thought. Obenga, a little younger than Diop, was > born in Brazzaville in 1930, from a Mbochi-speaking background:

he has > sought to trace parallels between Mbochi and ancient Egyptian > languages, just as Diop has done with his native Wolof. Obenga's > university training was varied: he studied at Pittsburgh

University in > the USA, and at the Ecole Pratique des Hautes Etudes, the College

de

> France, and the University of Bordeaux. By contrast with Diop's long

> years as permanent oppositionist in Senega, Obenga spent periods
in the

> Congo Republic's corridors of power, serving as Foreign Minister
in > 1975-7 under the Marxist government of Marien Ngouabi. Thereafter

he

> acted as Director of Research at the 'Centre International des

> Civilisations Bantu' in Libreville, Gabon; but he has recently moved to

> the USA to take up a post at Molefi Asante's Temple University,

> Philadelphia department, the main centre of US Afrocentrism. '

(Howe

> 1998: 179-180)

>

> The Ecole Pratique des Haute Etudes does not offer a degree of any kind

> in Egyptology, but the closest it DOES offer is a Masters of Science

> (MS) in "Historiques, philologiques et religieuses" , with a speciality

> in Antiquité méditerranéenne et proche-orientale: langues,
histoire,

> religions <<http://www.ephe.sorbonne.fr/index.php?>

> option=com_content& task=view& id=250&Itemid= 236>. The College de France

> does not offer degrees in Egyptology, nor does the University of > Bordeaux, nor the University of Pittsburgh.

>

> At present, I don't see Obenga's name on the list of faculty at Temple

> University <<http://www.temple.edu/aas/faculty.htm>>, but there's been

> some years passed since Howe wrote the above about Obenga.

Perhaps

> he's moved on to another University. Online, he's stated to presently

> be the "Director General of the International Center for Bantu Studies"

> centred in Libreville, Gabon.

> <http://africawithin.com/obenga/obenga\_bio.htm>

>

> Further, while you state that Obenga has "...has trained Egyptologists

> for doctorates here in the United States...", I should point out that

> Temple University does not offer any degrees in Egyptology, but offers

> this subject only through its exchange with Hamburg University in > Germany (where any student would have to go to acquire coursework in > Egyptology). This can be found in Temple University's own materials > online:

>

<http://www.temple.edu/studyabroad/programs/temple\_exchanges/germany.h
tm

> l> and

>

gB

> rochure.pdf - 2007-06-21>

>

> Diop's master's and doctorate degrees were given to him under something > of a cloud, as he was rejected for his doctoral degree, which I recall

> as being in History, not Egyptology (the University of Paris/Sorbonne > does not have a degree in Egyptology), three times. This is described > as follows:

>

> "His initial doctoral dissertation submitted at the University of

> Paris, Sorbonne in 1951, based on the premise that Egypt of the

> pharaohs was an African civilization- -was rejected... Two additional > attempts to have his doctorate granted were turned back until 1960 when > he entered his defense session with an array of sociologists,

> anthropologists and historians and successfully carried his argument.

- > After nearly a decade of titanic and herculean effort, Diop had finally
- > won his Docteur es Lettres!"
- > <http://www.africawithin.com/diop/diop\_bio1.htm>
- >
- > Now, the above are matters of fact, so perhaps you can see why I
- > question the assertion about Diop and Obenga being "established, fully-
- > credentialed Egyptologists, " when, as far as I can see, neither have
- > degrees in Egyptology.
- >
- > Reference:
- >
- > Howe, S. 1998. _Afrocentrism: Mythical Past and Imagined Homes_.
- > London: Verso.
- >
- > Katherine Griffis-Greenberg, M. A. (Lon)
- > Member, International Association of Egyptologists
- > ARCE, BANE, EES, ASOR
- >
- > Doctoral Program (Egyptology)
- > Oriental Studies
- > University of Oxford
- > Oxford, United Kingdom
- >
- > <http://www.griffis-consulting.com>
- >

| 23367|2007-10-12 08:39:27|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: Zahi Hawass insisted Tuesday that Tutankhamun was not black|

--- In Ta_Seti@yahooogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:

- >
- > Thanks, Paul. I guess I'll do some research and find out
- > how "exceptional" these wigs are that they deserve to be
- > called "Nubian wigs" rather than "Egyptian wigs". They look pretty
- > much like the hair styles in the Kemetic icons that we see on tomb
- > walls albeit without the exceptional 3d detail.
- >

The general idea is that they become more popular during the New Kingdom. Never investigated the truth of this claim. Other wigs including the royal Hathoric wig displayed curly, braided hair.

Middle Kingdom Queen with Hathoric Wig

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23368|2007-10-12 10:49:32|Dexter Harper|Pwnt: Land of Ntrw|

There is something that an associate of mine has brought to my attention that I want to share with the forum for feedback. This is in reference to the location for the land of "Pwnt". As we all are aware, the Kemetu identified them as their ancestors (Pwnt means "the land of neterw").

Now, in the tale of "The Shipwrecked Sailor", there is a sailor who returns from Pwnt(Punt) and makes the following statement:

"All the people rejoice and embrace us one after another. Moreover, we have come back in good health, and not a man is lacking; although we have been to the ends of Wawat [Nubia], and gone through the land of Senmut [Kush], we have returned in peace, and our land---behold, we have come back to it."

Now if Pwnt was south of Nubia, then would it be necessary to travel by sea? There were many shipments along the Nile amongst Nubia and Ethiopia. So, if they were in the same vicinity, why take the course of the Red Sea?

Could it be that Zimbabwe, Mozambique or even more Southern Africa (Azania) was/is the true location of Pwnt?

What do you think about this?

Respectfully,

Sharma Men Ra

| 23369|2007-10-12 12:16:22|cristofori whitakara|Re: Pwnt: Land of Ntrw|

my thought is that on the red sea there were ports whereby the merchants would travel down the red sea connecting them with land merchants who brought products inland from the ports?

Dexter Harper wrote:

There is something that an associate of mine has brought to my attention that I want to share with the forum for feedback. This is in reference to the location for the land of "Pwnt". As we all are aware, the Kemetu identified them as their ancestors (Pwnt means "the land of neterw").

Now, in the tale of "The Shipwrecked Sailor", there is a sailor who returns from Pwnt(Punt) and makes the following statement:

"All the people rejoice and embrace us one after another. Moreover, we have come back in good health, and not a man is lacking; although we have been to the ends of Wawat [Nubia], and gone through the land of Senmut [Kush], we have returned in peace, and our land---behold, we have come back to it."

Now if Pwnt was south of Nubia, then would it be necessary to travel by sea? There were many shipments along the Nile amongst Nubia and Ethiopia. So, if they were in the same vicinity, why take the course of the Red Sea?

Could it be that Zimbabwe, Mozambique or even more Southern Africa (Azania) was/is the true location of Pwnt?

What do you think about this?

Respectfully,

Sharma Men Ra

---

Catch up on fall's hot new shows on Yahoo! TV. Watch previews, get listings, and more!
| 23370|2007-10-12 12:43:16|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Ntr means "ancestors"? for reply to Mahari|
That's very interesting and makes good spiritual/philosophical sense.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:

> >

> > Well, it certainly does appear that the flail in the pix represents a > > pyramid/triangle. The Great Pyramid when finished possessed a golden > > cap at its top. The juncture of the flail forms a "golden triangle"

> > (incidentally I believe that is an architectural term designating

a > > kind of geometric perfection). One theory I read suggested that

the

> > pyramid represents the sun and its rays extending downward. The

> > flail seems to represent a pyramid with the three fringes

> > representing the rays forming a sort of schematic pyramid within a > > pyramid.

> > HTP,

> > Mahari

>

> I would say the "flail" resembles more the Rays of the Sun (male > energy/propagation) as they extend more so than a representation of

a > pyramid. As far as the concept of the pyramid however, I again am going > to have to go with Dr. Fu-Kiau and the Ba'Ntu people on this one.

As has > been mentioned in other posts, what you see as architecture in Ta-

Merri

> is the manifestation of a philosophy that originated in the forests

of > east central Africa. My personal correspondences with African priests in > various spiritual systems back-up what Dr. Fu-Kiau has presented in > African cosmology of the Bantu Kongo.

>

> Egyptologists could never understand what pyramids were and why they > were built. Most of all, they couldn't penetrate the philosophy behind

> the pyramids (mers) which gave rise to its construction.

>

> The whole concept makes sense when you understand the cosmological > philosophy as expressed through their graphical representations of

the

> Dikenga (cosmograph) and the Dingo-Dingo (process/cycle of life).

Below

> is a rendition I created with various different Bantu philosophies > interwoven graphically in the diagram.

>

>

>

> The Muntu (human being) is a living sun [represented by the small > circles above]. Just as the sun appears to move around the earth, man

> according to the Bantu moves around its own circular path represented

> above [starting from V-1]. The Musoni stage is the "conceptual" stage of > man [as well as ideas] and this is where the development takes place

> [the womb]. V-2 is the stage of being [Kala] and this is birth through > adult initiation. V-3 is the Nganga stage [a rightful master].

This is

> "Ra" at noon time. This was the most aspired "Vee" in the Dingo-

Dingo.

> V-4 is the ancestor realm (death).

>

> As Dr. Fu-Kiau has expressed:

>

> "Therefore, the Vee in reality, is a living pyramid in constant motion,

> which follows the path of life and passes the four main points of > demarcation of the cosmogram [dikenga], which in turn is symbolized

by > the flame of life inside the community circle." pg 132 (emphasis mine)

> As we know most Ta-Merri mers were used to burry Kings. For those who

- > get it by now, what the Kmtjw were doing was trying to recreate the
- > Dingo-Dingo process in a man made "Musoni" (pyramid). Just as
- > conceptually and physically you develop in the womb (musoni) to prepare

- > for your sojourn in this life time and to walk your path around the didi

- > (core/center of the community) in your own Dikenga, "as above, so
- > below." The Kmtjw were sending their kings off the very way they came

- > in. They are just now preparing their spirit to sojourn in the

Luvemba

- > stage in their man made Musoni [the pyramid]
- >
- > The shape and the functions executed in the pyramids is the outward
- > expression of this ancient philosophy. This figure or diagram is found

- > all over Africa and is the core of the shared philosophy. You find

it

- > amongst the Zulu, Yoruba, in Benin, amongst the Dagara and the Akan.
- > Everyone in Africa teaches from a circle broken up into 4 demarcations

- > [Vees].
- >
- > This is where you will find the meaning behind the pyramids.
- >
- >
- >

> Asar Imhotep

> <http://www.mochasuite.com>

>

| 23371|2007-10-12 12:52:14|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Zahi Hawass insisted Tuesday that Tutankhamun was not black|

I suspect that this bust is stylistically represented - likely representing the ram. Yet, if that face were clearly produced it would be an Africoid face.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala" wrote:

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:

> >

> > Thanks, Paul. I guess I'll do some research and find out

> > how "exceptional" these wigs are that they deserve to be > > called "Nubian wigs" rather than "Egyptian wigs". They look pretty > > much like the hair styles in the Kemetic icons that we see on tomb > > walls albeit without the exceptional 3d detail.

> >

>

> The general idea is that they become more popular during the New > Kingdom. Never investigated the truth of this claim. Other wigs > including the royal Hathoric wig displayed curly, braided hair.

>

> Middle Kingdom Queen with Hathoric Wig

>

>

>

> Regards,

> Paul Kekai Manansala

>

| 23372|2007-10-12 13:24:41|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Zahi Hawass insisted Tuesday that Tutankhamun was not black|

Paul,

Here is something on Hathor - I doubt it is the best - which talks about how she is represented. So it is possible what we see in your photo is a representation of horns.

=====

Hathor(Het-hert)

Symbols: cow, lioness, falcon, cobra, hippopotamus, sistrum, musical instruments, drums, pregnant women, mirrors, cosmetics

Cult Center: Dendera

The horned cow-goddess of love, she was also the deity of happiness, dance and music, and a protector of women. She is depicted as a cow, as a woman with the head of a cow, or as a woman with who wears the stylized cow-horns which hold in them the solar disk. Her symbols also included the papyrus reed, the snake and a rattle called a sistrum.

Early in Egyptian mythology she was known as Horus' mother (later Isis assumed this role). Proof of this is seen in her name, "Hathor"

which means the "house of Horus". As the mother of Horus, the queen of Egypt was identified with her. This is natural, as the queen was the mother of the Pharaoh, the living Horus. Isis was often shown with cow-horns like Hathor's on her head when the artist wanted to emphasize her role as the mother of Horus.

It was said that when a child was born, Seven Hathors came to his bedside to announce his fate. The Seven Hathors were believed to know the future and the moment of death for every Egyptian. A person's destiny depended on the hour of their death and the luck of ill-fortune was connected with it. It was believed that the Hathors would exchange a prince born to ill-fortune with a more fortunate child, therefore protecting the dynasty and the nation. The Hathors were shown as a group of young women playing tambourines and wearing the disk and horns of Hathor. During Ptolemaic times (when Greeks ruled over Egypt), they were identified with the Pleiades.

In the Story of Re, she was created by her father Re as "Sekhmet" as a destroyer of men, who were disobedient to him. Later Re changed his mind, but even he could not stop her from killing men. He then disguised beer as blood and when Sekhmet became drunk, she could no longer kill and was known thereafter as Hathor, a goddess of love.

Her cult was centered in Dendera where she was a goddess of fertility and childbirth. In Thebes she was seen as a goddess of the dead, and the Greeks identified her with Aphrodite (their goddess of love

===

HTP,

Mahari

| 23373|2007-10-12 13:32:22|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Pwnt: Land of Ntrw|

You may be on to something but there is another possibility. If you have to bring back a lot of "booty", i.e., gold, ivory, incense, animal hides, etc, it might be more expedient, safer and smoother to go by the Red Sea as there are - as I understand - some treacherous points on the Nile.

I'm going to back off posting now. Don't want to over-stay my welcome.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Dexter Harper" wrote:

>

>

> There is something that an associate of mine has brought to my > attention that I want to share with the forum for feedback. This is > in reference to the location for the land of "Pwnt". As we all are > aware, the Kemetu identified them as their ancestors (Pwnt means "the land of neterw").

>

> Now, in the tale of "The Shipwrecked Sailor", there is a sailor who returns from Pwnt(Punt) and makes the following statement:

>

> "All the people rejoice and embrace us one after another. Moreover, we have come back in good health, and not a man is lacking; although we have been to the ends of Wawat [Nubia], and gone through the land of Senmut [Kush], we have returned in peace, and our land---behold, we have come back to it."

>

> Now if Pwnt was south of Nubia, then would it be necessary to travel by sea? There were many shipments along the Nile amongst Nubia and Ethiopia. So, if they were in the same vicinity, why take the course of the Red Sea?

>

> Could it be that Zimbabwe, Mozambique or even more Southern Africa (Azania) was/is the true location of Pwnt?

>

>

> What do you think about this?

>

>

> Respectfully,

>

> Sharma Men Ra

>

| 23374|2007-10-12 16:11:57|asar_imhotep|Re: Pwnt: Land of Ntrw|

It would be necessary to travel by sea because the nature of the expedition and how much goods they were bringing back. You can't sail the large ships down the Nile.

Also something you have to keep in mind, in regards to Ta-Ntr, Puwanet, is that Hatshepsut recorded specific items when they went to Pwnt that they brought back to Ta-Merri that is relegated to a specific region. One of the more important things is Frankincense and Myrrh. The trees are indigenous to Modern day Ethiopia and Somalia (also found in Arabia). It doesn't seem to be found in Kenya or below. So this is why researchers believe it is there in the horn of Africa.

My question would be, why did W.M.F. Petrie make the following comment in The Making of Egypt pg. 77?

"The distinctive character of the 1st dynasty, which separates it from all that went before, is the conquest and union of the whole land of Egypt. It became thus subject to the falcon-bearing tribe of Horus, which was the natural enemy of the Aunu, the Set-bearing tribe. This falcon tribe had certainly originated in Elam, as indicated by the hero and lions on the "Araq knife handle". They went down the Persian Gulf and settled in the "horn of Africa." There they named the "Land of Punt," sacred to later Egyptians as the source of the race. "

Where is the source in which he is referencing that would make him say "There they named the "Land of Punt," sacred to later Egyptians as the source of the race?"

Asar Imhotep
<http://www.mochasuite.com>

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Dexter Harper" wrote:

>
>
> There is something that an associate of mine has brought to my > attention that I want to share with the forum for feedback. This is > in reference to the location for the land of "Pwnt". As we all are > aware, the Kemetu identified them as their ancestors (Pwnt means "the > land of neterw").
>
> Now, in the tale of "The Shipwrecked Sailor", there is a sailor who > returns from Pwnt(Punt) and makes the following statement:
>
> "All the people rejoice and embrace us one after another. Moreover, > we have come back in good health, and not a man is lacking; although > we have been to the ends of Wawat [Nubia], and gone through the land > of Senmut [Kush], we have returned in peace, and our land---behold, > we have come back to it."
>
> Now if Pwnt was south of Nubia, then would it be necessary to travel > by sea? There were many shipments along the Nile amongst Nubia and > Ethiopia. So, if they were in the same vicinity, why take the course > of the Red Sea?
>
> Could it be that Zimbabwe, Mozambique or even more Southern Africa > (Azania) was/is the true location of Pwnt?
>
>

> What do you think about this?

>

>

> Respectfully,

>

> Sharma Men Ra

>

| 23375|2007-10-12 16:27:12|Mahari Mengistu|Egyptian Film-maker Claims his "Afrikanness"|
Egyptian film-maker claims his "Africanness"

Posted on Friday 12 October 2007 - 14:23

-----

-----

AfricaNews

Egyptian film-maker Yusry Nasrallah Friday in Paris, France, claimed his African origins, lamenting the attitude of his "other compatriots" who defined themselves as "particularly Arabs, Christians or Muslims".

"I like my African share while other Egyptians reject their Africanness," he said in an interview with PANA on the sidelines of the exhibition titled "Sensorial Diaspora," organised at the Quai Branly Museum in the French capital.

"I am not romanticizing by saying that I am proud to be an African. Egypt lives (along) much of the Nile (the world's longest river) situated in Africa. We owe much to Africa," the Egyptian film-maker said.

He further regretted a part of Egypt's African history was "gulped in the construction of big dams in the former Nubia".

"For me, this attitude is a way of rejecting Egypt's African part that hinges on Nubia," said Nasrallah, the joint director of the work "Le Caire vu par Youssef Chahine" (Cairo as seen by Yusef Chahine) and director of "Mercedes", a short film.

To express his attachment to his "Africanness", the Egyptian film-maker chose to display a universe referring to Nubia (an independent kingdom in the ancient times stretching from Egypt to northern Sudan) as well as to its lakes and black population.

"I am trying to show in this creation, specially designed for this exhibition, Egypt's African part through Nubia. One can see Nubians in their daily activities, one can see them working around the lakes with their black skin," he said.

About dozens of artists from the African Diaspora, including Chadian film-maker Mahamat-Saleh Haroun and Cameroonian Jean-Pierre Bekolo, are exhibiting their works till 6 Jan.

===

HTP,

Mahari

| 23376|2007-10-12 23:51:53|Dexter Harper|Re: Pwnt: Land of Ntrw|

That's an excellent point regarding the nature of the voyage and size of the ships. It's reported that each ship was 70 feet long and accommodated 210 men. Also, the frankincense & myrrh point is hard to argue against. That would pretty much end the debate on the location of Pwnt being in southern Africa.

But there is still debate over whether the location was in Somalia, Ethiopia or Southern Sudan. Ian Shaw states the following in "The Oxford History of Ancient Egypt", p. 217:

"There is still some debate regarding the precise location of Punt, which was once identified with the region of modern Somalia. A strong argument has now been made for its location in either southern Sudan or the Eritrean region of Ethiopia, where the indigenous plants and animals equate most closely with those depicted in the Egyptian reliefs and paintings.

It used to be assumed (primarily on the basis of the scenes at Deir el-Bahri depicting Hatshepsut's expedition to Punt in the mid-18th Dynasty) that the trading parties travelled by sea from the ports of Quseir or Mersa Gawasis, but it now seems likely that at least some of the Egyptian traders sailed south along the Nile and then took an overland route to Punt, perhaps making contact with the Puntites in the vicinity of Kurgus, at the fifth cataract."

One thing for certain is that the texts are consistent about connecting the location of Pwnt with the Red Sea.

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:

>

> It would be necessary to travel by sea because the nature of the expedition and how much goods they were bringing back. You can't sail

> the large ships down the Nile.

>

> Also something you have to keep in mind, in regards to Ta-Ntr, Puwanet,

> is that Hatshepsut recorded specific items when they went to Pwnt

that > they brought back to Ta-Merri that is relegated to a specific region.

> One of the more important things is Frankincense and Myrrh. The trees > are indigenous to Modern day Ethiopia and Somalia (also found in > Arabia). It doesn't seem to be found in Kenya or below. So this is

why

> researchers believe it is there in the horn of Africa.

>

> My question would be, why did W.M.F. Petrie make the following comment

> in The Making of Egypt pg. 77?

>

> "The distinctive character of the 1st dynasty, which separates it

from > all that went before, is the conquest and union of the whole land of > Egypt. It became thus subject to the falcon-bearing tribe of Horus, > which was the natural enemy of the Aunu, the Set-bearing tribe. This > falcon tribe had certainly originated in Elam, as indicated by the hero > and lions on the "Araq knife handle". They went down the Persian Gulf

> and settled in the "horn of Africa." There they named the "Land of > Punt," sacred to later Egyptians as the source of the race. "

>

> Where is the source in which he is referencing that would make him

say

> "There they named the "Land of Punt," sacred to later Egyptians as

the > source of the race?"

>

>

> Asar Imhotep

> <http://www.mochasuite.com>

>

>

>

>

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Dexter Harper" wrote:

> >

> >

> > There is something that an associate of mine has brought to my > > attention that I want to share with the forum for feedback. This

is > > in reference to the location for the land of "Pwnt". As we all are > > aware, the Kemetu identified them as their ancestors (Pwnt means "the > > land of neterw").

> >

> > Now, in the tale of "The Shipwrecked Sailor", there is a sailor

who

> > returns from Pwnt(Punt) and makes the following statement:

> >

> > "All the people rejoice and embrace us one after another.

Moreover,

> > we have come back in good health, and not a man is lacking;

although > > we have been to the ends of Wawat [Nubia], and gone through the land

> > of Senmut [Kush], we have returned in peace, and our land--- behold,

> > we have come back to it."

> >

> > Now if Pwnt was south of Nubia, then would it be necessary to travel

> > by sea? There were many shipments along the Nile amongst Nubia and > > Ethiopia. So, if they were in the same vicinity, why take the course > > of the Red Sea?

> >

> > Could it be that Zimbabwe, Mozambique or even more Southern Africa

> > (Azania) was/is the true location of Pwnt?

> >

> >

> > What do you think about this?

> >

> >

> > Respectfully,

> >

> > Sharma Men Ra

> >

>

| 23377|2007-10-13 08:18:11|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: Pwnt: Land of Ntrw|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Dexter Harper" wrote:

>

>

>

> That's an excellent point regarding the nature of the voyage and size > of the ships. It's reported that each ship was 70 feet long and > accommodated 210 men. Also, the frankincense & myrrh point is hard to > argue against.

>

>

The identification of ntyw is quite debatable. Ptolemaic sources at Edfu suggest it was a general term for a variety of aromatics. Still it is generally translated either as "myrrh" or "frankincense."

Many of the trees though shown as being brought from Punt have heavy foliage something not characteristic of the nearly leafless myrrh tree and Somalia frankincense trees. There are other leafless trees shown but these might just be the same variety as the luxuriant tree shown at a different season.

Note that various sources say that cassia and benzoin also come from Punt.

My view is that many of the products at Punt were not necessarily local but were found there because it was an entrepot where one could find everything from emeralds to "dogs of a good nature."

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala
| 23378|2007-10-13 08:24:56|cristofori whitakara|Re: Zahi Hawass insisted Tuesday that Tutankhamun was not black|
htp mahari and others. is there any connection between hathor and the biblical hagar?

Mahari Mengistu wrote:

Paul,
Here is something on Hathor - I doubt it is the best - which talks about how she is represented. So it is possible what we see in your
photo is a representation of horns.

=====

Hathor(Het-hert)

Symbols: cow, lioness, falcon, cobra, hippopotamus, sistrum, musical instruments, drums, pregnant women, mirrors, cosmetics

Cult Center: Dendera

The horned cow-goddess of love, she was also the deity of happiness, dance and music, and a protector of women. She is depicted as a cow, as a woman with the head of a cow, or as a woman with who wears the stylized cow-horns which hold in them the solar disk. Her symbols also included the papyrus reed, the snake and a rattle called a sistrum.

Early in Egyptian mythology she was known as Horus' mother (later Isis assumed this role). Proof of this is seen in her name, "Hathor" which means the "house of Horus". As the mother of Horus, the queen of Egypt was identified with her. This is natural, as the queen was the mother of the Pharaoh, the living Horus. Isis was often shown with cow-horns like Hathor's on her head when the artist wanted to emphasize her role as the mother of Horus.

It was said that when a child was born, Seven Hathors came to his bedside to announce his fate. The Seven Hathors were believed to know the future and the moment of death for every Egyptian. A person's destiny depended on the hour of their death and the luck of ill-fortune was connected with it. It was believed that the Hathors would exchange a prince born to ill-fortune with a more fortunate child, therefore protecting the dynasty and the nation. The Hathors were shown as a group of young women playing tambourines and wearing the disk and horns of Hathor. During Ptolemaic times (when Greeks ruled over Egypt), they were identified with the Pleiades.

In the Story of Re, she was created by her father Re as "Sekhmet" as a destroyer of men, who were disobedient to him. Later Re changed his mind, but even he could not stop her from killing men. He then disguised beer as blood and when Sekhmet became drunk, she could no longer kill and was known thereafter as Hathor, a goddess of love.

Her cult was centered in Dendera where she was a goddess of fertility and childbirth. In Thebes she was seen as a goddess of the dead, and the Greeks identified her with Aphrodite (their goddess of love

===

HTP,
Mahari

---

Fussy? Opinionated? Impossible to please? Perfect. Join Yahoo!'s user panel and lay it on us.
| 23379|2007-10-13 09:14:31|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: Pwnt: Land of Ntrw|
Here are some images of trees brought from Punt.

A myrrh tree (Commiphora) being harvested.

Somalia myrrh tree

Foliage indicated by bounding line.

Village in Punt with "myrrh" trees and palms with leaning trunks.

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23380|2007-10-13 09:55:19|asar_imhotep|Re: Pwnt: Land of Ntrw|
For the record, is not the word /nTr/ written out on the first picture you have posted? Just another indication that the Kmtjw actually wrote the word out and didn't all of the time use the trilateral sign.

Asar Imhotep
<http://www.mochasuite.com>

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala"
wrote:

>
> Here are some images of trees brought from Punt.
>
>
>
>
>
>
> [http://www.magialuna.net/myrrh!.jpg]
> A myrrh tree (Commiphora) being harvested.
>
> [The image
> "http://img-srv.dtcbuilder.com/engine/builder/images/4/1/9/3/5/file/
\
> 4.JPG" cannot be displayed, because it contains errors.]
> Somalia myrrh tree
>
> [The image
> "http://www.hort.purdue.edu/newcrop/tropical/lecture_35/14m.jpg" > cannot be displayed, because it contains errors.]
>
> Foliage indicated by bounding line.
> [http://www.ancient-egypt.org/glossary/miscellaneous/punt_village.jpg]

> Village in Punt with "myrrh" trees and palms with leaning trunks.

>
> Regards,
> Paul Kekai Manansala

>
| 23381|2007-10-13 10:28:48|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: Pwnt: Land of Ntrw|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:

>
> For the record, is not the word /nTr/ written out on the first > picture you have posted?

Looks like it, although it's probably good to check the whole panel.
Don't know if the Deir el-Bahri scenes are available online.

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23382|2007-10-13 11:03:16|Ferg|Re: Pwnt: land of ntrw|

Attachments :

Hi.

I wonder if the following short article will be of interest to the discussion.

The accounts are the words of the South African linguist C. M. Doke. I typed the text out, as photocopying it did not work. Unfortunately I do not have the means to obtain the German discussion paper on the word for Punt. I am sure it would make interesting reading. I shall be developing the subject further.

Ferg Somo

| 23383|2007-10-13 11:25:42|Djehuti Sundaka|Re: Zahi Hawass insisted Tuesday that Tutankhamun was not black|

It is *possible* that the pre-biblical Hagar character had been inspired by a cow-goddess such as Asat in that she would've been a princess morphed into a wandering cow that gave birth to the future king of Kamat (ie. Yaaqob-Har).

Djehuti Sundaka

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, cristofori whitakara wrote:

>

> htp mahari and others. is there any connection between hathor and the biblical hagar?

>

> Mahari Mengistu wrote: Paul,

> Here is something on Hathor - I doubt it is the best - which talks > about how she is represented. So it is possible what we see in your

> photo is a representation of horns.

> =====

> Hathor(Het-hert)

> Symbols: cow, lioness, falcon, cobra, hippopotamus, sistrum,

musical

> instruments, drums, pregnant women, mirrors, cosmetics

> Cult Center: Dendera

>

> The horned cow-goddess of love, she was also the deity of happiness,

> dance and music, and a protector of women. She is depicted as a cow,

> as a woman with the head of a cow, or as a woman with who wears the > stylized cow-horns which hold in them the solar disk. Her symbols > also included the papyrus reed, the snake and a rattle called a > sistrum.

>

> Early in Egyptian mythology she was known as Horus' mother (later > Isis assumed this role). Proof of this is seen in her name, "Hathor"

> which means the "house of Horus". As the mother of Horus, the queen > of Egypt was identified with her. This is natural, as the queen was > the mother of the Pharaoh, the living Horus. Isis was often shown > with cow-horns like Hathor's on her head when the artist wanted to > emphasize her role as the mother of Horus.

>

> It was said that when a child was born, Seven Hathors came to his > bedside to announce his fate. The Seven Hathors were believed to know

> the future and the moment of death for every Egyptian. A person's > destiny depended on the hour of their death and the luck of ill-> fortune was connected with it. It was believed that the Hathors

would

> exchange a prince born to ill-fortune with a more fortunate child, > therefore protecting the dynasty and the nation. The Hathors were > shown as a group of young women playing tambourines and wearing the > disk and horns of Hathor. During Ptolemaic times (when Greeks ruled > over Egypt), they were identified with the Pleiades.

>

> In the Story of Re, she was created by her father Re as "Sekhmet"

as > a destroyer of men, who were disobedient to him. Later Re changed

his > mind, but even he could not stop her from killing men. He then > disguised beer as blood and when Sekhmet became drunk, she could no > longer kill and was known thereafter as Hathor, a goddess of love.

>

> Her cult was centered in Dendera where she was a goddess of fertility

> and childbirth. In Thebes she was seen as a goddess of the dead,

and > the Greeks identified her with Aphrodite (their goddess of love

> ===

> HTP,

> Mahari

>

>

>

>

>

>

> -----

> Fussy? Opinionated? Impossible to please? Perfect. Join Yahoo!'s user panel and lay it on us.

>

| 23384|2007-10-13 12:53:27|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Zahi Hawass insisted Tuesday that Tutankhamun was not black|

I don't know. It's not a question I can answer without further (much
I suspect) research.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, cristofori whitakara
wrote:

>

> htp mahari and others. is there any connection between hathor and

the biblical hagar?

>

> Mahari Mengistu wrote: Paul,

> Here is something on Hathor - I doubt it is the best - which talks > about how she is represented. So it is possible what we see in your

> photo is a representation of horns.

> =====

> Hathor(Het-hert)

> Symbols: cow, lioness, falcon, cobra, hippopotamus, sistrum,

musical

> instruments, drums, pregnant women, mirrors, cosmetics

> Cult Center: Dendera

>

> The horned cow-goddess of love, she was also the deity of

happiness,

- > dance and music, and a protector of women. She is depicted as a cow,

- > as a woman with the head of a cow, or as a woman with who wears the
- > stylized cow-horns which hold in them the solar disk. Her symbols
- > also included the papyrus reed, the snake and a rattle called a
- > sistrum.
- >
- > Early in Egyptian mythology she was known as Horus' mother (later
- > Isis assumed this role). Proof of this is seen in her

name, "Hathor"

- > which means the "house of Horus". As the mother of Horus, the queen
- > of Egypt was identified with her. This is natural, as the queen was
- > the mother of the Pharaoh, the living Horus. Isis was often shown
- > with cow-horns like Hathor's on her head when the artist wanted to
- > emphasize her role as the mother of Horus.
- >
- > It was said that when a child was born, Seven Hathors came to his
- > bedside to announce his fate. The Seven Hathors were believed to know

- > the future and the moment of death for every Egyptian. A person's
- > destiny depended on the hour of their death and the luck of ill-
- > fortune was connected with it. It was believed that the Hathors

would

- > exchange a prince born to ill-fortune with a more fortunate child,
- > therefore protecting the dynasty and the nation. The Hathors were
- > shown as a group of young women playing tambourines and wearing the
- > disk and horns of Hathor. During Ptolemaic times (when Greeks ruled
- > over Egypt), they were identified with the Pleiades.
- >
- > In the Story of Re, she was created by her father Re as "Sekhmet"

as

- > a destroyer of men, who were disobedient to him. Later Re changed

his

- > mind, but even he could not stop her from killing men. He then
- > disguised beer as blood and when Sekhmet became drunk, she could no
- > longer kill and was known thereafter as Hathor, a goddess of love.
- >
- > Her cult was centered in Dendera where she was a goddess of fertility

> and childbirth. In Thebes she was seen as a goddess of the dead,

and

> the Greeks identified her with Aphrodite (their goddess of love

> ===

> HTP,

> Mahari

>

>

>

>

>

>

> -----

> Fussy? Opinionated? Impossible to please? Perfect. Join Yahoo!'s user panel and lay it on us.

>

| 23385|2007-10-13 15:39:19|Dexter Harper|Re: Pwnt: Land of Ntrw|

Yep, I caught that, too.

Respectfully,

Sharma Men Ra

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala"
wrote:

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep"

wrote:

>>

>> For the record, is not the word /nTr/ written out on the first >> picture you have posted?

>

> Looks like it, although it's probably good to check the whole panel.

> Don't know if the Deir el-Bahri scenes are available online.

>

> Regards,

> Paul Kekai Manansala

>

| 23386|2007-10-13 15:41:17|Dexter Harper|Re: Pwnt: land of ntrw|

Ferg,

Can you send that one to my email?

dharp3r@yahoo.com

Thanks,

Sharma Men Ra

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Ferg" wrote:

>

> Hi.

>

>

>

> I wonder if the following short article will be of interest to the discussion.

>

>

>

>

>

> The accounts are the words of the South African linguist C. M. Doke. I typed the text out, as photocopying it did not work.

Unfortunately I do not have the means to obtain the German discussion paper on the word for Punt. I am sure it would make interesting reading. I shall be developing the subject further.

>

>

>

> Ferg Somo

>

| 23387|2007-10-13 19:29:41|Paul Kekai Manansala|Letters to the Crocodile God|

Letters to the Crocodile God

Volume 60 Number 6, November/December 2007

by Marco Merola

Fragments of ancient writing illuminate 3,000 years of life in an Egyptian oasis town.

<http://www.archaeology.org/0711/abstracts/crocodile.html>

Archaeologists have been excavating on and off at Tebtunis in Egypt for a century.

Here, in the north end of the city, researchers have found artifacts and structures dating from Roman times through the Islamic period. (Marco Ansaloni)

Seventy-five miles south of Cairo, hidden by shifting sands on the edge of the desert, are the remains of the ancient oasis town of Tebtunis. Archaeologists and diggers clamber over the site, a collection of impressive ruins that sprawl across nearly 100 acres and more than 3,000 years. At dusk, the exposed walls and oblique light call to mind a giant desert labyrinth. At the south end of the site are the low ruins of a Greek settlement, including a massive temple to the crocodile god Sobek. To the north, later Byzantine and Islamic ruins once stood higher--10 to 12 feet in the 1930s--before unknown assailants knocked them down. But the true value of this old town is not in its remaining walls; it is in little flecks of paper that document three millennia of life here and across this region of Egypt.

The desert swallowed Tebtunis in the twelfth century A.D., so the town does not appear on any maps. We know its name, and a great deal more, from the tens of thousands of papyrus fragments found throughout the twentieth century by a succession of archaeologists, including those working at the site today. These records, which range from pieces found in ancient garbage dumps, to sheets recycled as wrappings for mummies, to five-yard-long scrolls, include literary texts and records of private contracts and public acts. "The papyri give us particular and historic information that cannot be found elsewhere," says Claudio Gallazzi, professor of papyrology at Milan University who has led the international effort here since 1988. The papyri and other archaeological finds are painting an ever more detailed picture of life in this ethnically mixed village over a long period of time. For example, Gallazzi says, they show that there was a strong Greek presence in the town at a time when most Greeks in Egypt were thought to have lived only in big cities. They also illuminate the surrounding areas with which Tebtunis interacted and traded. "When we find a treasurer's registry, I know it contains interesting economic matters from many villages in the Fayum area, not just Tebtunis. And when we find religious documents, we can understand more about previously unrecognized religious-magic rituals [surrounding the crocodile god] pertinent to all of Egypt," he adds.

The papyri found at Tebtunis illuminate many aspects of life, including religious rituals, reports of crimes, legal documents and contracts, and personal communications. (Marco Ansaloni)

Gallazzi puts on a pair of white gloves to remove a piece of papyrus from the ground with very thin tweezers. Since 1998, the Italian-French mission has found 7,000 papyri and many inscribed potsherds. This is one of the very few places in Egypt where archaeologists are still unearthing papyrus fragments. And the finds here are startlingly diverse, written in Arabic, Coptic, Greek, Aramaic, and Egyptian demotic, a simplified, cursive form of hieratic writing.

"Many are concerned with administrative procedures, but also include contracts, receipts, inventories, letters, and school exercises, as well as copies of literary works by Homer, Menander, and Euripides," says Gallazzi, who seems to be able to read ancient papyri the way you're reading this article.

He continues talking about spectacular recent finds as he carefully handles some very small papyrus rolls in good condition and still closed with sealing clay.

"The archive of the crocodile god's temple was emptied from time to time and we found where all those papyri were thrown away. It is truly a treasure," he says. "We recently found 300 oracular cards there that date back to the third century B.C. They contain requests from common people to Sobek on what to do in certain situations."

Among the cards, Gallazzi found one that reads "...if Thamista was the man who has stolen my bronze pot, give me this card..." He found five others just like it, each containing a different name--essentially a suspect lineup from which Sobek could pick out the culprit. "We didn't know this ritual before," he says. "So we think now that all over Egypt people used to write these cards when they couldn't find a thief or a killer."

"Having the ability to study people's daily lives in detail and across centuries is the dream of every archaeologist. Tebtunis is the evidence that dreams can come true," he says. "Now you can walk along the streets and imagine the village 2,000 years ago."

Marco Merola is ARCHAEOLOGY's Naples correspondent.

| 23388|2007-10-14 17:23:32|Kwesi Ra Nehem Akhan|AFURAKA/AFURAITKAIT Nanasom Nhoma|
Mikyia mo (Greetings),

We have recently launched our nhoma (journal):

First Issue cover:

Second Issue cover:

This is an nhoma for, by and about Afurakanu/Afuraitkaitnut (Africans~Black People) exclusively. We define various aspects of ritual experience and cultural values as practiced in our varied Ancestral Religious expressions including but not limited to: Akan, Ewe, Yoruba, Igbo, Bakongo, Bambara, Dogon, Minianka, Goromantche, Ovambo, Kenesu-Kamau (Nubian-Egyptian). . . .

The nhoma is divided into seven sections dealing with a number of areas from the Afurakani/Afuraitkaitnit (African) perspective including:

KRADIN (spiritual identity); ABUSUAKUW and ABATUMM (cultural and physiological identity--melanin); MMARA NE KYI (Law and Hate); NHWEHWEMU (Critical Examination); NKRABEA (Function); AHOOFE and AHOODEN (Beauty and Health); AHODWIRA (Ritual;Self-Purification)

We also show the origins of the many fictional characters presented to us in the pseudo(false)-religions of the whites and their offspring. These fictional characters, which never existed of any race whatsoever, include: jesus/yeshua, muhammed, moses, abraham, solomon, sheba, menelik, yahweh, buddha, allah, brahmin, as well as many others.

The difference between true religion/spirituality and pseudo-religion, psuedo-spirituality, pseudo-metaphysics (white new-ageism in "blackface") is clearly delineated.

The first issue is 57 pages. The second issue is 60 pages.

Ordering details as well as numerous excerpts from each issue can be found on our website at: www.odwirafo.com/nanasom.html

We do accept paypal:

1-year subscriptions (electronic version) are only $27.00 (9 issues). Single issues are $3.00

The electronic version of the nhoma is e-mailed immediately upon receipt of payment---usually the same day.

1-year subscriptions (hard-copy) are only $45.00 (9 issues) plus shipping. Single issues for the hard-copy version are $5.00 plus shipping.

For many, Nanasom Nhoma is being given as an awoda akyede (birthday gift) of substance that will engage the consciousness of the recipient for the entire year and beyond.

AFURAKA/AFURAITKAIT Nanasom Nhoma is ultimately about Nyansa (Intelligence) as it relates to Amansesew (Nationbuilding/restoration). Nyansa is comprised of two complementary poles: Revolution and Resolution.

Ma asomdwoee-Hetep (Peace)....

--

www.odwirafo.com/nanasom.html

| 23389|2007-10-15 12:10:05|Paul Kekai Manansala|Cheikh Anta Diop on Egyptian conquests in West Asia, Aegean Sea|

Here is part of a translated interview with Cheikh Anta Diop:

http://youtube.com/watch?v=tG\_89ICFFLM

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23390|2007-10-15 18:11:18|Paul Kekai Manansala|Runoko Rashidi on India's Blacks

(YouTube)|

Runoko Rashidi speaking on India

<http://youtube.com/watch?v=A8j4ozFf1R4>

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23391|2007-10-16 10:32:44|A.E.|Endless forgries|

Attachments :

This program is about bible forgeries but it will give you a hint of the endless fakes and forgeries of supposed Egyptology

... such as "glass eyes" in statues 500 years before they ever made glass

This is usually a fake program its self.. they make up all kind of things, but this segment has cases of people caught making fake history

Naked Archeologist.. Wednesday night 8-8:30 pm eastern time.. HINT channel

*

Encyclopedia Egypt

| 23392|2007-10-16 11:51:38|cristofori whitakara|Re: Endless forgries|

this program aired a show discussing the black prince who saved jerusalem...the kushite prince...and the one who host the show does not ask important questions...he leaves important issues to the viewers imagination

"A.E." wrote:

This program is about bible forgeries but it will give you a hint of the endless fakes and forgeries of supposed Egyptology

... such as "glass eyes" in statues 500 years before they ever made glass

This is usually a fake program its self.. they make up all kind of things, but this segment has cases of people caught making fake history

Naked Archeologist. . Wednesday night 8-8:30 pm eastern time.. HINT channel

*

Encyclopedia Egypt

Be a better Globetrotter. Get better travel answers from someone who knows.

Yahoo! Answers - Check it out.

| 23393|2007-10-16 15:50:44|kungfuhustle|Re: AFURAKA/AFURAITKAIT Nanasom Nhoma| Kwesi

Thanks for forwarding this announcement.

I reviewed the TOC and was impressed by the amount of information contained within.

The editorial on, Blacks and Cannabis use, has also crossed my mind. The chemical (THC & Delta9) does affect blacks more strongly than whites.

It appears there is a tremendous amount of research being conducted by whites (with many letters behind their names) to develop neural inhibitors that are designed specifically to attach people of color, gated by the concentration of melanin in their systems.

Some of these agents are meant to impede learning, while others create a state of FEAR, apathy, and disorganization.

The more I research the subject of melanin research & development, the more thousands of articles I find of interest, and of tremendous concern. For example, this report on non-lethal bio-agents being developed by The US DoD and Israel, targeting people of color being.

>From my understanding, this research was begun in Apartheid South Africa with financial and scientific aid from Israel.

<http://www.sunshine-project.org/incapacitants/jnlwdpdf/psucalmoriginal.pdf>

Keep up the good work. I plan on starting a subscription by the end of week.

meninarmer

On Mon, 2007-10-15 at 00:23 +0000, Kwesi Ra Nehem Akhan wrote:

> Mikyia mo (Greetings),

>

> We have recently launched our nhoma (journal):

>

>

> First Issue cover:

> Photo Sharing and Video Hosting at Photobucket

>

>

- > Second Issue cover:
- > Photo Sharing and Video Hosting at Photobucket
- >
- > This is an nhoma for, by and about Afurakanu/Afuraitkaitnut
- > (Africans~Black People) exclusively. We define various aspects of
- > ritual experience and cultural values as practiced in our varied
- > Ancestral Religious expressions including but not limited to: Akan,
- > Ewe, Yoruba, Igbo, Bakongo, Bambara, Dogon, Minianka, Goromantche,
- > Ovambo, Kenesu-Kamau (Nubian-Egyptian). . . .
- >
- > The nhoma is divided into seven sections dealing with a number of
- > areas from the Afurakani/Afuraitkaitnit (African) perspective
- > including:
- >
- > KRADIN (spiritual identity); ABUSUAKUW and ABATUMM (cultural and
- > physiological identity--melanin); MMARA NE KYI (Law and Hate);
- > NHWEHWEMU (Critical Examination); NKRABEA (Function); AHOOFE and
- > AHODWIRA (Beauty and Health); AHODWIRA (Ritual;Self-Purification)
- >
- > We also show the origins of the many fictional characters presented to
- > us in the pseudo(false)-religions of the whites and their offspring.
- > These fictional characters, which never existed of any race
- > whatsoever, include: jesus/yeshua, muhammed, moses, abraham, solomon,
- > sheba, menelik, yahweh, buddha, allah, brahmin, as well as many
- > others.
- >
- > The difference between true religion/spirituality and pseudo-religion,
- > psuedo-spirituality, pseudo-metaphysics (white new-ageism in
- > "blackface") is clearly delineated.
- >
- > The first issue is 57 pages. The second issue is 60 pages.
- >
- > Ordering details as well as numerous excerpts from each issue can be
- > found on our website at: www.odwirafo.com/nanasom.html
- >
- > We do accept paypal:
- >
- > 1-year subscriptions (electronic version) are only $27.00 (9 issues).
- > Single issues are $3.00
- >
- > The electronic version of the nhoma is e-mailed immediately upon
- > receipt of payment---usually the same day.
- >
- > 1-year subscriptions (hard-copy) are only $45.00 (9 issues) plus
- > shipping. Single issues for the hard-copy version are $5.00 plus
- > shipping.

>
> For many, Nanasom Nhoma is being given as an awoda akyede (birthday > gift) of substance that will engage the consciousness of the recipient > for the entire year and beyond.
>
>
> AFURAKA/AFURAITKAIT Nanasom Nhoma is ultimately about Nyansa > (Intelligence) as it relates to Amansew > (Nationbuilding/restoration). Nyansa is comprised of two complementary > poles: Revolution and Resolution.
>
> Ma asomdwoee-Hetep (Peace)....
>
> --
> www.odwirafo.com/nanasom.html
>

| 23394|2007-10-16 16:03:11|Mahari|FW: DREADLOCKS|

Attachments :

I don't know if these pix will come through.

We have discussed Egyptian hair lately and these pix further illustrate the point. It is my contention that the images and sculpture that we see of Egyptians frequently show a representation of dreadlocks. The first pix CLEARLY shows this. There are enumerable artistic renderings of this style of hair. In most cases what we see is hair with extremely large rather stiff looking strains. I believe they are a stylistic representation of hair like the first image. I always wondered about this kind of artistic rendering (with the huge hair strains). However, we know that Kemau were eminently artistically capable of depicting whatever they wanted in the greatest detail. Their stone/sculpture work was incomparable. So it is likely that these large hair strains were dreadlocks.

Paul, how do I embed photos within the emails?

FREE INDIA'S BLACKS.....

It is well enough that people of the nation do not understand our banking and monetary system, for if they did, I believe there would be a revolution before tomorrow morning.

Henry Ford (23)

---

No banners. No pop-ups. No kidding.

Make My Way your home on the Web - <http://www.myway.com>

| 23395|2007-10-16 17:13:26|Mahari Mengistu|DREADLOCKS|

I'll try again. Follow the links:

King Amenhemet

http://www.freemaninstitute.com/Gallery/Egyp233\_big\_copy.jpg

http://www.jackiechan.com/i/journal\_images/20061109JCJ-4.jpg

<http://www.curlyhairsalon.com/images/toyred.gif>

http://freelylocked.com/db2/00172/freelylocked.com/\_uimages/locks5.JPG

And how many wall and tomb icons have you seen of this image?

<http://www.kurtatum.com/images/dreadlocks.JPG>

HTP,

Mahari

| 23396|2007-10-16 17:17:38|Mahari|Hindu Mythological aspect of Dreadlocks: An Afrikan Connection?|

To follow up on Rashidi's input:

Hindu Mythological aspect of Dreadlocks

According to the Hindu Mythology, Lord Shiva is seen with dreadlocks (known as the jataa) piled up as a knot on his head. Details say that the uncontrollable speed of Ganga or the Ganges is checked by his dreadlocks.

It is said that Shiva takes the weight of the mighty Ganges in his locks and imprisons her. In times of need she is released through the locks of his hair, which prevents the river's force from destroying earth, and the waters bring purification to the planet. Hence the jataa or the dreadlocks of Shiva (also known as the 'Mahayogi') illustrates the symbol strength.

FREE INDIA'S BLACKS.....

It is well enough that people of the nation do not understand our banking and monetary system, for if they did, I believe there would be a revolution before tomorrow morning.

Henry Ford (23)

---

No banners. No pop-ups. No kidding.

Make My Way your home on the Web - <http://www.myway.com>

| 23397|2007-10-16 18:59:21|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: FW: DREADLOCKS|

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari" wrote:

>Paul, how do I embed photos within the emails?

Mahari, try posting from the website. You will see an option above the text area that says:

"New! Compose your message with Rich-Text Editor (Beta)."

Click on "Rich-Text Editor" and then copy and paste photos into the text area.

This works with Firefox and Netscape but not Internet Explorer and only for photos already on the web.

Otherwise, try to find on your email program where it allows you to send html messages, then check on the tool bar for the button that allows you to insert embedded, attached images.

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23398|2007-10-16 19:52:36|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: Hindu Mythological aspect of Dreadlocks: An Afrikan Connection?|

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari" wrote:

>

>

> According to the Hindu Mythology, Lord Shiva is seen with dreadlocks (known as the jataa) piled up as a knot on his head. Details say that the uncontrollable speed of Ganga or the Ganges is checked by his dreadlocks.

>

Mahari, the sadhus of India, especially those who worship Shiva, often wear their hair in dreadlocks.

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23399|2007-10-16 19:53:09|bonotchim@aol.com|Re: DREADLOCKS|

Check out this link for nappy hair in ancient Kemet. I took this in 1987 at the Cairo Museum.Bro. Bonotchi

<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=caiSp919rZM>

-----Original Message-----

From: Mahari Mengistu

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Sent: Tue, 16 Oct 2007 7:13 pm

Subject: [Ta_Seti] DREADLOCKS

I'll try again. Follow the links:

King Amenhemet

[http://www.freemani nstitute. com/Gallery/ Egyp233\_big\_copy.jpg](http://www.freemani nstitute. com/Gallery/ Egyp233_big_copy.jpg)

[http://www.jackiech an.com/i/ journal\_images/ 20061109JCJ- 4.jpg](http://www.jackiech an.com/i/ journal_images/ 20061109JCJ- 4.jpg)

<http://www.curlyhai rsalon.com/ images/toyred. gif>

<http://freelylocked .com/db2/ 00172/freelylock ed.com/ uimages/ locks5.JPG>

And how many wall and tomb icons have you seen of this image?

<http://www.kurttatu m.com/images/ dreadlocks. JPG>

HTP,

Mahari

---

Email and AIM finally together. You've gotta check out free AOL Mail!

| 23400|2007-10-17 00:16:25|Mahari Mengistu|Re: FW: DREADLOCKS|

Great. Thank you.

I have Internet Explorer. I'll try the approach next time.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala" wrote:

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari" wrote:

>

> >Paul, how do I embed photos within the emails?

>

> Mahari, try posting from the website. You will see an option above

the > text area that says:

>

> "New! Compose your message with Rich-Text Editor (Beta)
> ."
>
> Click on "Rich-Text Editor" and then copy and paste photos into the text

> area.
>
> This works with Firefox and Netscape but not Internet Explorer and

only

> for photos already on the web.
>
> Otherwise, try to find on your email program where it allows you to send

> html messages, then check on the tool bar for the button that allows you > to insert embedded, attached images.

>
> Regards,
> Paul Kekai Manansala
>

| 23401|2007-10-17 08:25:38|Peter Gray|Re: Zahi Hawass insisted Tuesday that Tutankhamun
was not black|

Ta-Settians:

I keep seeing the subject title about Dr. Hawass/Tutankamen, but where is the article itself in which Hawass's statements are made? In an older post? Thanks.

Peter Gray

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: mahari@myway.com
Date: Fri, 12 Oct 2007 07:01:22 +0000 Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Zahi Hawass insisted Tuesday that Tutankhamun was not
black

Thanks, Paul. I guess I'll do some research and find out how "exceptional" these wigs are that they deserve to be called "Nubian wigs" rather than "Egyptian wigs". They look pretty much like the hair styles in the Kemetic icons that we see on tomb walls albeit without the exceptional 3d detail.

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Paul Kekai Manansala wrote:

>
> Mahari,
>
> As far as I'm aware, "Nubian wig" is a term coined by Egyptologists based on the similarity of the wig with Nubian hairstyles.

>
> Regards,
> Paul Kekai Manansala

>
> Mahari Mengistu wrote:

Paul,
> I'd like to know who designated these wigs as "Nubian wigs"? Is it > denoted in Kemetic writings as such? Or was it designated as such by > eurocentric Egyptologists who wanted to give the impression that > because these wigs are so clearly Afrikan that they are the exception > to the rule; that these are not typical "Egyptian" wig?

> HTP,
> Mahari

>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala" wrote:

> >
> >

> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari" wrote:

> > >
> > > You assessment seems almost as narrow-minded and limited as > > > Hawass'.

> > There are any number of images of Egyptians with Africoid features

> > INCLUDING kinky hair/braided wigs.

> > >
> >

> > These are known as "Nubian wigs" and they leave quite an impression

> when

> > you see them in person.

> >

> >

>

[http://www.acewigs.com/shop/image\_uploads/News/Newswighistory\_M.jpg]

> >

> > [PRINCESS NESIKHONSU'S WIG.]

> > PRINCESS NESIKHONSU'S WIG.

> >

> >

> >

> > Regards.

> > Paul Kekai Manansala

> >

>

---

Climb to the top of the charts! Play Star Shuffle: the word scramble challenge with star power.
Play Now!

| 23402|2007-10-17 08:25:42|Franklin Jones|Atlanta Book Signing of the Black Matrix at
MEDU's Book Store / Gre|

Please Join me thisSaturdayOctober 20th 2007 at 2pm -- 4pmat the prestigious Medu's Book store located within the Green Brier Near Campbellton Rdin Atlanta Georgia for a Book Signing of the popular underground book "The Black Matrix:
the modern mental and social suppression of African Americans Under National interest. Come and meet with the author and obtain an autographed copy of the book.

Here's is just oneexample of the type of response that the book has been getting:

Thank you, Thank you, Thank you.... You began my Monday morning with tears in my eyes reading this book, tears for a future I thought I was changing when I began working at Howard almost thirty years ago, tears for how much work there is left to do and tears for all those young people who think that hot shot money making jobs in the corporate world while ignoring these kinds of needs will lead to a fulfilling life. It won't. This is where our energies belong...

I believe that your response will be the same Please join me at the Medu Book Store within the Green Brier Mall in AtlantathisSaturday October 20th 2007 at 2pm--4pm.

---

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23403|2007-10-17 08:33:09|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: Zahi Hawass insisted Tuesday that Tutankhamun was not black|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Gray wrote:

>

>

> Ta-Settians:

>

> I keep seeing the subject title about Dr. Hawass/Tutankamen, but where is the article itself in which Hawass's statements are made? In an older post? Thanks.

>

> Peter Gray

>

http://tech.groups.yahoo.com/group/Ta\_Seti/message/23153

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23404|2007-10-17 09:18:37|Dexter Harper|Re: Atlanta Book Signing of the Black Matrix at MEDU's Book Store /|

I will be there. Thanks for the 411.

Sharma Men Ra

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Franklin Jones wrote:

>

>

>

> v\:* {behavior:url(#default#VML);} o\:* {behavior:url(#default#VML);} w\:* {behavior:url(#default#VML);} .shape {behavior:url(#default#VML);} st1\:* {behavior:url(#default#ieooui)} Please Join me this Saturday

October 20th 2007 at 2pm -- 4pm at the prestigious Medu's Book store located within the Green Brier Near Campbellton Rd in Atlanta Georgia for a Book Signing of the popular underground book "The Black Matrix: the modern mental and social suppression of African Americans Under National interest. Come and meet with the author and obtain an autographed copy of the book.

>

> Here's is just one example of the type of response that the book has been getting:

>

> Thank you, Thank you, Thank you.... You began my Monday morning with tears in my eyes reading this book, tears for a future I thought I was changing when I began working at Howard almost thirty years ago, tears for how much work there is left to do and tears for all those young people who think that hot shot money making jobs in the corporate world while ignoring these kinds of needs will lead to a fulfilling life. It won't. This is where our energies belong...

>

> I believe that your response will be the same Please join me at the Medu Book Store within the Green Brier Mall in Atlanta this Saturday October 20th 2007 at 2pm--4pm.

>

>

> -----

>

>

>

>

>

>

> Do You Yahoo!?

> Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

> <http://mail.yahoo.com>

>

| 23405|2007-10-17 20:50:11|Paul Kekai Manansala|Did seafood encourage 'Out of Africa' trips?|
Did seafood encourage 'Out of Africa' trips?

October 17 2007 at 10:28AM

By Richard Ingham

Paris - Archaeologists have uncovered the earliest known remains of human habitation by the coast, a finding that may explain how humans ventured beyond Africa at the start of their planetary odyssey.

Mussel shells, sharpened pieces of red ochre and stone micro-tools found in a sea cave in South Africa suggest that Homo sapiens headed for the beach quite soon after emerging from the savannah, they say.

By stumbling upon the rich harvest of the sea, Man found the means to explore beyond Africa, sustaining himself through maritime edibles by probing along the coast, they suggest.

Until now, the earliest evidence of human settlement by the coast dates from 120 000 years ago - about 80 000 years after the approximate time when, according to fossil evidence, H. sapiens arose in the grasslands of East Africa.

Experts have long suspected that coastal migration must have occurred earlier than this.

The problem, though, has been finding proof to back this belief.

Turn the clock back to an era between 195,000 and 135,000 years ago, and you will find Earth in the grip of an Ice Age.

So much water was locked up in glaciers that the sea level was as much as 125 metres lower than today. When the glaciers eventually retreated, the sea rose once more, swamping coastlines and sweeping away the traces of habitation.

One remarkable location that survived, though, was a cave overlooking the Indian Ocean in coastal cliffs at Pinnacle Point, near South Africa's Mossel Bay.

The cave is so high that, even now, it is 15 metres above the sea. At the time when it was inhabited, it was located within five to 10 kilometres of the coast.

Curtis Marean of Arizona State University led a team that sifted through the cave's walls and floor and found remains of hearths, of some two dozen shellfish, mainly brown mussels, as well as 57 pieces of ochre pigment, some of them brilliant red, and nearly three dozen "bladelets", or tiny tools made of chipped stone.

The find has been dated to around 164 000 years ago, give or take 12 000 years, according to their paper, which appears on Thursday in the British weekly journal Nature.

Marean believes the discovery opens a door to understanding the movements of our early forebears.

During the long glacial period, southern Africa was cooler and drier, and hunter-gatherers probably found it hard to get food from animals, fruits and berries, he says.

Moving to the coast thus opened up a whole new larder of food.

"Shellfish may have been a critical food source to the survival of human populations when they were faced with depressed terrestrial productivity during glacial stages... when much of southern Africa was more arid and populations were isolated and perhaps concentrated on now-submerged coastal platforms," the study says.

Seafood was the biggest shift in the human diet until animal farming began at the end of the last Ice Age, roughly 11 000 years ago, it contends.

Once humans realised the bounty of food that lay within their grasp, they could use it for sustenance as they moved out of Africa, along the coast of the Red Sea and northwards into the Middle East and beyond, as the species embarked on its trek around the world.

Humans expanded into southern Asia along the coast and also island-hopped their way to Australia and New Guinea using coastal food resources.

In a commentary, also published by Nature, anthropologist Sally McBrearty of the University of Connecticut and palaeontologist Chris Stringer of London's Natural History Museum say the pigment is an equally exciting find.

This substance, also called haematite, has some practical use as an adhesive.

However, the brilliant red colours that feature in the find suggest it was also used for decorating the body or objects, given that red has always played a key role in human rite and society.

"It suggests that early humans in Africa inhabited a cognitive world enriched by symbols before 160 000 years ago," the pair say. - Sapa-AFP
| 23406|2007-10-17 20:59:40|Paul Kekai Manansala|Aswan Obelisk Quarry more than meets the eye|

Contact: A'ndrea Elyse Messer

aem1@psu.edu

814-865-9481

[Penn State](http://Penn State)

Aswan Obelisk Quarry more than meets the eye

The unfinished Obelisk Quarry in Aswan, Egypt, has a canal that may have connected to the Nile and allowed the large stone monuments to float to their permanent locations, according to an international team of researchers. This canal, however, may be allowing salts from ground water to seep into what has been the best preserved example of obelisk quarrying in Egypt.

Wading bird graffiti on wall near unfinished obelisk.

Click here for more information.

"Working deposits and surfaces exposed during excavation are being damaged by accumulation of salts," the researchers said at the Second International Conference on Geology of the Tethyr at the Cairo University. "These unique artifacts document quarry methods and should be preserved."

The granite quarry, located on the east bank of the Nile in the center of Aswan City, contains a very large unfinished obelisk that was not completed because of latent cracks. While the cracks were bad for the ancient Egyptian stone carvers, the unfinished monument provides the opportunity for archaeologists to understand how people worked hard stone quarries.

Excavations by the Aswan Office of the Supreme Council of Antiquities, Egypt, began in 2002 to prepare the site for tourists. Among the discoveries made were a trench at least 8.25 feet deep. Archaeologists were unable to reach the bottom because of groundwater incursion.

"Some researchers suggested that this trench linked the quarry with the Nile," says Dr. Richard R. Parizek, professor of geology and geo-environmental engineering at Penn State. "Transporting huge granite monoliths by boat to the Nile during the annual flood would appear to be easier than having to transport these blocks overland from the quarry to the Nile."

Salt incursion into layers of rock indicating how obelisks were mined.

Click here for more information.

Parizek, working with Adel Kelany, inspector, Supreme Council of Antiquities; Amr El-Gohary, geologist, National Research Centre, Cairo; and Shelton S. Alexander, professor emeritus of geophysics; David P. Gold, professor emeritus of geology; Elizabeth J. Walters, associate professor of art history; and Katarin A. Parizek, instructor, integrated arts, all at Penn State, looked at minimally invasive ways to determine whether the canal, as suggested, existed.

The researchers used both soil temperature readings and shallow seismic reflection to outline the canal without excavation because a cemetery and the recently completed tourist amenities are in the path of the canal. They drilled holes into the ground and fitted them with pipes so the researchers could measure temperature. Because this is a granite quarry, most of the underlying area is solid granite, which has little groundwater circulation and is heated and cooled only by geothermal energy from beneath and the outdoor above-ground temperatures. However, where the canal may run, sediment-filled areas would respond to groundwater circulation and show temperature differences.

"The temperature readings, taken in spring and winter, did establish that the canal continued another 495 feet past the aborted excavations," says Parizek. "We did not go any further because we were at the boundary of the antiquities site and would have entered the cemetery. "

The researchers used seismic reflection and refraction surveys in the same locations as the temperature measurements to confirm that the canal continued. These measurements also suggest that the canal deepens as it nears the Nile.

The presence of a sediment-filled canal would explain the salt deposition in the quarry that is destroying not only ancient graffiti at the site, but also profiles of the obelisk-sculpting process. If, as the groundwater rises, the water in the filled canal rises, the salt would be deposited as the water receded.

Confirming that the canal exists is the first step in controlling the water damage to the site. The researchers suggest three possible solutions to the water damage problem. The first approach would be to drill wells or a sump in the gravel sediment fill and pump out the water to lower the water table.

"This would have to be done continually to be effective," says Parizek.

The second approach would work if the extent of the water saturated gravel is located inside the Antiquities property or adjacent to the property. A trench excavated to the granite bedrock and filled with compact clay would eliminate groundwater seepage back to the obelisk quarry. A small amount of pumping would still be necessary occasionally.

The third option, if removing gravel to bedrock was impossible and the canal's extension was verified, would be to place a grout curtain in the saturated portion of the canal. A series of boreholes through the pavement, sidewalks and at the edge of the cemetery strategically located could deliver grout to appropriate locations to reduce water problems. This option also includes pumping as needed to remove water from the backfill deposits.

"Options two and three are similar and would both require less pumping than option one," says Parizek. "However, excavating to place a clay backfill layer would allow exploration and recovery of artifacts that might otherwise be entombed in grout."

The research team suggests that additional temperature and seismic measurements are needed to further extend the canal route. They suggest that test drilling would confirm the existence of the additional 495 feet of canal. The researchers also suggest that preservation and stabilization of the exposed archaeological remains is necessary to ensure that this record remains available for both tourists and researchers.

The proceedings of the Second International Conference on Geology of the Tethyr held at Cairo University are in preparation.

---

Spawling of rock on Dolphin graffiti panel caused by salt carried by groundwater seepage

Click here for more information.

---

###

| 23407|2007-10-18 01:57:00|Alex van Deelen|The Bell Curve, pt 2|
Here we go again. For some reason, the idea of racial superiority holds an ongoing fascination for certain folk.

There is no need to tread out the whole history of The Bell Curve and Murray and Herrnstein again.

Anyway, it is a shame that someone with Watson's standing would find solace this kind of trash.

" "There is no firm reason to anticipate that the intellectual capacities of peoples geographically separated in their evolution should prove to have evolved identically. "

I presume he has heard of the "Out Of Africa" theory, as well as the "Multi-regional" theory of human evolution. Or that the multi-regional theory is quickly losing ground.

Also, the belief that Africa should somehow not be stimulating for intelligence is never gone into. I suspect that if they would, they would simply lampoon their ignorance of the continent or African culture and civilization. Or of the fact that until about 10,000 years ago, all people were hunter gatherers.

Alex

http://www.dailymail.co.uk/pages/live/articles/news/news.html?in\_article\_id=488232&in\_page\_id=1770&in\_a\_source=

How can DNA genius James Watson believe black people are less intelligent than white?

By RICHARD PENDLEBURY - More by this author

Last updated at 08:13am on 18th October 2007

The Nobel Prize-winning scientist James Dewey Watson is living proof that genius is no guarantee against holding incendiary beliefs. In his latest pronouncement, the 79-year-old American geneticist has claimed that black people are inherently less intelligent than whites.

Scroll down for more...

DNA founder James Watson has risked his reputation by saying blacks are less intelligent than whites

On the eve of his arrival in Britain today to publicise a new book, Watson, who at Cambridge University in the 1950s helped identify DNA, declared himself to be 'gloomy about the prospect of Africa . . . all our social policies are based on the fact that their intelligence is the same as ours - whereas all the testing says not really'.

Watson said he hoped everyone was equal, but added: "People who have to deal with black employees find this not true."

Human rights groups and fellow scientists immediately expressed their anger and dismay that a respected scientist could publicly state such dangerous, divisive and unsupported opinions.

Watson, however, argues that it is an uncomfortable scientific truth, even if it will be proved only when the genes which determine intelligence are identified sometime in the next decade.

Steven Rose, a brain specialist and professor of biological sciences at the Open University, said that Watson was 'out of his depth scientifically, quite apart from socially and politically'.

He added: "This is Watson at his most scandalous. I have heard him say similar things about women, but I have never heard him get into this racist terrain."

Dr Watson was hailed as achieving one of the greatest single scientific breakthroughs of the 20th century when he worked at Cambridge in the 1950s and 1960s, forming part of the team which discovered the structure of DNA.

He shared the 1962 Nobel Prize for Physiology or Medicine with colleagues Francis Crick and Maurice Wilkins.

He has been director of the Cold Spring Harbour Laboratory on Long Island in America - a world leader in research into cancer and genetics - for 50 years.

In that time, he has never been shy of controversy, his public utterances leading to him being accused of sexism, racism, homophobia, sizeism and, occasionally, of being simply mad.

He once advocated the bombing of Japan when it refused to support a gene programme.

Even his fans have described him as 'insensitive'.

On one occasion, he was reported as saying that a woman should have the right to abort her unborn child if tests could determine it would be homosexual.

But he surpassed himself during an extraordinary lecture he gave at Berkeley university seven years ago, which caused a number of members of the flabbergasted audience to walk out.

During his talk, Watson suggested that there was a biochemical link between exposure to sunlight and sexual urges.

Black people had more powerful libidos, he said. This was supported by the fact that when the skin of a number of white men had turned black as a side-effect of a scientific test, they had immediately become sexually aroused.

"That's why you have Latin lovers," he explained. "You've never heard of an English lover. Only an English patient."

He went on to show a slide of a melancholy Kate Moss, saying that thin people were unhappy and therefore more ambitious.

"Whenever you interview fat people, you feel bad because you know you're not going to hire them," Watson said.

Afterwards, Berkeley genetics professor Thomas Cline said Watson's lecture had 'crossed over the line' from being provocative to being irresponsible because the senior scientist had failed to separate fact from conjecture.

"If he wants to give a talk like this in his living room, that's his business, but to give it in a setting where it's supposed to be scientific is wrong," Cline said.

Listening to Watson at the podium was 'more embarrassing than having a creationist scientist up there', he added.

Watson's latest pronouncements, in an interview in a British Sunday newspaper ahead of his visit, will only add to his reputation as a controversialist.

Scientists have been considering the relationship, if any, between a person's racial origin and their intelligence for the past 200 years.

But their motives for doing so have often been highly dubious.

Often what they have 'found' has been driven by the desire to prove the superiority of one race over another.

Or, as in the case of slavery, to justify ill-treatment.

There are echoes of Watson's contemporary thoughts in those of the notorious 19th-century anti-abolitionist U.S. Secretary of State John C. Calhoun.

In 1844 he declared that a scientific study of freed black American slaves proved that 'the African is incapable of self-care and sinks into lunacy under the burden of freedom.

'It is a mercy to give him the guardianship and protection from mental death.'

A direct line can be drawn between the views of people such as Calhoun and the Nazis of the 20th century and their concept of the untermensch: that anyone born into non-Aryan races is inferior or 'subhuman'.

The next step is to be treated as such. The Holocaust and World War II resulted.

Since the early 20th century, IQ tests have provided a way in which a person's intelligence can be measured against another's.

And, predictably, those from poor, socially disadvantaged backgrounds tended to come off worse. In western society, as in Africa, this included most blacks.

And so the battle of nature versus nurture continued.

Was intelligence due largely to how you were brought up?

Or could it be genetically based and influenced by your racial origin?

In the past 40 years a number of scientists have argued that there is a genetic difference among races which dictates intelligence.

In 1969, American academic Arthur Jensen delivered a research paper in which he claimed to have found that whites were innately more intelligent than blacks.

Treating them as equals was wrong, and they should be educated differently.

He declared: "A not unreasonable-hypothesis is that genetic factors are strongly implicated in the average Negro-white intelligence difference."

Colleagues lambasted his research and its conclusions.

But some of Jensen's central findings were echoed in the hugely controversial and successful 1994 book The Bell Curve, by Richard Herrnstein and Charles Murray, which supported the theory of genetic causes for racial intelligence differences.

The resulting Bell Curve Wars were fought between its supporters and critics, who said - among other things - that it 'was a chilly synthesis of the work of disreputable race theorists and eccentric eugenicists'.

The more extreme said it promoted genocide.

Such was the alarm caused that the American Anthropological Association released a statement in which it declared itself to be 'deeply concerned by recent public discussions which imply that intelligence is biologically determined by race'.

It went on: "Repeatedly challenged by scientists, nevertheless these ideas continue to be advanced.

"Such discussions distract public and scholarly attention from, and diminish support for, the collective challenge to ensure equal opportunities for all people, regardless of ethnicity."

Watson is only one, if the most famous, of those scientists who continue to plough the racial intelligence furrow.

He argues that he has a very personal example of why nature triumphs over nurture.

At the age of 39, he married a student, Elizabeth, who was 20 years his junior.

They had two sons, the younger of whom, Rufus, was diagnosed as schizophrenic and still lives with them today at the age of 37.

Rufus is another argument, he says, for nature over nurture: "I've seen the failure of the environmental approach in a very personal way.

"My wife and I have a schizophrenic son. We didn't want to accept this for 30 years, so we put him under great pressure when we shouldn't have.

"He just wanted to be looked after, and we didn't respect that. We tried to make him independent."

Last night, a spokeswoman for Watson's publisher, the Oxford University Press, said: "There is no racism in the book. We stand by our book."

However, in one chapter Watson writes: "There is no firm reason to anticipate that the intellectual capacities of peoples geographically separated in their evolution should prove to have evolved identically.

"Our wanting to reserve equal powers of reason as some universal heritage of humanity will not be enough to make it so."

His first speaking date is in London tomorrow evening, before a 400-strong sell-out audience at the Imax cinema in the Science Museum.

Doubtless, the book will be prominently displayed.

It is called Avoid Boring People - a deliberate irony perhaps, given that being boring is about the only thing of which Watson has never been accused.

| 23408|2007-10-18 06:41:45|matt mercer|Re: The Bell Curve, pt 2 response from Matt|

I always find it frustrating that these types of arguments fail to address the need for specialized fields of scientific inquiry, such as genetics, to not be an isolated field of study and teach it as a part of a unified field of multi-disciplined scientific problem solving. Even more disturbing to me is the denial that Europeans have suffered the same forms of tyranny throughout the Roman Era and through the dark ages which is why they became colonists and ran from their continent to begin with.

Asides from being a "genetic" issue man's inhumanity to man or superiority over one another seems more akin to a behavioral issue such as with the developmentally disabled. Or on a lighter note, as the Navajo say, "they don't know any better, they didn't have a grandfather to tell them those stories". Facing the truth about a universal broader spectrum of cognitive sciences and related fields is going to be a challenge if we are, as a world community, are not able to recognize that issues like ADD and Alzheimer's disease are not only in the same continuum and are not just issues of genetics microbiology or pharmaceutical exploration, but fundamentally are more of an issue of the effects of localized environmental toxicity and outdated modes of curriculum on the primary secondary and collegiate levels of education.

Perhaps the Euro-American complex has the task of cleaning out the cobwebs of the old vanguard of the institutionalized works of the eugenic era, just as asbestos had to be removed school by school decades ago. And hopefully there are enough academia that recognize that there are way too many of us that stand between ethnic and color lines to perpetuate the myths of the ages of escapism of the accumulation of human rights abuses that now we all have to take responsibility for.

Maybe this is the real learning curve we are looking at, the wide gaps in cognition between the generations here today, that the bridging can only come from challenging each other to learn to recognize a more universal cumulative form of reason in broader curricula. For which, again I suggest, that ancient language study and the eschatological roots of alphabet and language systems is an appropriate medium to address these formative developmental challenges we are facing today at a core level.

Anne Coulter, spin doctor supreme, was recently on television being interviewed on CNBC, expressing her views on the future of a totally "Christian" America, specifically mentioning the "Jewish problem". Unfortunately the host of this talk show is Jewish and expressed his alarm at her "American pie anti-semitism", to which she replied that she wasn't being a racist, but simply was advocating that the Jews accept Jesus as their savior and embrace their future of spiritual perfection in the folds of the American Christian community.

This seems to be a formidable obstacle to intellectual growth, these latent forms of agnosticism "spiritual" science that represent the outdated modes of eugenic proper and religious intolerance that no longer serve the world community at large. We would all do well to dissuade such pursuits and educate ourselves as to the lineages of these branches of thought so that none of us have to live with the fear or suspicion that any isolated group of people will mysteriously rise to positions of authority enforcing any reflection of the tyrannies of ages past. Or be caught between the Puer Eternus hubris of the "not in my backyard" folks and the "don't bother, they aren't worth it" camp bickering like teenagers in a schoolyard shuffle in a queerly orchestrated pantomime of the adult world of resolution. Hmmm, reminds me of New Orleans.....

"Back to life,

Back to reality,

Back to the here and now....."

as the POP group SOUL2SOUL so eloquently sang!

Much respect, and keep up all of your great works!

Matt Mercer

JAH

Alex van Deelen wrote:

Here we go again. For some reason, the idea of racial superiority holds an ongoing fascination for certain folk.

There is no need to tread out the whole history of The Bell Curve and Murray and Herrnstein again.

Anyway, it is a shame that someone with Watson's standing would find solace in this kind of trash.

" "There is no firm reason to anticipate that the intellectual capacities of peoples geographically separated in their evolution should prove to have evolved identically. "

I presume he has heard of the "Out Of Africa" theory, as well as the "Multi-regional" theory of human evolution. Or that the multi-regional theory is quickly losing ground.

Also, the belief that Africa should somehow not be stimulating for intelligence is never gone into. I suspect that if they would, they would simply lampoon their ignorance of the continent or African culture and civilization. Or of the fact that until about 10,000 years ago, all people were hunter gatherers.

Alex

http://www.dailymail.co.uk/pages/live/articles/news/news.html?in\_article\_id=488232&in\_page\_id=1770&in\_a\_source=

How can DNA genius James Watson believe black people are less intelligent than white?

By RICHARD PENDLEBURY - More by this author

Last updated at 08:13am on 18th October 2007

The Nobel Prize-winning scientist James Dewey Watson is living proof that genius is no guarantee against holding incendiary beliefs. In his latest pronouncement, the 79-year-old American geneticist has claimed that black people are inherently less intelligent than whites.

Scroll down for more...

DNA founder James Watson has risked his reputation by saying blacks are less intelligent than whites

On the eve of his arrival in Britain today to publicise a new book, Watson, who at Cambridge University in the 1950s helped identify DNA, declared himself to be 'gloomy about the prospect of Africa . . . all our social policies are based on the fact that their intelligence is the same as ours - whereas all the testing says not really'.

Watson said he hoped everyone was equal, but added: "People who have to deal with black employees find this not true."

Human rights groups and fellow scientists immediately expressed their anger and dismay that a respected scientist could publicly state such dangerous, divisive and unsupported opinions.

Watson, however, argues that it is an uncomfortable scientific truth, even if it will be proved only when the genes which determine intelligence are identified sometime in the next decade.

Steven Rose, a brain specialist and professor of biological sciences at the Open University, said that Watson was 'out of his depth scientifically, quite apart from socially and politically' .

He added: "This is Watson at his most scandalous. I have heard him say similar things about women, but I have never heard him get into this racist terrain."

Dr Watson was hailed as achieving one of the greatest single scientific breakthroughs of the 20th century when he worked at Cambridge in the 1950s and 1960s, forming part of the team which discovered the structure of DNA.

He shared the 1962 Nobel Prize for Physiology or Medicine with colleagues Francis Crick and Maurice Wilkins.

He has been director of the Cold Spring Harbour Laboratory on Long Island in America - a world leader in research into cancer and genetics - for 50 years.

In that time, he has never been shy of controversy, his public utterances leading to him being accused of sexism, racism, homophobia, sizeism and, occasionally, of being simply mad.

He once advocated the bombing of Japan when it refused to support a gene programme.

Even his fans have described him as 'insensitive' .

On one occasion, he was reported as saying that a woman should have the right to abort her unborn child if tests could determine it would be homosexual.

But he surpassed himself during an extraordinary lecture he gave at Berkeley university seven years ago, which caused a number of members of the flabbergasted audience to walk out.

During his talk, Watson suggested that there was a biochemical link between exposure to sunlight and sexual urges.

Black people had more powerful libidos, he said. This was supported by the fact that when the skin of a number of white men had turned black as a side-effect of a scientific test, they had immediately become sexually aroused.

"That's why you have Latin lovers," he explained. "You've never heard of an English lover. Only an English patient."

He went on to show a slide of a melancholy Kate Moss, saying that thin people were unhappy and therefore more ambitious.

"Whenever you interview fat people, you feel bad because you know you're not going to hire them," Watson said.

Afterwards, Berkeley genetics professor Thomas Cline said Watson's lecture had 'crossed over the line' from being provocative to being irresponsible because the senior scientist had failed to separate fact from conjecture.

"If he wants to give a talk like this in his living room, that's his business, but to give it in a setting where it's supposed to be scientific is wrong," Cline said.

Listening to Watson at the podium was 'more embarrassing than having a creationist scientist up there', he added.

Watson's latest pronouncements, in an interview in a British Sunday newspaper ahead of his visit, will only add to his reputation as a controversialist.

Scientists have been considering the relationship, if any, between a person's racial origin and their intelligence for the past 200 years.

But their motives for doing so have often been highly dubious.

Often what they have 'found' has been driven by the desire to prove the superiority of one race over another.

Or, as in the case of slavery, to justify ill-treatment.

There are echoes of Watson's contemporary thoughts in those of the notorious 19th-century anti-abolitionist U.S. Secretary of State John C. Calhoun.

In 1844 he declared that a scientific study of freed black American slaves proved that 'the African is incapable of self-care and sinks into lunacy under the burden of freedom.

'It is a mercy to give him the guardianship and protection from mental death.'

A direct line can be drawn between the views of people such as Calhoun and the Nazis of the 20th century and their concept of the untermensch: that anyone born into non-Aryan races is inferior or 'subhuman'.

The next step is to be treated as such. The Holocaust and World War II resulted.

Since the early 20th century, IQ tests have provided a way in which a person's intelligence can be measured against another's.

And, predictably, those from poor, socially disadvantaged backgrounds tended to come off worse. In western society, as in Africa, this included most blacks.

And so the battle of nature versus nurture continued.

Was intelligence due largely to how you were brought up?

Or could it be genetically based and influenced by your racial origin?

In the past 40 years a number of scientists have argued that there is a genetic difference among races which dictates intelligence.

In 1969, American academic Arthur Jensen delivered a research paper in which he claimed to have found that whites were innately more intelligent than blacks.

Treating them as equals was wrong, and they should be educated differently.

He declared: "A not unreasonable- hypothesis is that genetic factors are strongly implicated in the average Negro-white intelligence difference."

Colleagues lambasted his research and its conclusions.

But some of Jensen's central findings were echoed in the hugely controversial and successful 1994 book The Bell Curve, by Richard Herrnstein and Charles Murray, which supported the theory of genetic causes for racial intelligence differences.

The resulting Bell Curve Wars were fought between its supporters and critics, who said - among other things - that it 'was a chilly synthesis of the work of disreputable race theorists and eccentric eugenicists'.

The more extreme said it promoted genocide.

Such was the alarm caused that the American Anthropological Association released a statement in which it declared itself to be 'deeply concerned by recent public discussions which imply that intelligence is biologically determined by race'.

It went on: "Repeatedly challenged by scientists, nevertheless these ideas continue to be advanced.

"Such discussions distract public and scholarly attention from, and diminish support for, the collective challenge to ensure equal opportunities for all people, regardless of ethnicity."

Watson is only one, if the most famous, of those scientists who continue to plough the racial intelligence furrow.

He argues that he has a very personal example of why nature triumphs over nurture.

At the age of 39, he married a student, Elizabeth, who was 20 years his junior.

They had two sons, the younger of whom, Rufus, was diagnosed as schizophrenic and still lives with them today at the age of 37.

Rufus is another argument, he says, for nature over nurture: "I've seen the failure of the environmental approach in a very personal way.

"My wife and I have a schizophrenic son. We didn't want to accept this for 30 years, so we put him under great pressure when we shouldn't have.

"He just wanted to be looked after, and we didn't respect that. We tried to make him independent. "

Last night, a spokeswoman for Watson's publisher, the Oxford University Press, said: "There is no racism in the book. We stand by our book."

However, in one chapter Watson writes: "There is no firm reason to anticipate that the intellectual capacities of peoples geographically separated in their evolution should prove to have evolved identically.

"Our wanting to reserve equal powers of reason as some universal heritage of humanity will not be enough to make it so."

His first speaking date is in London tomorrow evening, before a 400-strong sell-out audience at the Imax cinema in the Science Museum.

Doubtless, the book will be prominently displayed.

It is called Avoid Boring People - a deliberate irony perhaps, given that being boring is about the only thing of which Watson has never been accused.

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23409|2007-10-18 07:36:00|Peter Gray|Re: Zahi Hawass insisted Tuesday that Tutankhamun was not black|

Thanks for your clear-headed response, Paul. Mahari, I think you sometimes have the tendency to see eurocentric conspiracy in everything. Sometimes, a cigar just happens to be a cigar.

Regards,

Peter

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: p.manansala@sbcglobal.net

Date: Thu, 11 Oct 2007 12:11:01 -0700

Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Zahi Hawass insisted Tuesday that Tutankhamun was not black

Mahari,

As far as I'm aware, "Nubian wig" is a term coined by Egyptologists based on the similarity of the wig with Nubian hairstyles.

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

Mahari Mengistu wrote:

Paul,

I'd like to know who designated these wigs as "Nubian wigs"? Is it denoted in Kemetic writings as such? Or was it designated as such by eurocentric Egyptologists who wanted to give the impression that because these wigs are so clearly Afrikan that they are the exception to the rule; that these are not typical "Egyptian" wig?

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala" wrote:

>

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari" wrote:

>>

>> You assessment seems almost as narrow-minded and limited as Hawass'.

> There are a number of images of Egyptians with Africoid features > INCLUDING kinky hair/braided wigs.

>>

>

> These are known as "Nubian wigs" and they leave quite an impression when > you see them in person.

>

>

[http://www.acewigs.com/shop/image\_uploads/News/Newswighistory\_M.jpg]

>

> [PRINCESS NESIKHONSU'S WIG.]

> PRINCESS NESIKHONSU'S WIG.

>

>

>

> Regards.

$\succ$

- > Egyptologists based on the similarity of the wig with Nubian

> hairstyles.
>
> Regards,
> Paul Kekai Manansala
>
> Mahari Mengistu <mahari@myway.com> wrote:
> Paul,
> I'd like to know who designated these wigs as "Nubian
> wigs"? Is it > denoted in Kemetic writings as such? Or was it > designated as such by > eurocentric Egyptologists who wanted to give the > impression that > because these wigs are so clearly Afrikan that they > are the exception
> to the rule; that these are not typical "Egyptian"
> wig?
> HTP,
> Mahari
>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai > Manansala"
> wrote:
>>
>>
>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari"
> wrote:
>>>
>>> You assessment seems almost as narrow-minded and > limited as
> Hawass'.
>> There are any number of images of Egyptians with > Africoid features
>> INCLUDING kinky hair/braided wigs.
>>>
>>
>> These are known as "Nubian wigs" and they leave > quite an impression
> when
>> you see them in person.
>>
>>
> [http://www.acewigs.com/shop/image\_uploads/News/Newswighistory\_M.jpg%5d
>>
>> [PRINCESS NESIKHONSU'S WIG.]
>> PRINCESS NESIKHONSU'S WIG.

> >

> >

> >

> > Regards.

> > Paul Kekai Manansala

> >

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

---

> Help yourself to FREE treats served up daily at the Messenger Caf<sup>é</sup> > Stop by today!

>

>

>

| 23411|2007-10-18 10:35:31|Ferg|Meaning of eternity|

---

Attachments :

Good evening all.

I've researched the KAMETI-WA (Ancient Egyptian) word for Eternity. Take a look. Your feedback would be greatly received.

Thanks.

Ferg Somo

| 23412|2007-10-18 10:36:33|Peter Gray|Re: Zahi Hawass insisted Tuesday that Tutankhamun was not black|

Thank you for your response, Meninarmer.

Speaking of "expanding the range of connected areas", I would highly recommend reading George Monbiot's "Manifesto for a New World Order", which argues precisely that the creation of the World Bank and many other global institutions was deliberately designed to effect the transfer of the wealth and assets of poor third world countries into the hands of the industrialised nations, who could better maximise the profits of said assets. Thus, I think we are in fact in agreement regarding the universality of this conspiracy to rip off the "third world", since the industrialised nations are essentially the white ones while the "third world is essentially black.

Respectfully,

Peter

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

From: shalomic@nc.rr.com

Date: Thu, 18 Oct 2007 10:49:23 -0400

Subject: RE: [Ta_Seti] Re: Zahi Hawass insisted Tuesday that Tutankhamun was not black

IF you merely examine the narrow field of Egyptology, one could easily come to this conclusion. Although, I can't comprehend how this could be, even in this one area.

Expanding the range of connected areas, one can easily make the case that WHITE conspiracy IS overwhelmingly encompassing, in all areas of black life, and hardly comparable to a cigar.

Hotep
Meninarmer

On Thu, 2007-10-18 at 10:16 -0400, Peter Gray wrote:

> Thanks for your clear-headed response, Paul. Mahari, I think you > sometimes have the tendency to see eurocentric conspiracy in > everything. Sometimes, a cigar just happens to be a cigar.

>
> Regards,
>
> Peter

>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
> _____

> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> From: p.manansala@sbcglobal.net
> Date: Thu, 11 Oct 2007 12:11:01 -0700
> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Zahi Hawass insisted Tuesday that > Tutankhamun was not black

>
> Mahari,

>
> As far as I'm aware, "Nubian wig" is a term coined by > Egyptologists based on the similarity of the wig with Nubian > hairstyles.

>
> Regards,
> Paul Kekai Manansala

>
> Mahari Mengistu <mahari@myway.com> wrote:
> Paul,
> I'd like to know who designated these wigs as "Nubian
> wigs"? Is it

> denoted in Kemetic writings as such? Or was it > designated as such by > eurocentric Egyptologists who wanted to give the > impression that > because these wigs are so clearly Afrikan that they > are the exception
> to the rule; that these are not typical "Egyptian"
> wig?
> HTP,
> Mahari
>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, "Paul Kekai > Manansala"
> wrote:
>
>
>
> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, "Mahari"
> wrote:
>>
>>> You assessment seems almost as narrow-minded and > limited as
> Hawass'.
>> There are any number of images of Egyptians with > Africoid features
>> INCLUDING kinky hair/braided wigs.
>>>
>>
>> These are known as "Nubian wigs" and they leave > quite an impression
> when
>> you see them in person.
>>
>>
> [http://www.acewigs.com/shop/image\_uploads/News/Newswhighistory\_M.jpg]
>>
>> [PRINCESS NESIKHONSU'S WIG.]
>> PRINCESS NESIKHONSU'S WIG.
>>
>>
>>
>> Regards.
>> Paul Kekai Manansala
>>
>
>

>
>
>
>
>
>
>
>
_____

> Help yourself to FREE treats served up daily at the Messenger Caf<sub>鯪</sub>br>> Stop by today!

>
>
>

---

Windows Live Hotmail and Microsoft Office Outlook together at last. Get it now!
| 23413|2007-10-18 10:40:02|Paul Kekai Manansala|On human self-domestication, psychiatry, and eugenics|
Philos Ethics Humanit Med. 2007 Oct 5;2(1):21

On human self-domestication, psychiatry, and eugenics.
Brune M.

ABSTRACT: The hypothesis that anatomically modern homo sapiens could have undergone changes akin to those observed in domesticated animals has been contemplated in the biological sciences for at least 150 years. The idea had already plagued philosophers such as Rousseau, who considered the civilisation of man as going against human nature, and eventually "sparked over" to the medical sciences in the late 19th and early 20th century. At that time, human "self-domestication" appealed to psychiatry, because it served as a causal explanation for the alleged degeneration of the "erbgut" (genetic material) of entire populations and the presumed increase of mental disorders. Consequently, Social Darwinists emphasised preventing procreation by people of "lower genetic value" and positively selecting favourable traits in others. Both tendencies culminated in euthanasia and breeding programs ("Lebensborn") during the Nazi regime in Germany. Whether or not domestication actually plays a role in some anatomical changes since the late Pleistocene period is, from a biological standpoint, contentious, and the currently resurrected debate depends, in part, on the definitional criteria applied. However, the example of human self-domestication may illustrate that scientific ideas, especially when dealing with human biology, are prone to misuse, particularly if "is" is confused with "ought", i.e., if moral principles are deduced from biological facts. Although such naturalistic fallacies appear to be banned, modern genetics may, at least in theory, pose similar ethical problems to medicine, including psychiatry. In times during which studies into the genetics of psychiatric disorders are scientifically more valued than studies into environmental causation of disorders (which is currently the case), the prospects of genetic therapy may be tempting to alter the human genome in patients, probably at costs that no-one can foresee. In the case of "self-domestication", it is proposed that human characteristics resembling domesticated traits in animals should be labelled "domestication-like", or better, objectively described as genuine adaptations to sedentism.

| 23414|2007-10-18 12:35:26|elliottandelliottmtg|Re: Zahi Hawass insisted Tuesday that Tutankhamun was not black|

I agree Meninarmarmer and furthermore, the Eurocentric conspiracy, directly connected to the wigs, is the deliberate attempts to separate Kemet from Africa by claiming that these wigs are Nubian and not Kemetian, thereby perpetuating the lie of non-African origin for Kemet.

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, kungfuhustle wrote:

>

> IF you merely examine the narrow field of Egyptology, one could easily > come to this conclusion. Although, I can't comprehend how this could be,

> even in this one area.

> Expanding the range of connected areas, one can easily make the case > that WHITE conspiracy IS overwhelmingly encompassing, in all areas of > black life, and hardly comparable to a cigar.

>

> Hotep

> Meninarmarmer

>

> On Thu, 2007-10-18 at 10:16 -0400, Peter Gray wrote:

> > Thanks for your clear-headed response, Paul. Mahari, I think you

> > sometimes have the tendency to see eurocentric conspiracy in > > everything. Sometimes, a cigar just happens to be a cigar.

> >

> > Regards,

> >
> > Peter
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >

---

> > To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> > From: p.manansala@...
> > Date: Thu, 11 Oct 2007 12:11:01 -0700
> > Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Zahi Hawass insisted Tuesday
that > > Tutankhamun was not black
> >
> > Mahari,
> >
> > As far as I'm aware, "Nubian wig" is a term coined by > > Egyptologists based on the similarity of the wig with Nubian
> > hairstyles.
> >
> > Regards,
> > Paul Kekai Manansala
> >
> > Mahari Mengistu wrote:
> > Paul,
> > I'd like to know who designated these wigs
as "Nubian
> > wigs"? Is it > > denoted in Kemetic writings as such? Or was it > > designated as such by > > eurocentric Egyptologists who wanted to give the > > impression that > > because these wigs are so clearly Afrikan that
they > > are the exception
> > to the rule; that these are not typical "Egyptian"
> > wig?
> > HTP,
> > Mahari
> >
> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai > > Manansala"

> > wrote:
> > >
> > >
> > > --- In
> > Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari"
> > wrote:
> > > >
> > > > You assessment seems almost as narrow-minded
> > and
> > limited as
> > Hawass'.
> > > There are any number of images of Egyptians
> > with > > Africoid features
> > > INCLUDING kinky hair/braided wigs.
> > > >
> > >
> > > These are known as "Nubian wigs" and they leave
> > quite an impression
> > when
> > > you see them in person.
> > >
> > >
> >
> > \[http://www.acewigs.com/shop/image\_uploads/News/Newswighistory\_M.jpg%5d
> > >
> > > [PRINCESS NESIKHONSU'S WIG.]
> > > PRINCESS NESIKHONSU'S WIG.
> > >
> > >
> > >
> > > Regards.
> > > Paul Kekai Manansala
> > >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >

---

> > Help yourself to FREE treats served up daily at the Messenger Café.

> > Stop by today!

> >

> >

> >

>

| 23415|2007-10-18 17:07:43|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Zahi Hawass insisted Tuesday that Tutankhamun was not black|

Well, that MAY BE true; however, in this instance with Egyptology, the conspiracy is not in question. It existed, it exists and has for 200 years. This topic simply referred to one potential aspect of it within this already established field of conspiracy.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Gray wrote:

>

>

> Thanks for your clear-headed response, Paul. Mahari, I think you sometimes have the tendency to see eurocentric conspiracy in everything. Sometimes, a cigar just happens to be a cigar.

>

> Regards,

>

> Peter

>

>

>

> To: Ta_Seti@...: p.manansala@...: Thu, 11 Oct 2007 12:11:01 - 0700Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Zahi Hawass insisted Tuesday that Tutankhamun was not black

>

>

>

>

> Mahari,As far as I'm aware, "Nubian wig" is a term coined by Egyptologists based on the similarity of the wig with Nubian hairstyles. Regards,Paul Kekai ManansalaMahari Mengistu wrote:

>

>

> Paul,I'd like to know who designated these wigs as "Nubian wigs"? Is it denoted in Kemetic writings as such? Or was it designated as such by eurocentric Egyptologists who wanted to give the impression that because these wigs are so clearly Afrikan that they are the exception to the rule; that these are not typical "Egyptian" wig?

HTP,Mahari--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala" wrote:>> > --- In

Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari" wrote:> >> > You assessment seems almost as narrow-minded and limited as Hawass'. > There are any number of images of Egyptians with Africoid features> INCLUDING kinky hair/braided wigs.> >> > These are known as "Nubian wigs" and they leave quite an impression when> you see them in person.> >

[http://www.acewigs.com/shop/image\_uploads/News/Newswighistory\_M.jpg%5d

> > [PRINCESS NESIKHONSU'S WIG.]> PRINCESS NESIKHONSU'S WIG.> > > >

Regards.> Paul Kekai Manansala>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

---

> Help yourself to FREE treats served up daily at the Messenger Caf 鮑
Stop by today.

> http://www.cafemessenger.com/info/info\_sweetstuff2.html?

ocid=TXT_TAGLM_OctWLtagline

>

| 23416|2007-10-19 08:26:59|Alex van Deelen|On human self-domestication, psychiatry, and eugenics|

Paul,

What is your opinion of Jaynes and "The Bicameral Mind"?

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Bicameral\_mind

He basically maintains that there was a very recent evolution of consciousness. His idea is that ancient people had an original split that made them hear command voices on the one hand and act on those voices on the other hand - like present day paranoid schizophrenics that are told by voices in their head to do this or that. His belief is that this ended when both were fused into what we call the 'self' or what we address when we say 'I' (I want to, I will... etc.).

He cited examples from people in (ancient) literature hearing voices and seeing visions, and postulates that was the norm in the ancient world.

So what I'm getting at, is that this would be a very recent shift in consciousness.

My question would be - could such a recent change be genetic at all, and not simply conceptual. (And as Terence McKenna points out, Jaynes seems to skip over the role of psychedelics and entheogens in his analysis as a major source of hearing voices and seeing visions. :) )

ABSTRACT:

" However, the example of human self-domestication may illustrate that scientific ideas, especially when dealing with human biology, are prone to misuse, particularly if "is" is confused with "ought", i.e., if moral principles are deduced from biological facts. Although such naturalistic fallacies appear to be banned, modern genetics may, at least in theory, pose similar ethical problems to medicine, including psychiatry. In times during which studies into the genetics of psychiatric disorders are scientifically more valued than studies into environmental causation of disorders (which is currently the case), the prospects of genetic therapy may be tempting to alter the human genome in patients, probably at costs that no-one can foresee. In the case of "self-domestication", it is proposed that human characteristics resembling domesticated traits in animals should be labelled "domestication-like", or better, objectively described as genuine adaptations to sedentism. "

And like the nazis, who is going to say what 'good' characteristics are, and what undesirable ones are? If evolution is the adaptation of human populations' characteristics to the environment, who is going to accurately predict what the environment of the future is going to be?

We might all end up living in space, or on other planets. Should we pre-select humans to deal with weightlessness? Or stronger or weaker gravity?

The benefit of genetic diversity is that it gives the population options of adapting to many different (and unforeseen) future environments.

Alex

| 23417|2007-10-19 09:28:15|matt mercer|Re: On human self-domestication, psychiatry, and eugenics|

Interesting idea. How do you measure the cumulative cognitive growth of say an individual versus the collective expression of any era of any region. This theme is discussed at length in

"The Seven Story Tower" by Curtiss Hoffman. He delves into this discussion of temporal recognition of cycles of growth through mythology and oral traditions much as Jung was challenging the intellectuals of his day to address the idea of collective consensual reality and self-determination.

Perhaps the fugue states that you mention the voices and hallucinations are just the natural expression the process of individuation, much like a child who uses their toys and dolls to act out the ideas and issues that they are developing an awareness. And as children in western civilization are domesticated into adulthood without communal rites of passage that acknowledge and individuals sense of growth, we are left with a scenario the sounds a lot like what William S. Burroughs of the beat poet generation describes in his book, "The Western Lands" packs of teenage boys roaming like wild dogs in a degenerated society.

I kinda see these gaps in cognitive development as a persons attempt to reclaim that space of being able to work out what ever it is that they haven't had time to acknowledge fully. The idea of pre-cognition is more like the part of the mind that deals with abstraction and language formation, because the is a very symbolic state of mind. This what i think the yogic teachings are also a reflection of trying to deal with and what I think is part of the vaster body of teachings that ancient pre-dynastic egypt is also a cousin of.

Like the "flood" of information that comes from any societies expansion, we here in the united states now diagnose this as ADD. Unfortunately this seems to have become a strange form of ritualized infanticide where parents are coerced into medicating their children and the child's own bodies or fields of growth are denied. Now we have a generation gap that is wider than ever from aleienated parents on medication and isolated children on medication.

For example, I met a teenager, a young man who was seventeen, a member of the Zuni tribe of the peublo peoples, while I was working in Rescue MIssion in Las Cruces. Over the couple months that I got to work with this young man, who I found to be quite intelligent and compassionate, he opened up about his foster family and his past. To the point, this young man came from a violent abusive background and was now in a conservative christian family who had him put on at least five different medications , ritalin for ADD, antidepressants and even an experimental drug targeted specifically at teenage males. He said by the time he got on the bus to go to school after taking his meds that he was a complete zombie. I gave him a book called The Art of Shen KU, which really seemed to help him and open his eyes more.

I think this also what the greek studies and many of the teachings Aesculpius, about thanatos are about. For in physical emotional and psychological trauma these gaps are not only widened but prolonged, and this is what "the temple" was originally for. Healing with snakes, trying to teach people to overcome their fear of listening and acknowledging their own healing and that their bodies and minds shed skins and regenerate like a life in nature.

Now this discussion we have been having about the effects of prejudice and racism on learning, fits with this story I just mentioned about the young Zuni man. Las Cruces is place where European Latino, Mexican and native American meet, although throwing catholicism in there doesn't help. The book "The Cults of Rome" by Robert Turcan, explores Rome society of a huge freed slave population in a kingdom with a common tongue, where the restless and shiftless appeal of rites and secretehoods abounded before Constantine in many a frenzied state, like gangs. America is a very similar construct, like ROME, and now in our "free" era, the generations are facing the same compounded form of expressing all of these forms of growth they witness and experience. That seems like a lot of catching up to do. And the interruption of any tribes or ethnic groups development by euro-centricised education seem now to be the responsibility of world culture to abolish an academic institution that no longer needs to train students to be blue-collar workers or servants, but now must focus on self determination.

Keep up the good work!
Matt Mercer

Alex van Deelen wrote:

Paul,

What is your opinion of Jaynes and "The Bicameral Mind"?
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Bicameral\_mind

He basically maintains that there was a very recent evolution of consciousness. His idea is that ancient people had an original split that made them hear command voices on the one hand and act on those voices on the other hand - like present day paranoid schizophrenics that are told by voices in their head to do this or that. His belief is that this ended when both were fused into what we call the 'self' or what we address when we say 'I' (I want to, I will... etc.).

He cited examples from people in (ancient) literature hearing voices and seeing visions, and postulates that was the norm in the ancient world.

So what I'm getting at, is that this would be a very recent shift in consciousness.

My question would be - could such a recent change be genetic at all, and not simply conceptual. (And as Terence McKenna points out, Jaynes seems to skip over the role of psychedelics and entheogens in his analysis as a major source of hearing voices and seeing visions. :) )

ABSTRACT:

" However, the example of human self-domestication may illustrate that scientific ideas, especially when dealing with human biology, are prone to misuse, particularly if "is" is confused with "ought", i.e., if moral principles are deduced from biological facts. Although such naturalistic fallacies appear to be banned, modern genetics may, at least in theory, pose similar ethical problems to medicine, including psychiatry. In times during which studies into the genetics of psychiatric disorders are scientifically more valued than studies into environmental causation of disorders (which is currently the case), the prospects of genetic therapy may be tempting to alter the human genome in patients, probably at costs that no-one can foresee. In the case of "self-domestication", it is proposed that human characteristics resembling domesticated traits in animals should be labelled "domestication-like", or better, objectively described as genuine adaptations to sedentism. "

And like the nazis, who is going to say what 'good' characteristics are, and what undesirable ones are? If evolution is the adaptation of human populations' characteristics to the environment, who is going to accurately predict what the environment of the future is going to be?

We might all end up living in space, or on other planets. Should we pre-select humans to deal with weightlessness? Or stronger or weaker gravity?

The benefit of genetic diversity is that it gives the population options of adapting to many different (and unforeseen) future environments.

Alex

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23418|2007-10-19 11:14:57|clyde winters|Re: On human self-domestication, psychiatry, and eugenics|

--- Alex van Deelen <avdeelen@wanadoo.nl> wrote:

> Paul,

>

> What is your opinion of Jaynes and "The Bicameral

> Mind"?

> http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Bicameral\_mind

>

> He basically maintains that there was a very recent

- > evolution of consciousness. His idea is that ancient
- > people
- > had an original split that made them hear command
- > voices on the one hand and act on those voices on
- > the other hand -
- > like present day paranoid schizophrenics that are
- > told by
- > voices in their head to do this or that. His belief
- > is that this
- > ended when both were fused into what we call the
- > 'self'
- > or what we address when we say 'I' (I want to, I
- > will... etc.).
- >
- > He cited examples from people in (ancient)
- > literature
- > hearing voices and seeing visions, and postulates
- > that
- > was the norm in the ancient world.
- >
- > So what I'm getting at, is that this would be a very
- > recent
- > shift in consciousness.
- >
- > My question would be - could such a recent change be
- > genetic
- > at all, and not simply conceptual. (And as Terence
- > McKenna
- > points out, Jaynes seems to skip over the role of
- > psychedelics
- > and entheogens in his analysis as a major source of
- > hearing
- > voices and seeing visions. :) )
- >
- >

Hi

Hearing voices seems to be a complicated matter. It appears that many people who claim to hear voices, when attached to MRIs show activity in the listening centers of the brain. This indicates, to me at least, that these individuals may actually be hearing voices we can't hear.

Clyde

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23419|2007-10-19 11:52:24|Agola Kisira|Watson is misled|

After the mapping of the human genome, there is no place for Watson's ideas as the genetic code for humans has been decrypted. The leader of the human genome project Dr. Craig Venter had this to say:

"Skin colour as a surrogate for race is a social concept not a scientific one," Dr Venter said. "There is no basis in scientific fact or in the human genetic code for the notion that skin colour will be predictive of intelligence."

Check out the entire BBC article here: <http://news.bbc.co.uk/2/hi/science/nature/7052416.stm>

I think a much broader debate on IQ needs to be opened up which does not focus on race as so many researchers have done before. There is increasing evidence that IQ is more tightly correlated with parenting and environment. In my eyes the relationship is obvious and the background of most intelligent people seems to too obviously similar to ignore the relationship. Recent studies have shown for instance that eldest children are more intelligent than their younger siblings, and obvious pointer to parental input. Another study on one-year-olds shows that they all have the same IQ, so what accounts for the differences in their 20s and older if not environment. I should say for completeness that IQ testing of one-year-olds is controversial, but then again isn't it all.

All the IQ tests that I have done are largely a measure of Language and mathematical skill, I think it should be clear that these are learned skills and are certainly not instinctive nor are they often intuitive.

| 23420|2007-10-19 12:03:26|Paul Kekai Manansala|On human self-domestication, psychiatry, and eugenics|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Alex van Deelen" wrote:

>

> Paul,

>

> What is your opinion of Jaynes and "The Bicameral Mind"?

> http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Bicameral\_mind

[clip]

>

> My question would be - could such a recent change be genetic

> at all, and not simply conceptual. (And as Terence McKenna

> points out, Jaynes seems to skip over the role of psychedelics

> and entheogens in his analysis as a major source of hearing

> voices and seeing visions. :) )

>

I don't know if genetics played any role. It's almost impossible to prove such conjectures.

Mythology seems to have many different sources: dreams, psychedelics and other unconscious/subconscious/spiritual experience; the need to explain/understand nature, life and the cosmos (hermeneutics); recording of ancestral history, rites, traditions and (deified) ancestors; etc.

In the

- > case of "self-domestication", it is proposed that human
- > characteristics resembling domesticated traits in animals should be
- > labelled "domestication-like", or better, objectively described as
- > genuine adaptations to sedentism. "
- >
- > And like the nazis, who is going to say what 'good' characteristics
- > are, and what undesirable ones are? If evolution is the adaptation
- > of human populations' characteristics to the environment, who is
- > going to accurately predict what the environment of the future is
- > going to be?
- >

You head it right on the head. "Man" is a poor substitute for nature.

- > We might all end up living in space, or on other planets. Should
- > we pre-select humans to deal with weightlessness? Or stronger
- > or weaker gravity?
- >
- > The benefit of genetic diversity is that it gives the population
- > options of adapting to many different (and unforeseen)
- > future environments.
- >

Absolutely, and the biggest impact of eugenics is the constant reduction of genetic diversity by supposedly "weeding out" bad traits. Eugenicists need to learn that utopia does not exist (on this world at least).

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23421|2007-10-19 12:07:49|Paul Kekai Manansala|On human self-domestication, psychiatry, and eugenics|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, clyde winters wrote:

- >
- >

- > >
- > Hi

> Hearing voices seems to be a complicated matter. It > appears that many people who claim to hear voices,
> when attached to MRIs show activity in the listening > centers of the brain. This indicates, to me at least, > that these individuals may actually be hearing voices
> we can't hear.
>
>

Thanks Clyde. I had not even brought up the possibility of paranormal experience except maybe as that can be considered "spiritual."

My niece and nephew have interesting cellphones that can emit a ring that only young people can hear.

Adults can't pick up the sound waves at that range.

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23422|2007-10-19 15:30:10|Mahari Mengistu|On human self-domestication, psychiatry, and eugenics|

Or Dr. Winters, could it not be a case of mind over matter? Their minds tell them that they are hearing voices and the mind proceeds to act accordingly by sending these "messages" (imagined voices) to that part of the brain and it (obeys)responds.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, clyde winters wrote:

>
>
> --- Alex van Deelen wrote:
>
>> Paul,
>>
>> What is your opinion of Jaynes and "The Bicameral >> Mind"?
>> http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Bicameral\_mind
>>
>> He basically maintains that there was a very recent >> evolution of consciousness. His idea is that ancient
>> people
>> had an original split that made them hear command >> voices on the one hand and act on those voices on
>> the other hand -
>> like present day paranoid schizophrenics that are

> > told by > > voices in their head to do this or that. His belief > > is that this > > ended when both were fused into what we call the
> > 'self'
> > or what we address when we say 'I' (I want to, I > > will... etc.).
> >
> > He cited examples from people in (ancient) > > literature
> > hearing voices and seeing visions, and postulates
> > that > > was the norm in the ancient world.
> >
> > So what I'm getting at, is that this would be a very > > recent
> > shift in consciousness.
> >
> > My question would be - could such a recent change be > > genetic
> > at all, and not simply conceptual. (And as Terence > > McKenna
> > points out, Jaynes seems to skip over the role of > > psychedelics
> > and entheogens in his analysis as a major source of > > hearing
> > voices and seeing visions. :) )

> >
> >
> Hi
> Hearing voices seems to be a complicated matter. It > appears that many people who claim to hear voices,
> when attached to MRIs show activity in the listening
> centers of the brain. This indicates, to me at least, > that these individuals may actually be hearing voices
> we can't hear.

>
> Clyde

>
>
> _____
> Do You Yahoo!?
> Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
> <http://mail.yahoo.com>

>
| 23423|2007-10-19 15:44:20|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Watson is misled -- Perhaps, but some people are assertively MEA|

I agree with your assessment. This obviously can get to be a very complicated issue. But from your comments about the testing results and what I've observed of "my peeps" is that we need to take a lesson from these tests and give more attention and love to our kids. All too frequently I see black mothers off into their own worlds (which are often troubled, traumatic and sad), leaving their toddler to a degree isolated and unstimulated and likely feeling uncared about and uncared for even though he/she may, in fact, be cared for. The brain is an organ like any other bodily organ that needs stimulation and activity to function at its best.

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Agola Kisira wrote:

>

> After the mapping of the human genome, there is no place for Watson's ideas as the genetic code for humans has been decrypted. The leader of the human genome project Dr. Craig Venter had this to say:

>

> "Skin colour as a surrogate for race is a social concept not a scientific one," Dr Venter said. "There is no basis in scientific fact or in the human genetic code for the notion that skin colour will be predictive of intelligence."

>

> Check out the entire BBC article here:

<http://news.bbc.co.uk/2/hi/science/nature/7052416.stm>

>

> I think a much broader debate on IQ needs to be opened up which does not focus on race as so many researchers have done before. There is increasing evidence that IQ is more tightly correlated with parenting and environment. In my eyes the relationship is obvious and the background of most intelligent people seems to too obviously similar to ignore the relationship. Recent studies have shown for instance that eldest children are more intelligent than their younger siblings, and obvious pointer to parental input. Another study on one-year-olds shows that they all have the same IQ, so what accounts for the differences in their 20s and older if not environment. I should say for completeness that IQ testing of one-year-olds is controversial, but then again isn't it all.

>

> All the IQ tests that I have done are largely a measure of Language and mathematical skill, I think it should be clear that these are learned skills and are certainly not instinctive nor are they often intuitive.

>

| 23424|2007-10-19 16:55:20|Djehuti Sundaka|On human self-domestication, psychiatry, and eugenics|

You jump from

"He...postulates that was the norm in the ancient world."

to

"this would be a very recent shift in consciousness."

and

"could such a recent change be genetic at all, and not simply conceptual."

What he postulates is by no means substantiated by what he cites. He merely provides what he claims are examples for his perspective while ignoring or dismissing anything that doesn't fit with it. It's really nothing to be taken seriously as it's merely an idea of humanity projected onto the past conveniently until the time of the Greeks (i.e. the Hellenistic era). Then, all of a sudden, humanity miraculously evolves self-consciousness. Go figure.

Djehuti Sundaka

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Alex van Deelen" wrote:

>

> Paul,

>

> What is your opinion of Jaynes and "The Bicameral Mind"?

> http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Bicameral\_mind

>

> He basically maintains that there was a very recent > evolution of consciousness. His idea is that ancient people

> had an original split that made them hear command

> voices on the one hand and act on those voices on the other hand -

> like present day paranoid schizophrenics that are told by > voices in their head to do this or that. His belief is that this > ended when both were fused into what we call the 'self'

> or what we address when we say 'I' (I want to, I will... etc.).

>

> He cited examples from people in (ancient) literature

> hearing voices and seeing visions, and postulates that > was the norm in the ancient world.

>

> So what I'm getting at, is that this would be a very recent > shift in consciousness.
>
> My question would be - could such a recent change be genetic
> at all, and not simply conceptual. (And as Terence McKenna > points out, Jaynes seems to skip over the role of psychedelics
> and entheogens in his analysis as a major source of hearing > voices and seeing visions. :) )

>

>

> ABSTRACT:

>

> " However, the example of > human self-domestication may illustrate that scientific ideas,
> especially when dealing with human biology, are prone to misuse, > particularly if "is" is confused with "ought", i.e., if moral > principles are deduced from biological facts. Although such > naturalistic fallacies appear to be banned, modern genetics may, at > least in theory, pose similar ethical problems to medicine,

including

> psychiatry. In times during which studies into the genetics of > psychiatric disorders are scientifically more valued than studies

into > environmental causation of disorders (which is currently the case),

> the prospects of genetic therapy may be tempting to alter the human > genome in patients, probably at costs that no-one can foresee. In > case of "self-domestication", it is proposed that human > characteristics resembling domesticated traits in animals should be > labelled "domestication-like", or better, objectively described as > genuine adaptations to sedentism. "

the

>

> And like the nazis, who is going to say what 'good' characteristics > are, and what undesirable ones are? If evolution is the adaptation > of human populations' characteristics to the environment, who is > going to accurately predict what the environment of the future is > going to be?

>

> We might all end up living in space, or on other planets. Should > we pre-select humans to deal with weightlessness? Or stronger > or weaker gravity?

>

> The benefit of genetic diversity is that it gives the population
> options of adapting to many different (and unforeseen) > future environments.

>

> Alex

>

| 23425|2007-10-19 17:35:25|Mahari Mengistu|On human self-domestication, psychiatry, and eugenics|

My take on this "Greek miracle" IS SIMPLY that what took place is what takes place when an outsider, an alien (relatively intelligent one) enters a culture and sees it somewhat objectively and adds to or confronts what has been generally accepted as sacrosanct by the indigenous people or those native to the culture. The same thing is happening to the eurocentric culture with the presence of blacks and other minorities. Blacks have changed eurocentric culture enormously in the US. It is unquestionably more humane and fairer (and more interesting and varied) as a result of our input than ever in its history.

The invading "Greeks/Hellenists" simply built upon what was already there when they arrived. This narcissistic, self-centered, egoist european cultural personality produced a PERHAPS more questioning cultural esthetic.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Djehuti Sundaka" wrote:

>

> You jump from

>

> "He...postulates that was the norm in the ancient world."

>

> to

>

> "this would be a very recent shift in consciousness."

>

> and

>

> "could such a recent change be genetic at all, and not simply > conceptual."

>

>

> What he postulates is by no means substantiated by what he cites.

He

> merely provides what he claims are examples for his perspective

while > ignoring or dismissing anything that doesn't fit with it. It's > really nothing to be taken seriously as it's merely an idea of > humanity projected onto the past conveniently until the time of the > Greeks (i.e. the Hellenistic era). Then, all of a sudden, humanity > miraculously evolves self-consciousness. Go figure.

>

> Djehuti Sundaka

>

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Alex van Deelen"

> wrote:

>>

>> Paul,

>>

>> What is your opinion of Jaynes and "The Bicameral Mind"?

>> http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Bicameral\_mind

>>

>> He basically maintains that there was a very recent >> evolution of consciousness. His idea is that ancient people
>> had an original split that made them hear command
>> voices on the one hand and act on those voices on the other hand -

>> like present day paranoid schizophrenics that are told by >> voices in their head to do this or that. His belief is that this >> ended when both were fused into what we call the 'self'
>> or what we address when we say 'I' (I want to, I will... etc.).

>>

>> He cited examples from people in (ancient) literature
>> hearing voices and seeing visions, and postulates that >> was the norm in the ancient world.

>>

>> So what I'm getting at, is that this would be a very recent >> shift in consciousness.

>>

>> My question would be - could such a recent change be genetic
>> at all, and not simply conceptual. (And as Terence McKenna >> points out, Jaynes seems to skip over the role of psychedelics
>> and entheogens in his analysis as a major source of hearing >> voices and seeing visions. :) )

>>

>>

>> ABSTRACT:

>>

> > " However, the example of
> > human self-domestication may illustrate that scientific ideas,
> > especially when dealing with human biology, are prone to misuse, > > particularly if "is" is confused with "ought", i.e., if moral > > principles are deduced from biological facts. Although such > > naturalistic fallacies appear to be banned, modern genetics may,

at > > least in theory, pose similar ethical problems to medicine, > including > > psychiatry. In times during which studies into the genetics of > > psychiatric disorders are scientifically more valued than studies

> into > > environmental causation of disorders (which is currently the > case),
> > the prospects of genetic therapy may be tempting to alter the human > > genome in patients, probably at costs that no-one can foresee. In

> the > > case of "self-domestication", it is proposed that human > > characteristics resembling domesticated traits in animals should

be

> > labelled "domestication-like", or better, objectively described as > > genuine adaptations to sedentism. "
> >
> > And like the nazis, who is going to say what 'good'

characteristics

> > are, and what undesirable ones are? If evolution is the adaptation > > of human populations' characteristics to the environment, who is > > going to accurately predict what the environment of the future is > > going to be?
> >
> > We might all end up living in space, or on other planets. Should > > we pre-select humans to deal with weightlessness? Or stronger > > or weaker gravity?
> >
> > The benefit of genetic diversity is that it gives the population
> > options of adapting to many different (and unforeseen) > > future environments.
> >
> > Alex
> >
>

| 23426|2007-10-19 17:56:32|Alex van Deelen|Re: The Bell Curve, pt 2 response from Matt|
Matt,

- > I always find it frustrating that these types of arguments
- > fail to address the need for specialized fields of scientific
- > inquiry, such as genetics, to not be an isolated field of
- > study and teach it as a part of a unified field of
- > multi-disciplined scientific problem solving.

And I don't trust James Watson to be worldly enough to be fully informed about Africa or Black people (which would be a polite way of calling him a geek). As it happens, there are a lot of signs that Africa is turning around and is going to take off within the next two decades. There are a lot of economic and technological changes afoot. For instance, the use of biofuel, and solar energy will make Africa much less dependent on importation of oil, which in turn makes it less dependent on foreign currency. More and more countries are at peace. Lots of people are beginning to question neoliberalism and 'free market economics' (ho-hum). There is a movement (still mainly in South and Central America) of new populism and economic nationalism, which can easily take hold in Africa.

At some time, Africa is going to start using it's massive resource wealth for the benefit of it's own people, instead of it padding the pockets of western corporations and a few corrupt politicians - and the internet is playing a role in that.

Zimbabwe is massively villified, but the essence of what they are doing is right - land reform out of the hands of a few thousand colonial leftovers, into the hands of hundreds of thousands of African farmers - who as a result are well on the way to switching from subsistence farming to commercial farming - something you do not hear in the Western media, but that is the reality on the ground. Also, because they have a nationalist government, they are putting a massive effort into doing the entire process right - they have bought hundreds of tractors, tonnes of fertilizer, etc.
<http://maravi.blogspot.com/2007/10/herald-all-set-for-farming-season.html>

The government is highly committed to making land reform work. Because of the media assassination of President Mugabe, and the illegal sanctions, they have turned toward China (talk about unintended consequences) for financing and technical support.

Africa should become an investment destination, including and perhaps especially from the African diaspora.

If you have money, you can buy land dirt cheap (one piece of real estate in Zambia online is offered for $23,- per hectare - and we're talking about tens of thousands of hectares) and the infrastructure already exists for exporting agricultural goods. The climate is moderated by altitude (about 1500 meters above sea level) and is right for growing maize, tobacco, coffee, etc.

I suggest going there on holiday and taking in the sights and opportunities.

- > "Back to life,
- > Back to reality,
- > Back to the here and now....."
- > as the POP group SOUL2SOUL so eloquently sang!

Sadly enough, I remember when that song came out - and the video/clothes catalog from Jazzy B's shop that went with it. :)

- > Much respect, and keep up all of your great works!

And you too.

Alex

| 23427|2007-10-19 18:06:33|Alex van Deelen|On human self-domestication, psychiatry, and eugenics|

Clyde,

- > Hearing voices seems to be a complicated matter. It
- > appears that many people who claim to hear voices,
- > when attached to MRIs show activity in the listening
- > centers of the brain. This indicates, to me at least,
- > that these individuals may actually be hearing voices
- > we can't hear.

Could it be that their senses are merely translating into each other - like when people take LSD and start hearing colours or seeing sound?

In the case of command voices, for instance symbolic concepts are translated by the brain into words? Maybe they have an overly developed sense of symbolism?

Alex

| 23428|2007-10-19 18:17:00|Alex van Deelen|On human self-domestication, psychiatry, and eugenics|
Djehuti,

> "He...postulates that was the norm in the ancient world."
> to
> "this would be a very recent shift in consciousness."
> and
> "could such a recent change be genetic at all, and not simply > conceptual."

Well the ancient world is pretty recent in evolutionary terms.
Too recent for such a major shift (if it took place) to be genetic.
Although on the other hand, if a change is important enough,
it can move through a (small?) population pretty quickly.

I guess I was simply wondering whether what Jaynes supposed was practically possible at all.

If it happened, it could be more of a conceptual change, like the dicoverry/rediscovery of perspective in art.

It is fun to imagine that something we today call an illness would once have been the norm.

Your point about eurocentrism is taken though.

Alex

| 23429|2007-10-19 18:19:48|matt mercer|Re: On human self-domestication, psychiatry, and eugenics|

Isn't that the call and response of the negroid chanting and singing?
just kidding.....maybe we all need to spend more time in the sacred spaces that the "temple" was designed for.....
matt

Mahari Mengistu wrote:

Or Dr. Winters, could it not be a case of mind over matter? Their minds tell them that they are hearing voices and the mind proceeds to act accordingly by sending these "messages" (imagined voices) to that part of the brain and it (obeys)responds.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, clyde winters wrote:

>

>

> --- Alex van Deelen wrote:

>

> > Paul,

> >

> > What is your opinion of Jaynes and "The Bicameral > > Mind"?

> > http://en.wikipedia .org/wiki/ Bicameral \_mind

> >

> > He basically maintains that there was a very recent > > evolution of consciousness. His idea is that ancient
> > people

> > had an original split that made them hear command > > voices on the one hand and act on those voices on
> > the other hand -

> > like present day paranoid schizophrenics that are > > told by

> > voices in their head to do this or that. His belief > > is that this > > ended when both were fused into what we call the

> > 'self'

> > or what we address when we say 'I' (I want to, I > > will... etc.).

> >

> > He cited examples from people in (ancient)
> > literature

> > hearing voices and seeing visions, and postulates
> > that > > was the norm in the ancient world.

> >

> > So what I'm getting at, is that this would be a very > > recent

> > shift in consciousness.

> >

> > My question would be - could such a recent change be > > genetic

> > at all, and not simply conceptual. (And as Terence
> > McKenna

> > points out, Jaynes seems to skip over the role of > > psychedelics

> > and entheogens in his analysis as a major source of > > hearing

> > voices and seeing visions. :) )

> >
> >
> Hi
> Hearing voices seems to be a complicated matter. It > appears that many people who claim to hear voices,
> when attached to MRIs show activity in the listening
> centers of the brain. This indicates, to me at least, > that these individuals may actually be hearing voices
> we can't hear.
>
> Clyde
>
>
> _____
> Do You Yahoo!?
> Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
> <http://mail.yahoo.com>
>

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23430|2007-10-19 18:27:17|matt mercer|Re: Watson is misled -- Perhaps, but some people are assertively MEA|

I remember when I was in New Orleans doing relief work, In the Treme neighborhood, a historically catholic black and white integrated "hood", I walked by a car with a young boy in the back seat, as I was passing on the sidewalk, an older lady, "retired", was passing me from the front, but I was watching the boy, put both his hands on the window like he was reaching out to the old woman through the glass trying to embrace her, and the look on his face was like all children who go through turmoil, like the moon.....his stare as he had this conversation of asking his grandma what was wrong is what stays with me.....

matt

p.s. does that mean he should be clinically diagnosed?

Mahari Mengistu wrote:

I agree with your assessment. This obviously can get to be a very complicated issue. But from your comments about the testing results and what I've observed of "my peeps" is that we need to take a lesson from these tests and give more attention and love to our kids. All too frequently I see black mothers off into their own worlds (which are often troubled, traumatic and sad), leaving their toddler to a degree isolated and unstimulated and likely feeling uncared about and uncared for even though he/she may, in fact, be cared for. The brain is an organ like any other bodily organ that needs stimulation and activity to function at its best.

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, Agola Kisira wrote:

>

> After the mapping of the human genome, there is no place for Watson's ideas as the genetic code for humans has been decrypted. The leader of the human genome project Dr. Craig Venter had this to say:

>

> "Skin colour as a surrogate for race is a social concept not a scientific one," Dr Venter said. "There is no basis in scientific fact or in the human genetic code for the notion that skin colour will be predictive of intelligence. "

>

> Check out the entire BBC article here:

<http://news.bbc.co.uk/2/hi/science/nature/7052416.stm>

>

> I think a much broader debate on IQ needs to be opened up which does not focus on race as so many researchers have done before. There is increasing evidence that IQ is more tightly correlated with parenting and environment. In my eyes the relationship is obvious and the background of most intelligent people seems to too obviously similar to ignore the relationship. Recent studies have shown for instance that eldest children are more intelligent than their younger siblings, and obvious pointer to parental input. Another study on one-year-olds shows that they all have the same IQ, so what accounts for the differences in their 20s and older if not environment. I should say for completeness that IQ testing of one-year-olds is controversial, but then again isn't it all.

>

> All the IQ tests that I have done are largely a measure of Language and mathematical skill, I think it should be clear that these are learned skills and are certainly not instinctive nor are they often intuitive.

>

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23431|2007-10-19 19:23:12|kungfuhustle|Re: On human self-domestication, psychiatry, and eugenics|

Studies have shown that sensitivity in sight, hearing, and thought are boosted in higher concentrations of melanin, with lower concentrations displaying lower sensitivity.

Perhaps, this explains why every major anglo nation are investing 100s billions of dollars in melanin synthesis research.

I met a brother at a trade show how is a research scientist for Chrysler Motors. He shared with me how his team were actively experimenting with melanin doped engine casings that expelled engine heat 3x more efficiently then blocks without.

The Pineal gland is where melanin is converted to the neurotransmitter, serotonin.

Many ancients believed that the spirit or soul resides in the pineal gland.

Others believe that the pineal gland is the way to achieve development of psychic talents such a levitation.

I recall reading in one of Plato's narratives (Critias, Timaeus??) of a conversation Shalom held with one of ancient Egypt's priests on how the pyramids were assembled. The priest described a ceremony where the stone was set upon a inscribed metal sheet and levitated into position after being struck with a similarly inscribed metal rod. the striking of the sheet caused it to vibration at a resonance frequency that negated the weight of the stone. Classic Egyptologist

25-30 years ago, Nissan Corporation set out to duplicate the building of the Giza pyramid using modern equipment such as crane, helicopters, lasers (cutting) and in the end, failed in a humiliating way. The seams between their blocks were 100x as course as the original. Finally, Egypt threw them out, ending their project because all of their equipment was tearing up the desert.

Perhaps, the ancients did hear voices.

Perhaps, our reality and perceptions are much different then the reality of the ancient. Maybe this explains why blacks have a more difficult time adjusting to assimilation conforming to the European mindset. It is unnatural and in contradiction with the natural mind set that we recall at a cellular level?

Hotep
Meninarmer

On Fri, 2007-10-19 at 19:07 +0000, Paul Kekai Manansala wrote:

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, clyde winters wrote:

> >

> >

>

> > >

> > Hi

> > Hearing voices seems to be a complicated matter. It > > appears that many people who claim to hear voices,

> > when attached to MRIs show activity in the listening

> > centers of the brain. This indicates, to me at least,

> > that these individuals may actually be hearing voices

> > we can't hear.

> >

> >

>

> Thanks Clyde. I had not even brought up the possibility of paranormal > experience except maybe as that can be considered "spiritual."

>

> My niece and nephew have interesting cellphones that can emit a ring > that only young people can hear.

>

> Adults can't pick up the sound waves at that range.

>

> Regards,

> Paul Kekai Manansala

>

>

>

>

>

| 23432|2007-10-19 19:23:58|Freddie Thompson|Re: Zahi Hawass insisted Tuesday that Tutankhamun was not black|

Hi,

I agree with Elliot, especially since most Europeans (and Blacks) do actually believe that the ancient Egyptians were a straight-haired people at the very least. This is obvious when we consider how they portray the Egyptians in movies and documentaries and in paintings and 3D modeling.

It is clear that the hairstyles the Egyptians wore point to the fact that their normal hair treatment was of an indigenous Black African nature. Eurocentric scholars prefer to steer clear of making this apparent connection.

Depending on the context, to even so much as mention that the wigs in question were of Nubian style or origin could reasonably be considered an attempt to draw attention away from the belief that the Egyptians themselves had Black African type hair -- and were thus essentially Black Africans themselves.

Even if the statement was not intended to be deceptive, the fact that there is such a long tradition of Europeans misrepresenting Egyptian history... suggests that they need to be questioned on ambiguous statements they make concerning matters that are still in dispute -- if only just so an educated listener can know where they are coming from.

I don't think Mahari's thinking is cloudy on this issue.

A lot of times, what is NOT said speaks louder than what IS said. This is usually an integral part of the ART of deception ? especially when you are teaching others this ART without them knowing it.
Fred

elliottandelliottmtg wrote:

I agree Meninarmer and furthermore, the Eurocentric conspiracy, directly connected to the wigs, is the deliberate attempts to separate Kemet from Africa by claiming that these wigs are Nubian and not Kemetian, thereby perpetuating the lie of non-African origin for Kemet.

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, kungfuhustle wrote:

>
> IF you merely examine the narrow field of Egyptology, one could easily > come to this conclusion. Although, I can't comprehend how this could be,
> even in this one area.
> Expanding the range of connected areas, one can easily make the case > that WHITE conspiracy IS overwhelmingly encompassing, in all areas of > black life, and hardly comparable to a cigar.
>
> Hotep
> Meninarmer
>
> On Thu, 2007-10-18 at 10:16 -0400, Peter Gray wrote:
>> Thanks for your clear-headed response, Paul. Mahari, I think you >> sometimes have the tendency to see eurocentric conspiracy in >> everything. Sometimes, a cigar just happens to be a cigar.
>>
>> Regards,
>>
>> Peter
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>

---

>> To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com
>> From: p.manansala@ ...
>> Date: Thu, 11 Oct 2007 12:11:01 -0700

>> Subject: Re: [Ta_Seti] Re: Zahi Hawass insisted Tuesday
that >> Tutankhamun was not black
>>
>> Mahari,
>>
>> As far as I'm aware, "Nubian wig" is a term coined by >> Egyptologists based on the similarity of the wig with Nubian
>> hairstyles.
>>
>> Regards,
>> Paul Kekai Manansala
>>
>> Mahari Mengistu wrote:
>> Paul,
>> I'd like to know who designated these wigs
as "Nubian
>> wigs"? Is it >> denoted in Kemetic writings as such? Or was it >> designated as such by >> eurocentric Egyptologists who wanted to give the >> impression that >> because these wigs are so clearly Afrikan that
they >> are the exception
>> to the rule; that these are not typical "Egyptian"
>> wig?
>> HTP,
>> Mahari
>>
>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai >> Manansala"
>> wrote:
>>>
>>>
>>> --- In
Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari"
>> wrote:
>>>>
>>>> You assessment seems almost as narrow-minded
and >> limited as
>> Hawass'.
>>> There are any number of images of Egyptians

with

>> Africoid features

>>> INCLUDING kinky hair/braided wigs.

>>>>

>>>

>>> These are known as "Nubian wigs" and they leave

>> quite an impression

>> when

>>> you see them in person.

>>>

>>>

>>

[http://www.acewigs.com/shop/image\_uploads/News/Newswighistory\_M.jpg]

>>>

>>> [PRINCESS NESIKHONSU'S WIG.]

>>> PRINCESS NESIKHONSU'S WIG.

>>>

>>>

>>>

>>> Regards.

>>> Paul Kekai Manansala

>>>

>>

>>

>>

>>

>>

>>

>>

>>

>>

>>

_____

_____ --

--
>> Help yourself to FREE treats served up daily at the Messenger Café.

>> Stop by today!

>>

>>

>>

>>

>

_____
Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23433|2007-10-19 19:24:09|sakina_ra|New Black Consciousness Group!!!!!!!|

Conscious Gods and Goddesses

Black Consciousness & Metaphysical Information For the New Age!

JOIN OUR YAHOO GROUP

or Visit our Site

www.naazir.com

FREE YOUR MIND

This lecture features Naazir-Ra. It was recorded in 1999 during the Winter Solstice when a major vortex opened up here in Atlanta. This event marked a new cycle of awakening that will reach a climax 13 years later during the Winter Solstice of 2012.

FREE! Downloads to your iPod or MP3 Player!

MP3 Sample Clip 1

MP3 Sample Clip 2

MP3 Sample Clip 3

Naazir-Ra

1 CD - 1 hour

| 23434|2007-10-19 19:28:22|Paul Kekai Manansala|On human self-domestication, psychiatry, and eugenics|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Alex van Deelen" wrote:

>

>
> In the case of command voices, for instance > symbolic concepts are translated by the brain
> into words?

Alex, I wonder if that happens in the "listening" part of the brain, which I guess would be hard-wired to the ears. Does anyone know if this listening location is active during dreaming?

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23435|2007-10-19 19:53:41|matt mercer|Re: On human self-domestication, psychiatry, and eugenics|

Attachments :

Has anyone ever thought of Seshat as a model for the senses and cognitive growth, the library of the self, the original Hogwarts, teehee? as the orchid, a bee on its own in the world, the dual gendered life form that defies convention and express self determination in a most "gentle" way, like nfr-tmu..... if there are seven petals on her flower, that's five senses plus two.....perception and expression.... how long does it take to achieve perfection? just kiddin.....can you put the seven egyptian souls on those petals and read a formula for a form of daily meditation that is designed to create space in the world of mental chatter where the "I" needs to learn to respect "us"and visa versa.....the bell curve?

Did the men and women that painted and carved the rock art in south africa hear voices, or did they do this work to silence their own doubt of their own perceptions?

I've attached some photos.....
the first is Bantu rock art, giraffe dancers....
2 is the black god of the Navajo, with plea ides over his right eye
3 is me playing with seshat and the seven souls, in a song I call
SAAU ANPU SAHU SHESMU
4 is the eugenics tree, can you group the roots into fields of man and woman?

matt

Paul Kekai Manansala wrote:

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Alex van Deelen" wrote:
>
>
> In the case of command voices, for instance > symbolic concepts are translated by the brain
> into words?

Alex, I wonder if that happens in the "listening" part of the brain, which I guess would be hard-wired to the ears. Does anyone know if this listening location is active during dreaming?

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23436|2007-10-19 20:00:44|arumese|The Truth About The Sphinx 1: African Origins|
Interesting You-Tube video acknowledging that the earliest Egyptians were Black Africans who later migrated to South Africa to become the Zulus;

entitled: The Truth About The Sphinx 1: African Origins

<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=-daBOKyF4yM&mode=related&search=africa%20ancient%20egypt%20nubia%20black%20pride%20power%20respect%20african%20kings%20queens%20racist%20european%20history%20racism>

| 23437|2007-10-19 20:06:35|matt mercer|Re: The Bell Curve, pt 2 response from Matt|
Thanks Alex,

The first cassette pop tape I ever gave my sister was Karin Wheeler's " Livin in The light" .....from soul2soul she goes
"children of nature, from another culture have to survive, livin in the light beautiful but scattered but thru it all your spirit never shattered had to survive livin in the light....."
woooooooo sounds like mosaic law to me !!!!!
just kiddin.....

I never got into the commercial aspect of the pop afro American kings of the universe bling fest.....in fact I always tell brothers, if they can name five plant species that are indigenous to their "hood" (cinta-mani) and explain what their uses are, then they can get "down" with me.....why is there no greater re known African American scientist after George Washington Carver?

Is peanut butter the real nuclear threat? Thank god for Reese's peanut butter cups..... just kidding, being an intellectual novice does not mean you can't have sense of humor.....
on that note
weltrusten slaap lekker.....

matt

Alex van Deelen wrote:

Matt,

- > I always find it frustrating that these types of arguments
- > fail to address the need for specialized fields of scientific
- > inquiry, such as genetics, to not be an isolated field of
- > study and teach it as a part of a unified field of
- > multi-disciplined scientific problem solving.

And I don't trust James Watson to be worldly enough to be fully informed about Africa or Black people (which would be a polite way of calling him a geek). As it happens, there are a lot of signs that Africa is turning around and is going to take off within the next two decades. There are a lot of economic and technological changes afoot. For instance, the use of biofuel, and solar energy will make Africa much less dependent on importation of oil, which in turn makes it less dependent on foreign currency. More and more countries are at peace. Lots of people are beginning to question neoliberalism and 'free market economics' (ho-hum). There is a movement (still mainly in South and Central America) of new populism and economic nationalism, which can easily take hold in Africa.

At some time, Africa is going to start using it's massive resource wealth for the benefit of it's own people, instead of it padding the pockets of western corporations and a few corrupt politicians - and the internet is playing a role in that.

Zimbabwe is massively villified, but the essence of what they are doing is right - land reform out of the hands of a few thousand colonial leftovers, into the hands of hundreds of thousands of African farmers - who as a result are well on the way to switching from subsistence farming to commercial farming - something you do not hear in the Western media, but that is the reality on the ground. Also, because they have a nationalist government, they are putting a massive effort into doing the entire process right - they have bought hundreds of tractors, tonnes of fertilizer, etc.
<http://maravi.blogspot.com/2007/10/herald-all-set-for-farming-season.html>

The government is highly committed to making land reform work. Because of the media assassination of President Mugabe, and the illegal sanctions, they have turned toward China (talk about unintended consequences) for financing and technical support.

Africa should become an investment destination, including and perhaps especially from the African diaspora.

If you have money, you can buy land dirt cheap (one piece of real estate in Zambia online is offered for $23,- per hectare - and we're talking about tens of thousands of hectares) and the infrastructure already exists for exporting agricultural goods. The climate is moderated by altitude (about 1500 meters above sea level) and is right for growing maize, tobacco, coffee, etc.

I suggest going there on holiday and taking in the sights and opportunities.

> "Back to life,
> Back to reality,
> Back to the here and now....."
> as the POP group SOUL2SOUL so eloquently sang!

Sadly enough, I remember when that song came out - and the video/clothes catalog from Jazzy B's shop that went with it. :)

> Much respect, and keep up all of your great works!

And you too.

Alex

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23438|2007-10-19 20:34:58|clyde winters|Re: On human self-domestication, psychiatry, and eugenics|
Hi Alex

I can't answer this question I have not read any literature on drugs and MRI.

Clyde

--- Alex van Deelen <avdeelen@wanadoo.nl> wrote:

> Clyde,
>
> > Hearing voices seems to be a complicated matter.
> It
> > appears that many people who claim to hear voices, > > when attached to MRIs show activity in the
> listening > > centers of the brain. This indicates, to me at > least,
> > that these individuals may actually be hearing > voices
> > we can't hear.
>
> Could it be that their senses are merely translating > into eachother - like when people take LSD and > start hearing colours or seeing sound?
>
>
> In the case of command voices, for instance > symbolic concepts are translated by the brain > into words? Maybe they have an overly > developed sense of symbolism?
>
> Alex
>
>
>
>
>
>
>

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23439|2007-10-19 20:43:19|clyde winters|Re: On human self-domestication, psychiatry, and eugenics|

--- Mahari Mengistu <mahari@myway.com> wrote:

> Or Dr. Winters, could it not be a case of mind over > matter? Their > minds tell them that they are hearing voices and the > mind proceeds to > act accordingly by sending these "messages" > (imagined voices) to that > part of the brain and it (obeys)responds.

> HTP,
> Mahari

Hi

This is possible but usually the brain responds to external stimuli when MRIs capture behavior.

Clyde

>

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23440|2007-10-19 20:49:36|clyde winters|Re: On human self-domestication, psychiatry, and eugenics|

--- Paul Kekai Manansala <pmanansala@sbcglobal.net>

wrote:

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, clyde winters

> wrote:

> >

> >

>

> > >

> > Hi

> > Hearing voices seems to be a complicated matter.

> It

> > appears that many people who claim to hear voices,

> > when attached to MRIs show activity in the

> listening

> > centers of the brain. This indicates, to me at > least,

> > that these individuals may actually be hearing

> voices

> > we can't hear.

> >

> >

>

> Thanks Clyde. I had not even brought up the > possibility of paranormal

> experience except maybe as that can be considered

> "spiritual."
>
> My niece and nephew have interesting cellphones that > can emit a ring
> that only young people can hear.
>
> Adults can't pick up the sound waves at that range.
>
> Regards,
> Paul Kekai Manansala
>
>

Hi Paul

good point. I also remember a piece on NPR last year which discussed a store manager in Britain who was using sounds that only young people could hear to keep them away from his store.

Clyde

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23441|2007-10-19 21:01:55|matt mercer|Re: On human self-domestication, psychiatry, and eugenics|

Is this like the elephants and the bees? that elephants can be dissuaded from decimating crops by projecting the sound of swarms of bees because they are wary of being stung?

How many forms of this type of conditioning are part of our collective histories?

Matt

clyde winters wrote:

--- Paul Kekai Manansala <pmanansala@sbcglobal.net>
wrote:

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, clyde winters
> wrote:
> >
> >

>
> > >
> > Hi
> > Hearing voices seems to be a complicated matter.
> It
> > appears that many people who claim to hear voices,
> > when attached to MRIs show activity in the
> listening > > centers of the brain. This indicates, to me at > least,
> > that these individuals may actually be hearing > voices
> > we can't hear.
> >
> >
>
> Thanks Clyde. I had not even brought up the > possibility of paranormal
> experience except maybe as that can be considered
> "spiritual."
>
> My niece and nephew have interesting cellphones that
> can emit a ring
> that only young people can hear.
>
> Adults can't pick up the sound waves at that range.
>
> Regards,
> Paul Kekai Manansala
>
>

Hi Paul

good point. I also remember a piece on NPR last year which discussed a store manager in Britain who was using sounds that only young people could hear to keep them away from his store.

Clyde

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

<http://mail.yahoo.com>

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

<http://mail.yahoo.com>

---

| 23442|2007-10-19 21:04:18|matt mercer|Re: On human self-domestication, psychiatry, and eugenics|

Attachments :

Again , thanatos.....

limbic system, skin feeling, smell,sound, temporal sequential reckoning.....what did they(they in a past tense) practice during the ages of torture whimsy and fallacy for wars on "drugs and thugs and thangs" that have the have and have nots are so afraid to face ourselves and talk about reality in every language ever spoken and then some, in this unparalleled age of comfort..... who is the lord of the fallen house of YIN(as the chinese say).....or is this a logistical matter that requires further inquiry and exploration. thru genetics.....oh, practice makes perfect.....

Is Ausar a fallen hero or a man that fell into a pile of shit....?

Has anyone seen the movie De Ja Vu, with Denzel Washington?

If you could see the past like a prophet and were a celebrity, would you help those in danger and alter time's events for your cause, or would you

teach people how to read and write, and sing, for how ever long that takes?

Tehuti.....

Matt

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

<http://mail.yahoo.com>

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

<http://mail.yahoo.com>

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

<http://mail.yahoo.com>

---

| 23443|2007-10-19 22:46:14|Paul Kekai Manansala|On human self-domestication, psychiatry, and eugenics|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, matt mercer wrote:

>

> Is this like the elephants and the bees? that elephants can be dissuaded from decimating crops by projecting the sound of swarms of bees because they are wary of being stung?

>

>

> How many forms of this type of conditioning are part of our collective histories?

>

>

I think these are generally considered 'cultural memes' i.e. the behavior is "taught" to young elephants as they observe older elephants.

If the young are taken away at a very early age, I would not be surprised if the youngsters failed to exhibit this type of behavior.

That's not to say that there are no "hard-wired" instincts in animals.

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23444|2007-10-19 22:56:03|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: The Bell Curve, pt 2 response from Matt|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Alex van Deelen" wrote:

>

>

> And I don't trust James Watson to be worldly enough to be fully > informed about Africa or Black people (which would be a polite > way of calling him a geek).

The genetics establishment was, and to a great extent, still is dominated by people like Watson who learned how to act "PC" long ago. Mainly due to the firestorm against eugenics following the Holocaust.

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23445|2007-10-19 22:58:21|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: The Bell Curve, pt 2 response from Matt|

By the way, Joseph Graves, a leading geneticist and African American, was on CNN deconstructing the race-based intelligence myth.

> Regards,
> Paul Kekai Manansala
>

| 23446|2007-10-20 05:45:16|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: On human self-domestication, psychiatry, and eugenics|
Mahari Mengistu wrote:

The invading "Greeks/Hellenists" simply built upon what was already there when they arrived. This narcissistic, self-centered, egoist european cultural personality produced a PERHAPS more questioning cultural esthetic.

>

As noted earlier, Greek rationality was natural due to Greek's lack of deep religious belief. They came to deride their gods as drunken, sex maniacs.

In various cultures, where deep-seated religion has given way as with the Indian Lokayatas and in Sung Dynasty China, a rational movement emerged.

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23447|2007-10-20 09:35:36|Djehuti Sundaka|On human self-domestication, psychiatry, and eugenics|

The "Greek miracle" is nothing more than a eurocentric perspective projected onto the past. True advancements in knowledge were made by individuals who can be counted on the digits of a single hand and provided no greater advancement for the society in which they lived. Various societies have always had inquiring individuals. The eurocentric perspective merely focuses upon Hellenic and Hellenistic speculators as somehow being outstanding for simply having been remembered in their history and generalizes that perspective to an entire ancient society.

Djehuti Sundaka

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Mahari Mengistu" wrote:

>

> My take on this "Greek miracle" IS SIMPLY that what took place is > what takes place when an outsider, an alien (relatively intelligent > one) enters a culture and sees it somewhat objectively and adds to

or > confronts what has been generally accepted as sacrosanct by the > indigenous people or those native to the culture. The same thing

is > happening to the eurocentric culture with the presence of blacks

and > other minorities. Blacks have changed eurocentric culture enormously

> in the US. It is unquestionably more humane and fairer (and more > interesting and varied) as a result of our input than ever in its > history.

> The invading "Greeks/Hellenists" simply built upon what was already > there when they arrived. This narcissistic, self-centered, egoist > european cultural personality produced a PERHAPS more questioning > cultural esthetic.

> HTP,

> Mahari

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Djehuti Sundaka"

> wrote:

>>

>> You jump from

>>

>> "He...postulates that was the norm in the ancient world."

>>

>> to

>>

>> "this would be a very recent shift in consciousness."

>>

>> and

>>

>> "could such a recent change be genetic at all, and not simply >> conceptual."

>>

>>

>> What he postulates is by no means substantiated by what he cites.

> He

>> merely provides what he claims are examples for his perspective
> while

>> ignoring or dismissing anything that doesn't fit with it. It's >> really nothing to be taken seriously as it's merely an idea of >> humanity projected onto the past conveniently until the time of

the >> Greeks (i.e. the Hellenistic era). Then, all of a sudden, humanity

> > miraculously evolves self-consciousness. Go figure.

> >

> > Djehuti Sundaka

> >

> >

> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Alex van Deelen"

> > wrote:

> > >

> > > Paul,

> > >

> > > What is your opinion of Jaynes and "The Bicameral Mind"?

> > > http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Bicameral\_mind

> > >

> > > He basically maintains that there was a very recent

> > > evolution of consciousness. His idea is that ancient people

> > > had an original split that made them hear command > > > voices on the one hand and act on those voices on the other > > > hand -

> >

> > > like present day paranoid schizophrenics that are told by > > > voices in their head to do this or that. His belief is that this > > > ended when both were fused into what we call the 'self'

> > > or what we address when we say 'I' (I want to, I will... etc.).

> > >

> > > He cited examples from people in (ancient) literature

> > > hearing voices and seeing visions, and postulates that > > > was the norm in the ancient world.

> > >

> > > So what I'm getting at, is that this would be a very recent > > > shift in consciousness.

> > >

> > > My question would be - could such a recent change be genetic

> > > at all, and not simply conceptual. (And as Terence McKenna

> > > points out, Jaynes seems to skip over the role of psychedelics

> > > and entheogens in his analysis as a major source of hearing

> > > voices and seeing visions. :) )

> > >

> > >

> > > ABSTRACT:

> > >

> > > " However, the example of

> > > human self-domestication may illustrate that scientific ideas,

> > > especially when dealing with human biology, are prone to misuse,

> > > particularly if "is" is confused with "ought", i.e., if moral > > > principles are deduced from biological facts. Although such > > > naturalistic fallacies appear to be banned, modern genetics

may,

> at >> least in theory, pose similar ethical problems to medicine,

>> including

>>> psychiatry. In times during which studies into the genetics of >>> psychiatric disorders are scientifically more valued than studies

>> into

>>> environmental causation of disorders (which is currently the >> case),

>>> the prospects of genetic therapy may be tempting to alter the > human >>> genome in patients, probably at costs that no-one can foresee.

In

>> the

>>> case of "self-domestication", it is proposed that human >>> characteristics resembling domesticated traits in animals should

> be

>>> labelled "domestication-like", or better, objectively described as >>> genuine adaptations to sedentism. "

>>>

>>> And like the nazis, who is going to say what 'good'

> characteristics

>>> are, and what undesirable ones are? If evolution is the adaptation >>> of human populations'characteristics to the environment, who is >>> going to accurately predict what the environment of the future is >>> going to be?

>>>

>>> We might all end up living in space, or on other planets. Should

>>> we pre-select humans to deal with weightlessness? Or stronger >>> or weaker gravity?

>>>

>>> The benefit of genetic diversity is that it gives the population

>>> options of adapting to many different (and unforeseen)

>>> future environments.

>>>

>>> Alex

>>>

>>

>

| 23448|2007-10-20 10:28:55|Franklin Jones|FRIENDLY REMINDER TODAY Atlanta Book Signing of the Black Matrix at |

PRESS RELEASE
October 17, 2007

For Immediate Release
Contact:
Franklin G. Jones
678-895 5216

Booksigning

THE BLACK MATRIX: The Modern Mental and Social Suppression of African Americans Under National Interest

Franklin G. Jones

Please Join me this Saturday October 20th 2007 at 2pm -- 4pm at the prestigious Medu's Book store located within the Green Brier Near Campbellton Rd in Atlanta Georgia. Author and activist Franklin Jones will discuss and sign his popular underground book "The Black Matrix: the modern mental and social suppression of African Americans Under National interest. Come and meet with the author and obtain an autographed copy of the book.

Here is just one example of the type of response that the book has been getting:

Thank you, Thank you, Thank you.... You began my Monday morning with tears in my eyes reading this book, tears for a future I thought I was changing when I began working at Howard almost thirty years ago, tears for how much work there is left to do and tears for all those young people who think that hot shot money making jobs in the corporate world while ignoring these kinds of needs will lead to a fulfilling life. It won't. This is where our energies belong...

I believe that your response will be the same Please join me at the Medu Book Store within the Green Brier Mall in Atlanta this Saturday October 20th 2007 at 2pm--4pm.

Signs and Discusses

The Black Matrix: the modern mental and social suppression of African Americans Under National Interest.

At Medu's Book Store Saturday, October 20, 2:00-4:00 PM

| _____

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23449|2007-10-20 10:46:48|Alex van Deelen|Re: On human self-domestication, psychiatry, and eugenics|
Matt,

- > Is this like the elephants and the bees? that elephants can
- > be dissuaded from decimating crops by projecting the
- > sound of swarms of bees because they are wary of being
- > stung?
- >
- > How many forms of this type of conditioning are part or
- > our collective histories?

Has anyone looked into the fact that when people take certain drugs, the images they get are simila?

For instance, people who take ayahuasca, report the same progression of imagery - first vegetation, then animals (like the jaguar), then entire cities, and the deepest form of imagery is Black women dancing, and looking into the eyes of one 'veiled lady', which is supposed to be the fount of all wisdom and understanding.

The images and progression seems to be the same across cultures and continents.

So what I am wondering is, is there some knowledge that is hardwired into our DNA, a 'Read Only Memory' or ROM for the brain, if you wish?

I wonder if anyone has made progress on that issue?

Alex

| 23450|2007-10-20 11:56:13|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: On human self-domestication, psychiatry, and eugenics|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Alex van Deelen" wrote:

>

>

- > For instance, people who take ayahuasca, report
- > the same progression of imagery - first vegetation,
- > then animals (like the jaguar), then entire cities, and
- > the deepest form of imagery is Black women dancing,
- > and looking into the eyes of one 'veiled lady', which is
- > supposed to be the fount of all wisdom and understanding.

>

- > The images and progression seems to be the same
- > across cultures and continents.

>

Alex, I suspect studies were involved and the question would be when they were conducted.

The world is a pretty small place these days. I was surprised in traveling through the Arab world, for example, of how popular Michael Jackson was. Kids in Timbuktu and Kathmandu can rap. I've seen blonde, blue-eyed people who can sing karaoke in the Japanese language.

Maybe the common cultural experience causes these similar progressions of images.

For example, is someone in Paleolithic times used ayahuasca would they still see images of cities?

> So what I am wondering is, is there some knowledge > that is hardwired into our DNA, a 'Read Only Memory' > or ROM for the brain, if you wish?
>

Some instinctive behavior is considered hard-wired.

For example, birds raised in isolation still seem to know how to build nests.

Also, some animals raised in isolation will know how to conduct certain types of courtship dances and other behavior never having seen it before.

Sex though is not considered a true instinct but a stimulus reaction.

Control of instincts and natural reactions seem to be an important element of many human societies, especially control of over the sex drive.

Cognitive control over sex urges actually elevates people in certain societies, Catholicism and Buddhism, being two examples.

Most Christians believe in a Messiah who was not married and apparently never had sex. Priests and monks are revered partly because they supposedly abstain from sex.

In non-Tantric Hinduism and Buddhism, the ability to control all natural desires including hunger, thirst, even comfort is considered divine.

The cognitive mind was considered to have the ability to override, to a certain extent, the hard-wiring, but apparently was not able to erase the "read-only memory" i.e., the urges could be controlled but not deleted.

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23451|2007-10-21 10:16:54|Alex van Deelen|Mustafa Hefny|

This is an article I found from CNN, from 10 years back.

<http://www.cnn.com/US/9707/16/racial.suit/index.html>

Black or white? Egyptian immigrant fights for black classification
Hefny

July 16, 1997

Web posted at: 4:22 a.m. EDT (0822 GMT)

From Correspondent Joan MacFarlane

DETROIT (CNN) -- An Egyptian immigrant is suing the U.S. government because they've told him he's white when his entire life he's been black.

Mostafa Hefny was born in Egypt and has always been proud of his Egyptian culture and his African ancestry. But when Hefny immigrated to America, the U.S. government told him he was no longer a black man.

-----

It seems to me that the likes of Zahi Hawass are never going to change, until they start acknowledging their Black heritage.

Alex

| 23452|2007-10-21 11:39:14|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Watson is misled -- Perhaps, but some people are assertively MEA|

Not likely from ONE situation; however, if he is perpetually traumatized, I would suggest some counseling. Kids are extremely resilient but the brain is constantly trying to make sense of the environment to acquire things and to keep itself safe. If he sees this kind of constant trauma it has to begin to shape what he thinks the world is and how he interprets it.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, matt mercer wrote:

>

> I remember when I was in New Orleans doing relief work, In the Treme neighborhood, a historically catholic black and white integrated "hood", I walked by a car with a young boy in the back seat, as I was passing on the sidewalk, an older lady, "retired", was passing me from the front, but I was watching the boy, put both his hands on the window like he was reaching out to the old woman through the glass trying to embrace her, and the look on his face was like all children who go through turmoil, like the moon.....his stare as he had this conversation of asking his grandma what was wrong is what stays with me.....

>

> matt

>

> p.s. does that mean he should be clinically diagnosed?

>

> Mahari Mengistu wrote: I

agree with your assessment. This obviously can get to be a very > complicated issue. But from your comments about the testing results > and what I've observed of "my peeps" is that we need to take a lesson > from these tests and give more attention and love to our kids.

All

> too frequently I see black mothers off into their own worlds (which > are often troubled, traumatic and sad), leaving their toddler to a > degree isolated and unstimulated and likely feeling uncared about and > uncared for even though he/she may, in fact, be cared for. The brain > is an organ like any other bodily organ that needs stimulation and > activity to function at its best.

> HTP,

> Mahari

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Agola Kisira wrote:

>>

>> After the mapping of the human genome, there is no place for

> Watson's ideas as the genetic code for humans has been decrypted.

The

> leader of the human genome project Dr. Craig Venter had this to say:

>>

>> "Skin colour as a surrogate for race is a social concept not a > scientific one," Dr Venter said. "There is no basis in scientific > fact or in the human genetic code for the notion that skin colour > will be predictive of intelligence."

>>

>> Check out the entire BBC article here:

> <http://news.bbc.co.uk/2/hi/science/nature/7052416.stm>

> >

> > I think a much broader debate on IQ needs to be opened up which > does not focus on race as so many researchers have done before.

There

> is increasing evidence that IQ is more tightly correlated with > parenting and environment. In my eyes the relationship is obvious

and

> the background of most intelligent people seems to too obviously > seem to ignore the relationship. Recent studies have shown for > instance that eldest children are more intelligent than their younger > siblings, and obvious pointer to parental input. Another study on one-> year-olds shows that they all have the same IQ, so what accounts

for > the differences in their 20s and older if not environment. I should

> say for completeness that IQ testing of one-year-olds is > controversial, but then again isn't it all.

> >

> > All the IQ tests that I have done are largely a measure of

Language

> and mathematical skill, I think it should be clear that these are > learned skills and are certainly not instinctive nor are they often > intuitive.

> >

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

---

> Do You Yahoo!?

> Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

> <http://mail.yahoo.com>

>

| 23453|2007-10-21 11:41:26|A.E.|What can we learn about the supposed mummy of Nefertiti from Ramse 0|

Attachments :

Ramses II Offering a Libation - Statue

Egyptian Museum, Cairo. Dynasty XIX 1290-1224 B.C.

The most celebrated of all Pharaohs, Ramses II, is well known for the length of his reign, the numerous temples he built and his military campaigns, such as the battle of Kadesh where Ramses II, facing the army of Muwattali, King of the Hittites found himself surrounded by 2500 Hittite charioteers with only his personal bodyguard to help him. As the enemy closed in around him, Pharaoh leaped into his chariot, tied the reins around his waist to leave his hands free, sent forth a great cry for help to Amun and charged six times against the Hittites, finally breaking through and winning the battle. Ramses II was the son of Seti I and was crowned Pharaoh in 1290 b.c. when he was 18 years old. Ramses II had many wives but the first and favorite chief Queen was Nefertari. Ramses died at the age of 85 after ruling Egypt for 67 years. Here kneeling on a base, wearing a khepresh headdress with Uraeus, Ramses II piously offers libation vessels known as nu-jars, most likely filled with wine or milk.

Nefertari VS Nefertiti.. CAUTION, do not confuse these two. Is any one familiar with this particular image of Ramses?

*

Encyclopedia Egypt

| 23454|2007-10-21 11:44:06|A.E.|A lock of Ramses hair stolen?|

Attachments :

Locks Returned: October 28, 1976 file photo of the remains of the Egyptian pharaoh Ramses II, in Paris. French police arrested a man who tried to sell what he claimed were strands of hair and tiny pieces of funeral cloth from the mummy of Egyptian Pharaoh Ramses II on the Internet and the hair tufts were recently unveiled at the Egyptian Museum.

The black and white version must be an earlier version? I included it because the b&w version shows the hair line better than the color version.

All of the painted images (which are not faded) make Pharaoh appear very dark (not like blonds that I know... that is "blonds" that do not dye their hair). The image in the lower right does not show how dark he was. It is the color of the material the image was made of.

Remember the story about the mummy of the supposed Nefertiti having a ban because she wore a hat?

There are more images of Nefertiti with out a hat than with and not one with out a hat shows a bald Nefertiti. What makes them say Nefertiti was wearing a wig? Because you can not see her hair when she was wearing the hat?

There must be hundreds (if not thousands) of images, paintings/statues of Ramses 2 with and YOU can NOT SEE he had hair.. can't see hair.. so that means they were shaved bald?

At his death Ramses 02 was over 90 years old .. and "wearing tight hats" created NO band in his skin and did not mean he was bald.

In the images of Ramses holding his enemy by the hair and several statues, he has a hat shaped like Nefertiti and Tut is also shown with that kind of hat. Kind of looks like a top hat but has a flat surface on the top. There are many such images of Egyptians wearing this type hat.

This shaped hat is not the design of any thing royal.

You can't see their hair when they have a hat on, so that means when you see hair, that means they are wearing a wig?

* The Nefertiti is supposed to be wearing a wig, but there are dozens of other queens of Egypt buried with their own hair. Out of any 100 mummies taken by random, how many KNOWN royals can you find with shaved heads?

* Ramses is seldom (if ever) shown with out a hat and yet his mummy did not have a band in his skin. The supposed Nefertiti mummy had a band in the skin and most of Nefertiti's images showed her with out a hat.

* You could never see Ramses hair in any images but Ramses was NOT shaved bald because of heat, lice or hat ware.

No hair was seen in images of royals with their hats on, but the ALL the remains of ALL identified royals show they had their own hair when they were mummified.

•

*

Encyclopedia Egypt

| 23455|2007-10-21 11:57:11|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: A lock of Ramses hair stolen?|

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "A.E." wrote:

>

>

> No hair was seen in images of royals with their hats on, but the ALL the remains of ALL identified royals show they had their own hair when they were mummified.

>

Are you saying the mummies were not really royal?

It is known that most of the so-called royal mummies have been identified only after tombs had been tampered with and mummies moved around many times.

The one well-known exception is Tutankhamum whose tomb was found undisturbed.

King Tut's mummy was in fact fully-shaved.

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23456|2007-10-21 12:33:00|Mahari Mengistu|Re: The Truth About The Sphinx 1: African Origins|

I think it is ironic that the narrator of the video is Charlton Heston, Mr. white Moses. I wonder if he did it for the money or because it was really of interest to him.

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "arumese" wrote:

>
> Interesting You-Tube video acknowledging that the earliest Egyptians > were Black Africans who later migrated to South Africa to become the > Zulus;
>
> entitled: The Truth About The Sphinx 1: African Origins
>
> <http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=-daBOKyF4yM&mode=related&search=africa%20ancient%20egypt%20nubia%20black%20pride%20power%20respect%20african%20kings%20queens%20racist%20european%20history%20racism>
>

| 23457|2007-10-21 12:51:15|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Mustafa Hefny|

>>The directive defines black as a person having origins in any of the black racial groups of Africa. A white person is defined as having origins in any of the original peoples of Europe, North Africa or the Middle East. <<

I wonder if whites from areas such as Kenya, South Africa and other Sub-Saharan areas have the same problem.

I could be wrong but I doubt it.

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Alex van Deelen" wrote:

>
> This is an article I found from CNN, from 10 years back.
>
> <http://www.cnn.com/US/9707/16/racial.suit/index.html>
>
> Black or white? Egyptian immigrant fights for black classification

> Hefny
>
> July 16, 1997
> Web posted at: 4:22 a.m. EDT (0822 GMT)
> From Correspondent Joan MacFarlane
>
> DETROIT (CNN) -- An Egyptian immigrant is suing the U.S. government > because they've told him he's white when his entire life he's been

black.

>
> Mostafa Hefny was born in Egypt and has always been proud of his > Egyptian culture and his African ancestry. But when Hefny

immigrated > to America, the U.S. government told him he was no longer a black man.

>
> -----
>
> It seems to me that the likes of Zahi Hawass are never going to > change, until they start acknowledging their Black heritage.
>
> Alex

>

| 23458|2007-10-21 12:54:54|matt mercer|Re: Watson is misled -- Perhaps, but some people are assertively MEA|

I understand what you are saying, but I was actually trying to express more about the resiliency of children and that they are constantly trying to reach out to "ask" and comfort their elders when they see the traumas that are compounded around them, this reaching out is what I am interested in because it is like they are asking to learn. We here in the west are so convinced that the "adult" world is so far above children, while say in the jungles of south america, every child is taught the "real" life and death situations that are faced day to day because it is just part of life. I am suggesting that the adulterated fabrications of life's right and wrong are more of an issue of emotional growth here in the western world, and that a child who has not seen or experienced the Traumas of adulthood is more apt to help support those people in their lives that are going through those things...

Matt

Mahari Mengistu wrote:

Not likely from ONE situation; however, if he is perpetually traumatized, I would suggest some counseling. Kids are extremely resilient but the brain is constantly trying to make sense of the environment to acquire things and to keep itself safe. If he sees this kind of constant trauma it has to begin to shape what he thinks the world is and how he interprets it.

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, matt mercer wrote:

>

> I remember when I was in New Orleans doing relief work, In the Treme neighborhood, a historically catholic black and white integrated "hood", I walked by a car with a young boy in the back seat, as I was passing on the sidewalk, an older lady, "retired", was passing me from the front, but I was watching the boy, put both his hands on the window like he was reaching out to the old woman through the glass trying to embrace her, and the look on his face was like all children who go through turmoil, like the moon..... ..his stare as he had this conversation of asking his grandma what was wrong is what stays with me..... ..

>

> matt

>

> p.s. does that mean he should be clinically diagnosed?

>

> Mahari Mengistu wrote: I

agree with your assessment. This obviously can get to be a very > complicated issue. But from your comments about the testing results

> and what I've observed of "my peeps" is that we need to take a lesson > from these tests and give more attention and love to our kids.

All

> too frequently I see black mothers off into their own worlds (which > are often troubled, traumatic and sad), leaving their toddler to a > degree isolated and unstimulated and likely feeling uncared about and > uncared for even though he/she may, in fact, be cared for. The brain

> is an organ like any other bodily organ that needs stimulation and > activity to function at its best.

> HTP,

> Mahari

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, Agola Kisira wrote:

> >

> > After the mapping of the human genome, there is no place for

> Watson's ideas as the genetic code for humans has been decrypted.

The

> leader of the human genome project Dr. Craig Venter had this to say:

> >

> > "Skin colour as a surrogate for race is a social concept not a scientific one," Dr Venter said. "There is no basis in scientific fact or in the human genetic code for the notion that skin colour will be predictive of intelligence. "

> >

> > Check out the entire BBC article here:

> <http://news.bbc.co.uk/2/hi/science/nature/7052416.stm>

> >

> > I think a much broader debate on IQ needs to be opened up which does not focus on race as so many researchers have done before.

There

> is increasing evidence that IQ is more tightly correlated with parenting and environment. In my eyes the relationship is obvious and > the background of most intelligent people seems to too obviously simulate to ignore the relationship. Recent studies have shown for instance that eldest children are more intelligent than their younger > siblings, and obvious pointer to parental input. Another study on one-> year-olds shows that they all have the same IQ, so what accounts for > the differences in their 20s and older if not environment. I should > say for completeness that IQ testing of one-year-olds is controversial, but then again isn't it all.

> >

> > All the IQ tests that I have done are largely a measure of Language > and mathematical skill, I think it should be clear that these are learned skills and are certainly not instinctive nor are they often intuitive.

> >

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

> _____

> Do You Yahoo!?

> Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

> <http://mail.yahoo.com>
>

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23459|2007-10-21 13:05:51|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Watson is misled -- Perhaps, but some people are assertively MEA|

>>and that a child who has not seen or experienced the Traumas of adulthood is more apt to help support those people in their lives

that are going through those things...<<

Agreed. I think you can always expect the child to do his/her best to assist the parent in any way possible if they are allowed to.
Kids are wonderful in their potential to act constructively. It's the parent(s) who don't utilize their child's potential appropriately. And mainly, I think, it's because they don't realize or understand the child's potential. Children are just little people with a fully functioning brain - waiting to be properly directed.
HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, matt mercer wrote:

>

> I understand what you are saying, but I was actually trying to express more about the resiliency of children and that they are constantly trying to reach out to "ask" and comfort their elders when they see the traumas that are compounded around them, this reaching out is what I am interested in because it is like they are asking to learn. We here in the west are so convinced that the "adult" world is so far above children, while say in the jungles of south america, every child is taught the "real" life and death situations that are faced day to day because it is just part of life. I am suggesting that the adulterated fabrications of life's right and wrong are more of an issue of emotional growth here in the western world, and that a child who has not seen or experienced the Traumas of adulthood is more apt to help support those people in their lives that are going through those things...

>

> Matt

>

> Mahari Mengistu wrote:

Not likely from ONE situation; however, if he is perpetually > traumatized, I would suggest some counseling. Kids are extremely > resilient but the brain is constantly trying to make sense of the > environment to acquire things and to keep itself safe. If he sees > this kind of constant trauma it has to begin to shape what he thinks

> the world is and how he interprets it.

> HTP,

> Mahari

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, matt mercer wrote:

>>

>> I remember when I was in New Orleans doing relief work, In the

> Treme neighborhood, a historically catholic black and white

> integrated "hood", I walked by a car with a young boy in the back > seat, as I was passing on the sidewalk, an older lady, "retired",

was > passing me from the front, but I was watching the boy, put both

his > hands on the window like he was reaching out to the old woman > through the glass trying to embrace her, and the look on his face

was

> like all children who go through turmoil, like the > moon.....his stare as he had this conversation of asking

his > grandma what was wrong is what stays with me.....

>>

>> matt

>>

>> p.s. does that mean he should be clinically diagnosed?

>>

>> Mahari Mengistu wrote: I

> agree with your assessment. This obviously can get to be a very >> complicated issue. But from your comments about the testing

> results

>> and what I've observed of "my peeps" is that we need to take a > lesson

>> from these tests and give more attention and love to our kids.

> All

>> too frequently I see black mothers off into their own worlds

> (which >> are often troubled, traumatic and sad), leaving their toddler

to a >> degree isolated and unstimulated and likely feeling uncared

about

> and > > uncared for even though he/she may, in fact, be cared for. The > brain

> > is an organ like any other bodily organ that needs stimulation
and

> > activity to function at its best.

> > HTP,

> > Mahari

> >

> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Agola Kisira

wrote:

> > >

> > > After the mapping of the human genome, there is no place for

> > Watson's ideas as the genetic code for humans has been decrypted.

> The

> > leader of the human genome project Dr. Craig Venter had this to > say:

> > >

> > > "Skin colour as a surrogate for race is a social concept not
a > > scientific one," Dr Venter said. "There is no basis in scientific

> > fact or in the human genetic code for the notion that skin
colour

> > will be predictive of intelligence."

> > >

> > > Check out the entire BBC article here:

> > <http://news.bbc.co.uk/2/hi/science/nature/7052416.stm>

> > >

> > > I think a much broader debate on IQ needs to be opened up
which > > does not focus on race as so many researchers have done before.

> There

> > is increasing evidence that IQ is more tightly correlated with > > parenting and environment. In my eyes the relationship is obvious

> and

> > the background of most intelligent people seems to too obviously > > similar to ignore the relationship. Recent studies have shown

for > > instance that eldest children are more intelligent than their > younger > > siblings, and obvious pointer to parental input. Another study

on

> one-> > year-olds shows that they all have the same IQ, so what accounts

> for > > the differences in their 20s and older if not environment. I > should

> > say for completeness that IQ testing of one-year-olds is > > controversial, but then again isn't it all.

> > >

> > > All the IQ tests that I have done are largely a measure of

> Language

> > and mathematical skill, I think it should be clear that these are > > learned skills and are certainly not instinctive nor are they often > > intuitive.

> > >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> > _____
> > Do You Yahoo!?

> > Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

> > <http://mail.yahoo.com>

> >

>

>

>

>

>

>

> _____
> Do You Yahoo!?

> Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

> <http://mail.yahoo.com>

>

| 23460|2007-10-21 15:05:15|matt mercer|Re: Watson is misled -- Perhaps, but some people are assertively MEA|

This goes along with my idea that introducing ancient language study into primary education might help children "self-direct" themselves by expanding the cognitive base that seems to be a filially appropriated through institutional lines of social infrastructure. Like the Montessori system is designed to encourage students to express their own stages of growth within a broader curricula I see that ancient language study for this age group, asides from the obvious parallels of contemporary language study and primary student aptitude, would lend a vast untapped resource of possibilities for students to explore language and their own expression from a formative base that is not grounded in the iron clad authority of reading writing and arithmetic, but fluid, from a standpoint of self-determination and cooperative education. Trying to create a foundation for this body of curriculum is the task I see challenges with. But if Harry Potter is digestible enough for the world's children, it might not be that big of a deal. Bantu-Hieroglyph-Tocharian might be a good place to start.

I wonder if any of you have done comparative studies not of just etymology but of the wider realm of eschatology of the Runic languages and ancient alphabet systems, Hungarian runes in particular. That is to say that the symbolic base of terminology and phonetic equivalents, if viewed from a perspective of ecology, taught through a universal eschatology extracted from the alphabets is similar enough to recognize the shifts or transpositions from alphabet to alphabet. Like the short and the long "A" in Magyar runes resemble a flag and an ax, like Thor's hammer, the Alpha principle, protecting the ecological truth of what has been taken from the land and built from its fruits.....out of all the bickering that goes on about the religious or ethnic propriety over the "word", is now a good time time to engage and hallow all of these pieces of language we are all able to share, ie: through the lightening speed of the internet. If Loki, the embodiment of crystallized intelligence grown at will, reminds us all of the current state the world is in, the over inflated infrastructure, and the disambiguated relationships that support and nurture the chaos of the machine of god that is the father of us all..... Perhaps the melting pot is a soup that is more nurturing than any of us dreamed.....

matt

matt

Mahari Mengistu wrote:

>>and that a child who has not seen or experienced the Traumas of adulthood is more apt to help support those people in their lives that are going through those things...<<

Agreed. I think you can always expect the child to do his/her best to assist the parent in any way possible if they are allowed to.

Kids are wonderful in their potential to act constructively. It's the parent(s) who don't utilize their child's potential appropriately. And mainly, I think, it's because they don't realize or understand the child's potential. Children are just little people with a fully functioning brain - waiting to be properly directed.

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, matt mercer wrote:

>

> I understand what you are saying, but I was actually trying to express more about the resiliency of children and that they are constantly trying to reach out to "ask" and comfort their elders when they see the traumas that are compounded around them, this reaching out is what I am interested in because it is like they are asking to learn. We here in the west are so convinced that the "adult" world is so far above children, while say in the jungles of south america, every child is taught the "real" life and death situations that are faced day to day because it is just part of life. I am suggesting that the adulterated fabrications of life's right and wrong are more of an issue of emotional growth here in the western world, and that a child who has not seen or experienced the Traumas of adulthood is more apt to help support those people in their lives that are going through those things...

>

> Matt

>

> Mahari Mengistu wrote:

Not likely from ONE situation; however, if he is perpetually > traumatized, I would suggest some counseling. Kids are extremely > resilient but the brain is constantly trying to make sense of the > environment to acquire things and to keep itself safe. If he sees > this kind of constant trauma it has to begin to shape what he thinks

> the world is and how he interprets it.

> HTP,

> Mahari

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, matt mercer wrote:

> >

> > I remember when I was in New Orleans doing relief work, In the > Treme neighborhood, a historically catholic black and white > integrated "hood", I walked by a car with a young boy in the back > seat, as I was passing on the sidewalk, an older lady, "retired",
was > passing me from the front, but I was watching the boy, put both

his

> hands on the window like he was reaching out to the old woman > through the glass trying to embrace her, and the look on his face
was

> like all children who go through turmoil, like the > moon..... .....his stare as he had this conversation of asking

his > grandma what was wrong is what stays with me..... ..

> >

> > matt
> >
> > p.s. does that mean he should be clinically diagnosed?
> >
> > Mahari Mengistu wrote: I > agree with your assessment. This obviously can get to be a very > > complicated issue. But from your comments about the testing
> results
> > and what I've observed of "my peeps" is that we need to take a > lesson
> > from these tests and give more attention and love to our kids.
> All > > too frequently I see black mothers off into their own worlds > (which > > are often troubled, traumatic and sad), leaving their toddler
to a > > degree isolated and unstimulated and likely feeling uncared about
> and > > uncared for even though he/she may, in fact, be cared for. The > brain
> > is an organ like any other bodily organ that needs stimulation
and
> > activity to function at its best.
> > HTP,
> > Mahari
> >
> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, Agola Kisira
wrote:
> > >
> > > After the mapping of the human genome, there is no place for > > Watson's ideas as the genetic code for humans has been decrypted.
> The
> > leader of the human genome project Dr. Craig Venter had this to > say:
> > >
> > > "Skin colour as a surrogate for race is a social concept not
a > > scientific one," Dr Venter said. "There is no basis in scientific > > fact or in the human genetic code for the notion that skin
colour
> > will be predictive of intelligence. "
> > >
> > > Check out the entire BBC article here:

> > <http://news.bbc.co.uk/2/hi/science/nature/7052416.stm>
> > >
> > > I think a much broader debate on IQ needs to be opened up
which > > does not focus on race as so many researchers have done before.
> There
> > is increasing evidence that IQ is more tightly correlated with > > parenting and environment. In my eyes the relationship is obvious
> and
> > the background of most intelligent people seems to too
obviously > > similar to ignore the relationship. Recent studies have shown
for > > instance that eldest children are more intelligent than their > younger > > siblings, and obvious pointer to parental input. Another study on
> one-> > year-olds shows that they all have the same IQ, so what accounts
> for > > the differences in their 20s and older if not environment. I > should > > say for completeness that IQ testing of one-year-olds is > > controversial, but then again isn't it all.
> > >
> > > All the IQ tests that I have done are largely a measure of > Language > > and mathematical skill, I think it should be clear that these
are > > learned skills and are certainly not instinctive nor are they often > > intuitive.
> > >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> >
> > _____
> > Do You Yahoo!?
> > Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
> > <http://mail.yahoo.com>
> >
>

>
>
>
>
>
>
> _____
> Do You Yahoo!?
> Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
> <http://mail.yahoo.com>
>

---

Do You Yahoo!?
Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23461|2007-10-21 21:04:07|arumese|Blacks in Ancient Egypt--Afrocentric Distortion|
Check out this nice video. How many of the images shown are fakes?
How many have been altered? How many are known images of Blacks?

<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=65Z-S1WW85Y&mode=related&search=>
| 23462|2007-10-21 21:12:45|Divine Ruler Equality Allah|Re: New Black Consciousness
Group!!!!!!!|
Wow, y'all ain't going to have any subscribers, because y'all don't know how to use the "innerweb" and post the right and exact URL to your yahoo group.

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "sakina_ra" wrote:

>
>
> Conscious Gods and Goddesses
>
> Black Consciousness & Metaphysical Information For the New Age!
>
> JOIN OUR YAHOO GROUP
>
> or Visit our Site
>
> www.naazir.com <<http://www.naazir.com/>>
>
> FREE YOUR MIND
>
> This lecture features Naazir-Ra. It was recorded in 1999 during the > Winter Solstice when a major vortex opened up here in Atlanta. This > event marked a new cycle of awakening that will reach a climax 13 years > later during the Winter Solstice of 2012.
> > >

>
> FREE! Downloads to your iPod or MP3 Player!
>
> MP3 Sample Clip 1
>
>
> MP3 Sample Clip 2
>
>
> MP3 Sample Clip 3
>
>
>
>
> Naazir-Ra
>
> 1 CD - 1 hour
>
>
>
> \
>
| 23463|2007-10-21 21:22:20|asar_imhotep|Possible origin of the nwt symbol|

Possible origin of the nwt symbol

Htp Ta-Seti

I know this may be off the mark, but I was just contemplating a possible origin for the /nwt/determinative used to designate country, town, community or village. After looking at the /nwt/  symbol and that of the Dikenga symbol used in the Kongo, I find the concept and the philosophy behind both of them to be very similar if not the same.

The graphical representation of the Bantu Dingo-Dingo (life process/cycle) consists of an "X" within a circle. The circle is divided into 4 demarcations and each section of the Dikenga represents a particular stage in life.

Bantu (human beings) in Kongo cosmology are considered second Suns (represented by the circles in the cosmogram). Just like the suns perceived journey around the earth, graphically speaking, human beings, as second suns, traverse around (dingo-dingo) our own Dikenga. The core (didi) of any Dikenga is the Kanda (community). This term is very important in this analysis.

In African Cosmology of the Bantu Kongo pg. 132, Dr. Fu-Kiau gives us a possible correspondence between the Dikenga cosmogram and that of the nwt symbol of Ta-Merri. He states:

"Therefore, the Vee in reality, is a living pyramid in constant motion, which follows the path of life and passes the four main points of demarcation of the cosmogram [dikenga], which in turn is symbolized by the flame of life inside the community circle. The closer one is to the center of this flame, whose "Vee" is the symbol, the healthier and more powerful one is." (emphasis mine)

So this circle represents the "community" in which one lives. This isn't relegated to a small geographical area as is thought of today, but as a national geo-political boundary as well. So the Kongo symbol is graphically showing us a process (dingo-dingo) in which living suns (human beings) grow and develop in the context of and in relation to community. This philosophically is in alignment with traditional African thought on self-identity, and was the case in ancient Ta-Merri.

Dr. Mualana Karenga in his work MAAT: The moral ideal in ancient Egypt, puts this concept into perspective when he says on pages 268-269:

These fundamental Fanonian questions paraphrased here are: "Who am I; am I really who I am and am I all I ought to be?" The first question is a question of identity. In a word, who am I-in-community? For I know myself in relation, not in isolation. I am a place-holder in a definite community and tradition and from this context and the relations those contain, I know myself. As Mbiti (1970, 141) notes, the most definitive statement of such a communal concept of identity is "I am because we are: and since we are, therefore I am." He concludes, "this is a cardinal point in the understanding of the African view of man." This, of course, clearly differs from the Cartesian proposition that "I think therefore I am." For in a communitarian concept of self, one is not identified with one's capacity to think but by one's relatedness to others, i.e., by being of, with and especially of others." (emphasis mine)

The African concept of community gives an individual his identity and his identity is predicated on what he does, how he develops in the context of a given community. The /nwt/ symbol indicates identity with a particular community or people. To me, the  /nwt/ symbol is just the Dikenga symbol as the Dikenga symbol means community: it is the center of who you are and gives an individual his identity. Nw.t gives people nationhood as well and indicates nation in Egyptian texts.

Although I can't connect linguistically the term nw.t with dikenga, the graphic and meaning between the two are too similar to ignore a connection.

For further inquiries, I now ask you to pay attention to the akhet symbol and compare it with your new found knowledge of the Bantu concept of living suns traversing around the dikenga in relation to a master/priest/nganga. We can deal with that in a different post.

Asar Imhotep
<http://www.mochasuite.com>

| 23464|2007-10-21 21:27:26|asar_imhotep|Possible origin of the nwt symbol (correct spacing)|

I don't know what happened to the first post, but a lot of the words were combined together. I hope I caught them all.

*****
*

Possible origin of the nwt symbol

Htp Ta-Seti

I know this may be off the mark, but I was just contemplating a possible origin for the /nwt/determinative used to designate country, town, community or village. After looking at the /nwt/  symbol and that of the Dikenga symbol used in the Kongo, I find the concept and the philosophy behind both of them to be very similar if not the same.

The graphical representation of the Bantu Dingo-Dingo (life process/cycle) consists of an "X" within a circle. The circle is divided into 4 demarcations and each section of the Dikenga represents a particular stage in life.

Bantu (human beings) in Kongo cosmology are considered second Suns (represented by the circles in the cosmogram). Just like the suns perceived journey around the earth, graphically speaking, human beings, as second suns, traverse around (dingo-dingo) our own Dikenga. The core (didi) of any Dikenga is the Kanda (community). This term is very important in this analysis.

In African Cosmology of the Bantu Kongo pg. 132, Dr. Fu-Kiau gives us a possible correspondence between the Dikenga cosmogram and that of the/nwt/ symbol of Ta-Merri. He states:

"Therefore, the Vee in reality, is a living pyramid in constant motion, which follows the path of life and passes the four main points of demarcation of the cosmogram [dikenga], which in turn is symbolized by the flame of life inside the community circle. The closer one is to the center of this flame, whose "Vee" is the symbol, the healthier and more powerful one is." (emphasis mine)

So this circle represents the "community" in which one lives. This isn't relegated to a small geographical area as is thought of today, but as a national geo-political boundary as well. So the Kongo symbol is graphically showing us a process (dingo-dingo) in which living suns (human beings) grow and develop in the context of and in relation to community. This philosophically is in alignment with traditional African thought on self identity, and was the case in ancient Ta-Merri.

Dr. Mualana Karenga in his work MAAT: The moral ideal in ancient Egypt, puts this concept into perspective when he says on pages 268-269:

These fundamental Fanonian questions paraphrased here are: "Who am I; am I really who I am and am I all I ought to be?" The first question is a question of identity. In a word, who am I-in-community? For I know myself in relation, not in isolation. I am a place-holder in a definite community and tradition and from this context and the relations those contain, I know myself. As Mbiti (1970, 141) notes, the most definitive statement of such a communal concept of identity is "I am because we are: and since we are, therefore I am." He concludes, "this is a cardinal point in the understanding of the African view of man." This, of course clearly differs from the Cartesian proposition that "I think there for I am." For in a communitarian concept of self, one is not identified with one's capacity to think but by one's relatedness to others, i.e., by being of, with and especially of others." (emphasis mine)

The African concept of community gives an individual his identity and his identity is predicated on what he does, how he develops in the context of a given community. The /nwt/ symbol indicates identity with a particular community or people. To me, the  /nwt/ symbol is just the Dikenga symbol as the Dikenga symbol means community: it is the center of who you are and gives an individual his identity. Nw.t gives people nationhood as well and indicates nation in Egyptian texts.

Although I can't connect linguistically the term nw.t with dikenga, the graphic and meaning between the two are too similar to ignore a connection.

For further inquiries, I now ask you to pay attention to the akhet symbol and compare it with your new found knowledge of the Bantu concept of living suns traversing around the dikenga in relation to a master/priest/nganga. We can deal with that in a different post.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

| 23465|2007-10-21 21:29:47|arumese|'Gojam' - Ethiopian Music by Afework Nigussie|
This Ethiopian singer looks like Ramases images:

<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=F5u5XXDaAM8&mode=related&search=>

| 23466|2007-10-22 00:44:00|Fatima Horta|What do you think of this theory?|

I am not sure if you have discussed it before but what do you know about the theory that suggest that the people from the Dogon tribe (in Mali) are the descent of ancient Egyptians? Here some pictures of the tribe (hope you can see them):

<http://www.crystalinks.com/dogon.html>

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23467|2007-10-22 05:36:35|Peter Gray|Re: What do you think of this theory?|

What a fascinating link!!I would reiterate that the the rotational duality of SuriusA/Sirius B was confirmed by the Hubble Telerscope I believe only quite recently. Many of the numerous images at the end of the article are conjectural, but cerainly food for thought.

Thank you, Fatima.

Peter

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

From: mystiquerai@yahoo.com

Date: Mon, 22 Oct 2007 00:43:55 -0700

Subject: [Ta_Seti] What do you think of this theory?

I am not sure if you have discussed it before but what do you know about the theory that suggestthat the peoplefrom theDogon tribe (in Mali)are the descent of ancient egyptians?

Here some pictures of the tribe (hope you can see them):

<http://www.crystali nks.com/dogon. html>

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
<http://mail. yahoo.com>

---

Boo! Scare away worms, viruses and so much more! Try Windows Live OneCare! Try now!
| 23468|2007-10-22 05:53:28|Peter Gray|Re: Mustafa Hefny|
I would be very interested in Obama's views on the issue.

Peter

---

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com
From: mahari@myway.com
Date: Sun, 21 Oct 2007 19:51:14 +0000
Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Mustafa Hefny

>>The directive defines black as a person having origins in any of the black racial groups of Africa. A white person is defined as having origins in any of the original peoples of Europe, North Africa or the Middle East. <<

I wonder if whites from areas such as Kenya, South Africa and other Sub-Saharan areas have the same problem.

I could be wrong but I doubt it.

HTP,
Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Alex van Deelen" wrote:

>
> This is an article I found from CNN, from 10 years back.
>
> <http://www.cnn.com/US/9707/16/racial.suit/index.html>
>
> Black or white? Egyptian immigrant fights for black classification
> Hefny
>
> July 16, 1997
> Web posted at: 4:22 a.m. EDT (0822 GMT)
> From Correspondent Joan MacFarlane
>
> DETROIT (CNN) -- An Egyptian immigrant is suing the U.S. government > because they've told him he's white when his entire life he's been
black.
>
> Mostafa Hefny was born in Egypt and has always been proud of his > Egyptian culture and his African ancestry. But when Hefny

immigrated > to America, the U.S. government told him he was no longer a black man.

>

> -----

>

> It seems to me that the likes of Zahi Hawass are never going to > change, until they start acknowledging their Black heritage.

>

> Alex

>

---

Peek-a-boo FREE Tricks & Treats for You! Get 'em!

| 23469|2007-10-22 07:03:05|A.E.|Tut was shaved bald?|

Attachments :

I reviewed the video on the cat scan of Tut. I could find no images of him with his head shaved.

Do you mean this image

Face of King Tut recreated

Do you mean the computer

graphic of a bald Tut?

None of the images of Tut in the CT scan is close enough to get a close up of his scalp.

After the chemical treatment in mummification and hanging out 3000 years they are finding some hair falling out in the coffins, so the hair is becoming very thin, but a tight close up of the scalp or examination of the area where the head rested would determine if that was a factor.

Discovery channel King Tut in tact.. as close as I can see the scalp

<http://dsc.discovery.com/news/media/slideshows/kingtutslide.html>

http://dsc.discovery.com/news/media/slideshows/kingtutslide\_04.html

Please show us the close up image of Tut with a shaved head and the documentary it was on.

As far as I knew, I thought Tut was one of the mummies they kept in his original tomb with the lid on and the only two times he was ever taken out was in the 1960s and again when they did a CT scan.

Usually when you try to contact the original source you get no reply. You and I can try to find authority contacts where we can simply ask if the mummy had hair.

The image below is the only one I know of where the ancient Egyptian artist created an image of Tut. The original material is white and the paint is flaking. The ancient Egyptian artist painted (when he was living) Tut with hair.. but not a wig. The hair in this image would be much too short to be one of those Nubian wigs or a wig of any kind.

Here is a bust of what Tut looked like in life and the hair could not possibly be a wig. Do you have any images of Tut in life where he is shown bald?

In most images I can remember this was about the color they painted Tut. In a couple statues they painted him almost black. What we can learn from this bust is the base material was white.. you can see it where the paint is flaked off and the artist chose these colors to reproduce the skin of his subject.

Another thing we know about paint is after it is exposed to the elements, the paint will fade.. get lighter.

If any thing even this paint was darker when the artist applied it.

*

Encyclopedia Egypt

| 23470|2007-10-22 07:03:57|A.E.|No wig found in Tut's tomb... tut.. tut there goes the nefertiti wig|

Attachments :

http://www.andrewcollins.com/page/articles/Death\_of\_Tutankhamun.htm When his skull was examined originally by Carter and Derry in 1925 it was found to have been shaved, an uncommon practice for a dead king.

So Tut was examined at least 3 times. There was also a head wound. What they need is one of those forensic scientist teams to examine his coffin and see if there are any head hairs in the "pillow" area.

I am not aware of any wigs found in Tut's tomb, how about you?

* May have been bald when they opened the coffin (if it was not done for one of their physical examinations)

* No wigs found in his tomb

* Shown with hair (too short to be a wig) in life

In either case it blows the supposed mummy of Nefertiti (based on the finding of a wig)

*

Encyclopedia Egypt

| 23471|2007-10-22 07:05:10|A.E.|bald pharaohs|

Attachments :

The one well-known exception is Tutankhamun whose tomb was found undisturbed.

King Tut's mummy was in fact fully-shaved.

///

I am not sure that king tut was a king at all. It appears he may have been buried with such wealth because of the great grief of his father (who was a pharaoh). In the manifest of the pharaohs who ruled Egypt, king tut's name is not written.

King Tut was first examined by x-ray in 1968 and physically examined

Out of 100 royal mummies, that you can identify. What % is shaved?

In the supposed 3 royal mummies in which one was supposed to be nefertiti. are the other two shaved?

If wigs were such a common thing and the museum are not to keep mummy wigs, where are the thousands of collected wigs?

If it was the common practice to keep wigs with mummies, then why was this wig taken from this tomb.

The tomb in question is KV35.. how many mummies were found when it was opened first

How many mummies remain in that same tomb today

If robbers, museum staffs or Egyptian priest removed mummies, why were these 3 left?

The Cairo museum is full of mummies taken from KVx.

On one program they said only Tut was returned to his coffin. The people in this compartment do not even have coffins.

Is it possible some one is attempting to create a great hoax and make a great discovery?

I have the transcript from "nefertiti resurrected. I will be glad to make it available to you.

Over and over they push their imagined events as actual facts. I will be glad to make it available to you.

100 years ago the mummy had a bent arm and some one replaced it with a straight arm.. do we have ghost flying around the tombs swapping body parts or is it some live humans placing body parts in these places?

Here they say that queens had their arms placed a particular way when they were buried. There must be thousands of queens because the position of the arms I have seen are the same.

Simply Look at ALL THE ROYAL MUMMIES when they were first popped out of the box and note their positions.

I have a whole list of things they concocted in the two hour program and I captured the transcript on my ati video card.

The program is on again later tonight if you have cable TV, watch it .. record it and get the written transcript.

*

Encyclopedia Egypt

| 23472|2007-10-22 07:31:22|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: bald pharaohs|

--- In Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "A.E." wrote:

>

>

> Out of 100 royal mummies, that you can identify. What % is shaved?

> In the supposed 3 royal mummies in which one was supposed to be nefertiti. are the other two shaved?

> If wigs were such a common thing and the museum are hot to keep mummy wigs, where are the thousands of collected wigs?

>

> If it was the common practice to keep wigs with mummies, then why was this wig taken from this tomb.

>

I can't say what the exact percentages were but many wigs have been found in royal tombs. Most of these tombs were disturbed/looted many times over the centuries with contents moved around including the mummies.

It is true that the mummies identified as Pharaohs generally don't have their heads shaved, as opposed to their beards.

However, queens, princesses and princes were often shaved bald. Again, I can't give the percentages offhand.

Mummy identified as Hatshepsut, front part of the head is shaved, some long hair remains at back

18th Dynasty royal princess, unidentified

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23473|2007-10-22 07:48:32|Paul Kekai Manansala|Hairstyle of Princes|

The princes were often shown without crowns, wigs or headdresses, they shaved most of the head except one princely, braided side-lock:

Khaemwaset, one of the sons of Ramses III, Valley of the Queens, SACHM Photo Archives

Regards,
Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23474|2007-10-22 07:49:30|Alex van Deelen|Re: Mustafa Hefny|
Mahari,

- > > The directive defines black as a person having origins
- > > in any of the black racial groups of Africa. A white person
- > > is defined as having origins in any of the original peoples
- > > of Europe, North Africa or the Middle East.
- >
- > I wonder if whites from areas such as Kenya,
- > South Africa and other Sub-Saharan areas have
- > the same problem. I could be wrong but I doubt it.
- > HTP,
- > Mahari

|                  |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |  |
|------------------|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|--|
| MAIN1324 | 1324-001: 1324-001, 1324-002, 1324-003, 1324-004, 1324-005, 1324-006, 1324-007, 1324-008, 1324-009, 1324-010, 1324-011, 1324-012, 1324-013, 1324-014, 1324-015, 1324-016, 1324-017, 1324-018, 1324-019, 1324-020, 1324-021, 1324-022, 1324-023, 1324-024, 1324-025, 1324-026, 1324-027, 1324-028, 1324-029, 1324-030, 1324-031, 1324-032, 1324-033, 1324-034, 1324-035, 1324-036, 1324-037, 1324-038, 1324-039, 1324-040, 1324-041, 1324-042, 1324-043, 1324-044, 1324-045, 1324-046, 1324-047, 1324-048, 1324-049, 1324-050, 1324-051, 1324-052, 1324-053, 1324-054, 1324-055, 1324-056, 1324-057, 1324-058, 1324-059, 1324-060, 1324-061, 1324-062, 1324-063, 1324-064, 1324-065, 1324-066, 1324-067, 1324-068, 1324-069, 1324-070, 1324-071, 1324-072, 1324-073, 1324-074, 1324-075, 1324-076, 1324-077, 1324-078, 1324-079, 1324-080, 1324-081, 1324-082, 1324-083, 1324-084, 1324-085, 1324-086, 1324-087, 1324-088, 1324-089, 1324-090, 1324-091, 1324-092, 1324-093, 1324-094, 1324-095, 1324-096, 1324-097, 1324-098, 1324-099, 1324-100, 1324-101, 1324-102, 1324-103, 1324-104, 1324-105, 1324-106, 1324-107, 1324-108, 1324-109, 1324-110, 1324-111, 1324-112, 1324-113, 1324-114, 1324-115, 1324-116, 1324-117, 1324-118, 1324-119, 1324-120, 1324-121, 1324-122, 1324-123, 1324-124, 1324-125, 1324-126, 1324-127, 1324-128, 1324-129, 1324-130, 1324-131, 1324-132, 1324-133, 1324-134, 1324-135, 1324-136, 1324-137, 1324-138, 1324-139, 1324-140, 1324-141, 1324-142, 1324-143, 1324-144, 1324-145, 1324-146, 1324-147, 1324-148, 1324-149, 1324-150, 1324-151, 1324-152, 1324-153, 1324-154, 1324-155, 1324-156, 1324-157, 1324-158, 1324-159, 1324-160, 1324-161, 1324-162, 1324-163, 1324-164, 1324-165, 1324-166, 1324-167, 1324-168, 1324-169, 1324-170, 1324-171, 1324-172, 1324-173, 1324-174, 1324-175, 1324-176, 1324-177, 1324-178, 1324-179, 1324-180, 1324-181, 1324-182, 1324-183, 1324-184, 1324-185, 1324-186, 1324-187, 1324-188, 1324-189, 1324-190, 1324-191, 1324-192, 1324-193, 1324-194, 1324-195, 1324-196, 1324-197, 1324-198, 1324-199, 1324-200, 1324-201, 1324-202, 1324-203, 1324-204, 1324-205, 1324-206, 1324-207, 1324-208, 1324-209, 1324-210, 1324-211, 1324-212, 1324-213, 1324-214, 1324-215, 1324-216, 1324-217, 1324-218, 1324-219, 1324-220, 1324-221, 1324-222, 1324-223, 1324-224, 1324-225, 1324-226, 1324-227, 1324-228, 1324-229, 1324-230, 1324-231, 1324-232, 1324-233, 1324-234, 1324-235, 1324-236, 1324-237, 1324-238, 1324-239, 1324-240, 1324-241, 1324-242, 1324-243, 1324-244, 1324-245, 1324-246, 1324-247, 1324-248, 1324-249, 1324-250, 1324-251, 1324-252, 1324-253, 1324-254, 1324-255, 1324-256, 1324-257, 1324-258, 1324-259, 1324-260, 1324-261, 1324-262, 1324-263, 1324-264, 1324-265, 1324-266, 1324-267, 1324-268, 1324-269, 1324-270, 1324-271, 1324-272, 1324-273, 1324-274, 1324-275, 1324-276, 1324-277, 1324-278, 1324-279, 1324-280, 1324-281, 1324-282, 1324-283, 1324-284, 1324-285, 1324-286, 1324-287, 1324-288, 1324-289, 1324-290, 1324-291, 1324-292, 1324-293, 1324-294, 1324-295, 1324-296, 1324-297, 1324-298, 1324-299, 1324-300, 1324-301, 1324-302, 1324-303, 1324-304, 1324-305, 1324-306, 1324-307, 1324-308, 1324-309, 1324-310, 1324-311, 1324-312, 1324-313, 1324-314, 1324-315, 1324-316, 1324-317, 1324-318, 1324-319, 1324-320, 1324-321, 1324-322, 1324-323, 1324-324, 1324-325, 1324-326, 1324-327, 1324-328, 1324-329, 1324-330, 1324-331, 1324-332, 1324-333, 1324-334, 1324-335, 1324-336, 1324-337, 1324-338, 1324-339, 1324-340, 1324-341, 1324-342, 1324-343, 1324-344, 1324-345, 1324-346, 1324-347, 1324-348, 1324-349, 1324-350, 1324-351, 1324-352, 1324-353, 1324-354, 1324-355, 1324-356, 1324-357, 1324-358, 1324-359, 1324-360, 1324-361, 1324-362, 1324-363, 1324-364, 1324-365, 1324-366, 1324-367, 1324-368, 1324-369, 1324-370, 1324-371, 1324-372, 1324-373, 1324-374, 1324-375, 1324-376, 1324-377, 1324-378, 1324-379, 1324-380, 1324-381, 1324-382, 1324-383, 1324-384, 1324-385, 1324-386, 1324-387, 1324-388, 1324-389, 1324-390, 1324-391, 1324-392, 1324-393, 1324-394, 1324-395, 1324-396, 1324-397, 1324-398, 1324-399, 1324-400, 1324-401, 1324-402, 1324-403, 1324-404, 1324-405, 1324-406, 1324-407, 1324-408, 1324-409, 1324-410, 1324-411, 1324-412, 1324-413, 1324-414, 1324-415, 1324-416, 1324-417, 1324-418, 1324-419, 1324-420, 1324-421, 1324-422, 1324-423, 1324-424, 1324-425, 1324-426, 1324-427, 1324-428, 1324-429, 1324-430, 1324-431, 1324-432, 1324-433, 1324-434, 1324-435, 1324-436, 1324-437, 1324-438, 1324-439, 1324-440, 1324-441, 1324-442, 1324-443, 1324-444, 1324-445, 1324-446, 1324-447, 1324-448, 1324-449, 1324-450, 1324-451, 1324-452, 1324-453, 1324-454, 1324-455, 1324-456, 1324-457, 1324-458, 1324-459, 1324-460, 1324-461, 1324-462, 1324-463, 1324-464, 1324-465, 1324-466, 1324-467, 1324-468, 1324-469, 1324-470, 1324-471, 1324-472, 1324-473, 1324-474, 1324-475, 1324-476, 1324-477, 1324-478, 1324-479, 1324-480, 1324-481, 1324-482, 1324-483, 1324-484, 1324-485, 1324-486, 1324-487, 1324-488, 1324-489, 1324-490, 1324-491, 1324-492, 1324-493, 1324-494, 1324-495, 1324-496, 1324-497, 1324-498, 1324-499, 1324-500, 1324-501, 1324-502, 1324-503, 1324-504, 1324-505, 1324-506, 1324-507, 1324-508, 1324-509, 1324-510, 1324-511, 1324-512, 1324-513, 1324-514, 1324-515, 1324-516, 1324-517, 1324-518, 1324-519, 1324-520, 1324-521, 1324-522, 1324-523, 1324-524, 1324-525, 1324-526, 1324-527, 1324-528, 1324-529, 1324-530, 1324-531, 1324-532, 1324-533, 1324-534, 1324-535, 1324-536, 1324-537, 1324-538, 1324-539, 1324-540, 1324-541, 1324-542, 1324-543, 1324-544, 1324-545, 1324-546, 1324-547, 1324-548, 1324-549, 1324-550, 1324-551, 1324-552, 1324-553, 1324-554, 1324-555, 1324-556, 1324-557, 1324-558, 1324-559, 1324-560, 1324-561, 1324-562, 1324-563, 1324-564, 1324-565, 1324-566, 1324-567, 1324-568, 1324-569, 1324-570, 1324-571, 1324-572, 1324-573, 1324-574, 1324-575, 1324-576, 1324-577, 1324-578, 1324-579, 1324-580, 1324-581, 1324-582, 1324-583, 1324-584, 1324-585, 1324-586, 1324-587, 1324-588, 1324-589, 1324-590, 1324-591, 1324-592, 1324-593, 1324-594, 1324-595, 1324-596, 1324-597, 1324-598, 1324-599, 1324-600, 1324-601, 1324-602, 1324-603, 1324-604, 1324-605, 1324-606, 1324-607, 1324-608, 1324-609, 1324-610, 1324-611, 1324-612, 1324-613, 1324-614, 1324-615, 1324-616, 1324-617, 1324-618, 1324-619, 1324-620, 1324-621, 1324-622, 1324-623, 1324-624, 1324-625, 1324-626, 1324-627, 1324-628, 1324-629, 1324-630, 1324-631, 1324-632, 1324-633, 1324-634, 1324-635, 1324-636, 1324-637, 1324-638, 1324-639, 1324-640, 1324-641, 1324-642, 1324-643, 1324-644, 1324-645, 1324-646, 1324-647, 1324-648, 1324-649, 1324-650, 1324-651, 1324-652, 1324-653, 1324-654, 1324-655, 1324-656, 1324-657, 1324-658, 1324-659, 1324-660, 1324-661, 1324-662, 1324-663, 1324-664, 1324-665, 1324-666, 1324-667, 1324-668, 1324-669, 1324-670, 1324-671, 1324-672, 1324-673, 1324-674, 1324-675, 1324-676, 1324-677, 1324-678, 1324-679, 1324-680, 1324-681, 1324-682, 1324-683, 1324-684, 1324-685, 1324-686, 1324-687, 1324-688, 1324-689, 1324-690, 1324-691, 1324-692, 1324-693, 1324-694, 1324-695, 1324-696, 1324-697, 1324-698, 1324-699, 1324-700, 1324-701, 1324-702, 1324-703, 1324-704, 1324-705, 1324-706, 1324-707, 1324-708, 1324-709, 1324-710, 1324-711, 1324-712, 1324-713, 1324-714, 1324-715, 1324-716, 1324-717, 1324-718, 1324-719, 1324-720, 1324-721, 1324-722, 1324-723, 1324-724, 1324-725, 1324-726, 1324-727, 1324-728, 1324-729, 1324-730, 1324-731, 1324-732, 1324-733, 1324-734, 1324-735, 1324-736, 1324-737, 1324-738, 1324-739, 1324-740, 1324-741, 1324-742, 1324-743, 1324-744, 1324-745, 1324-746, 1324-747, 1324-748, 1324-749, 1324-750, 1324-751, 1324-752, 1324-753, 1324-754, 1324-755, 1324-756, 1324-757, 1324-758, 1324-759, 1324-760, 1324-761, 1324-762, 1324-763, 1324-764, 1324-765, 1324-766, 1324-767, 1324-768, 1324-769, 1324-770, 1324-771, 1324-772, 1324-773, 1324-774, 1324-775, 1324-776, 1324-777, 1324-778, 1324-779, 1324-780, 1324-781, 1324-782, 1324-783, 1324-784, 1324-785, 1324-786, 1324-787, 1324-788, 1324-789, 1324-790, 1324-791, 1324-792, 1324-793, 1324-794, 1324-795, 1324-796, 1324-797, 1324-798, 1324-799, 1324-800, 1324-801, 1324-802, 1324-803, 1324-804, 1324-805, 1324-806, 1324-807, 1324-808, 1324-809, 1324-810, 1324-811, 1324-812, 1324-813, 1324-814, 1324-815, 1324-816, 1324-817, 1324-818, 1324-819, 1324-820, 1324-821, 1324-822, 1324-823, 1324-824, 1324-825, 1324-826, 1324-827, 1324-828, 1324-829, 1324-830, 1324-831, 1324-832, 1324-833, 1324-834, 1324-835, 1324-836, 1324-837, 1324-838, 1324-839, 1324-840, 1324-841, 1324-842, 1324-843, 1324-844, 1324-845, 1324-846, 1324-847, 1324-848, 1324-849, 1324-850, 1324-851, 1324-852, 1324-853, 1324-854, 1324-855, 1324-856, 1324-857, 1324-858, 1324-859, 1324-860, 1324-861, 1324-862, 1324-863, 1324-864, 1324-865, 1324-866, 1324-867, 1324-868, 1324-869, 1324-870, 1324-871, 1324-872, 1324-873, 1324-874, 1324-875, 1324-876, 1324-877, 1324-878, 1324-879, 1324-880, 1324-881, 1324-882, 1324-883, 1324-884, 1324-885, 1324-886, 1324-887, 1324-888, 1324-889, 1324-890, 1324-891, 1324-892, 1324-893, 1324-894, 1324-895, 1324-896, 1324-897, 1324-898, 1324-899, 1324-900, 1324-901, 1324-902, 1324-903, 1324-904, 1324-905, 1324-906, 1324-907, 1324-908, 1324-909, 1324-910, 1324-911, 1324-912, 1324-913, 1324-914, 1324-915, 1324-916, 1324-917, 1324-918, 1324-919, 1324-920, 1324-921, 1324-922, 1324-923, 1324-924, 1324-925, 1324-926, 1324-927, 1324-928, 1324-929, 1324-930, 1324-931, 1324-932, 1324-933, 1324-934, 1324-935, 1324-936, 1324-937, 1324-938, 1324-939, 1324-940, 1324-941, 1324-942, 1324-943, 1324-944, 1324-945, 1324-946, 1324-947, 1324-948, 1324-949, 1324-950, 1324-951, 1324-952, 1324-953, 1324-954, 1324-955, 1324-956, 1324-957, 1324-958, 1324-959, 1324-960, 1324-961, 1324-962, 1324-963, 1324-964, 1324-965, 1324-966, 1324-967, 1324-968, 1324-969, 1324-970, 1324-971, 1324-972, 1324-973, 1324-974, 1324-975, 1324-976, 1324-977, 1324-978, 1324-979, 1324-980, 1324-981, 1324-982, 1324-983, 1324-984, 1324-985, 1324-986, 1324-987, 1324-988, 1324-989, 1324-990, 1324-991, 1324-992, 1324-993, 1324-994, 1324-995, 1324-996, 1324-997, 1324-998, 1324-999, 1324-1000, 1324-1001, 1324-1002, 1324-1003, 1324-1004, 1324-1005, 1324-1006, 1324-1007, 1324-1008, 1324-1009, 1324-1010, 1324-1011, 1324-1012, 1324-1013, 1324-1014, 1324-1015, 1324-1016, 1324-1017, 1324-1018, 1324-1019, 1324-1020, 1324-1021, 1324-1022, 1324-1023, 1324-1024, 1324-1025, 1324-1026, 1324-1027, 1324-1028, 1324-1029, 1324-1030, 1324-1031, 1324-1032, 1324-1033, 1324-1034, 1324-1035, 1324-1036, 1324-1037, 1324-1038, 1324-1039, 1324-1040, 1324-1041, 1324-1042, 1324-1043, 1324-1044, 1324-1045, 1324-1046, 1324-1047, 1324-1048, 1324-1049, 1324-1050, 1324-1051, 1324-1052, 1324-1053, 1324-1054, 1324-1055, 1324-1056, 1324-1057, 1324-1058, 1324-1059, 1324-1060, 1324-1061, 1324-1062, 1324-1063, 1324-1064, 1324-1065, 1324-1066, 1324-1067, 1324-1068, 1324-1069, 1324-1070, 1324-1071, 1324-1072, 1324-1073, 1324-1074, 1324-1075, 1324-1076, 1324-1077, 1324-1078, 1324-1079, 1324-1080, 1324-1081, 1324-1082, 1324-1083, 1324-1084, 1324-1085, 1324-1086, 1324-1087, 1324-1088, 1324-1089, 1324-1090, 1324-1091, 1324-1092, 1324-1093, 1324-1094, 1324-1095, 1324-1096, 1324-1097, 1324-1098, 1324-1099, 1324-1100, 1324-1101, 1324-1102, 1324-1103, 1324-1104, 1324-1105, 1324-1106, 1324-1107, 1324-1108, 1324-1109, 1324-1110, 1324-1111, 1324-1112, 1324-1113, 1324-1114, 1324-1115, 1324-1116, 1324-1117, 1324-1118, 1324-1119, 1324-1120, 1324-1121, 1324-1122, 1324-1123, 1324-1124, 1324-1125, 1324-1126, 1324-1127, 1324-1128, 1324-1129, 1324-1130, 1324-1131, 1324-1132, 1324-1133, 1324-1134, 1324-1135, 1324-1136, 1324-1137, 1324-1138, 1324-1139, 1324-1140, 1324-1141, 1324-1142, 1324-1143, 1324-1144, 1324-1145, 1324-1146, 1324-1147, 1324-1148, 1324-1149, 1324-1150, 1324-1151, 1324-1152, 1324-1153, 1324-1154, 1324-1155, 1324-1156, 1324-1157, 1324-1158, 1324-1159, 1324-1160, 1324-1161, 1324-1162, 1324-1163, 1324-1164, 1324-1165, 1324-1166, 1324-1167, 1324-1168, 1324-1169, 1324-1170, 1324-1171, 1324-1172, 1324-1173, 1324-1174, 1324-1175, 1324-1176, 1324-1177, 1324-1178, 1324-1179, 1324-1180, 1324-1181, 1324-1182, 1324-1183, 1324-1184, 1324-1185, 1324-1186, 1324-1187, 1324-1188, 1324-1189, 1324-1190, 1324-1191, 1324-1192, 1324-1193, 1324-1194, 1324-1195, 1324-1196, 1324-1197, 1324-1198, 1324-1199, 1324-1200, 1324-1201, 1324-1202, 1324-1203, 1324-1204, 1324-1205, 1324-1206, 1324-1207, 1324-1208, 1324-1209, 1324-1210, 1324-1211, 1324-1212, 1324-1213 |  |
|------------------|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|--|

symbol used in the Kongo, I find the concept and the philosophy behind both of them to be very similar if not the same.

The graphical representation of the Bantu Dingo-Dingo (life process/cycle) consists of an "X" within a circle. The circle is divided into 4 demarcations and each section of the Dikenga represents a particular stage in life.

Bantu (human beings) in Kongo cosmology are considered second Suns (represented by the circles in the cosmogram). Just like the suns perceived journey around the earth, graphically speaking, human beings, as second suns, traverse around (dingo-dingo) our own Dikenga. The core (didi) of any Dikenga is the Kanda (community). This term is very important in this analysis.

In African Cosmology of the Bantu Kongo pg. 132, Dr. Fu-Kiau gives us a possible correspondence between the Dikenga cosmogram and that of the/nwt/ symbol of Ta-Merri. He states:

"Therefore, the Vee in reality, is a living pyramid in constant motion, which follows the path of life and passes the four main points of demarcation of the cosmogram [dikenga], which in turn is symbolized by the flame of life inside the community circle. The closer one is to the center of this flame, whose "Vee" is the symbol, the healthier and more powerful one is." (emphasis mine)

So this circle represents the "community" in which one lives. This isn't relegated to a small geographical area as is thought of today, but as a national geo-political boundary as well. So the Kongo symbol is graphically showing us a process (dingo-dingo) in which living suns (human beings) grow and develop in the context of and in relation to community. This philosophically is in alignment with traditional African thought on self identity, and was the case in ancient Ta-Merri.

Dr. Mualana Karenga in his work MAAT: The moral ideal in ancient Egypt, puts this concept into perspective when he says on pages 268-269:

These fundamental Fanonian questions paraphrased here are: "Who am I; am I really who I am and am I all I ought to be?" The first question is a question of identity. In a word, who am I-in-community? For I know myself in relation, not in isolation. I am a place-holder in a definite community and tradition and from this context and the relations those contain, I know myself. As Mbiti (1970, 141) notes, the most definitive statement of such a communal concept of identity is "I am because we are: and since we are, therefore I am." He concludes, "this is a cardinal point in the understanding of the African view of man." This, of course clearly differs from the Cartesian proposition that "I think therefore I am." For in a communitarian concept of self, one is not identified with one's capacity to think but by one's relatedness to others, i.e., by being of, with and especially of others." (emphasis mine)

The African concept of community gives an individual his identity and his identity is predicated on what he does, how he develops in the context of a given community. The /nwt/ symbol indicates identity with a particular community or people. To me, the  /nwt/ symbol is just the Dikenga symbol as the Dikenga symbol means community: it is the center of who you are and gives an individual his identity. Nw.t gives people nationhood as well and indicates nation in Egyptian texts.

Although I can't connect linguistically the term nw.t with dikenga, the graphic and meaning between the two are too similar to ignore a connection.

For further inquiries, I now ask you to pay attention to the akhet symbol and compare it with your new found knowledge of the Bantu concept of living suns traversing around the dikenga in relation to a master/priest/ nganga. We can deal with that in a different post.

The image is a placeholder for a document. The text is too small to read, but it appears to be a header or a title.

The image cannot be displayed. Your computer may not have enough memory to open the image, or the image may have been deleted. Restart your computer and try again. If the red x still appears, you may have to delete the image and then insert it again.

Asar Imhotep
<http://www.mochasuite.com>

| 23476|2007-10-22 09:17:40|asar_imhotep|Re: Possible origin of the nwt symbol (correct spacing)|

Interesting, I think we may be on to something. Thanks for the added info.

Asar Imhotep

<http://www.mochasuite.com>

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Ferg" wrote:

>

>

> Hi

>

> The core of any Dikenga is the community given as Kanda derived from the Proto-Bantu 'Ganda'. Observe the many meanings of this word in the table below.

>

> The Oshindonga-Bantu word for a court, palace,royal residence is given as UWA. However in the Kiswahili-Bantu language the word UWA, UA means an enclosure. The form UANI or UWANI means within the confines of the enclosure. Its plural is NYUA or NYUWA. This can be pronounced as NIUWA, many enclosures. This is the closest word which seems to resemble NIW-T in Ancient Egyptian, T being feminine.

>

> Somo

>

>

> MAIN LH (N 9/10) house; village; chief's enclosure

> 1324 maison; village; enclos de chef

> Total Distribution: Regions: 4: NW SW Ce NE Zones: 13: B C

D E F G H J K L M N R

> MAIN 1324 LH N 9/10 house; village; chief's enclosure B

C E G H J K L M N R

> DER 1321 LH N 5/6, 11/10 clan B D F H J R

> DER 8537 LH N chief's servant J

> INC 1322 LH N (9/6),9/10 village

> INC 1323 LH N 9 chief 's enclosure

>

> See also: MAIN 8538 LL N 9 camp-ground, temporary housing C H J K

>

>

| 23477|2007-10-22 11:43:10|Paul Kekai Manansala|Hair degradation in mummies|

As we're discussing mummies, it would be good to again remind that tests of mummy hair, including Egyptian mummies, clearly shows evidence of oxidation of the keratin proteins.

Such oxidation results in the hair often going limp and lightening over time. First becoming more reddish and eventually losing all color as the melanin becomes completely oxidized.

W. Lubec has done much work in this area.

Here is one abstract of a recent study:

J. Synchrotron Rad. (2003). 10, 387-392 [
doi:10.1107/S0909049503015334 ]

Microbeam synchrotron imaging of hairs from Ancient Egyptian mummies

L. Bertrand, J. Doucet, P. Dumas, A. Simionovici, G. Tsoucaris and P.
Walter

Abstract:

Developments in microfocus synchrotron techniques have led to new results regarding the long-term alteration of archaeological samples of biological origin. Here, ancient hair samples from two Egyptian mummies have been analyzed using a conjunction of structural and elemental synchrotron methods. In this favored context of conservation, structural analysis revealed a remarkable preservation of keratin supramolecular organization at any observed length scale. Bulk keratin structure has therefore not been modified significantly over 2000 years. However, infrared spectroscopy indicated a partial disorganization of keratins close to the hair surface through polypeptide [disulphide] bond breakage. Elemental mapping showed a strongly heterogeneous distribution which can be related to mummification and cosmetic treatments.

---

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23478|2007-10-23 07:04:06|Issis|Re: Mustafa Hefny|

Whites are not aboriginal to North Africa, the original populations of whom were all Black (many of them Afrasian speakers). Those who look white have mainly European maternal ancestry and African paternal ancestry. No one ever says "white European" or "yellow Asian," therefore why should anyone say "Black African," when the two are basically synonymous except for invaders, immigrants, or colonizers from Eurasia. The division between northern Africa and "Sub-Saharan" Africa is a false one except for geography, and the Sahara was not always a desert, and even as such it has never impeded interaction between peoples on other side of it. One more example of Europeans trying to appropriate what is not theirs. I guess they do not have sufficiently ancient civilizations of their own.

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Peter Gray wrote:

>

>

> I would be very interested in Obama's views on the issue.

>

> Peter

>

>

>

> To: Ta_Seti@...: mahari@...: Sun, 21 Oct 2007 19:51:14

+0000Subject: [Ta_Seti] Re: Mustafa Hefny

>

>

>

>

> >>The directive defines black as a person having origins in any of the black racial groups of Africa. A white person is defined as having origins in any of the original peoples of Europe, North Africa or the Middle East. <

South Africa and other Sub-Saharan areas have the same problem. I could be wrong but I doubt it. HTP, Mahari--- In

Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Alex van Deelen" wrote:>> This is an article I found from CNN, from 10 years back. > >

<http://www.cnn.com/US/9707/16/racial.suit/index.html>> > Black or white? Egyptian immigrant fights for black classification> Hefny> > July 16, 1997> Web posted at: 4:22 a.m. EDT (0822 GMT)> From Correspondent Joan MacFarlane> > DETROIT (CNN) -- An Egyptian immigrant is suing the U.S. government > because they've told him he's white when his entire life he's been black.> > Mostafa Hefny was born in Egypt and has always been proud of his > Egyptian culture and his African ancestry. But when Hefny immigrated > to America, the U.S. government told him he was no longer a black man. > > -----> > It seems to me that the likes of Zahi Hawass are never going to > change, until they start acknowledging their Black heritage. > > Alex>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

---

 Peek-a-boo FREE Tricks & Treats for You!

> http://www.reallivemoms.com?ocid=TXT\_TAGHM&loc=us

>

| 23479|2007-10-23 09:01:17|bonotchim@aol.com|Re: Mustafa Hefny|

I meet this bro during the time he was in Detroit, Mi. and yes if he was walking down any street in America he would be defined as an African-american. He was a light skin brother with an afro. He also taught in a African-centered school in det. Bro. B.

Power is the ability to define reality and then have others respond to that definition as if it was their own. Dr. Wade Nobles

-----Original Message-----

From: Alex van Deelen

To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

Sent: Sun, 21 Oct 2007 1:05 pm

Subject: [Ta_Seti] Mustafa Hefny

This is an article I found from CNN, from 10 years back.

<http://www.cnn.com/US/9707/16/racial.suit/index.html>

Black or white? Egyptian immigrant fights for black classification
Hefny

July 16, 1997

Web posted at: 4:22 a.m. EDT (0822 GMT)

From Correspondent Joan MacFarlane

DETROIT (CNN) -- An Egyptian immigrant is suing the U.S. government because they've told him he's white when his entire life he's been black.

Mostafa Hefny was born in Egypt and has always been proud of his Egyptian culture and his African ancestry. But when Hefny immigrated to America, the U.S. government told him he was no longer a black man.

-----

It seems to me that the likes of Zahi Hawass are never going to change, until they start acknowledging their Black heritage.

Alex

---

Email and AIM finally together. You've gotta check out free AOL Mail!

| 23480|2007-10-23 11:47:31|Richard KNIGHT|Re: A new symposium proposal - Tutankhamun was not black|

amen

Alex van Deelen wrote:

> I think Bro. Manu Ampim can lead this charge and gather the other > scholars, in the States, Europe and the Africa, to participate. We can > organize it to happen anywhere from 6 months to a year.
>

> What say ye?
>
> Asar Imhotep
> <http://www.mochasuite.com>

Asar, I am all for it. I don't know the exact mechanics of making it happen, but I would support it with anything I can do.

Alex

---

Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23481|2007-10-23 12:41:48|Paul Kekai Manansala|3,000-year-old Tut death mystery finally solved (again)|

Tutankhamun died in a hunting accident

By Steve Connor, Science Editor

Published: 22 October 2007

The mystery behind the sudden death of Tutankhamun, the boy king who ruled Egypt more than 3,000 years ago, may have been finally solved by scientists who believe that he fell from a fast-moving chariot while out hunting in the desert.

Speculation surrounding Tutankhamun's death has been rife since his tomb was broken into in 1922 by archaeologist Howard Carter. X-rays of the mummy taken in 1968 indicated a swelling at the base of the skull, suggesting "King Tut" was killed by a blow to the head.

More recent studies using a CT medical scanner, however, revealed he suffered a badly broken leg, just above his knee just before he died. That in turn probably led to lethal blood poisoning. Now further evidence has come to light suggesting that he suffered the fracture while hunting game from a chariot.

The new findings are still circumstantial but one of Egypt's leading experts on Tutankhamun will say in a television documentary to be screened this week that he believes the case is now solved on how the boy king met his sudden and unexpected end.

"He was not murdered as many people thought. He had an accident when he was hunting in the desert. Falling from a chariot made this fracture in his left leg and this really is in my opinion how he died," said Zahi Hawass, general secretary of Egypt's Supreme Council of Antiquities.

Until now, many historians had assumed that he was treated as a rather fragile child who was cosseted and protected from physical danger. However, Nadia Lokma of the Cairo Museum said that a recent analysis of the chariots found in the tombs of the pharaohs indicated that they were not merely ceremonial but show signs of wear and tear. Hundreds of arrows recovered from the tomb also show evidence of having been fired and recovered. "These chariots are hunting chariots, not war chariots. You can see from the wear on them that they were actually used in life," Dr Lokma said.

A cache of clothing found in Tutankhamun's tomb, which was stored in the vaults of the Cairo Museum, suggest that he was accustomed to riding these chariots himself. They include a specially-adapted corset which would have protected the wearer's abdominal organs from any damage from an accident or the heavy jostling of a chariot ride.

A final piece of evidence comes from a garland of flowers placed around the neck of Tutankhamun's mummy. Botanists found it included cornflowers and mayweed that were fresh at the time the decoration was made.

"The cornflower and mayweed on the garland around the mummy were in flower in March and April, which tells us the time of year he was buried," said Nigel Hepper of the Royal Horticultural Society at Kew Gardens.

Because the flowers could have been collected only between the middle of March and the end of April, and as the complex process of mummification lasted 70 days, this meant Tutankhamun probably died in December or January. That timing coincided with the middle of the winter hunting season.

The results of the latest research into Tutankhamun, which are to feature in a Channel Five documentary tomorrow evening, come just a few weeks before Britain hosts the first exhibition of his tomb's artefacts in 35 years at The O2 centre, formerly the Millennium Dome, in south-east London.

When the first Tutankhamun exhibition in London was held at the British Museum in 1972, some 1.5 million people made the pilgrimage to see his fabulous solid-gold facemask. This time, however, the mask will remain in Egypt because of fears it might not withstand the trip.

The present-day Lord Carnarvon, whose ancestor paid for Howard Carter's 1922 expedition, said the latest findings indicated that Tutankhamun was an active young man who took risks with his life.

"I thought he was an over-cosseted child, but I think he was really out there in the field and taking part in things towards the end of his short life," Lord Carnarvon said. "His chariots could have reached considerable speeds, up to 25mph. If a chariot turns over at that speed, you could easily break your leg very seriously."

| 23482|2007-10-23 16:50:14|elliottandelliottmtg|Re: 3,000-year-old Tut death mystery finally solved (again)|

Why should scholars believe Hawass? "In 2005, researchers announced that new CT scans of Tutankhamen's body revealed no evidence that the king had been struck on the head or otherwise violently murdered. It is possible that he died from an infection in a broken leg. It is also possible that he was poisoned or killed by some other method undetectable today. "It is virtually impossible to prove how he died," said Egyptian antiquities official Zahi Hawass. "But now Zahi Hawass says "He was not murdered as many people thought. He had an accident when he was hunting in the desert. Falling from a chariot made this fracture in his left leg and this really is in my opinion how he died,". If the evidence is still circumstantial, why the change in attitude? Could it be directly related to the assertions of Afrocentric scholars concerning Tutankamen's Africaness?

I have a few questions for anyone with knowledge on the subject. What evidence exists that Tutankhamen ever lived in Armana? Do we know definitely who his mother or father were? Have any of the other Kings of Armana been buried in the royal tomb complex? Is it an absolutely proven fact that he died at eighteen? Could his leg have been broken after his removal from his sarcophagus? Is he the only king buried in the royal tombs without a verifiable historical account?

I.M.

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Paul Kekai Manansala" wrote:

>

> Tutankhamun died in a hunting accident

> By Steve Connor, Science Editor Published:

> October 2007

> The mystery behind the sudden death of Tutankhamun, the boy king

who > ruled Egypt more than 3,000 years ago, may have been finally solved by > scientists who believe that he fell from a fast-moving chariot while out > hunting in the desert.

>

> Speculation surrounding Tutankhamun's death has been rife since his tomb > was broken into in 1922 by archaeologist Howard Carter. X-rays of

the > mummy taken in 1968 indicated a swelling at the base of the skull, > suggesting "King Tut" was killed by a blow to the head.

>

> More recent studies using a CT medical scanner, however, revealed

he > suffered a badly broken leg, just above his knee just before he died.

> That in turn probably led to lethal blood poisoning. Now further > evidence has come to light suggesting that he suffered the fracture > while hunting game from a chariot.

>

> The new findings are still circumstantial but one of Egypt's leading > experts on Tutankhamun will say in a television documentary to be > screened this week that he believes the case is now solved on how

the > boy king met his sudden and unexpected end.

>

> "He was not murdered as many people thought. He had an accident

when he > was hunting in the desert. Falling from a chariot made this fracture in > his left leg and this really is in my opinion how he died," said

Zahi

> Hawass, general secretary of Egypt's Supreme Council of Antiquities.

>

> Until now, many historians had assumed that he was treated as a rather > fragile child who was cosseted and protected from physical danger.

> However, Nadia Lokma of the Cairo Museum said that a recent analysis of > the chariots found in the tombs of the pharaohs indicated that they were > not merely ceremonial but show signs of wear and tear. Hundreds of > arrows recovered from the tomb also show evidence of having been fired

> and recovered. "These chariots are hunting chariots, not war chariots.

> You can see from the wear on them that they were actually used in life,"

> Dr Lokma said.

>

> A cache of clothing found in Tutankhamun's tomb, which was stored

in the > vaults of the Cairo Museum, suggest that he was accustomed to riding

> these chariots himself. They include a specially-adapted corset

which > would have protected the wearer's abdominal organs from any damage

from > an accident or the heavy jostling of a chariot ride.

>

> A final piece of evidence comes from a garland of flowers placed

around

> the neck of Tutankhamun's mummy. Botanists found it included cornflowers

> and mayweed that were fresh at the time the decoration was made.

>

> "The cornflower and mayweed on the garland around the mummy were in > flower in March and April, which tells us the time of year he was > buried," said Nigel Hepper of the Royal Horticultural Society at Kew

> Gardens.

>

> Because the flowers could have been collected only between the middle of > March and the end of April, and as the complex process of mummification > lasted 70 days, this meant Tutankhamun probably died in December or > January. That timing coincided with the middle of the winter hunting > season.

>

> The results of the latest research into Tutankhamun, which are to > feature in a Channel Five documentary tomorrow evening, come just a few > weeks before Britain hosts the first exhibition of his tomb's artefacts

> in 35 years at The O2 centre, formerly the Millennium Dome, in > south-east London.

>

> When the first Tutankhamun exhibition in London was held at the British

> Museum in 1972, some 1.5 million people made the pilgrimage to see

his > fabulous solid-gold facemask. This time, however, the mask will remain

> in Egypt because of fears it might not withstand the trip.

>

> The present-day Lord Carnarvon, whose ancestor paid for Howard

Carter's

> 1922 expedition, said the latest findings indicated that

Tutankhamun was > an active young man who took risks with his life.

>

> "I thought he was an over-cosseted child, but I think he was really out > there in the field and taking part in things towards the end of his > short life," Lord Carnarvon said. "His chariots could have reached > considerable speeds, up to 25mph. If a chariot turns over at that speed,

> you could easily break your leg very seriously."

>

| 23483|2007-10-23 17:45:43|Manu Ampim|Manu Ampim Speaks in Philadelphia (Oct. 27th)|

http://manuampim.com/philly\_102707.doc

Prof. Manu Ampim will give a powerpoint presentation on:

Restoring The Vanishing Evidence in African-Centered Education:

Classical African Civilizations & the Case of the Merowe Dam in Sudan

Sponsored by: Laying The Foundation & Khepera Charter School

Date: Saturday, October 27, 2007

Place: Khepera Charter School

144 West Carpenter Lane

Philadelphia, PA

<http://khepera.schoolfusion.us/>

Time: 7:00 - 9:00 pm

Free admission, donations are accepted

For more information, contact:

Mukasa Afrika

215.520.7896 or

spirits360@yahoo.com

Manu Ampim has conducted extensive field research in Egypt and Nubia, and he has recently returned from a August 2007 field research tour to Sudan, where he visited the Merowe Dam area. Unfortunately, when the dam is completed in 2008 it will create a 108-mile lake and permanently flood all of the ancient Kushite and Nubian artifacts in the region, which is one of the greatest archaeological regions in the world.

www.manuampim.com

| 23484|2007-10-24 02:33:59|asar_imhotep|Re: Possible origin of the nwt symbol (correct spacing)|

Another thing I wanted the group to discuss is the following possible connection between Bantu concepts and Ta-Merrian philosophy.

I found in the Bantu Lexical Reconstruction dictionary a possible origin for the Ta-Merrian concept of the DUA.T (the underworld).

The pro-bantu word that correlates with the term is:

dUa meaning isLAND or "ile"

All of the land in the Duat is referred to as "islands." An example can be found in the Book of the Cow of Heaven when it states:

"Behold, I am here in the sky in my abode. Since I am going to give light and brilliance in the Duat and on the Island of the Twin Bas,<sup>(17)</sup> be a scribe there and calm down those who are there, those whom we created and those who (nevertheless) rebelled. It is You who shall repulse the followers of this (god) with unsatisfied heart.<sup>(18)</sup> You are to be in my place, my vicar, so it will be said of You : 'Thoth, the vicar of Re.' And I shall cause You to send out those who are greater than You."

There is also an island Seker in the Amduat in which Ra opens the door during the 8th hour going into the 9th. Also reference the Book of the Hidden Chamber (the 6th hour).

Once again, I don't think all of this is coincidence. But what do you think?

Asar Imhotep
<http://www.mochasuite.com>

--- In Ta_Seti@yahooogroups.com, "Ferg" wrote:

- >
- >
- > Hi
- >
- > The core of any Dikenga is the community given as Kanda derived from the Proto-Bantu 'Ganda'. Observe the many meanings of this word in the table below.
- >
- > The Oshindonga-Bantu word for a court, palace, royal residence is given as UWA. However in the Kiswahili-Bantu language the word UWA, UA means an enclosure. The form UANI or UWANI means within the confines of the enclosure. Its plural is NYUA or NYUWA. This can be pronounced as NIUWA, many enclosures. This is the closest word which seems to resemble NIW-T in Ancient Egyptian, T being feminine.
- >
- > Somo
- >
- >
- > MAIN LH (N 9/10) house; village; chief's enclosure
- > 1324 maison; village; enclos de chef
- > Total Distribution: Regions: 4: NW SW Ce NE Zones: 13: B C D E F G H J K L M N R
- > MAIN 1324 LH N 9/10 house; village; chief's enclosure B C E G H J K L M N R
- > DER 1321 LH N 5/6, 11/10 clan B D F H J R
- > DER 8537 LH N chief's servant J
- > INC 1322 LH N (9/6), 9/10 village

> INC 1323 LH N 9 chief 's enclosure

>

> See also: MAIN 8538 LL N 9 camp-ground, temporary housing C H J K

>

>

>

>

>

> ----- Original Message -----

> From: asar_imhotep

> To: Ta_Seti@yahoogroups.com

> Sent: Monday, October 22, 2007 5:27 AM

> Subject: [Ta_Seti] Possible origin of the nwt symbol (correct spacing)

>

>

>

> I don't know what happened to the first post, but a lot of the words were combined together. I hope I caught them all.

>

*****

*

>

>

> Possible origin of the nwt symbol

>

>

> Htp Ta-Seti

>

> I know this may be off the mark, but I was just contemplating a possible origin for the /nwt/ determinative used to designate country, town, community or village. After looking at the /nwt/ symbol and that of the Dikenga symbol used in the Kongo, I find the concept and the philosophy behind both of them to be very similar if not the same.

>

> The graphical representation of the Bantu Dingo-Dingo (life process/cycle) consists of an "X" within a circle. The circle is divided into 4 demarcations and each section of the Dikenga represents a particular stage in life.

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

> Bantu (human beings) in Kongo cosmology are considered second Suns (represented by the circles in the cosmogram). Just like the suns perceived journey around the earth, graphically speaking, human beings, as second suns, traverse around (dingo-dingo) our own Dikenga. The core (didi) of any Dikenga is the Kanda (community). This term is very important in this analysis.

>

> In African Cosmology of the Bantu Kongo pg. 132, Dr. Fu-Kiau gives us a possible correspondence between the Dikenga cosmogram and that of the /nwt/ symbol of Ta-Merri. He states:

>

>

>

> "Therefore, the Vee in reality, is a living pyramid in constant motion, which follows the path of life and passes the four main points of demarcation of the cosmogram [dikenga], which in turn is symbolized by the flame of life inside the community circle. The closer one is to the center of this flame, whose "Vee" is the symbol, the healthier and more powerful one is." (emphasis mine)

>

>

>

> So this circle represents the "community" in which one lives. This isn't relegated to a small geographical area as is thought of today, but as a national geo-political boundary as well. So the Kongo symbol is graphically showing us a process (dingo-dingo) in which living suns (human beings) grow and develop in the context of and in relation to community. This philosophically is in alignment with traditional African thought on self identity, and was the case in ancient Ta-Merri.

>

> Dr. Mualana Karenga in his work MAAT: The moral ideal in ancient Egypt, puts this concept into perspective when he says on pages 268-269:

>

>

>

> These fundamental Fanonian questions paraphrased here are: "Who am I; am I really who I am and am I all I ought to be?" The first question is a question of identity. In a word, who am I-in-community? For I know myself in relation, not in isolation. I am a place-holder in a definite community and tradition and from this context and the relations those contain, I know myself. As Mbiti (1970, 141) notes, the most definitive statement of such a communal concept of identity is "I am because we are: and since we are, therefore I am." He concludes, "this is a cardinal point in the understanding of the African view of man." This, of course clearly differs from the Cartesian proposition that "I think therefore I am." For in a communitarian concept of self, one is not identified with one's capacity to think but by one's relatedness to others, i.e., by being of, with and especially of others." (emphasis mine)

>

>

>

> The African concept of community gives an individual his identity and his identity is predicated on what he does, how he develops in the context of a given community. The /nwt/ symbol indicates identity with a particular community or people. To me, the /nwt/ symbol is just the Dikenga symbol as the Dikenga symbol means community: it is the center of who you are and gives an individual his identity. Nw.t gives people nationhood as well and indicates nation in Egyptian texts.

>

> Although I can't connect linguistically the term nw.t with dikenga, the graphic and meaning between the two are too similar to ignore a connection.

>

> For further inquiries, I now ask you to pay attention to the akhet symbol and compare it with your new found knowledge of the Bantu concept of living suns traversing around the dikenga in relation to a master/priest/nganga. We can deal with that in a different post.

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

>

> Asar Imhotep

> <http://www.mochasuite.com>

>

| 23485|2007-10-24 05:16:30|Dexter Harper|Re: Meaning of eternity|
Ferg,

Would you please be so kind and send this to my email address?

dharp3r@yahoo.com

Thanks,

Sharma Men Ra

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Ferg" wrote:

>

> Good evening all.

>

> I've researched the KAMETI-WA (Ancient Egyptian) word for Eternity.
Take a look. Your feedback would be greatly received.

>

> Thanks.

>

> Ferg Somo

>

| 23486|2007-10-24 07:07:24|Alex van Deelen|Re: Mustafa Hefny|
Issis,

> The division between northern Africa > and "Sub-Saharan" Africa is a false one except > for geography, and the Sahara was not always > a desert, and even as such it has never impeded > interaction between peoples on other side of it.
> One more example of Europeans trying to > appropriate what is not theirs.

Right, and the fact that the Nile runs all the way from Uganda and Ethiopia to the Mediterranean shows that the division is highly artificial.

> I guess they do not have sufficiently ancient > civilizations of their own.

They don't have any ancient civilisation of their own. In fact, if you use their standards of interpretation of Ancient Egypt on Greece, Greece is barely in Europe at all. It is just on the periphery. :) Which should provide a hint as to why it rose to prominence at all - it's proximity to Ancient Egypt, and the Greeks themselves said so.

Egypt rose up around 4000 to 3000 BC.
Where is the equivalent ancient civilisation in Europe?

Alex

| 23487|2007-10-24 09:33:03|Paul Kekai Manansala|Re: Mustafa Hefny|

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Alex van Deelen" wrote:

>

>

> They don't have any ancient civilisation of > their own. In fact, if you use their standards > of interpretation of Ancient Egypt on Greece, > Greece is barely in Europe at all. It is just > on the periphery. :) Which should provide > a hint as to why it rose to prominence at > all - it's proximity to Ancient Egypt, and > the Greeks themselves said so.

>

> Egypt rose up around 4000 to 3000 BC.
> Where is the equivalent ancient civilisation > in Europe?

This is one of the weak points in race theory as developed on the last few centuries, i.e. the very slow development of "civilization" among northern Europeans supposedly the purest branch of the "Caucasoid race."

One reason we see the theoretical development of blonde, red-headed Pharaohs, Hebrews, Jesus, Greek aristocrats, etc.

Regards,

Paul Kekai Manansala

| 23488|2007-10-24 09:37:58|Dexter Harper|Re: Possible origin of the nwt symbol (correct spacing)|

I don't think it's a coincidence as it proves again that all African traditional cultures are relative.

Question:

We know that 'Dua.t' in Kamitic terminology refers to "the underworld". However, i've come across another definition of it meaning "land beyond the horizon"? Is this accurate? If so, do you think this is a reference to it being an "island" or "isle"?

Respectfully,

Sharma Men Ra

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "asar_imhotep" wrote:

>

> Another thing I wanted the group to discuss is the following possible

> connection between Bantu concepts and Ta-Merrian philosophy.

>

> I found in the Bantu Lexical Reconstruction dictionary a possible > origin for the Ta-Merrian concept of the DUA.T (the underworld).

>

> The pro-bantu word that correlates with the term is:

>

> dUa meaning isLAND or "ile"

>

> All of the land in the Dua.t is referred to as "islands." An example can > be found in the Book of the Cow of Heaven when it states:

>

> "Behold, I am here in the sky in my abode. Since I am going to give > light and brilliance in the Duat and on the Island of the Twin Bas,

(17)

> <http://www.maat.sofiatopia.org/heavenly\_cow.htm#17> be a scribe

there > and calm down those who are there, those whom we created and those who

> (nevertheless) rebelled. It is You who shall repulse the followers

of

> this (god) with unsatisfied heart.(18)

> <http://www.maat.sofiatopia.org/heavenly\_cow.htm#18> You are to be

in > my place, my vicar, so it will be said of You : 'Thoth, the vicar

of

> Re.' And I shall cause You to send out those who are greater than

You."

>

> There is also an island Seker in the Amduat in which Ra opens the door

> during the 8th hour going into the 9th. Also reference the Book of

the > Hidden Chamber (the 6th hour).

>

> Once again, I don't think all of this is coincidence. But what do you > think?

>

> Asar Imhotep

> <http://www.mochasuite.com>

>

>

>

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, "Ferg" wrote:

>>

>>

>> Hi

>>

>> The core of any Dikenga is the community given as Kanda derived

from > the Proto-Bantu 'Ganda'. Observe the many meanings of this word in

the > table below.

> >

> > The Oshindonga-Bantu word for a court, palace, royal residence is given

> as UWA. However in the Kiswahili-Bantu language the word UWA, UA means > an enclosure. The form UANI or UWANI means within the confines of

the

> enclosure. Its plural is NYUA or NYUWA. This can be pronounced as > many enclosures. This is the closest word which seems to resemble > in Ancient Egyptian, T being feminine.

NIUWA,

NIW-T

> >

> > Somo

> >

> >

> > MAIN LH (N 9/10) house; village; chief's enclosure

> > 1324 maison; village; enclos de chef

> > Total Distribution: Regions: 4: NW SW Ce NE Zones: 13:

B C

> D E F G H J K L M N R

> > MAIN 1324 LH N 9/10 house; village; chief's enclosure B

> C E G H J K L M N R

> > DER 1321 LH N 5/6, 11/10 clan B D F H J R

> > DER 8537 LH N chief's servant J

> > INC 1322 LH N (9/6), 9/10 village

> > INC 1323 LH N 9 chief 's enclosure

> >

> > See also: MAIN 8538 LL N 9 camp-ground, temporary > housing C H J K

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> > ----- Original Message -----

> > From: asar_imhotep
> > To: Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com
> > Sent: Monday, October 22, 2007 5:27 AM > > Subject: [Ta_Seti] Possible origin of the nwt symbol (correct > spacing)
> >
> >
> >
> > I don't know what happened to the first post, but a lot of the words

> were combined together. I hope I caught them all.
> >
>

*****

**\
> *****
> >
> >
> > Possible origin of the nwt symbol
> >
> >
> > Htp Ta-Seti
> >
> > I know this may be off the mark, but I was just contemplating a > possible origin for the /nwt/ determinative used to designate country,

> town, community or village. After looking at the /nwt/ <!--[if > !vml]-->symbol and that of the Dikenga symbol used in

the

> Kongo, I find the concept and the philosophy behind both of them to

be > very similar if not the same.

> >

> > The graphical representation of the Bantu Dingo-Dingo (life > process/cycle) consists of an "X" within a circle. The circle is divided > into 4 demarcations and each section of the Dikenga represents a > particular stage in life.

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> > Bantu (human beings) in Kongo cosmology are considered second

Suns

> (represented by the circles in the cosmogram). Just like the suns > perceived journey around the earth, graphically speaking, human beings,

> as second suns, traverse around (dingo-dingo) our own Dikenga. The core

> (didi) of any Dikenga is the Kanda (community). This term is very > important in this analysis.

> >

> > In African Cosmology of the Bantu Kongo pg. 132, Dr. Fu-Kiau gives > us a possible correspondence between the Dikenga cosmogram and that

of

> the/nwt/ symbol of Ta-Merri. He states:

> >

> >

> >

> > "Therefore, the Vee in reality, is a living pyramid in constant > motion, which follows the path of life and passes the four main points > of demarcation of the cosmogram [dikenga], which in turn is symbolized

> by the flame of life inside the community circle. The closer one is

to > the center of this flame, whose "Vee" is the symbol, the healthier

and > more powerful one is." (emphasis mine)

> >

> >

> >

> > So this circle represents the "community" in which one lives.

This

> isn't relegated to a small geographical area as is thought of today, but > as a national geo-political boundary as well. So the Kongo symbol is > graphically showing us a process (dingo-dingo) in which living suns

> (human beings) grow and develop in the context of and in relation to > community. This philosophically is in alignment with traditional > thought on self identity, and was the case in ancient Ta-Merri.

African

> >

> > Dr. Mualana Karenga in his work MAAT: The moral ideal in ancient > Egypt, puts this concept into perspective when he says on pages 268-

269:

> >

> >

> >

> > These fundamental Fanonian questions paraphrased here are: "Who am

> I; am I really who I am and am I all I ought to be?" The first question

> is a question of identity. In a word, who am I-in-community? For I know > myself in relation, not in isolation. I am a place-holder in a definite > community and tradition and from this context and the relations

those > contain, I know myself. As Mbiti (1970, 141) notes, the most definitive > statement of such a communal concept of identity is "I am because we > are: and since we are, therefore I am." He concludes, "this is a > cardinal point in the understanding of the African view of man."

This,

> of course clearly differs from the Cartesian proposition that "I think > there for I am." For in a communitarian concept of self, one is not > identified with one's capacity to think but by one's relatedness to > others, i.e., by being of, with and especially of others." (emphasis > mine)

> >

> >

> >

> > The African concept of community gives an individual his identity

> and his identity is predicated on what he does, how he develops in

the > context of a given community. The /nwt/ symbol indicates identity

with a > particular community or people. To me, the /nwt/ symbol is just the > Dikenga symbol as the Dikenga symbol means community: it is the center > of who you are and gives an individual his identity. Nw.t gives

people

> nationhood as well and indicates nation in Egyptian texts.

> >

> > Although I can't connect linguistically the term nw.t with dikenga,

> the graphic and meaning between the two are too similar to ignore a > connection.

> >

> > For further inquiries, I now ask you to pay attention to the akhet

> symbol and compare it with your new found knowledge of the Bantu concept > of living suns traversing around the dikenga in relation to a > master/priest/nganga. We can deal with that in a different post.

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

$\gg$

>>

>>

>>

>>

> >

>>

>>

>>

> >

 $\gg$

>>

>>

>>

&gt;&gt;

 $\gg$  $\angle$   $\angle$

✓

✓ ✓

✓ ✓

10

10

10

10

11

✓ ✓

✓ ✓

>>

> >

>> Asar Imhotep

> > <http://www.mochasuite.com>

> >

$$>$$

| 23489|2007-10-24 12:58:50|cristofori whitakara|Re: Watson is misled -- Perhaps, but some people are assertively MEA|

this may be a bit of a stretch but Harry(Heru)Potter(Ptah) and the books deals with alchemy(al-cham)?

matt mercer wrote:

This goes along with my idea that introducing ancient language study into primary education might help children "self-direct" themselves by expanding the cognitive base that seems to be a filially appropriated through institutional lines of social infrastructure. Like the Montessori system is designed to encourage students to express their own stages of growth within a broader curricula I see that ancient language study for this age group, asides from the obvious parallels of contemporary language study and primary student aptitude, would lend a vast untapped resource of possibilities for students to explore language and their own expression from a formative base that is not grounded in the iron clad authority of reading writing and arithmetic, but fluid, from a standpoint of self-determination and cooperative education. Trying to create a foundation for this body of curriculum is the task I see challenges with. But if Harry Potter is digestible enough for the world's children, it might not be that big of a deal. Bantu-Hieroglyph- Tocharian might be a good place to start.

I wonder if any of you have done comparative studies not of just etymology but of the wider realm of eschatology of the Runic languages and ancient alphabet systems, Hungarian runes in particular. That is to say that the symbolic base of terminology and phonetic equivalents, if viewed from a perspective of ecology, taught through a universal eschatology extracted from the alphabets is similar enough to recognize the shifts or transpositions from alphabet to alphabet.

Like the short and the long "A" in Magyar runes resemble a flag and an ax, like Thor's hammer, the Alpha principle, protecting the ecological truth of what has been taken from the land and built from its fruits..... out of all the bickering that goes on about the religious or ethnic propriety over the "word", is now a good time to engage and hallow all of these pieces of language we are all able to share, ie: through the lightening speed of the internet. If Loki, the embodiment of crystallized intelligence grown at will, reminds us all of the current state the world is in, the over inflated infrastructure, and the disambiguated relationships that support and nurture the chaos of the machine of god that is the father of us all..... Perhaps the melting pot is a soup that is more nurturing than any of us dreamed.....

matt

matt

Mahari Mengistu wrote:

>>and that a child who has not seen or experienced the Traumas of adulthood is more apt to help support those people in their lives that are going through those things...<<

Agreed. I think you can always expect the child to do his/her best to assist the parent in any way possible if they are allowed to.

Kids are wonderful in their potential to act constructively. It's the parent(s) who don't utilize their child's potential appropriately. And mainly, I think, it's because they don't realize or understand the child's potential. Children are just little people with a fully functioning brain - waiting to be properly directed.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, matt mercer wrote:

>

> I understand what you are saying, but I was actually trying to express more about the resiliency of children and that they are constantly trying to reach out to "ask" and comfort their elders when they see the traumas that are compounded around them, this reaching out is what I am interested in because it is like they are asking to learn. We here in the west are so convinced that the "adult" world is so far above children, while say in the jungles of south america, every child is taught the "real" life and death situations that are faced day to day because it is just part of life. I am suggesting that the adulterated fabrications of life's right and wrong are more of an issue of emotional growth here in the western world, and that a child who has not seen or experienced the Traumas of adulthood is more apt to help support those people in their lives that are going through those things...

>

> Matt

>

> Mahari Mengistu wrote:

Not likely from ONE situation; however, if he is perpetually > traumatized, I would suggest some counseling. Kids are extremely > resilient but the brain is constantly trying to make sense of the > environment to acquire things and to keep itself safe. If he sees > this kind of constant trauma it has to begin to shape what he thinks

> the world is and how he interprets it.

> HTP,

> Mahari

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, matt mercer wrote:

>>

>> I remember when I was in New Orleans doing relief work, In the > Treme neighborhood, a historically catholic black and white > integrated "hood", I walked by a car with a young boy in the back > seat, as I was passing on the sidewalk, an older lady, "retired",
was > passing me from the front, but I was watching the boy, put both

his

> hands on the window like he was reaching out to the old woman > through the glass trying to embrace her, and the look on his face
was

> like all children who go through turmoil, like the > moon..... his stare as he had this conversation of asking

his > grandma what was wrong is what stays with me..... ..

> >

> > matt

> >

> > p.s. does that mean he should be clinically diagnosed?

> >

> > Mahari Mengistu wrote: I

> agree with your assessment. This obviously can get to be a very > > complicated issue. But from your comments about the testing

> results

> > and what I've observed of "my peeps" is that we need to take a > lesson

> > from these tests and give more attention and love to our kids.

> All

> > too frequently I see black mothers off into their own worlds

> (which > > are often troubled, traumatic and sad), leaving their toddler

to a > > degree isolated and unstimulated and likely feeling uncared about

> and > > uncared for even though he/she may, in fact, be cared for. The > brain

> > is an organ like any other bodily organ that needs stimulation
and

> > activity to function at its best.

> > HTP,

> > Mahari

> >

> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups .com, Agola Kisira
wrote:

> > >

> > > After the mapping of the human genome, there is no place for

> > Watson's ideas as the genetic code for humans has been decrypted.

> The

> > leader of the human genome project Dr. Craig Venter had this to > say:

> > >

> > > "Skin colour as a surrogate for race is a social concept not
a > > scientific one," Dr Venter said. "There is no basis in scientific

> > fact or in the human genetic code for the notion that skin
colour

> > will be predictive of intelligence. "

> > >

> > > Check out the entire BBC article here:

> > <http://news.bbc.co.uk/2/hi/science/nature/7052416.stm>

> > >

> > > I think a much broader debate on IQ needs to be opened up which > > does not focus on race as so many researchers have done before.

> There

> > is increasing evidence that IQ is more tightly correlated with > > parenting and environment. In my eyes the relationship is obvious

> and

> > the background of most intelligent people seems to too obviously > > similar to ignore the relationship. Recent studies have shown for > > instance that eldest children are more intelligent than their

> younger > > siblings, and obvious pointer to parental input. Another study on > one-> > year-olds shows that they all have the same IQ, so what accounts

> for > > the differences in their 20s and older if not environment. I > should

> > say for completeness that IQ testing of one-year-olds is > > controversial, but then again isn't it all.

> > >

> > > All the IQ tests that I have done are largely a measure of

> Language

> > and mathematical skill, I think it should be clear that these are > > learned skills and are certainly not instinctive nor are they often > > intuitive.

> > >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> >

> > _____

> > Do You Yahoo!?

> > Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

> > <http://mail.yahoo.com>

> >

>

>

>

>

>

>

> _____
> Do You Yahoo!?

> Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

> <http://mail.yahoo.com>

>

_____
Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

<http://mail.yahoo.com>

_____
Do You Yahoo!?

Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

<http://mail.yahoo.com>

| 23490|2007-10-24 13:30:36|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Watson is misled -- Perhaps, but some people are assertively MEA|

Maybe, maybe not. There is a theory that the name Peter, a judeo-christian biblical character and common jewish name comes from Ptah.

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, cristofori whitakara wrote:

>

> this may be a bit of a stretch but Harry(Heru)Potter(Ptah) and the books deals with alchemy(al-cham)?

>

> matt mercer wrote: This goes along with my

idea that introducing ancient language study into primary education might help children "self-direct" themselves by expanding the cognitive base that seems to be a filially appropriated through institutional lines of social infrastructure. Like the Montessori system is designed to encourage students to express their own stages of growth within a broader curricula I see that ancient language study for this age group, asides from the obvious parallels of contemporary language study and primary student aptitude, would lend a vast untapped resource of possibilities for students to explore language and their own expression from a formative base that is not grounded in the iron clad authority of reading writing and arithmetic, but fluid, from a standpoint of self-determination and cooperative education. Trying to create a foundation for this body of curriculum is the task I see challenges with. But if > Harry Potter is digestible enough for the world's children, it might not be that big of a deal. Bantu-Hieroglyph-Tocharian might be a good place to start.

> I wonder if any of you have done comparative studies not of just etymology but of the wider realm of eschatology of the Runic languages and ancient alphabet systems, Hungarian runes in particular. That is to say that the symbolic base of terminology and phonetic equivalents, if viewed from a perspective of ecology, taught through a universal eschatology extracted from the alphabets is similar enough to recognize the shifts or transpositions from alphabet to alphabet.

> Like the short and the long "A" in Magyar runes resemble a flag and an ax, like Thor's hammer, the Alpha principle, protecting the ecological truth of what has been taken from the land and built from its fruits.....out of all the bickering that goes on about the religious or ethnic propriety over the "word", is now a good time time to engage and hallow all of these pieces of language we are all able to share, ie: through the lightening speed of the internet. If Loki, the embodiment of crystallized intelligence grown at will, reminds us all of the current state the world is in, the over inflated infrastructure, and the disambiguated relationships that support and nurture the chaos of the machine of god that is the father of us all..... Perhaps the melting pot is a soup that is more nurturing than any of us dreamed.....

>

>

>

>

> matt

>

>

> matt

>

>

> Mahari Mengistu wrote: >>and that a child who has not seen or experienced the Traumas of

> adulthood is more apt to help support those people in their lives

> that are going through those things...<<

>

> Agreed. I think you can always expect the child to do his/her best > to assist the parent in any way possible if they are allowed to.

> Kids are wonderful in their potential to act constructively. It's > the parent(s) who don't utilize their child's potential

> appropriately. And mainly, I think, it's because they don't realize > or understand the child's potential. Children are just little

people

> with a fully functioning brain - waiting to be properly directed.

> HTP,

> Mahari

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, matt mercer wrote:

>>

>> I understand what you are saying, but I was actually trying to > express more about the resiliency of children and that they are > constantly trying to reach out to "ask" and comfort their elders

when

> they see the traumas that are compounded around them, this reaching > out is what I am interested in because it is like they are asking

to > learn. We here in the west are so convinced that the "adult" world

is

> so far above children, while say in the jungles of south america,

> every child is taught the "real" life and death situations that are > faced day to day because it is just part of life. I am suggesting > that the adulterated fabrications of life's right and wrong are

more > of an issue of emotional growth here in the western world, and that

a > child who has not seen or experienced the Traumas of adulthood is > more apt to help support those people in their lives that are going > through those things...

>>

>> Matt

> >
> > Mahari Mengistu wrote:
> > Not likely from ONE situation; however, if he is perpetually > > traumatized, I would suggest some counseling. Kids are extremely > > resilient but the brain is constantly trying to make sense of the > > environment to acquire things and to keep itself safe. If he sees > > this kind of constant trauma it has to begin to shape what he > > thinks
> > the world is and how he interprets it.
> > HTP,
> > Mahari
> >
> > --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, matt mercer wrote:
> > >
> > > I remember when I was in New Orleans doing relief work, In the > > > Treme neighborhood, a historically catholic black and white > > > integrated "hood", I walked by a car with a young boy in the back > > > seat, as I was passing on the sidewalk, an older lady, "retired",
> > > was > > > passing me from the front, but I was watching the boy, put both
> > > his > > > hands on the window like he was reaching out to the old woman > > > through the glass trying to embrace her, and the look on his face
> > > was
> > > like all children who go through turmoil, like the > > > moon.....his stare as he had this conversation of asking
> > > his > > > grandma what was wrong is what stays with me.....
> > >
> > > matt
> > >
> > > p.s. does that mean he should be clinically diagnosed?
> > >
> > > Mahari Mengistu wrote: I
> > > agree with your assessment. This obviously can get to be a very > > > complicated issue. But from your comments about the testing
> > > results
> > > and what I've observed of "my peeps" is that we need to take a > > > lesson
> > > from these tests and give more attention and love to our kids.
> > > All
> > > too frequently I see black mothers off into their own worlds > > > (which > > > are often troubled, traumatic and sad), leaving their toddler
> > > to a > > > degree isolated and unstimulated and likely feeling uncared

> about
>> and >>> uncared for even though he/she may, in fact, be cared for. The >> brain
>>> is an organ like any other bodily organ that needs stimulation
> and
>>> activity to function at its best.
>>> HTP,
>>> Mahari
>>>
>>> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, Agola Kisira
> wrote:
>>>>
>>>> After the mapping of the human genome, there is no place for >>> Watson's ideas as the genetic code for humans has been
> decrypted.
>> The
>>> leader of the human genome project Dr. Craig Venter had this to > say:
>>>>
>>>> "Skin colour as a surrogate for race is a social concept not
> a >>> scientific one," Dr Venter said. "There is no basis in > scientific >>> fact or in the human genetic code for the notion that skin
> colour
>>> will be predictive of intelligence."
>>>>
>>>> Check out the entire BBC article here:
>>> <http://news.bbc.co.uk/2/hi/science/nature/7052416.stm>
>>>>
>>>> I think a much broader debate on IQ needs to be opened up
> which >>> does not focus on race as so many researchers have done before.
>> There
>>> is increasing evidence that IQ is more tightly correlated with >>> parenting and environment. In my eyes the relationship is > obvious
>> and
>>> the background of most intelligent people seems to too
> obviously >>> similar to ignore the relationship. Recent studies have shown
> for >>> instance that eldest children are more intelligent than their >> younger >>> siblings, and obvious pointer to parental input. Another study

> on
>> one->>> year-olds shows that they all have the same IQ, so what > accounts
>> for >>> the differences in their 20s and older if not environment. I >> should >>> say for completeness that IQ testing of one-year-olds is >>> controversial, but then again isn't it all.
>>>>
>>>> All the IQ tests that I have done are largely a measure of >> Language
>>> and mathematical skill, I think it should be clear that these
> are >>> learned skills and are certainly not instinctive nor are they > often >>> intuitive.
>>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>>
>>> _____
>>> Do You Yahoo!?
>>> Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
>>> <http://mail.yahoo.com>
>>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>>
>> _____
>> Do You Yahoo!?
>> Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
>> <http://mail.yahoo.com>
>>
>
>
>
>
>
> _____
> Do You Yahoo!?
> Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around
> <http://mail.yahoo.com>

>
>
>
>

> Do You Yahoo!?

> Tired of spam? Yahoo! Mail has the best spam protection around

> <http://mail.yahoo.com>

>

| 23491|2007-10-24 13:42:11|Mahari Mengistu|Re: Watson is misled -- Perhaps, but some people are assertively MEA|

This just occurred to me. We know how the Kemau loved to "play" with words. "HTP" backwards is "PTH". I'm not a linguist so perhaps someone who is or has more expertise can stop the speculation immediately. But since no vowels were used how do we know precisely which vowels might go between the consonants?

HTP,

Mahari

--- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, cristofori whitakara wrote:

>

> this may be a bit of a stretch but Harry(Heru)Potter(Ptah) and the books deals with alchemy(al-cham)?

>

> matt mercer wrote: This goes along with my

idea that introducing ancient language study into primary education might help children "self-direct" themselves by expanding the cognitive base that seems to be a filially appropriated through institutional lines of social infrastructure. Like the Montessori system is designed to encourage students to express their own stages of growth within a broader curricula I see that ancient language study for this age group, asides from the obvious parallels of contemporary language study and primary student aptitude, would lend a vast untapped resource of possibilities for students to explore language and their own expression from a formative base that is not grounded in the iron clad authority of reading writing and arithmetic, but fluid, from a standpoint of self-determination and cooperative education. Trying to create a foundation for this body of curriculum is the task I see challenges with. But if

> Harry Potter is digestible enough for the world's children, it

might not be that big of a deal. Bantu-Hieroglyph-Tocharian might be a good place to start.

> I wonder if any of you have done comparative studies not of just etymology but of the wider realm of eschatology of the Runic languages and ancient alphabet systems, Hungarian runes in particular. That is to say that the symbolic base of terminology and phonetic equivalents, if viewed from a perspective of ecology, taught through a universal eschatology extracted from the alphabets is similar enough to recognize the shifts or transpositions from alphabet to alphabet.

> Like the short and the long "A" in Magyar runes resemble a flag and an ax, like Thor's hammer, the Alpha principle, protecting the ecological truth of what has been taken from the land and built from its fruits.....out of all the bickering that goes on about the religious or ethnic propriety over the "word", is now a good time time to engage and hallow all of these pieces of language we are all able to share, ie: through the lightening speed of the internet. If Loki, the embodiment of crystallized intelligence grown at will, reminds us all of the current state the world is in, the over inflated infrastructure, and the disambiguated relationships that support and nurture the chaos of the machine of god that is the father of us all..... Perhaps the melting pot is a soup that is more nurturing than any of us dreamed.....

>

>

>

>

> matt

>

>

> matt

>

>

> Mahari Mengistu wrote: >>and that a child who has not seen or experienced the Traumas of

> adulthood is more apt to help support those people in their lives

> that are going through those things...<<

>

> Agreed. I think you can always expect the child to do his/her best > to assist the parent in any way possible if they are allowed to.

> Kids are wonderful in their potential to act constructively. It's > the parent(s) who don't utilize their child's potential

> appropriately. And mainly, I think, it's because they don't realize > or understand the child's potential. Children are just little

people

> with a fully functioning brain - waiting to be properly directed.

> HTP,

> Mahari

>

> --- In Ta\_Seti@yahoogroups.com, matt mercer wrote:

>>

>> I understand what you are saying, but I was actually trying to > express more about the resiliency of children and that they are > constantly trying to reach out to "ask" and comfort their elders

when

> they see the traumas that are compounded around them, this reaching > out is what I am interested in because it is like they are asking

to > learn. We here in the west are so convinced that the "adult" world

is

> so far above children, while say in the jungles of south america,

> every child is taught the "real" life and death situations that are > faced day to day because it is just part of life. I am suggesting > that the adulterated fabrications of life's right and wrong are

more > of an issue of emotional growth here in the western world, and that

a > child who has not seen or experienced the Traumas of adulthood is > more apt to help support those people in their lives that are going > through those things...

>>

